Harbury said that the Minister of Defense had hinted to her that Bamaca was alive; the Defense Attache, who had been present on the occasions when Harbury conversed with the MOD, said that he had never heard the MOD suggest that Bamaca was alive. November 11: On instructions, Ambassador makes demarche to De Leon, telling him that "multiple reports from several reliable sources ... indicate that Efrain Bamaca was taken captive in March 1992 and transferred to a base in San Marcos for further interrogation. Bamaca had been wounded, but his injuries were not believed to be life-threatening. Because he was in army custody, the army should be aware of his fate at that time. We are bringing these credible reports to your attention because, as President, you have a responsibility to ensure that the investigation now underway should be vigorously pursued to confirm the facts in this case, and to take appropriate strong action." Ambassador gives De Leon a copy of these points in writing. December 20: Harbury meets with NSC official Richard Feinberg, who reiterates that information available to the USG suggests that Bamaca was captured by the military but did not appear to have survived much beyond a few weeks after his capture.

December 22: ARA DAS Patterson meets with Harbury, delivering same message.

December 24: The Departments of State and Defense instruct USCINCSO General McCaffrey to visit Guatemala to discuss the Bamaca case and other issues with Guatemalan MOD. (94 State 340143)

1995

January 9: Harbury files Freedom of Information Act request with Department of State and other USG agencies. Shortly thereafter, Department decides to process her request on an expeditious basis for humanitarian reasons.

January 12: Embassy officer attends second "jactancia" hearing, the GOG case against Harbury. (Guatemala 802)

January 20: Ambassador discusses case with new Minister of Government Carlos Reynoso Gil. (Embassy records)

January 26: USCINCSO McCaffrey discusses Bamaca case with MOD Enriquez and Chief of Staff Gonzalez Taracena, emphasizing the importance of this and other human rights cases to the USG and urging that the military move forward for the sake of Guatemala's future. He tells MOD and COS that all Guatemalan officers must accept that outside scrutiny is not a violation of national sovereignty. (Guatemala 1248)

January 26: Intelligence report says that according to a Guatemalan government official, "it was known within the senior ranks of the army that Alpirez ... killed Bamaca." The field comment notes that Alpirez was the third commander of the San Marcos military zone when Bamaca was apparently brought there in March 1992. [redacted] B1

January 26: In secure phone conversations, CIA/DO [redacted] informs ARA P/DAS Michael Skol that Alpirez had been a [redacted] asset at the time of the Devine murder and until approximately mid-1992. [redacted] informs ARA DAS Anne Patterson at the same time. B1 B1

January 26: Patterson attends the first of several NSC-chaired meetings over the next several days (ARA/CEN's Hamilton attending those that occurred the following week) with reps from NSC, DOJ, CIA and OVP to coordinate inter-agency action. Planning focuses on need to evaluate the intelligence, brief oversight committees, demarche the GOG (with appropriate warning to the source) and to inform Jennifer Harbury. (ARA calendar record)

January 27: ARA Assistant Secretary Watson informs Undersecretary Tarnoff in writing about the January 26 intelligence report on Alpirez and his relationship to the CIA.

January 27: CIA disseminates fifth of its chronologies on the Bamaca case. This contains the January 25 intelligence concerning the possible involvement of Colonel Julio Roberto Alpirez. (Guatemala: Developments in the Bamaca Case, January 27, to which appended: Intelligence Report, Guatemala, Chronology of the Bamaca Case, January 27, 1995)

February 3: CIA begins briefings of oversight committees.

February 3: Department instructs Ambassador to demarche President De Leon to reiterate information contained in November 11 demarche, note that those conclusions had been corroborated by additional information and ask that the GOG reinterview implicated military officers, particularly Alpirez. (State 28652)

February 3: Harbury calls ACS Officer to report unspecified threats against her Guatemalan attorneys. Ambassador instructs Embassy personnel to raise our concern over this with GOG authorities. (Embassy notes)

February 6: Ambassador carries out demarche as instructed, noting "profound concern existing at the highest levels of the USG" about Bamaca's fate, and decrying the absence to date of an in-depth investigation into Bamaca's whereabouts. She tells him that in the time that has passed since the November 11 demarche, the USG has "become even more firmly convinced" that the conclusion that Bamaca had not survived was correct. De Leon reiterates his belief that Bamaca was dead, commits the GOG to make every effort to find Bamaca, and notes that the Historical Clarification should look into the circumstances of his death. Ambassador leaves a written copy of the talking points with De Leon. (Guatemala 1041)

February 7: Ambassador discusses Bamaca with Minister of Defense, delivering talking points contained in demarche given to President De Leon. Enriquez said that he would not voluntarily make Alpirez or other officers available for questioning but would comply with an official summons to do so. Ambassador "again emphasized the importance of resolving the Bamaca case." (Guatemala 1210)

February 8: Ambassador delivers same demarche points to Chief Prosecutor Ramses Cuestas, who replies that Bamaca's alleged capture occurred under a previous administration and asks for more information about officers assigned to the San Marcos

military zone in 1992. Ambassador tells him that Santiago Cabrera Lopez had publicly identified several officers, including Alpirez, who should be re-interviewed. (Guatemala 1155)

February 8: Harbury meets with ARA DAS Patterson, who tells her that the USG continues to press the GOG on this case, most recently in the February 6 meeting with De Leon. Harbury asks that her FOIA request be expedited, requests access to classified information, and says she will go back on hunger strike if the U.S. does not impose economic sanctions on Guatemala. Patterson tells her that the information used in the February 6 demarche was based on intelligence sources and thus the State Department could not release it to her except pursuant to a FOIA request. Harbury accuses the USG of deliberately refusing to do anything about Bamaca's capture; Patterson replies that the USG has in fact devoted considerable resources to the case. Patterson reiterates our conclusion that all information available to us suggests that Bamaca did not survive for more than a few weeks beyond his capture, although we have no conclusive evidence about his actual death. (State 40484)

February 9: Letter signed by Anne Patterson on January 25 delivered to Harbury's attorney's messenger in Washington (letter had been mis-sent to Nicaragua desk by mistake and thus not mailed sooner). Letter, addressed to Harbury, recommends that she request documents through the Freedom of Information Act process and encloses information describing provisions for expeditious handling of such requests. The letter states "in all fairness, you should be aware there may be documents responsive to your inquiry which were generated by other U.S. government agencies: Information generated by other agencies cannot be unilaterally disclosed by the State Department. You may therefore wish to consider making FOIA requests to those agencies. Although every effort would be made to release as many State Department documents as possible, we can offer no prior assurances in this regard, particularly with respect to any information that is restricted from disclosure by law for reasons of classification or other applicable criteria." The letter also encloses an authenticated copy of the Department of State's press spokesperson's remarks at the November 14 press briefing containing the same information given to Harbury by Ambassador McAfee orally November 11.

February 9: Ambassador discusses case with MINUGUA director Leonardo Franco to emphasize the continuing need for MINUGUA to assist on the Bamaca case, describing the demarche in general terms. Franco responds positively. (Guatemala 1186)

February 16: Ambassador and Defense Attache discuss Bamaca case with Acting MOD and Army Chief of Staff General Gonzalez Taracena, encouraging General Gonzalez to support Public Ministry questioning of army officers assigned to San Marcos in 1992, including Col. Alpirez. (Guatemala 1630)

February 17: Ambassador meets with Jennifer Harbury, who asks for details on the Ambassador's latest demarche and confirmation of any kind that Bamaca is dead. Ambassador suggests that she direct her inquiries regarding sensitive information to the Department in Washington but confirms that she met with De Leon and that the Embassy does not think Bamaca is alive because it has received no information to support such an assumption. (Guatemala 1569)

February 17: INR provides Undersecretary Tarnoff with information memorandum updating him on developments in the Bamaca case. (S/S # 9502991)

February 18: DCM discusses case with Public Minister Cuestas, urging interviews of implicated military personnel. Ambassador reiterates this four days later. (Embassy notes)

February 21: Ambassador discusses case with newly-appointed COPREDEH chairman Vicente Arranz. (Embassy records)

February 22: Ambassador and PolCouns meet with former Amb. Robert White to discuss Harbury case. Political section sets up appointments with GOG officials for Amb. White. (Embassy records)

February 23: Ambassador meets with Ambassador White for outbrief on his meetings with GOG officials. (Embassy records)

March 6: Ambassador raised the need for positive movement on the Bamaca case with MOD Enriquez and Chief of Staff Gonzalez Taracena, again stressing the critical importance of resolving it. They were noncommittal; the Ambassador told Gonzalez at a subsequent meeting that day that the U.S. and Guatemala "are on a collision course if no positive action is taken." (Guatemala 1889)

March 7: Ambassador meets with Jennifer Harbury, who asks for the Embassy's help in getting the GOG to allow her to be present at interviews of military officers and in facilitating a meeting between the MOD and Congressman Richardson (the Ambassador tells her that we have already passed the latter request on and promises to pass on the former request, noting that the GOG may be reluctant to comply). Harbury presses the Ambassador for hard information that Bamaca is dead. The Ambassador responds that the USG has reached the conclusion that he is dead, based on all available evidence. She adds "I am convinced he is dead, but I do not know what happened to him." She suggests that Harbury refer additional questions on this topic to Washington. (Guatemala 2007)

March 9: Ambassador discusses case with representatives of the private sector and with a Guatemalan congressional delegation that is planning a visit to Washington. (Embassy records)

March 10: Guatemalan Ambassador to the U.S Edmond Mulet calls on ARA/CEN Director Hamilton on instructions from the GOG to present a "white paper" on the Bamaca case, as well as a press release reaffirming the GOG position that Bamaca was not captured by the Guatemalan military. Hamilton responds that the statement and white paper are not credible and notifies Mulet of the U.S. decision to suspend participation by Guatemalan military personnel in IMET programs in the U.S. for the rest of 1995, out of concern over a lack of substantial progress on several pending human rights cases, including Bamaca's. (State 61944)

March 10: Ambassador meets with Acting Foreign Minister Arevalo, who says that the GOG considers the Bamaca case as still open and denying that the Guatemalan government had ever said Bamaca was dead. Ambassador stresses the importance of the Bamaca case and passes along Harbury's request to be present at interviews of army personnel allegedly involved in this case. (Guatemala 2033)

March 10: NSC adviser Feinberg meets with Harbury, provides her with copy of March 10 State Department press release. (NSC notes)

March 13: Embassy discusses lack of credibility of report by Guatemalan officer claiming to have seen Bamaca alive in December 1992. (Guatemala 2032, Roger channel)

March 15: DCM discusses case with Chief Prosecutor Ramses Cuestas, pressing for interviews to begin immediately and conveying Harbury's request to be present. DCM notes that the U.S. recognizes Harbury's marriage as legal and valid, adding that the U.S. expects Guatemala to respect our legal system and not delay the registration of Harbury's marriage in Guatemala (a step required for her continued legal actions there). (Guatemala 2193)

March 17: Polcouns discusses case with COPREDEH chairman Arranz (Embassy records)

March 17: AMB discusses case with Minister of Government and the President of the Supreme Court (Embassy records)

Case of Efrain Bamaca Velasquez
Chronology of Key Events

Note: This chronology is drawn from a review of ARA/CEN's files, which have been provided to A/IM/IS/FPC pursuant to a January 1995 FOIA request by Jennifer Harbury. Embassy Guatemala also furnished some information contained below. Ms. Harbury has filed a second FOIA request covering information until February 12, 1995, to which ARA/CEN is responding. Although this chronology refers to some intelligence reports, it by no means represents a comprehensive summary of all existing intelligence on this case.

Summary

Guatemalan guerrilla Efrain Bamaca Velasquez disappeared on March 12, 1992 after a firefight with the Guatemalan army near Retalhuleu. For nearly a year, his colleagues and American citizen wife, Jennifer Harbury, believed that he died in combat. However, a former guerrilla, Santiago Cabrera Lopez, claimed in February 1993 that, while detained by the Guatemalan military, he had seen Bamaca alive in military custody in March and July 1992. Harbury contacted our Embassy in March 1993 for assistance in resolving the case. From that time forward, the Embassy and USG officials in Washington assisted Harbury, repeatedly pressed the GOG for information and action, and shared as much information as possible with her.

After an exhumation facilitated by the Embassy failed to discover Bamaca's remains in August 1993, Harbury conducted a week-long hunger strike in Guatemala in September 1993 to publicize her demand for more information. She conducted a 32-day hunger strike in Guatemala in October-November 1994 for the same purpose, during which time she was visited on a near-daily basis by Embassy personnel, including the Ambassador on several occasions. During that hunger strike, ARA/CEN searched its CASC and PHUM files for 1993 and 1994 to create a unified file on the Bamaca case. The Embassy conducted a similar review and the CIA wrote the first of several intelligence updates/chronologies on the case.

Drawing on information developed during the file search and subsequent taskings for and receipt of additional intelligence, the Department instructed Ambassador McAfee to meet with President De Leon on November 11, 1994. The Ambassador told De Leon that, according to information available to the USG, Bamaca was captured alive by the military and that we had no information indicating that he survived much beyond the first few weeks of his capture. On the same day, Ambassador McAfee shared this same information with Jennifer Harbury, who had just ended her hunger strike. As more information became available in the ensuing months, we became even more convinced of this conclusion, which USG officials shared with Ms. Harbury in several subsequent meetings, while noting (as remains true to this day) that we have no direct, conclusive evidence of when or how Bamaca was actually killed, nor who ordered his murder or who actually committed it.

On January 26, the CIA provided intelligence that, according to [redacted] "it was known within the senior ranks of the army that Alpirez ... killed Bamaca." [redacted] On February 3, the Department instructed Ambassador McAfee to approach President De Leon again, urging him to order the re-interrogation of senior military officers who might have been involved in Bamaca's disappearance, including Colonel Julio Roberto Alpirez. Ambassador McAfee made this demarche on February 6. ARA DAS Anne Patterson met February 8 with Jennifer Harbury to inform her of the demarche but without revealing Alpirez's name, in view of the fact that Alpirez' degree of involvement in Bamaca's presumed death was not clear. Harbury initiated another hunger strike on March 12 in Washington but concluded it on March 23 after Congressman Torricelli provided her with information alleging involvement in her husband's death by Colonel Alpirez. End Summary.

March 12: Efrain Bamaca Velasquez, aka Comandante Everardo, disappears after firefight with Guatemalan army near Retalhuleu.

March 18: CIA report from Guatemala reports capture of ORPA commander Everardo, described as "lightly wounded in the arm ... in good physical condition ... being well treated by the army ... cooperating fully with his captors." The report's comment speculates that the army will keep news of his capture secret or even claim that he was killed to maximize Everardo's intelligence value. ARA/CEN comment: The name "Efrain Bamaca Velasquez" is not used in this report, and an army officer told the Embassy in March 1993 that it did not know that Everardo was actually Efrain Bamaca Velasquez until Jennifer Harbury and Santiago Cabrera Lopez publicized his alleged capture. Given the description of Everardo as in good condition and cooperating with the army, there is no reason at the time to see this report in a human rights context. Although this report was undoubtedly disseminated to CEN and other ARA offices at the time of acquisition, it first comes to our attention in the Harbury/Bamaca context on November 8, 1994)

May: The exhumation of a grave in Retalhuleu believed to contain Bamaca's remains is suspended by Attorney General Acisclo Valladares on the grounds that no family member is there to identify the body, nor was other identifying evidence (x-rays, dental records, etc.) available. Jennifer Harbury, who was present, did not identify herself as Bamaca's wife. On March 12 of the following year, she stated that she did not identify herself because she was afraid to do so. (93 Guatemala 3794 and embassy notes)

February: Former guerrillas Santiago Cabrera Lopez and Jorge Augusto Recinos (noms de guerre: Carlos and Willy) testify at the UN Human Rights Commission in Geneva about having seen Bamaca and 35 other guerrillas in clandestine army detention in March and July 1992. (Recinos said he heard guards talking about Bamaca being in custody in August 1992; he did not claim to have seen Bamaca personally.) Cabrera Lopez says he escaped from army custody and left Guatemala in December 1992. (93 Guatemala 2435 and October 1994 sworn statement by Cabrera)

March 1: 93 Guatemala 2435 contains Embassy's evaluation of Cabrera and Recinos's claims, commenting, "we have no idea whether the guerrillas' accusations are accurate ... the ex-guerrillas' claims are not beyond the realm of possibility ... "

March 9: Jennifer Harbury makes her first contact with the Embassy to seek assistance in the case in a phone call to the Embassy's human rights officer, asking Embassy assistance in seeking information from GOG officials about Bamaca's whereabouts and arranging for an exhumation of the Retalhuleu grave. The human rights officer, according to the cable, "pledged to assist in any way possible but requested no publicity concerning such efforts," to which Harbury agreed. (93 Guatemala 3794, which also reports that the Guatemalan Government denies holding Bamaca, alleging that he may have died in combat and been buried in Retalhuleu)

March 11: Guatemala desk officer meets with Jennifer Harbury in Washington. (Embassy records)

March 12: Harbury writes to Embassy human rights officer outlining case and describing aborted exhumation. (Embassy records)

March 15: Charge and Acting DCM talk to Attorney General Acisclo Valladares about case. (93 Guatemala 3794)

March 18: Embassy officers speak to then-Human Rights Ombudsman Ramiro De Leon Carpio about case. He tells them that he became involved in the case after receiving discreet inquiries from Bishop Quezada and the URNG guerrilla group. He approached the Minister of Defense and other GOG officials, and was told that Bamaca was probably buried in an unmarked grave in Retalhuleu. De Leon requested and received permission to exhume the grave in May 1992, but the proceeding was stopped (as noted earlier in this chronology). (93 Guatemala 3794)

March 18: Embassy human rights officer speaks with Harbury by phone. He explains to her that, in the absence of other family members, pursuit by the Embassy of an exhumation will require that she prove her purported marriage to Bamaca. (Embassy notes)

March 22: Embassy human rights officer contacts COPREDEH (Guatemala's Presidential Human Rights Commission) about case. The COPREDEH staffer said that the UN Human Rights Commission's independent expert on Guatemala had inquired about the case and the GOG was preparing a reply denying that the military had ever had Bamaca. (93 Guatemala 3794)

March 24: Embassy human rights officer speaks with Harbury by telephone, giving her a status report on inquiries to the GOG and steps taken to arrange an exhumation. (Embassy records)

March 26: Embassy human rights officer and other embassy officer contacts Military Intelligence Chief Otto Fernando Perez Molina about case; Perez says that the military definitely did not have Bamaca, who is "probably buried in Retalhuleu." He pledges military cooperation with future exhumation efforts and says that he believes that "Harbury had no reason to fear returning to Guatemala for the exhumation". (93 Guatemala 3794)

March 30: Harbury calls Embassy to discuss ways to identify Bamaca. (Embassy records)

members in clandestine jails. The officers reportedly believe Santiago Cabrera Lopez and Jorge Augusto Recinos's accounts regarding seeing Bamaca alive. [redacted] B1

May/June: Guatemalan stability breaks down, culminating in President Serrano's May 25 auto-coup attempt and De Leon's election by the Guatemalan Congress to the Presidency June 6. (Multiple reports)

June 22: Texas Court validates Harbury marriage. (Embassy notes)

July 9: Harbury meets with consular and political officers, who tell her that the embassy stands ready to assist her in any way it can during her search for her husband. (93 Guatemala 8697)

July 11: Ambassador McAfee meets with Pres. De Leon, suggesting that he abolish clandestine prisons if any exist. (Embassy records)

July 22: Harbury meets with Ambassador to discuss case (their first meeting in Guatemala). (Guatemala 8697)

July 29: Ambassador raises issue of clandestine prisons with Minister of Defense, notes he should be careful nothing happens to individuals such as Bamaca if they are being held. (Embassy records)

August 2: Ambassador meets with President De Leon and raises clandestine prisons and Bamaca case. (Embassy records)

August 17: Accompanied by the Embassy's American citizen services officer, Harbury witnesses the exhumation of a grave in Retalhuleu. None of the bodies unearthed appears to be Bamaca. (93 Guatemala 10348)

August 20: Ambassador and consular officer meet with Harbury to discuss the exhumation results. Journalist Janet Hawkins of "Harvard" magazine also sits in. Harbury asked for Ambassador's support for her ongoing efforts to get the GOG to move all clandestine prisoners to publicly-accessible detention centers. Ambassador tells Harbury that she and other Embassy officers have discussed and will continue to discuss the case with highest-level GOG officials, including the President and Minister of Defense. She notes that "at present we have no evidence to confirm Harbury's claim of the ongoing detention of URNG combatants to include Bamaca, but against that possibility the Ambassador has continued to press the case with the GOG." (93 Guatemala 9845)

August 25: Ambassador raises case with MOD Enriquez and asks him to receive Jennifer Harbury. (93 Guatemala 9845)

August 30: Pursuant to the Ambassador's request, MOD Enriquez meets with Harbury. (93 Guatemala 10257)

August 30: During a dinner meeting, Ambassador and President De Leon discuss Bamaca case. (Embassy records)

September 4: Consular officer meets with Harbury to discuss Harbury's meeting with Minister of Defense. Harbury reported that Enriquez was "cordial and non-committal" but did not respond to her questions about how the army could have provided an accurate physical description of Bamaca in spring 1992 to the Human Rights Ombudsman if the army had not held Bamaca. (93 Guatemala 10257)

September 6: Ambassador meets with MOD and discusses his recently held meeting with Jennifer Harbury. (Embassy records)

September 7: Harbury begins a week-long fast to pressure the GOG to reveal the whereabouts of Bamaca. Consular officers from the Embassy visit her several times each day. (93 Guatemala 10257)

September 10: Charge discusses case with Foreign Minister, who implicitly sought Embassy assistance in getting Harbury to end her fast. Charge tells Foreign Minister not to take any action to interfere with Harbury's activities and urges that Ms. Harbury's well-being be protected. The reporting cable on the conversation notes that President De Leon told the press that Harbury "is in her rights to exercise such pressure." (93 Guatemala 10302)

September 13: GOG Peace Commission member Mario Permuth tells political counselor and political officer that URNG commander Rodrigo Asturias, head of the guerrilla faction ORPA to which Bamaca reportedly belonged, once told Permuth that he thought Bamaca was dead. (93 Guatemala 10416)

October 7: A Guatemalan army officer tells Defense Attache and political officer that the Guatemalan government, in response to Harbury's decision to file a case with the Inter-American Commission on Human Rights (IACHR), may seek to prove that Harbury was never legally married to Bamaca. The officer said that many guerrillas have died and been buried in places unknown to the Guatemalan government, so the fact that Bamaca's body was not buried in Retalhuleu proves nothing. (93 Guatemala 11429)

October 21: Harbury meets with ARA DAS Anne Patterson in Washington to discuss her IACHR case. Patterson emphasized the importance of human rights issues in U.S. policy toward Guatemala and USG opposition to the use of secret detention facilities. Patterson asked Harbury if she still believed her husband was alive, in view of the fact that the last reported sighting of Bamaca (by Santiago Cabrera Lopez) took place in July 1992. Harbury responded affirmatively, based on the belief that her husband's experience and close ties to ORPA leader Asturias would make him a valuable source of intelligence. (93 State 339783)
October 22: Harbury meets with Assistant Secretary for Human Rights John Shattuck to review her IACHR complaint. Shattuck assured her of continued U.S. support in urging Guatemalan authorities to investigate the case. (93 State 339783)

December 9: Senior ARA Adviser Nuccio and Guatemala desk officer Harrington meet with Jennifer Harbury. Nuccio tells Harbury that we do not know more about the Bamaca case than what we have been told by the Guatemalan Government. (Nuccio personal records)

January 6: Ambassador raises case with MOD, who agrees to meet with Harbury but says that a "meticulous investigation" had produced no results. (94 Guatemala 185)

January 7: Embassy officers meet with Harbury (94 Guatemala 185).

January 7: Defense attache and political officer meet with Guatemalan military officer Otto Noack, who agreed to their request to help Harbury obtain appointments with MOD officials. (e-mail)

January 12: Ambassador meets with Harbury and promises to continue pressing GOG on case. (94 Guatemala 705)

February 10: Central American Parliament deputy and former GOG peace commission chief Manuel Conde tells political officer that a former ORPA comandante told Conde that Bamaca was missing before the March 12, 1992 clash in which he was reportedly killed. The embassy notes that this is a second-hand account and should be read as such. (94 Guatemala 1483)

May 24: Harbury meets with Consul General, Defense Attache, human rights officer, and American citizen services officer to ask for an account of the Embassy's efforts on her case. Embassy officers report that they "regularly prod their GOG contacts for action and answers on all unresolved human rights cases of interest to the USG," including her husband's. Embassy officers told Harbury that they were unaware of any new information on Bamaca's whereabouts. Harbury asked that the Embassy arrange an appointment for her with President De Leon (the Ambassador later sought such a meeting, as she had done before). Harbury said that the Minister of Defense had hinted to her that Bamaca was alive; the Defense Attache, who had been present on the occasions when Harbury conversed with the MOD, said that he had never heard the MOD suggest that Bamaca was alive. Harbury replied that she was "reading between the lines." (94 Guatemala 6060)

May 26: Ambassador meets with Harbury, who urges that the U.S. cut off aid to Guatemala. Ambassador replied that the embassy would "continue to push for a satisfactory resolution to the Bamaca case" but voiced her concerns that halting USG funds would adversely affect much-needed criminal justice reforms and hurt Guatemala's neediest citizens. (94 Guatemala 6060)
May 30: Harbury tells Ambassador, Defense Attache and human rights officer that the Minister of Defense was "sounding her out" about "compromise solutions." Defense Attache warns Harbury that we had a different understanding and not to place too much credence in this, particularly since the army had never admitted to holding Bamaca. (94 GT 6060 and Embassy notes)

June 27: Reporting on Harbury's various meetings with Embassy officials during her most recent visit, Embassy closes with the following sentences: "Embassy has no information to support her belief that Bamaca is alive. However, we will continue to press the GOG on this case." (94 Guatemala 6060)

July 1, 1994: Nuccio meets with Harbury. She describes "offer" by Guatemalan Minister of Defense Enriquez to release Bamaca if Harbury drops the case. Harbury asks Nuccio if he will assure Enriquez that she is sincere in offering to drop th case in exchange for Bamaca's release. Nuccio expresses doubt that Enriquez has really made such an offer. Harbury claims Ambassador McAfee has changed her attitude about the case and is no longer pressing it. Nuccio assures Harbury that this is not true. He agrees to bring the case up with the URNG and with MOD Enriquez on his next trip to Mexico and Guatemala. (Nuccio personal records)

July 12: Consul General and Human Rights Officer meet with Supreme Court officials to discuss this and other cases of USG interest. (Embassy records)

August 10-11: Nuccio visits Guatemala, meets with MOD Enriquez and raises Bamaca case. MOD rejects the idea that he ever offered to release Bamaca, claims no knowledge of the case. Nuccio urges Enriquez to take whatever steps on the case are possible now before it becomes a bigger issue in U.S.-Guatemalan relations. (Nuccio personal records)

August 11-12: Nuccio visits Mexico, questions URNG Commander Gaspar Ilom (Rodrigo Asturias) about Bamaca, who served under Ilom. Ilom recounts personal relationship with Bamaca, that he personally recruited him into the ORPA faction of the URNG, taught him to read and feels that he is "like a son." Ilom asks Nuccio to do all he can on the case. (Nuccio personal records)

August 17: Ambassador meets with President De Leon to discuss several bilateral issues; she asks that he meet with Jennifer

October 11 - November 11: Harbury conducts hunger strike in National Plaza, Guatemala City. (Multiple reports)

October/Nov 94: Throughout Harbury's hunger strike, Embassy continues assistance to Harbury and makes representations to GOG, including almost daily visits to Harbury; eight meetings between Ambassador and Harbury; instructions to the National Police "roving patrols" assigned to the Embassy to check on Harbury's safety three times daily and every 60-90 minutes at night; requests that GOG officials and MINUGUA personnel meet with Harbury; and meetings with GOG officials to urge an investigation. (94 Guatemala 9332, 9557, 9608, 9680, 9769, 9786, 9796, 9880, 9924, 9978)

October 11: Consular officer meets with Harbury, emphasizing that the Embassy continues to place high priority on her case and that the Ambassador and the rest of the embassy staff raise Bamaca case with GOG contacts at every opportunity. Consular officer also tells Harbury that, "despite Ms. Harbury's assertions to the contrary, the Ambassador and other embassy officials with whom she had met in the past had been completely candid with her when discussing Embassy efforts to obtain information on her husband's whereabouts and our lack of independent evidence up to this point regarding his fate." Consular officer expresses concern for Harbury's health and personal safety and provides her with the Embassy's 24-hour emergency telephone number. (94 Guatemala 9332)

October 14: Guatemala desk officer meets with visiting ICRC delegates, who tell her in confidence that they interviewed Santiago Cabrera Lopez and Jorge Augusto Recinos for over two hours in Geneva (apparently in February 1993) and found their story lacking in credibility. (Desk officer notes)

October 18-19: Desk officer spends two full days searching through ARA/CEN's 1993 and 1994 files to compile a single, consolidated file on Harbury/Bamaca case. Her file search turns up a May 1993 CIA intelligence memo that suggests Bamaca had been captured by the Guatemalan military. She immediately brings this memorandum to the attention of other ARA officials concerned with the Bamaca case. (Desk officer notes)

October 19: DCM meets Asisclo Valladares to emphasize the case's potential for harm to bilateral relations and to discuss possible entities capable of investigating the case, such as the ICRC, UN Human Rights Commission, UN Verification Mission in Guatemala (MINUGUA), and domestic Guatemalan entities. The DCM urges international participation in any Guatemalan investigation in order to give it credibility. (94 Guatemala 9786)

October 24: ARA DAS Patterson sends INR/IL a memorandum requesting an evaluation of all previous intelligence reports dealing with the Bamaca case and to ask the intelligence community to make the collection of additional intelligence on Bamaca a priority. (ARA files)

October 24: ARA/CEN Director John Hamilton speaks in Tegucigalpa with President De Leon and Foreign Minister de Vielman. De Leon complains that Harbury had consistently misrepresented information which had come from him while he was Human Rights Ombudsman. He expresses concern at Harbury's health and considers hospitalizing her at some point soon. Hamilton urges De Leon to think of steps permitting Harbury to stand down from strike, such as an independent investigation by MINUGUA. De Vielman supports this idea. (e-mail)

October 24: CIA's Office of African and Latin American Analysis, in response to Patterson request of October 19, produces the first of a series of intelligence chronologies dealing with the Bamaca case. This chronology, which includes several acquisitions pointing to Bamaca's capture alive by the Guatemalan military, concludes that the Guatemalan Government has consistently misrepresented its knowledge and use of clandestine military prisons, as well as of the fate of Bamaca. It also concludes that there is insufficient information to determine whether Bamaca is still alive. Earliest piece of intel included is from May 1993. (Intelligence Report: Guatemala: The Bamaca Case)

October 25: Harbury tells Ambassador, during course of long conversation, that a Guatemalan woman had told her that she had heard from a friend in the military that Bamaca was alive. Harbury declines Ambassador's request to contact the woman. (94 Guatemala 9769)

October 26: DCM meets with Prosecutor General Valladares, who tells DCM that Harbury has rejected any investigation by international bodies like MINUGUA and demands a negotiation with the army. Valladares says he will file a writ of habeas corpus for Bamaca, requesting appointment of investigators to visit every military installation in search of information on Bamaca. DCM presses for this effort to include interviews with all persons who participated in the March 1992 firefight when

Bamaca disappeared and again urges international participation in any Guatemalan investigation in order to give it credibility. (94 Guatemala 9786)

October 26: Defense Attache meets with MG Gonzalez Taracena, Chief of Staff of National Defense Staff, emphasizing that lack of action on the case so far was seriously jeopardizing bilateral relations, urging action, and suggesting a high-level statement and independent investigation. Gonzalez says he will discuss with Defense Minister. (94 Guatemala 9796)
October 26: Nuccio meets with URNG command in Mexico City. Raises Bamaca case. Asks ORPA commander Ilom what solution to the Bamaca case is possible. Ilom says Bamaca must be released if alive. Nuccio asks what can be done if he is not alive. Ilom says case must be pursued through the judicial process and body must be handed over. Nuccio asks what if body cannot be produced. Ilom says judicial process is the answer. Nuccio has side conversation with Ilom, says that he now has new information about the case. Ilom says that he has noted new activism on the USG part and thanks Nuccio for his efforts. (Nuccio personal records)

October 27: President De Leon announces new investigation at a press conference, appointing Guatemalan Ambassador to the OAS Cesar Alvarez Guadamuz to coordinate and proposing the appointment of a special prosecutor. He says that every facility will be offered to those investigating the Bamaca case. (94 State 293768, e-mail)

November 4: DCM meets with Prosecutor General Acisclo Valladares, who gives an update on legal aspects of the case. DCM emphasizes that the U.S. considers Harbury's right to petition and freedom of expression to be inviolable and asks about possible Guatemalan government intervention to hospitalize Harbury. Valladares said Ms. Harbury's medical attention should be left to her associates and the Embassy. (94 Guatemala 10117)

November 4: Guatemalan Supreme Court hearing held on question of pursuing a special investigation into Bamaca's whereabouts. Harbury and Embassy American Citizen Services officer attend. (Embassy notes)

Embassy assists Harbury with information and arrangements, including transportation, consular accompaniment, security, cameras, a forensic specialist, and assistance to Harbury's colleagues, and is present at the subsequent exhumation on November 8, which is not of Bamaca. (94 Guatemala 10067)

Embassy notes urgency of need for action and suggests that Ambassador be instructed to inform De Leon of the basic elements of the report. (94 Guatemala 10068, Roger Channel)

November 8: Third of CIA Chronologies on Bamaca case disseminated. This chronology contains summary of a March 1992

TD reporting several days after the fact the capture of Bamaca, who was in good condition despite a wound to the arm. Report said Bamaca was being treated well by the Army and that news of his capture would likely be kept secret. (Intelligence Report, Guatemala: Updating the Bamaca Case, November 8)

Nuccio agrees to try but points out that Harbury is attacking him personally, reducing his effectiveness. Ilom mentions NYTimes editorial charging Amb. McAfee and Nuccio with "silence" on the case and says that is unjust. He offers to send a "messenger" to Harbury to warn her against "converting an attack on the GOG and military into an attack on the USG." (Nuccio personal records)

November 9: Department instructs Ambassador to demarche President De Leon, noting that "a comprehensive review of holdings on the Bamaca case leads Department to conclude that Bamaca was alive in army custody in 1992" and telling Ambassador to press De Leon to use this information to obtain a full accounting of this case. (94 State 302742)

November 11: On instructions, Ambassador makes demarche to De Leon, telling him that "multiple reports from several reliable sources ... indicate that Efrain Bamaca was taken captive in March 1992 and transferred to a base in San Marcos for further interrogation. Bamaca had been wounded, but his injuries were not believed to be life-threatening. Because he was in army custody, the army should be aware of his fate at that time. We are bringing these credible reports to your attention because, as President, you have a responsibility to ensure that the investigation now underway should be vigorously pursued to confirm the facts in this case, and to take appropriate strong action." Ambassador gives De Leon a copy of these points in writing. De Leon responds that he has ordered an investigation, hopes MINUGUA will make a major contribution, and asserts that Bamaca is dead, without elaborating. (94 Guatemala 10274) contained the following information: "Based on all the information available to us from a variety of sources, we have concluded that Bamaca was taken captive by the army in March 1992. He had been wounded, but his injuries were not believed to be life-threatening. We have no information that he was alive much beyond the first few weeks after his capture." The Ambassador declines to expand or respond to questions about the information, noting that it concerned intelligence matters, but says she had pressed De Leon for a vigorous investigation. Harbury asks for copies of all Embassy communications on her case; the Ambassador tells her to make the request in Washington. Harbury notes she has ended her hunger strike and will return to the U.S. for meetings with White House officials. (94 Guatemala 10259)

November 11: Nuccio meets with the URNG in Mexico City. Ilom takes credit for having ended Harbury hunger strike the day before by saying that he send a messenger to her as promised. November 21: Harbury meets with National Security Adviser Anthony Lake, Vice President Gore's adviser Leon Fuerth, and Assistant Secretary of State John Shattuck. Lake gives Harbury an up-to-date assessment of our intelligence on the Bamaca case, affirming that we have no information as to Bamaca being alive and that we have been informed, although we cannot verify, that he was alive in July 1992 (sic). Lake emphasizes that the Bamaca case is important to us and that we will continue working on it. We will push the Government of Guatemala to work with the UN human rights verification mission in Guatemala (MINUGUA) to investigate the case. (NSC records)

November 23: Ambassador and Defense Attache meet with Minister of Defense to press strongly for a resolution of the Bamaca case and other pending human rights cases, noting that if the case is not resolved, bilateral relations would suffer. She says that the USG had reliable information from several credible sources that the army captured Bamaca alive in March 1992 and thus must know what happened to him. Enriquez pledged to cooperate fully with the Human Rights Ombudsman and Solicitor General's investigations. (94 Guatemala 10720)

November 23: Ambassador McAfee meets with MINUGUA head Leonardo Franco to discuss case. Franco notes that the Human Rights Ombudsman has sought MINUGUA's help and asks Ambassador for information about Bamaca having been captured alive. Ambassador tells him that we believe Bamaca was captured by the military in March 1992 but his wounds were not life-threatening. We have no information concerning sightings of Bamaca after a few weeks, however. (94 Guatemala 10581)

November 25: Ambassador meets with President De Leon to discuss case. De Leon asks for USG "help" in dealing with the repercussions of the Bamaca case. He said that Bamaca is dead and the case should be turned over to the Historical Clarification Commission (to be established after a final peace accord). The Ambassador emphasizes the need for progress and stresses that the USG expects his full cooperation in the legal/judicial pursuit of the case, including allowing Jennifer Harbury to re-enter Guatemala to pursue her legal cases. (94 Guatemala 10619)

November 29: GOG files suit against Jennifer Harbury to force her to file civil charges against th Guatemalan government or lose her right to do so in the future. (94 Guatemala 10695) (Note: In a legal victory for Harbury, the case is ultimately dismissed in January.)

Late November/Early December: The Human Rights Ombudsman's staff, accompanied by MINUGUA personnel, interviews military personnel accused of participating in Bamaca's disappearance, including Col. Alpirez. All professed to know nothing about Bamaca's capture or death. (94 Guatemala 10855)

The Ambassador promises to relay Harbury's request to Washington, which she does. (94 Guatemala 10853)

December 2: Ambassador meets with MINUGUA head Leonardo Franco to discuss case. Franco says that the military was cooperative during late November searches of military installations, which MINUGUA observed, and asks for more USG information about the case. (94 Guatemala 10855)

Ambassador urges that the Human Rights Ombudsman's request to extend his investigation be granted. Ambassador/Richardson meet with Harbury. (94 Guatemala 10924)

December 5: DCM meets with Attorney General Valladares to discuss case, expressing "strong USG support for a comprehensive investigation into Bamaca's whereabouts, to include interviewing both army and guerrilla personnel" and noting that the Human Rights Ombudsman needs more time to complete his investigation. Regarding the GOG's suit against Harbury, the DCM told Valladares that the suit appears to interested parties in the U.S. and elsewhere as an attempt to muzzle Harbury and that GOG efforts to question the bona fides of her marriage to Bamaca strike some observers as harassment. (94 Guatemala 11007)

December 5: Embassy officers contact Harbury to discuss the Valladares's discussion of the GOG suit against her. (94 Guatemala 11007)

December 6: ARA officials and U/S Tarnoff discuss case with Guatemalan Foreign Minister de Vielman in Washington; Anthony Lake discusses case with her on 12/7/94. All note the importance of the case and urge that the GOG provide a full accounting of Bamaca's fate. (94 State 331770)

Parinello says that the decision would be made at a higher level. (94 Guatemala 11232)

December 9 or 10: President De Leon approaches President Clinton at the Summit of the Americas to ask for understanding on the Bamaca case and passes him a document purporting to be a statement from a former guerrilla collaborator stating that Bamaca never knew Harbury. (Embassy notes; original source unclear)

December 20: Harbury meets with NSC official Richard Feinberg, who reiterates that information available to the USG suggests that Bamaca was captured by the military but did not appear to have survived much beyond a few weeks after his capture.

December 22: ARA DAS Patterson meets with Harbury, delivering same message.

December 24: The Departments of State and Defense instruct USCINCSO General McCaffrey to visit Guatemala to discuss the Bamaca case and other issues with Guatemalan MOD. (94 State 340143)

January 20: Ambassador discusses case with new Minister of Government Carlos Reynoso Gil. (Embassy records)

January 26: USCINCSO McCaffrey discusses Bamaca case with MOD Enriquez and Chief of Staff Gonzalez Taracena, emphasizing the importance of this and other human rights cases to the USG and urging that the military move forward for the sake of Guatemala's future. He tells MOD and COS that all Guatemalan officers must accept that outside scrutiny is not a violation of national sovereignty. (Guatemala 1248)

January 26: Intelligence report says that according to a Guatemalan government official, "it was known within the senior ranks of the army that Alpirez ... killed Bamaca." January 26: Patterson attends the first of several NSC-chaired meetings over the next several days (ARA/CEN's Hamilton attending those that occurred the following week) with reps from NSC, DOJ, CIA and OVP to coordinate inter-agency action. January 27: ARA Assistant Secretary Watson informs Undersecretary Tarnoff in writing about the January 26 intelligence report on Alpirez

January 27: CIA disseminates fifth of its chronologies on the Bamaca case. This contains the January 25 intelligence concerning the possible involvement of Colonel Julio Roberto Alpirez. (Guatemala: Developments in the Bamaca Case, January 27, to which appended: Intelligence Report, Guatemala, Chronology of the Bamaca Case, January 27, 1995)

February 3: CIA begins briefings of oversight committees.

February 3: Department instructs Ambassador to demarche President De Leon to reiterate information contained in November 11 demarche, note that those conclusions had been corroborated by additional information and ask that the GOG reinterview implicated military officers, particularly Alpirez. (State 28652)

February 3: Harbury calls ACS Officer to report unspecified threats against her Guatemalan attorneys. Ambassador instructs Embassy personnel to raise our concern over this with GOG authorities. (Embassy notes)

February 6: Ambassador carries out demarche as instructed, noting "profound concern existing at the highest levels of the USG" about Bamaca's fate, and decrying the absence to date of an in-depth investigation into Bamaca's whereabouts. She tells him that in the time that has passed since the November 11 demarche, the USG has "become even more firmly convinced" that the conclusion that Bamaca had not survived was correct. De Leon reiterates his belief that Bamaca was dead, commits the GOG to make every effort to find Bamaca, and notes that the Historical Clarification should look into the circumstances of his death. Ambassador leaves a written copy of the talking points with De Leon. (Guatemala 1041)

February 7: Ambassador discusses Bamaca with Minister of Defense, delivering talking points contained in demarche given to President De Leon. Enriquez said that he would not voluntarily make Alpirez or other officers available for questioning but would comply with an official summons to do so. Ambassador "again emphasized the importance of resolving the Bamaca case." (Guatemala 1210)

February 8: Ambassador delivers same demarche points to Chief Prosecutor Ramses Cuestas, who replies that Bamaca's alleged capture occurred under a previous administration and asks for more information about officers assigned to the San Marcos

military zone in 1992. Ambassador tells him that Santiago Cabrera Lopez had publicly identified several officers, including Alpirez, who should be re-interviewed. (Guatemala 1155)

February 8: Harbury meets with ARA DAS Patterson, who tells her that the USG continues to press the GOG on this case, most recently in the February 6 meeting with De Leon. Harbury asks that her FOIA request be expedited, requests access to classified information, and says she will go back on hunger strike if the U.S. does not impose economic sanctions on Guatemala. Patterson tells her that the information used in the February 6 demarche was based on intelligence sources and thus the State Department could not release it to her except pursuant to a FOIA request. Harbury accuses the USG of deliberately refusing to do anything about Bamaca's capture; Patterson replies that the USG has in fact devoted considerable resources to the case. Patterson reiterates our conclusion that all information available to us suggests that Bamaca did not survive for more than a few weeks beyond his capture, although we have no conclusive evidence about his actual death. (State 40484)

February 9: Letter signed by Anne Patterson on January 25 delivered to Harbury's attorney's messenger in Washington (letter had been mis-sent to Nicaragua desk by mistake and thus not mailed sooner). Letter, addressed to Harbury, recommends that she request documents through the Freedom of Information Act process and encloses information describing provisions for expeditious handling of such requests. The letter states "in all fairness, you should be aware there may be documents responsive to your inquiry which were generated by other U.S. government agencies. Information generated by other agencies cannot be unilaterally disclosed by the State Department. You may therefore wish to consider making FOIA requests to those agencies. Although every effort would be made to release as many State Department documents as possible, we can offer no prior assurances in this regard, particularly with respect to any information that is restricted from disclosure by law for reasons of classification or other applicable criteria." The letter also encloses an authenticated copy of the Department of State's press spokesperson's remarks at the November 14 press briefing containing the same information given to Harbury by Ambassador McAfee orally November 11.

February 9: Ambassador discusses case with MINUGUA director Leonardo Franco to emphasize the continuing need for MINUGUA to assist on the Bamaca case, describing the demarche in general terms. Franco responds positively. (Guatemala 1186)

February 17: Ambassador meets with Jennifer Harbury, who asks for details on the Ambassador's latest demarche and confirmation of any kind that Bamaca is dead. Ambassador suggests that she direct her inquiries regarding sensitive information to the Department in Washington but confirms that she met with De Leon and that the Embassy does not think Bamaca is alive because it has received no information to support such an assumption. (Guatemala 1569)

February 17: INR provides Undersecretary Tarnoff with information memorandum updating him on developments in the Bamaca case. (S/S # 9502991)

February 18: DCM discusses case with Public Minister Cuestas, urging interviews of implicated military personnel. Ambassador reiterates this four days later. (Embassy notes)

February 21: Ambassador discusses case with newly-appointed COPREDEH chairman Vicente Arranz. (Embassy records)

February 22: Ambassador and PolCouns meet with former Amb. Robert White to discuss Harbury case. Political section sets up appointments with GOG officials for Amb. White. (Embassy records)

February 23: Ambassador meets with Ambassador White for outbrief on his meetings with GOG officials. (Embassy records)

March 6: Ambassador raised the need for positive movement on the Bamaca case with MOD Enriquez and Chief of Staff Gonzalez Taracena, again stressing the critical importance of resolving it. They were noncommittal; the Ambassador told Gonzalez at a subsequent meeting that day that the U.S. and Guatemala "are on a collision course if no positive action is taken." (Guatemala 1889)

March 7: Ambassador meets with Jennifer Harbury, who asks for the Embassy's help in getting the GOG to allow her to be present at interviews of military officers and in facilitating a meeting between the MOD and Congressman Richardson (the Ambassador tells her that we have already passed the latter request on and promises to pass on the former request, noting that the GOG may be reluctant to comply). Harbury presses the Ambassador for hard information that Bamaca is dead. The Ambassador responds that the USG has reached the conclusion that he is dead, based on all available evidence. She adds "I am convinced he is dead, but I do not know what happened to him." She suggests that Harbury refer additional questions on this topic to Washington. (Guatemala 2007)

March 9: Ambassador discusses case with representatives of the private sector and with a Guatemalan congressional delegation that is planning a visit to Washington. (Embassy records)

March 10: Guatemalan Ambassador to the U.S Edmond Mulet calls on ARA/CEN Director Hamilton on instructions from the GOG to present a "white paper" on the Bamaca case, as well as a press release reaffirming the GOG position that Bamaca was not captured by the Guatemalan military. Hamilton responds that the statement and white paper are not credible and notifies Mulet of the U.S. decision to suspend participation by Guatemalan military personnel in IMET programs in the U.S. for the rest of 1995, out of concern over a lack of substantial progress on several pending human rights cases, including Bamaca's. (State 61944)

March 10: Ambassador meets with Acting Foreign Minister Arevalo, who says that the GOG considers the Bamaca case as still open and denying that the Guatemalan government had ever said Bamaca was dead. Ambassador stresses the importance of the Bamaca case and passes along Harbury's request to be present at interviews of army personnel allegedly involved in this case. (Guatemala 2033)

March 10: NSC adviser Feinberg meets with Harbury, provides her with copy of March 10 State Department press release. (NSC notes)

March 13: Embassy discusses lack of credibility of report by Guatemalan officer claiming to have seen Bamaca alive in December 1992. (Guatemala 2032, Roger channel)

March 15: DCM discusses case with Chief Prosecutor Ramses Cuestas, pressing for interviews to begin immediately and conveying Harbury's request to be present. DCM notes that the U.S. recognizes Harbury's marriage as legal and valid, adding that the U.S. expects Guatemala to respect our legal system and not delay the registration of Harbury's marriage in Guatemala (a step required for her continued legal actions there). Case of Efrain Bamaca Velasquez
Chronology of Key Events

Note: This chronology is drawn from a review of ARA/CEN's files, which have been provided to A/IM/IS/FPC pursuant to a January 1995 FOIA request by Jennifer Harbury. Embassy Guatemala also furnished some information contained below. Ms. Harbury has filed a second FOIA request covering information until February 12, 1995, to which ARA/CEN is responding. Although this chronology refers to some intelligence reports, it by no means represents a comprehensive summary of all existing intelligence on this case.

Summary

Guatemalan guerrilla Efrain Bamaca Velasquez disappeared on March 12, 1992 after a firefight with the Guatemalan army near Retalhuleu. For nearly a year, his colleagues and American citizen wife, Jennifer Harbury, believed that he died in combat. However, a former guerrilla, Santiago Cabrera Lopez, claimed in February 1993 that, while detained by the Guatemalan military, he had seen Bamaca alive in military custody in March and July 1992. Harbury contacted our Embassy in March 1993 for assistance in resolving the case. From that time forward, the Embassy and USG officials in Washington assisted Harbury, repeatedly pressed the GOG for information and action, and shared as much information as possible with her.

After an exhumation facilitated by the Embassy failed to discover Bamaca's remains in August 1993, Harbury conducted a week-long hunger strike in Guatemala in September 1993 to publicize her demand for more information. She conducted a 32-day hunger strike in Guatemala in October-November 1994 for the same purpose, during which time she was visited on a near-daily basis by Embassy personnel, including the Ambassador on several occasions. During that hunger strike, ARA/CEN searched its CASC and PHUM files for 1993 and 1994 to create a unified file on the Bamaca case. The Embassy conducted a similar review and the CIA wrote the first of several intelligence updates/chronologies on the case.

Drawing on information developed during the file search and subsequent taskings for and receipt of additional intelligence, the Department instructed Ambassador McAfee to meet with President De Leon on November 11, 1994. The Ambassador told De Leon that, according to information available to the USG, Bamaca was captured alive by the military and that we had no information indicating that he survived much beyond the first few weeks of his capture. On the same day, Ambassador McAfee shared this same information with Jennifer Harbury, who had just ended her hunger strike. As more information became available in the ensuing months, we became even more convinced of this conclusion, which USG officials shared with Ms. Harbury in several subsequent meetings, while noting (as remains true to this day) that we have no direct, conclusive evidence of when or how Bamaca was actually killed, nor who ordered his murder or who actually committed it.

On January 26, the CIA provided intelligence that, according to [redacted], "it was known within the senior ranks of the army that Alpirez ... killed Bamaca."

On February 3, the Department instructed Ambassador McAfee to approach President De Leon again, urging him to order the re-interrogation of senior military officers who might have been involved in Bamaca's disappearance, including Colonel Julio Roberto Alpirez. Ambassador McAfee made this demarche on February 6. ARA DAS Anne Patterson met February 8 with Jennifer Harbury to inform her of the demarche but without revealing Alpirez's name, in view of the fact that Alpirez' degree of involvement in Bamaca's presumed death was not clear. Harbury initiated another hunger strike on March 12 in Washington but concluded it on March 23 after Congressman Torricelli provided her with information alleging involvement in her husband's death by Colonel Alpirez. End Summary.

March 12: Efrain Bamaca Velasquez, aka Comandante Everardo, disappears after firefight with Guatemalan army near Retalhuleu.

March 18: CIA report from Guatemala reports capture of ORPA commander Everardo, described as "lightly wounded in the arm ... in good physical condition ... being well treated by the army ... cooperating fully with his captors." The report's comment speculates that the army will keep news of his capture secret or even claim that he was killed to maximize Everardo's intelligence value. ARA/CEN comment: The name "Efrain Bamaca Velasquez" is not used in this report, and an army officer told the Embassy in March 1993 that it did not know that Everardo was actually Efrain Bamaca Velasquez until Jennifer Harbury and Santiago Cabrera Lopez publicized his alleged capture. Given the description of Everardo as in good condition and cooperating with the army, there is no reason at the time to see this report in a human rights context. Although this report was undoubtedly disseminated to CEN and other ARA offices at the time of acquisition, it first comes to our attention in the Harbury/Bamaca context on November 8, 1994) B1

May: The exhumation of a grave in Retalhuleu believed to contain Bamaca's remains is suspended by Attorney General Acisclo Valladares on the grounds that no family member is there to identify the body, nor was other identifying evidence (x-rays, dental records, etc.) available. Jennifer Harbury, who was present, did not identify herself as Bamaca's wife. On March 12 of the following year, she stated that she did not identify herself because she was afraid to do so. (93 Guatemala 3794 and embassy notes)

February: Former guerrillas Santiago Cabrera Lopez and Jorge Augusto Recinos (noms de guerre: Carlos and Willy) testify at the UN Human Rights Commission in Geneva about having seen Bamaca and 35 other guerrillas in clandestine army detention in March and July 1992. (Recinos said he heard guards talking about Bamaca being in custody in August 1992; he did not claim to have seen Bamaca personally.) Cabrera Lopez says he escaped from army custody and left Guatemala in December 1992. (93 Guatemala 2435 and October 1994 sworn statement by Cabrera)

March 1: 93 Guatemala 2435 contains Embassy's evaluation of Cabrera and Recinos's claims, commenting, "we have no idea whether the guerrillas' accusations are accurate ... the ex-guerrillas' claims are not beyond the realm of possibility ... "

March 9: Jennifer Harbury makes her first contact with the Embassy to seek assistance in the case in a phone call to the Embassy's human rights officer, asking Embassy assistance in seeking information from GOG officials about Bamaca's whereabouts and arranging for an exhumation of the Retalhuleu grave. The human rights officer, according to the cable, "pledged to assist in any way possible but requested no publicity concerning such efforts," to which Harbury agreed. (93 Guatemala 3794, which also reports that the Guatemalan Government denies holding Bamaca, alleging that he may have died in combat and been buried in Retalhuleu)

March 12: Harbury writes to Embassy human rights officer outlining case and describing aborted exhumation. (Embassy records)

March 15: Charge and Acting DCM talk to Attorney General Acisclo Valladares about case. (93 Guatemala 3794)

March 18: Embassy officers speak to then-Human Rights Ombudsman Ramiro De Leon Carpio about case. He tells them that he became involved in the case after receiving discreet inquiries from Bishop Quezada and the URNG guerrilla group. He approached the Minister of Defense and other GOG officials, and was told that Bamaca was probably buried in an unmarked grave in Retalhuleu. De Leon requested and received permission to exhume the grave in May 1992, but the proceeding was stopped (as noted earlier in this chronology). (93 Guatemala 3794)
March 18: Embassy human rights officer speaks with Harbury by phone. He explains to her that, in the absence of other family members, pursuit by the Embassy of an exhumation will require that she prove her purported marriage to Bamaca. (Embassy notes)

March 22: Embassy human rights officer contacts COPREDEH (Guatemala's Presidential Human Rights Commission) about case. The COPREDEH staffer said that the UN Human Rights Commission's independent expert on Guatemala had inquired about the case and the GOG was preparing a reply denying that the military had ever had Bamaca. (93 Guatemala 3794)

March 23: Embassy receives from Jennifer Harbury a privacy act waiver imposing no restrictions on U.S. officials regarding discussions of the case. (93 Guatemala 3794)

March 24: Embassy human rights officer speaks with Harbury by telephone, giving her a status report on inquiries to the GOG and steps taken to arrange an exhumation. (Embassy records)

March 26: Embassy human rights officer and other embassy officer contacts Military Intelligence Chief Otto Fernando Perez Molina about case; Perez says that the military definitely did not have Bamaca, who is "probably buried in Retalhuleu." He pledges military cooperation with future exhumation efforts and says that he believes that "Harbury had no reason to fear returning to Guatemala for the exhumation". (93 Guatemala 3794)

August 20: Ambassador and consular officer meet with Harbury to discuss the exhumation results. Journalist Janet Hawkins of "Harvard" magazine also sits in. Harbury asked for Ambassador's support for her ongoing efforts to get the GOG to move all clandestine prisoners to publicly-accessible detention centers. Ambassador tells Harbury that she and other Embassy officers have discussed and will continue to discuss the case with highest-level GOG officials, including the President and Minister of Defense. She notes that "at present we have no evidence to confirm Harbury's claim of the ongoing detention of URNG combatants to include Bamaca, but against that possibility the Ambassador has continued to press the case with the GOG." August 30: During a dinner meeting, Ambassador and President De Leon discuss Bamaca case. (Embassy records)

September 4: Consular officer meets with Harbury to discuss Harbury's meeting with Minister of Defense. Harbury reported that Enriquez was "cordial and non-committal" but did not respond to her questions about how the army could have provided an accurate physical description of Bamaca in spring 1992 to the Human Rights Ombudsman if the army had not held Bamaca. (93 Guatemala 10257)

Charge tells Foreign Minister not to take any action to interfere with Harbury's activities and urges that Ms. Harbury's well-being be protected. The reporting cable on the conversation notes that President De Leon told the press that Harbury "is in her rights to exercise such pressure." (93 Guatemala 10302)

September 13: GOG Peace Commission member Mario Permuth tells political counselor and political officer that URNG commander Rodrigo Asturias, head of the guerrilla faction ORPA to which Bamaca reportedly belonged, once told Permuth that he thought Bamaca was dead. (93 Guatemala 10416)

October 7: A Guatemalan army officer tells Defense Attache and political officer that the Guatemalan government, in response to Harbury's decision to file a case with the Inter-American Commission on Human Rights (IACHR), may seek to prove that Harbury was never legally married to Bamaca. The officer said that many guerrillas have died and been buried in places unknown to the Guatemalan government, so the fact that Bamaca's body was not buried in Retalhuleu proves nothing. October 21: Harbury meets with ARA DAS Anne Patterson in Washington to discuss her IACHR case. Patterson emphasized the importance of human rights issues in U.S. policy toward Guatemala and USG opposition to the use of secret detention facilities. Patterson asked Harbury if she still believed her husband was alive, in view of the fact that the last reported sighting of Bamaca (by Santiago Cabrera Lopez) took place in July 1992. Harbury responded affirmatively, based on the belief that her husband's experience and close ties to ORPA leader Asturias would make him a valuable source of intelligence. (93 State 339783)

December 9: Senior ARA Adviser Nuccio and Guatemala desk officer Harrington meet with Jennifer Harbury. Nuccio tells Harbury that we do not know more about the Bamaca case than what we have been told by the Guatemalan Government. (Nuccio personal records)

ask for an account of the Embassy's efforts on her case. Embassy officers report that they "regularly prod their GOG contacts for action and answers on all unresolved human rights cases of interest to the USG," including her husband's. Embassy officers told Harbury that they were unaware of any new information on Bamaca's whereabouts. Harbury asked that the Embassy arrange an appointment for her with President De Leon (the Ambassador later sought such a meeting, as she had done before). Harbury said that the Minister of Defense had hinted to her that Bamaca was alive; the Defense Attache, who had been present on the occasions when Harbury conversed with the MOD, said that he had never heard the MOD suggest that Bamaca was alive. Harbury replied that she was "reading between the lines." (94 Guatemala 6060)

May 26: Ambassador meets with Harbury, who urges that the U.S. cut off aid to Guatemala. Ambassador replied that the embassy would "continue to push for a satisfactory resolution to the Bamaca case" but voiced her concerns that halting USG funds would adversely affect much-needed criminal justice reforms and hurt Guatemala's neediest citizens. (94 Guatemala 6060)
May 30: Harbury tells Ambassador, Defense Attache and human rights officer that the Minister of Defense was "sounding her out" about "compromise solutions." Defense Attache warns Harbury that we had a different understanding and not to place too much credence in this, particularly since the army had never admitted to holding Bamaca. (94 GT 6060 and Embassy notes)

June 27: Reporting on Harbury's various meetings with Embassy officials during her most recent visit, Embassy closes with the following sentences: "Embassy has no information to support her belief that Bamaca is alive. However, we will continue to press the GOG on this case." (94 Guatemala 6060)

July 1, 1994: Nuccio meets with Harbury. She describes "offer" by Guatemalan Minister of Defense Enriquez to release Bamaca if Harbury drops the case. Harbury asks Nuccio if he will assure Enriquez that she is sincere in offering to drop th case in exchange for Bamaca's release. Nuccio expresses doubt that Enriquez has really made such an offer. Harbury claims Ambassador McAfee has changed her attitude about the case and is no longer pressing it. Nuccio assures Harbury that this is not true. He agrees to bring the case up with the URNG and with MOD Enriquez on his next trip to Mexico and Guatemala. (Nuccio personal records)

August 11-12: Nuccio visits Mexico, questions URNG Commander Gaspar Ilom (Rodrigo Asturias) about Bamaca, who served under Ilom. Ilom asks Nuccio to do all he can on the case. (Nuccio personal records)

August 22: Ambassador raises case with Minister of Defense at dinner in honor of visiting DOD DAS Mari-Luci Jaramillo. Enriquez said he had no idea where Bamaca was and suggested that the body disinterred in Retalhuleu in August 1993 was really Bamaca's. The Ambassador "retorted that she didn't believe that" and emphasized that this case continued to be of high priority to the USG. (94 Guatemala 8176)

August 23: Ambassador and DOD DAS Mari-Luci Jaramillo raise Harbury/Bamaca case with MOD. Jaramillo notes that this case is "of special concern" to the USG. Enriquez "stated emphatically that the army did not have Bamaca" and speculated that he might "still be alive somewhere." (94 Guatemala 8176)

October 11: Consular officer meets with Harbury, emphasizing that the Embassy continues to place high priority on her case and that the Ambassador and the rest of the embassy staff raise Bamaca case with GOG contacts at every opportunity. Consular officer also tells Harbury that, "despite Ms. Harbury's assertions to the contrary, the Ambassador and other embassy officials with whom she had met in the past had been completely candid with her when discussing Embassy efforts to obtain information on her husband's whereabouts and our lack of independent evidence up to this point regarding his fate." Consular officer expresses concern for Harbury's health and personal safety and provides her with the Embassy's 24-hour emergency telephone number. (94 Guatemala 9332)

October 14: Guatemala desk officer meets with visiting ICRC delegates, who tell her in confidence that they interviewed Santiago Cabrera Lopez and Jorge Augusto Recinos for over two hours in Geneva (apparently in February 1993) and found their story lacking in credibility. (Desk officer notes)

Her file search turns up a May 1993 CIA intelligence memo that suggests Bamaca had been captured by the Guatemalan military. She immediately brings this memorandum to the attention of other ARA officials concerned with the Bamaca case. (Desk officer notes)

October 19: DCM meets Asisclo Valladares to emphasize the case's potential for harm to bilateral relations and to discuss possible entities capable of investigating the case, such as the ICRC, UN Human Rights Commission, UN Verification Mission in Guatemala (MINUGUA), and domestic Guatemalan entities. October 24: ARA/CEN Director John Hamilton speaks in Tegucigalpa with President De Leon and Foreign Minister de Vielman. De Leon complains that Harbury had consistently misrepresented information which had come from him while he was Human Rights Ombudsman. He expresses concern at Harbury's health and considers hospitalizing her at some point soon. Hamilton urges De Leon to think of steps permitting Harbury to stand down from strike, such as an independent investigation by MINUGUA. De Vielman supports this idea. (e-mail)

October 24: CIA's Office of African and Latin American Analysis, in response to Patterson request of October 19, produces the first of a series of intelligence chronologies dealing with the Bamaca case. This chronology, which includes several acquisitions pointing to Bamaca's capture alive by the Guatemalan military, concludes that the Guatemalan Government has consistently misrepresented its knowledge and use of clandestine military prisons, as well as of the fate of Bamaca. It also concludes that there is insufficient information to determine whether Bamaca is still alive. Earliest piece of intel included is from May 1993. (Intelligence Report: Guatemala: The Bamaca Case)

October 25: Harbury tells Ambassador, during course of long conversation, that a Guatemalan woman had told her that she had heard from a friend in the military that Bamaca was alive. Harbury declines Ambassador's request to contact the woman. (94 Guatemala 9769)

October 26: DCM meets with Prosecutor General Valladares, who tells DCM that Harbury has rejected any investigation by international bodies like MINUGUA and demands a negotiation with the army. Valladares says he will file a writ of habeas corpus for Bamaca, requesting appointment of investigators to visit every military installation in search of information on Bamaca. DCM presses for this effort to include interviews with all persons who participated in the March 1992 firefight when

Gonzalez says he will discuss with Defense Minister. (94 Guatemala 9796)
October 26: Nuccio meets with URNG command in Mexico City. Raises Bamaca case. Asks ORPA commander Ilom what solution to the Bamaca case is possible. Ilom says Bamaca must be released if alive. Nuccio asks what can be done if he is not alive. Ilom says case must be pursued through the judicial process and body must be handed over. Nuccio asks what if body cannot be produced. Ilom says judicial process is the answer. Nuccio has side conversation with Ilom, says that he now has new information about the case. Ilom says that he has noted new activism on the USG part and thanks Nuccio for his efforts. (Nuccio personal records)

October 27: President De Leon announces new investigation at a press conference, appointing Guatemalan Ambassador to the OAS Cesar Alvarez Guadamuz to coordinate and proposing the appointment of a special prosecutor. November 11: On instructions, Ambassador makes demarche to De Leon, telling him that "multiple reports from several reliable sources ... indicate that Efrain Bamaca was taken captive in March 1992 and transferred to a base in San Marcos for further interrogation. Bamaca had been wounded, but his injuries were not believed to be life-threatening. Because he was in army custody, the army should be aware of his fate at that time. We are bringing these credible reports to your attention because, as President, you have a responsibility to ensure that the investigation now underway should be vigorously pursued to confirm the facts in this case, and to take appropriate strong action." Ambassador gives De Leon a copy of these points in writing. De Leon responds that he has ordered an investigation, hopes MINUGUA will make a major contribution, and asserts that Bamaca is dead, without elaborating. (94 Guatemala 10274)

The Ambassador declines to expand or respond to questions about the information, noting that it concerned intelligence matters, but says she had pressed De Leon for a vigorous investigation. January 31: DCM discusses case with Solicitor General Acisclo Valladares. (Embassy records)

February 3: CIA begins briefings of oversight committees.

February 3: Department instructs Ambassador to demarche President De Leon to reiterate information contained in November 11 demarche, note that those conclusions had been corroborated by additional information and ask that the GOG reinterview implicated military officers, particularly Alpirez. (State 28652)

February 3: Harbury calls ACS Officer to report unspecified threats against her Guatemalan attorneys. Ambassador instructs Embassy personnel to raise our concern over this with GOG authorities. (Embassy notes)

February 6: Ambassador carries out demarche as instructed, noting "profound concern existing at the highest levels of the USG" about Bamaca's fate, and decrying the absence to date of an in-depth investigation into Bamaca's whereabouts. She tells him that in the time that has passed since the November 11 demarche, the USG has "become even more firmly convinced" that the conclusion that Bamaca had not survived was correct. De Leon reiterates his belief that Bamaca was dead, commits the GOG to make every effort to find Bamaca, and notes that the Historical Clarification should look into the circumstances of his death. Ambassador leaves a written copy of the talking points with De Leon. (Guatemala 1041)

February 7: Ambassador discusses Bamaca with Minister of Defense, delivering talking points contained in demarche given to President De Leon. Enriquez said that he would not voluntarily make Alpirez or other officers available for questioning but would comply with an official summons to do so. Ambassador "again emphasized the importance of resolving the Bamaca case." (Guatemala 1210)

February 8: Ambassador delivers same demarche points to Chief Prosecutor Ramses Cuestas, who replies that Bamaca's alleged capture occurred under a previous administration and asks for more information about officers assigned to the San Marcos -

military zone in 1992. Ambassador tells him that Santiago Cabrera Lopez had publicly identified several officers, including Alpirez, who should be re-interviewed. (Guatemala 1155)

February 8: Harbury meets with ARA DAS Patterson, who tells her that the USG continues to press the GOG on this case, most recently in the February 6 meeting with De Leon. Harbury asks that her FOIA request be expedited, requests access to classified information, and says she will go back on hunger strike if the U.S. does not impose economic sanctions on Guatemala. Patterson tells her that the information used in the February 6 demarche was based on intelligence sources and thus the State Department could not release it to her except pursuant to a FOIA request. Harbury accuses the USG of deliberately refusing to do anything about Bamaca's capture; Patterson replies that the USG has in fact devoted considerable resources to the case. Patterson reiterates our conclusion that all information available to us suggests that Bamaca did not survive for more than a few weeks beyond his capture, although we have no conclusive evidence about his actual death. (State 40484)

February 9: Letter signed by Anne Patterson on January 25 delivered to Harbury's attorney's messenger in Washington (letter had been mis-sent to Nicaragua desk by mistake and thus not mailed sooner). Letter, addressed to Harbury, recommends that she request documents through the Freedom of Information Act process and encloses information describing provisions for expeditious handling of such requests. The letter states "in all fairness, you should be aware there may be documents responsive to your inquiry which were generated by other U.S. government agencies. Information generated by other agencies cannot be unilaterally disclosed by the State Department. You may therefore wish to consider making FOIA requests to those agencies. Although every effort would be made to release as many State Department documents as possible, we can offer no prior assurances in this regard, particularly with respect to any information that is restricted from disclosure by law for reasons of classification or other applicable criteria." The letter also encloses an authenticated copy of the Department of State's press spokesperson's remarks at the November 14 press briefing containing the same information given to Harbury by Ambassador McAfee orally November 11.

February 9: Ambassador discusses case with MINUGUA director Leonardo Franco to emphasize the continuing need for MINUGUA to assist on the Bamaca case, describing the demarche in general terms. Franco responds positively. (Guatemala 1186)

February 17: Ambassador meets with Jennifer Harbury, who asks for details on the Ambassador's latest demarche and confirmation of any kind that Bamaca is dead. Ambassador suggests that she direct her inquiries regarding sensitive information to the Department in Washington but confirms that she met with De Leon and that the Embassy does not think Bamaca is alive because it has received no information to support such an assumption. February 17: INR provides Undersecretary Tarnoff with information memorandum updating him on developments in the Bamaca case. (S/S # 9502991)

March 7: Ambassador meets with Jennifer Harbury, who asks for the Embassy's help in getting the GOG to allow her to be present at interviews of military officers and in facilitating a meeting between the MOD and Congressman Richardson (the Ambassador tells her that we have already passed the latter request on and promises to pass on the former request, noting that the GOG may be reluctant to comply). Harbury presses the Ambassador for hard information that Bamaca is dead. The Ambassador responds that the USG has reached the conclusion that he is dead, based on all available evidence. She adds "I am convinced he is dead, but I do not know what happened to him." She suggests that Harbury refer additional questions on this topic to Washington. (Guatemala 2007)

March 10: Guatemalan Ambassador to the U.S Edmond Mulet calls on ARA/CEN Director Hamilton on instructions from the GOG to present a "white paper" on the Bamaca case, as well as a press release reaffirming the GOG position that Bamaca was not captured by the Guatemalan military. Hamilton responds that the statement and white paper are not credible and notifies Mulet of the U.S. decision to suspend participation by Guatemalan military personnel in IMET programs in the U.S. for the rest of 1995, out of concern over a lack of substantial progress on several pending human rights cases, including Bamaca's. (State 61944)

March 10: Ambassador meets with Acting Foreign Minister Arevalo, who says that the GOG considers the Bamaca case as still open and denying that the Guatemalan government had ever said Bamaca was dead. Ambassador stresses the importance of the Bamaca case and passes along Harbury's request to be present at interviews of army personnel allegedly involved in this case. (Guatemala 2033)

DCM notes that the U.S. recognizes Harbury's marriage as legal and valid, adding that the U.S. expects Guatemala to respect our legal system and not delay the registration of Harbury's marriage in Guatemala (a step required for her continued legal actions there). Case of Michael Vernon Devine

Note: This chronology is drawn from a review of over 100 mostly non-captioned cables, provided by A/IM/IS/FPC. That office is seeking captioned traffic dealing with the Devine case from S/S-IRM/SRD. This chronology does not draw on other agency reporting, except to the extent that it is reflected in State reporting. However, we have attached as an appendix a chronology prepared by the Defense Attache.

Summary: U.S. citizen Michael Devine was murdered June 6, 1990 near his ranch in Poptun, Guatemala. Embassy Guatemala initially sought investigative assistance from the Guatemala military but quickly concluded that the military itself was likely involved. Thereafter, and until the senior military commanders at the time of Devine's murder were replaced, it pressed its interest with the civilian government, first under President Cerezo and thereafter with Presidents Serrano and De Leon. Goals throughout were to see the killers, intellectual authors and senior officers believed to have covered up the crime punished and, in doing so, to have civilian control exerted over the military. In December 1990 the Department suspended nearly $12 million of FMF pipeline and new assistance and stopped authorization of the commercial sale of defense items to the Guatemalan military.

A military court convicted five enlisted men for the murder in September 1992 and gave them 30-year sentences, upheld by the Supreme Court. They are still incarcerated. Guatemalan army Captain Hugo Contreras was charged and convicted of complicity in the murder in May, 1993; he was given a 20-year sentence but escaped from military custody the same day. The Embassy has pressed without interruption for the Guatemalan military to find Contreras and recapture him, thus far without success. A Guatemala corporal was given a two-year suspended sentence and token fine for facilitating his escape. We believe that senior officials of the Guatemalan Army ordered the detention and interrogation of Devine, in connection with a case of missing army rifles. We have no evidence that they ordered him killed. Nor do we have evidence that the commanders of the military zone and the base at Poptun knew in advance that Devine would be killed. It appears, based on the views of the Devine family investigators, that Captain Contreras, during the investigation of Devine, issued the order to kill him, but it is not clear whether that order was an impromptu decision based on Devine's resistance to interrogation or if it had been directed from above. It is virtually certain that the two colonels (Garcia Catalan and Portillo) who commanded the base from which the five enlisted men operated, were conspirators in the subsequent cover up, as was Col. Alpirez, the commander of the ranger training base at which the enlisted men who killed Devine were housed and fed for two days prior to the murder. No senior officials, including Catalan, Portillo and Alpirez, have been charged with the murder or with the cover up, although under Embassy pressure their careers have been damaged. End Summary.

Comment: The material reviewed provides a number of instances of the Embassy pressing the Government of Guatemala and senior military officials to obtain an honest account from Alpirez, both before and after October 1991 (when the CIA provided an account that Alpirez may have been involved in the killing itself). It does not answer the question what if any action was taken on that particular piece of intelligence. But the cable traffic portrays an aggressive ambassador and embassy staff energetically taking the lead on the case throughout, with an interested Department providing guidance, backstopping and an occasional word of caution. The Embassy appears to have thought throughout, however, that Alpirez was guilty of covering up the crime, not of committing it. There was no testimony at the trial or at any time during the judicial proceedings suggesting that Alpirez was involved in the killing and it does not appear that Mrs. Devine's private investigator or her attorney (who were key to the successful prosecution) developed any information that implicated Alpirez in the murder itself. End Comment.

Julio Roberto Alpirez, former commander of the Rangers Training base in Poptun, who allegedly provided room and board to the death squad for two days prior to Devine's murder, gave testimony to the military prosecutor. He denied all knowledge of the death squad and said none had visited his base. Embassy says evidence that the squad did visit his base is clear and convincing that Alpirez is likely lying. January 31: Human Rights report for 1991 states that: "The security forces are virtually never held accountable for human rights violations. With few exceptions, the Government failed properly to investigate, detain, and prosecute perpetrators of extrajudicial and politically motivated killings. Often the army fails to cooperate with police, courts, and prosecutors to bring to justice army personnel involved in abuses. This was particularly evident throughout 1991 in the stalled investigation of the murder of American citizen Michael Devine in 1990." (Country Reports on Human Rights Practices for 1991)

March 4: Emb GT reports DATT, CG and Devine Attorney Gonzalez meeting March 3 with Army Chief of Staff Perussina. Among other actions that could be taken in Devine case, they urge that Col. Alpires be instructed to give an honest and complete declaration about what he knows of the case. Gonzalez says a candid declaration by Alpirez could provide all the evidence necessary to convict the guilty parties. Embassy encouraged by positive attitude of Perussina but notes his lack of familiarity with details of the case. (GT 2373)

Sept 1: Emb GT reports Ambassador's August 31 meeting with MOD Garcia Samayoa for thorough review of the Devine case. Stroock gives Garcia lengthy list of judicial inadequacies and incidents that suggest military is still not seeking full resolution. MOD indirectly suggested to the Ambassador that other officers (than Contreras) had not acted correctly with this case, and specifically named as examples Colonels Alpirez and Garcia Catalan. Garcia expects judicial decision on Contreras September 25. (92 GT 9196)

Sept 17: Emb GT reports on judicial reconstruction of events September 8-9 (involving participants visiting site). Pages from missing log book at Kaibil base appear, contain no mention of pickup truck, entry/exit of death squad members. Close questioning of Alpirez revealed he had no knowledge of how such reports might have been prepared and typed and Alpirez made a fool of himself in front of Judge Advocate Pantaleon. Other witnesses appeared to be intimidated, did not provide the testimony expected of them. In continuation of the process September 14, "once again...lied about what he knows, claiming the accused were never on his base, nor was the famous white Toyota." Embassy comments that judicial proceedings are limping to a resolution; MOD Garcia and Chief of Staff Perussina have played positive roles but could not compensate for inadequacies of process before they assumed their duties. (92 GT 9799)

Sept 23: Emb GT reports that, on last day for presentation of evidentiary material, witness for Devine family (army enlisted specialist Batz Peruch assigned to Kaibil base) provided testimony exposing the falsity of base commander Col. Alpirez' sworn testimony, opening the way for subsequent charges against him for coverup. Testimony of Batz Peruch states that Alpirez was on the base during this period and, because of base procedures, must have known of the presence of the truck and men from the Santa Elena base. Devine attorney plans to request the military tribunal to initiate legal action against Alpirez for coverup. (GT 10087)

On September 30, a military court sentenced six enlisted military men to 30 years for the 1990 murder of American citizen Michael Devine; a captain accused of involvement was found innocent, a decision

Convicted Myrna Mack killer later disclaims any association with this group and denies having made any statements to them regarding the Mack case). Solbal, who claims that he is a guerrilla deserter, and Hernandez allege that they were members of a fourteen-member death squad unit which took orders from Army Intelligence D-2. Lemus denies these allegations and states that members of the Presidential National Defense Staff had been making various visits to the prison to negotiate with these two ex-soldiers. (GT 11503)

October 13: Embassy makes an initial determination that the low-ranking soldiers would not have had access to hard evidence of involvement in the Devine murder by senior Guatemalan officers and that Lemus, who admits to having no first-hand knowledge of human rights abuses, is a self-promoter who has also failed to convince the Myrna Mack foundation and the OAS of his sincerity. (GT 11503)

MEMORANDUM FOR: THE PRESIDENT

FROM: Warren Christopher

SUBJECT: Guatemala: The Bamaca and Devine Cases

We continue to seek the fullest possible accounting of the facts of the Efrain Bamaca and Michael Devine cases to keep the onus for resolving these and other human rights cases on the Guatemalan government. If we conclude that anyone connected with the U.S. government was in any way responsible for abuses or for covering them up, we will make a full disclosure to the American people.

We have been working on these two cases for many years. We have pressed President De Leon and his government to resolve them and have provided information as it became available to us.

Seizing upon the public charges that Colonel Julio Roberto Alpirez — allegedly responsible for Bamaca's death — was a paid informant of the CIA, the Guatemalan government is demanding information about the alleged relationship, the implication being it cannot solve the case unless we provide it. This is a transparent effort to transfer responsibility for resolving the cases to us. We have responded that Guatemala's duty to conduct a thorough investigation is in no way diminished by our long-standing policy to neither confirm nor deny (NCND) allegations of intelligence affiliations. [redacted]

In any event, to the extent possible, we will provide President De Leon with new information that would assist an investigation. We are also exploring the possibility of providing the GOG with FBI investigative assistance. In the meantime, I am instructing Ambassador McAfee to make a new demarche to President De Leon and am sending De Leon a personal message insisting that these cases must be resolved for Guatemala and the United States to have the kind of productive relationship we both want. I am making clear to him that we will make cooperation and progress in the resolution of these cases a key element of our relationship.

Looking Ahead

We have both short- and long-term concerns. In the short term, it is essential that we obtain a clear picture of responsibility in the Devine and Bamaca cases. I have directed that relevant bureaus give full cooperation with the review you ordered March 30. Once we evaluate the information developed, we will need to consider whether to declassify documents pertaining to these and other human rights cases. The Department is also processing, on an expeditious basis, two Freedom of Information Act requests by Bamaca's widow, Jennifer Harbury.

If our current efforts do not bear fruit, we will need to examine other measures.

B5

Over the long run, our best hope for bringing about lasting improvement in the human rights situation in Guatemala lies in ending the 34-year old internal conflict. We are serving as one of six international "Friends" of the UN-mediated peace talks. Talks made good progress early last year, then slowed down. Nonetheless, the peace process has already produced important results. Pursuant to a human rights accord reached in March 1994, the UN has deployed 250 human rights and police monitors throughout Guatemala. These monitors work closely with NGOs and government officials on human rights cases and democratic institution-building.

Parties also agreed last year to create a Guatemala "Historical Clarification Commission" to conduct inquiries into human rights abuses once a comprehensive agreement is reached. Another important agreement, dealing with the rights of indigenous peoples, was signed in Mexico City on March 31. These developments are important in addressing Guatemala's grim history of human rights abuse and could be instrumental in specific cases of concern to us. We actively pursue a comprehensive accord and UN-sponsored oversight of compliance with it.

CONFIDENTIAL
DECL: 12/31/99

MEMORANDUM FOR: THE PRESIDENT

FROM: Warren Christopher

SUBJECT: Guatemala: Our Strategy on the Bamaca and Devine Cases

We have reexamined our strategy for obtaining satisfactory resolution of the human rights cases of Efrain Bamaca and Michael Devine. We have been working on the two cases for two and nearly five years, respectively. Six military personnel were convicted and sentenced in the Devine case but the officer directly involved was allowed to escape from military custody two years ago and is still at large. We provided information to President De Leon in November 1994 and this February to assist in clarifying the Bamaca case. Assistant Secretary Shattuck also pressed the Guatemalan government on the Bamaca case, and raised other human rights cases, including that of Michael Devine, during his November 1994 trip to Guatemala.

The Guatemalan Government has seized upon the public charges Colonel Julio Roberto Alpirez was a paid informant of the CIA to demand information about the alleged relationship. This is a transparent effort to transfer responsibility for resolving the cases to us. We have responded that our long-standing policy of neither confirming nor denying allegations of intelligence affiliations in no way diminish Guatemala's legal and political responsibilities. There may be a case, however, for making making an exception to that policy in this case.

Our basic strategy is to keep the onus for resolving these cases and other outstanding human rights cases on the Government of Guatemala. We will provide President De Leon with any new information that would assist an investigation; the intelligence community is reviewing its holdings for that purpose now. We are also exploring the possibility of providing the GOG with FBI investigative assistance. I am instructing Ambassador McAfee to make a new demarche to President De Leon and am sending De Leon a personal message insisting that these cases must be resolved for Guatemala and the United States to have the kind of close and productive relationship we both want. We will make the resolution of these cases a key element of our diplomacy.

Looking Further Ahead

If these efforts do not bear fruit, we will need to examine other measures. We had previously considered but set aside a number of essentially punitive steps, including trade sanctions. The most relevant sanction -- cutting off military assistance -- was taken in December 1990, in the Devine case. We reduced our small program of military training on March 10.

Our best hope for bringing about lasting improvement in the human rights situation in Guatemala lies in ending the 34-year old internal conflict. We are serving as one of six international "Friends" of the UN-mediated peace talks. Talks made good progress early last year, then slowed down. But a new agreement, dealing with the rights of indigenous peoples, was signed in Mexico City March 31. We will remain active in pursuit of a comprehensive accord.

The peace process has produced one tangible benefit already. Pursuant to a human rights accord reached in March 1994, the UN has deployed 250 human rights and police monitors personnel throughout Guatemala. This mission (MINUGUA) is working closely with non-governmental agencies and government officials to resolve human rights cases and strengthen Guatemala's democratic institutions.

I have also directed that relevant bureaus give full cooperation with the inquiry you ordered March 30. It is possible that, in connection with that inquiry, we will decide to declassify documents pertaining to these and other human rights cases. That step would put increased pressure on the Guatemalan government to resolve these cases and provide material for a Guatemala "Historical Clarification Commmission" that will conduct an inquiry into human rights abuses once a comprehensive agreement is reached.

The recent elections in Guatemala and the inauguration of President Jorge Serrano are clear signs of progress and hope. This marks the first time in Guatemala in 40 years that the candidate of an opposition party has been elected in a free, honest vote and allowed to assume office peacefully.

During the [Vinicio] Cerezo administration, Guatemala's failure to effectively pursue the investigation of the murder of an American citizen, Michael Devine, made it necessary to suspend security assistance in December 1990. Earlier, other failures to prosecute human rights cases led us to recall our ambassador in March 1990. In contrast, the first signals from President [Jorge] Serrano--starting in his inaugural address, when he warned the security forces that their human rights violations would no longer be met with impunity--tell us that Guatemala has a president who is firmly committed to establishing civilian authority over security forces and instituting broad respect for human rights and the rule of law. President Serrano's economic policies show similar promise, and we are engaged in an active dialogue with him and his government to help him meet these important goals..."

"U.S.-GUATEMALAN RELATIONS

Relations between the United States and Guatemala traditionally have been good. U.S. policy in Guatemala includes:

-- Supporting the institutionalization of democracy;
-- Encouraging Guatemalan respect for human rights and the rule of law;
-- Supporting broad-based economic growth and sustainable development;
-- Cooperating with the Guatemalan Government to combat narcotics trafficking;
-- Supporting Central American integration and regional peace efforts, including the dialogue process with the Guatemalan insurgency;

-- Maintaining mutually beneficial trade relations; and
-- Supporting a solution to the Belize dispute acceptable to the parties involved.

U.S. military assistance to Guatemala was suspended in 1990 following the murder of American citizen Michael Devine by members of the Guatemalan armed forces. The soldiers responsible for Devine's murder were tried, convicted, and imprisoned, but the officer who led the killers escaped from detention in May 1993. The U.S. views his capture and imprisonment as fundamental to improved relations with the Guatemalan military..."

"There was some progress in certain past high-profile cases. On February 8, the Supreme Court confirmed the 25-year sentence given to former government security agent Noel De Jesus Beteta for the 1990 killing of Myrna Mack. The Court left legal proceedings open against the alleged intellectual authors of the crime, former senior military officers who appealed the decision to the Constitutional Court. In December the Constitutional Court ruled in favor of Helen Mack, Myrna's sister, that the case against the intellectual authors may proceed. However, it failed to overrule a Supreme Court decision denying her request that it order the release of executive branch documents concerning her sister's murder. The executive branch maintained it did not have any files not already in the hands of the court.

On May 18, the court of appeals confirmed the 2-year suspended sentence and $40 fine against the corporal whose absence from post facilitated the May 1993 escape of Captain Hugo Contreras, who had just been convicted and sentenced to 20 years in prison for killing U.S. citizen Michael Devine in 1990. Captain Contreras remains a fugitive. On September 6, the Supreme Court confirmed the 30-year sentence given the five enlisted men convicted in the Devine murder. However, the Government never brought to trial the senior officers believed to be involved in covering up the crime. Two relatives of witnesses who testified at the Devine trial (one civilian and one soldier) were killed; another (a soldier) was shot in the leg under suspicious circumstances. The dead soldier was found with his tongue cut out, hands mutilated, and a bullet wound in his skull. Additionally, two other relatives have been targets of intimidation..."

On May 11, an appellate court sentenced Captain Hugo Contreras to 20 years for planning the 1990 kidnaping that led to the death of U.S. citizen Michael Devine and confirmed the 30-year sentences for six enlisted men. After hearing the verdict, however, Contreras escaped from military custody and remains at large. While the circumstances of his escape suggested complicity by the military, the only punishment was a 2-year suspended sentence given to an enlisted man for not being at his post when Contreras escaped. Senior officers accused of covering up the case have not been brought to trial.

"Among positive developments, the Presidential Human Rights Commission issued its first report updating leading human rights cases, the army continued human rights training programs, and the Attorney General's office dedicated increased resources to preventing abuses against street children. President Serrano became the first Guatemalan chief executive to meet with Committee of Peasant Unity leaders, and he, as well as other Guatemalan officials and military officers, opened a dialog with Guatemalan and international human rights groups.

By year's end, however, that dialog had deteriorated. President Serrano and members of his Cabinet strongly criticized both local and international human rights groups, claiming they distort Guatemala's human rights record for political purposes. Officials criticized the Human Rights Ombudsman, the Archbishop's Human Rights Office, and the U.S. Government for the protection they offered to kidnap victim Maritza Urrutia. Senior officials denounced as improper interference in internal affairs expressions of U.S. Government concern over the court's verdict of "innocent" in the case of an army officer implicated in the murder of American citizen Michael Devine (see Section 1.a.). The Government showed intolerance for press criticism. Local human rights groups continued to be threatened and were victims of violent attacks. Although progress was made in investigating and prosecuting some past and present human rights abuses, the overall record was poor. Charges were dismissed against soldiers responsible for the August 1991 "Traileros" murders in Taxisco, a case which is still in the appeal process.

There was some progress in certain other high-profile cases. The trial of former government security agent Noel de Jesus Beteta Alvarez for the 1990 murder of Guatemalan anthropologist Myrna Mack Chang trial began in August and was continuing at year's end. On September 30, a military court sentenced six enlisted military men to 30 years for the 1990 murder of American citizen Michael Devine; a captain accused of involvement was found innocent, a decision appealed by the Attorney General. Two other charges against the captain are still pending. Senior officers involved in covering up the case for 2 years have not been brought to trial. On July 19, an appellate court sentenced four policemen to 12 years in prison and a collective fine of approximately $1,000 for the March 1990 murder of street child Nahamon Carmona Lopez..."

"DEPARTMENT STATEMENTS
As posted in the Press Office, U.S. Department of State
February 12, 1993

GUATEMALA: Mack Verdict

Statement by Richard Boucher, Spokesman
February 12, 1993

We welcome the conclusion of the trail of Noel de Jesus Beteta, Guatemalan senior sergeant, for two murders, including the 1990 murder of anthropologist Myrna Mack Chang. Beteta was sentenced to a total of 30 years in prison for the two murders.

We are pleased that Guatemala's justice system acted vigorously to prosecute and bring convictions for brutal human rights violations involving a former member of the security forces. We hope the Guatemalan courts will demonstrate similar courage in other cases, such as the murder of U.S. citizen Michael Devine.

We deplore anonymous threats against witnesses in this case. The international community is concerned about their welfare and will continue to closely observe the situation.

We salute Helen Mack Chang, Myrna's sister, and other members of her family for the tenacious and courageous struggle they have waged for justice in this case. (###)"

MS. SHELLY: Good afternoon, ladies and gentlemen. Welcome to the State Department's Daily Press Briefing. I don't have any announcements, so let's go directly to your questions.
Guatemala

Q Do you have anything on contacts between the U.S. officials and the American hunger-striker who is up here for talks?

MS. SHELLY: Jennifer Harbury.

Q Yes.

MS. SHELLY: Yes, I've got a little bit of information on that. I can bring you up to date.

Jennifer Harbury announced on November 11 that she was ending her hunger strike. She returned to the United States over the weekend. In a statement she said that she would be returning to Guatemala in the near future to file criminal charges against the military personnel who she claimed were involved in the capture, detention and torture of her husband, Efrain Bamaca, also known as Commandante Everardo.

The Guatemalan Supreme Court has ordered a new investigation under the primary responsibility of the human rights ombudsman, assisted by the Solicitor General and the Chief Public Prosecutor. President De Leon has stated that the U.N. Human Rights Verification Mission can also play a constructive role. The Supreme Court has asked that an investigation be completed in 30 days.

In terms of meetings that she might have here, at the request of Congressman Sam Gejdenson, the Vice President's National Security Adviser, Leon Feurth, has agreed to meet with Jennifer Harbury's attorney. But I'm told that that meeting hasn't yet been scheduled. We are unaware of any other government appointments, but, of course, we'd be willing to meet with her here at the State Department.

Q She says, I believe, that the U.S. had evidence back in '92 that her husband was still alive after the March '92 firefight. Can you confirm that?

MS. SHELLY: What I understand to be the case is based on all of the information available to us -- and this, of course, comes from a wide variety of sources -- we have concluded that Efrain Bamaca was taken captive by the army in March of 1992.

We believe that he had been wounded but that his injuries were not believed to be life threatening. We have no information to indicate that he was alive much beyond the first few weeks after his capture. But in our efforts to try to get a better accounting and information on this, we, of course, have always proceeded on the assumption that he could be alive, and that has been a governing factor for us in terms of trying to get information about the case.

Q Can I return to Jennifer Harbury for a moment.

MS. SHELLY: sure.

Q There are no meetings scheduled presently at the State Department or with any State Department officials?

MS. SHELLY: There are not any meetings scheduled yet. My understanding is she just returned to Washington over the weekend, and I assumed that we are likely to be hearing from her and I certainly would reiterate our willingness to meet with her. I can't tell you at this point what level that would be. But certainly as the week unfolds, I expect we'll have more information on that.

b. Disappearance

The Archbishop's human rights office reported 41 forced disappearances, as compared with 45 in 1993. It labeled 1 disappearance definitely political and classified 32 as presumed political. Victims included a human rights activist, union employees, private sector employees, entrepreneurs, farmers, a soldier, a policeman, and others. The Ombudsman's office received 60 complaints of forced disappearance. The Government did not identify or prosecute the perpetrators of any of these disappearances.

Sister Dianna Ortiz returned to Guatemala in January and again in November to press authorities to take action on her 1989 kidnaping and torture case. In January she accompanied Guatemalan officials on judicial inspections of the Guardia De Honor barracks and the old military academy. Ortiz identified the latter as the place where she was sexually abused and tortured. Shortly after entering the facility, Ortiz was overcome by emotion and unable to identify the specific site of the violations, which she says occurred in the basement of the facility. However, the inspection team failed to discover any subterranean levels. The army maintains none ever existed. A previously filed petition on this case remained pending before the IACHR at year's end.

The judicial system is ineffective. Most human rights violations are not investigated; security force personnel are reluctant to investigate cases involving colleagues. Judges are susceptible to intimidation and corruption and suffer low pay, bad working conditions, and low morale. Some judges succeeded in being excused from hearing prominent cases after alleging death threats. A total of 12 different judges were excused from the Myrna Mack Chang case, for example. In September the former judge in the Sister Diana Ortiz case publicly charged that the Supreme Court pressured lower court judges to decide cases in line with its wishes.

The Ombudsman's office received 65 complaints of forced disappearances during the first 6 months of 1992. Its investigations attributed responsibility to state security forces in three cases and to the guerrillas in six cases. Of the remaining cases, 14 victims reappeared alive, 3 victims were found dead, and 39 complaints remained under investigation.

Statistics for 1991 showed 112 complaints of forced disappearances, of which 31 were attributed to the State and 14 to the guerrillas. The Archbishop's Human Rights Office reported 3 forced disappearances for the first 6 months of 1992, as compared to 144 in all of 1991. Credible reports linked most political disappearances to persons connected with the armed forces. The Government did not identify or prosecute the perpetrators of any of the above disappearances.

In June the remains of free-lance American journalists Nicholas Blake and Griffith Davis were located and identified with the assistance of the Guatemalan army, the Blake family, and the U.S. Embassy. They had disappeared in western Guatemala in March 1985 while seeking to interview Guatemalan rebels. There are indications that local civil patrol members killed the Americans for unknown reasons..."

INTRODUCTION

The Inter-American Tropical Tuna Commission was established in 1950 by a convention between the governments of the Republic of Costa Rica and the United States of America, and is open to membership by other governments. The convention clearly mandates that the populations of tunas, tuna-like fishes, and other kinds of fish taken by tuna-fishing vessels in the eastern Pacific Ocean be maintained at levels of abundance which can support maximum yields on a sustained basis. To acquire the information necessary to evaluate those levels of stock abundance requires a broad-based, comprehensive research program, which includes the collection of detailed data on the fisheries which take those species, as well as ancillary biological and environmental data. The costs of the research program are shared by the member governments of the Commission, which at present number eight. Again, the convention defines explicitly the formula for budget contributions by the member governments. Each member's contribution is based on the proportion of the catch of tunas from the eastern Pacific Ocean which is utilized by that member nation. "Utilized" is defined to mean eaten fresh or processed for internal consumption or export. Thus tunas landed by a member nation and subsequently exported in the round are not included in computing that nation's contribution, but those which are exported canned are so included. These proportions are calculated from statistics compiled by the Commission staff for calendar years previous to the fiscal year budget in question. For example, the proportions of the contributions by the various member governments to the present budget for FY 1997 are calculated from the amounts of fish caught during the calendar year 1994 which are utilized by those nations.

As stated above, the Commission has responsibility for all species of tunas, tuna-like fishes, and other kinds of fish taken by tuna-fishing vessels in the eastern Pacific Ocean. In 1976 it was delegated the additional responsibility of conducting research on the stocks of dolphins and other marine mammals taken in conjunction with the fishery for tunas. The Commission's objectives with regard to dolphins are: (1) to maintain tuna production at a high level; (2) to maintain the stocks of dolphins at or above levels that would ensure their survival in perpetuity; (3) to make every reasonable effort to ensure that dolphins are not needlessly or carelessly killed during fishing operations. A resolution adopted at the 50th meeting of the IATTC in June 1992 stated that one of the goals of the Commission was "eliminating dolphin mortality in this fishery, seeking ecologically sound means of capturing large yellowfin tunas not in association with dolphins."

To accomplish the wide variety of research required to meet its objectives, the Commission maintains an internationally-recruited staff of biologists, mathematicians, oceanographers, and technicians. Most of this staff is headquartered at La Jolla, but others are assigned to field stations in Ensenada and Mazatlan (Mexico), Mayaguez (Puerto Rico), Cumaná (Venezuela), Panama and Achotines (Panama), and Manta (Ecuador).

Fundamental to the Commission's work are basic data on the fishing activities of vessels, the catches they make, and the sizes of fish comprising the catch. These data are used to assess the impact of fishing on the abundance of the stocks being exploited. A major share of the Commission's budget goes to this activity. A comprehensive program of ensuring that logbooks are placed aboard each vessel in the international fleet is maintained, and the basic data on fishing effort and catch by time and location are extracted from these logbooks when the vessels return to port. In addition to the collection of basic statistical data, samples of lengths of fish in the catch are also routinely taken when the fish are unloaded from the vessels. This length-measurement program is essential to studies of growth and size composition, which in turn are necessary for assessment of the effects of fishing on the potential yields from the various stocks.

The basic data on catch and fishing effort are used to describe the distribution, by area and time, of the fishing effort and of the catches of each species. They are also used to formulate relatively simple models describing the dynamics of the populations of fish being exploited in the eastern Pacific and the impact of fishing upon them. The collection and interpretation of these data must be kept current in order to update the estimates of the parameters of the models. In addition to providing the basis for stock assessments, these data are used to describe the distributions of the catches of any species of tuna by various geographic units and time periods. Thus the collection of accurate and up-to-date catch and effort data is of fundamental importance to both the coastal nations of the region and the non-coastal nations which participate in the fishery.

These simple models, which utilize only catch and effort statistics, are, as noted, of fundamental importance to stock assessment, but in themselves they are not precise enough to fulfill completely the requirements of those who must routinely make management decisions on a timely basis. To improve our ability to manage the stocks of tunas and other fishes taken by tuna-fishing vessels in the eastern Pacific, we must be able to formulate models that can provide us with a higher degree of precision in assessing the impact of fishing on the stocks. To do this requires a fuller understanding of the biology of the fish. Therefore the Commission's research program provides for studies of growth, rates of mortality and natality, times and locations of spawning and recruitment, and the rates of mixing of fish among areas. Natural fluctuations in the environment have profound effects on the abundance and behavior of the fish, and if these are to be understood a continuing research program is required.

Many of these fluctuations, such as in growth and mortality, can be detected and roughly measured by examination of trends in the size composition of the catch--hence the importance of the Commission's length-measurement program. To ensure accuracy in the use of length-frequency data collected at shoreside facilities, it is necessary to collect corroborative data at sea from samples of schools of fish for which there is exact information on time and area of catch.

For the proper management of fish stocks it is necessary to understand the relationships of fish in one area of the fishery to those in other areas, so that whatever management measures are taken can be applied to all members of the stocks of fish being exploited, wherever they occur. Management will not be effective if some members of a stock are subjected to fishing without control outside the area of management. The Commission's staff has used several approaches to study the relationships of fish of different areas. Studies of morphometric and meristic characters have produced provocative, but inconclusive results. Recent analyses of mitochondrial DNA (deoxyribonucleic acid) have shown no genetic differences among yellowfin captured in widely separated parts of the Pacific Ocean and between skipjack caught in the Atlantic and Pacific Oceans. It is important to note, however, that these results do not imply rapid mixing of fish of widely separated localities, as even very slow mixing is sufficient for maintenance of genetic homogeneity. Furthermore, these findings should be regarded as preliminary, as larger samples from more locations are necessary before reliance can be placed on the results of DNA sampling.

A general approach that is used in fisheries science to provide estimates of such characteristics as growth, mortality, and mixing, is the use of mark and recapture experiments. The Commission staff was engaged in tagging, releasing, and collecting recaptured fish from the mid-1950s to the early 1980s; it has pioneered techniques for tagging and handling tunas and methods of analysis of the data. The tagging program of the Commission continued for about 25 years because the fishery for tunas in the eastern Pacific Ocean was expanding during the 1950s, 1960s, and 1970s. As the fishery expanded to new areas, tagging experiments have provided data on the relationship of fish in those newly-exploited areas to fish in previously-exploited ones. The Commission staff is not recommending extensive tagging of yellowfin or skipjack at this time. However, due to modifications in established fishing techniques first used in 1994, the catches of small bigeye tuna have increased greatly in the eastern Pacific Ocean, especially south of the equator, and it is anticipated that this fishery will continue. It is possible that this fishery will have a significant effect on the longline fishery for large bigeye. Accordingly, increased study of bigeye is necessary, and such studies should possibly include tagging of small bigeye. Also, tagging of bluefin, which was halted in the early 1980s, should be resumed.

Based on the information collected by the Commission, as described above, more sophisticated models, which incorporate various aspects of the life history of the fish, in addition to basic catch and effort data, can be generated to describe the dynamics of the populations and the effect of fishing on them. The simple and the more sophisticated models are useful in evaluating, with a moderate degree of accuracy, the effect of fishing on the abundance of the stocks after the fish are recruited to the fishery. The number of fish at age 2 can be predicted reasonably well from the number at age 1, the number at age 3 from the number at age 2, and so on. However, to predict the number of age-1 recruits is beyond our present capability. Such predictions are necessary for most effective management, but a better understanding of the early life history of the fish is required for this purpose. Two approaches are generally used to predict recruitment. One involves establishing empirical relationships between environmental factors and/or parent stock size and recruitment; the other involves estimating the numbers of eggs or larvae in the sea and describing mortality at the different stages during the early life history of the fish. The Commission's staff has been involved, but in a limited way, in both of these approaches. Over the years staff members have studied the taxonomy, geographic distribution, and seasonal occurrence of tuna larvae and juveniles. Because of the low density of the larvae and the enormous areas in which they occur, accomplishments have been limited, and it does not appear that much will be learned about the relative abundance, growth, and mortality during early life stages. Scientists working with other species of fish have had considerable success in early life history studies by rearing larvae and juvenile fishes in the laboratory, which makes large numbers of specimens available for study. The Commission staff has initiated similar long-term studies at its Achotines Laboratory in Panama. Specimens can now be reared through the early life stages, and experiments designed to elucidate the characteristics of growth and mortality during these stages are currently in progress. The results of these experiments should provide some of the information needed to predict recruitment to the fishable stocks. Also, staff members of the IATTC and the Japan Sea Farming Association (JASFA) recently carried out studies of the growth, survival, nutritional condition, and feeding habits of larval yellowfin tuna at JAFSA's Yaeyama Station on Ishigaki Island, Okinawa Prefecture; a manuscript describing this work in currently in preparation. Late in 1993, an agreement was reached by the Overseas Fishery Cooperation Foundation (OFCF) of Japan, the government of the Republic of Panama, and the IATTC to undertake a joint five-year project, funded mostly by the OFCF, at the IATTC's Achotines Laboratory in Panama. The project encompasses research on: (1) the feasibility of culturing adult yellowfin tuna to supply larvae; (2) the production of food organisms for larval and juvenile tunas; and (3) the culture of broodstock snappers (Lutjanidae) and corvina-like fishes (Sciaenidae) and production of food organisms for their larvae and juveniles.

Tunas are pelagic during all stages of their lives, and changes in the ocean environment affect their apparent and real abundance. Therefore an understanding of how the ocean operates and how the tunas respond to these changing ocean parameters is necessary to the most efficient management of the species. Oceanographic, physiological, and behavioral studies are long-term, time-consuming, and expensive. Comprehensive programs of this nature are beyond the Commission's means, and efforts in this direction are therefore of a cooperative nature. The Commission's oceanographic studies have been conducted on a very limited scale, but coordinated with similar studies conducted by other institutions.

The IATTC staff's physiological studies have been concerned primarily with energetics of tunas, and are coordinated with general physiological studies conducted by other institutions. It is the objective of such cooperative studies to arrive at a better understanding of various important aspects of the life histories of the tunas in the most efficacious and economical manner.

The accumulated research of the Commission's scientific staff showed in the early 1960s that the yellowfin stock of the eastern Pacific was in danger of being overexploited. These conclusions were based primarily upon analyses of catch, effort, and catch-per-unit-of-effort data, but information on size composition, movements of the fish, and many other factors were considered as well. Recommendations to restrict the catch were made to the member governments at that time, but it was not possible for them to enact appropriate legislation until 1966. At that time the fishery operated only near shore, and in the vicinity of a few offshore islands and banks, and the portion of the stock which was available to it was over-exploited and producing less than it could under a proper conservation program. The catch quotas recommended by the Commission's staff, and adopted by the member countries, were designed to protect the inshore, exploited portion of the stock, so that it could increase and support larger catches in subsequent years. During the late 1960s the fleet expanded its operations considerably offshore, more than doubling the size of the fishing area. Large numbers of larger, more efficient vessels were built during the late 1960s and the 1970s, and the capacity of the fleet approximately quadrupled during the 1965-1978 period. As the fishery expanded offshore a larger portion of the eastern Pacific stock of yellowfin was available to it, so the catch quotas recommended by the Commission, and adopted by its member countries, gradually increased during the late 1960s and the 1970s. From the start, the conservation program was successful in maintaining the yellowfin stock near its optimum level, at which it could support high average yields on a sustained basis. The size of the fleet operating in eastern Pacific Ocean has declined by about one third since the early 1980s. The smaller fleet is more appropriate for the productivity of the stock, and the catches during the 1989-1994 period have been less than the recommended quotas.

Despite this, it is essential that the Commission's research programs continue uninterrupted. Loss of continuity would be a tremendous setback for tuna research, not only in the eastern Pacific Ocean, but also in other parts of the world. This is because the tuna fishery in the eastern Pacific is better documented than any other tuna fishery in the world, and the dynamics of the yellowfin stock in the eastern Pacific are better understood than are the dynamics of any other stock of tuna. Accordingly, the IATTC's research program in the eastern Pacific has set the standards and formed the basis for study and comparison in other parts of the world. Also, the resource of yellowfin has been alternately underfished and overfished several times during a relatively short span of years, which makes it unique among tuna fisheries and rare among all marine fisheries. It would obviously be a terrible loss to interrupt this series of data. It is with this in mind that the proposed FY 1997 budget is presented.

At its 34th meeting in 1977 the Commission directed its staff to formulate a dolphin research program that would include, inter alia, monitoring population sizes and mortality incidental to fishing through the collection of data aboard tuna purse seiners, aerial surveys, tagging dolphins to study their movements and abundance, analyses of indices of abundance of dolphins, and gear and behavioral research and education. Since then slightly more than 35% of the Commission's budget has been directed toward dolphin research.

To assess the status of dolphin populations, the Commission instituted a program in which observers are placed aboard tuna vessels of the international fleet to collect data. The observers, among other things, count the dolphins which are killed or seriously injured during fishing operations and collect data which are used to estimate the relative abundance of the various species and stocks of dolphins. A comprehensive training system has been established at the major ports where vessels depart for tuna fishing. Qualified people are hired directly by the Commission to serve as observers.

As an alternate approach to measuring population abundance, as well as a mechanism for collecting more detailed information on the characteristics of dolphin populations, the staff has chartered fishing vessels and made surveys from fixed-wing aircraft. Because of the high cost of such work, the Commission has generally carried out such investigations in cooperation with other institutions.

Information obtained through the observer program and the aerial and shipboard surveys, coupled with logbook data gathered for the tuna studies described earlier, is being utilized to assess the effects of fishing on both the tuna and dolphin populations.

To meet its objective of making every reasonable effort to avoid the needless and careless killing of dolphins, the Commission's dolphin program includes research into the design, development, and implementation of fishing gear and techniques which will reduce the mortality of dolphins taken in association with tunas. This program also convenes workshops to educate fishermen in the use of fishing techniques and gear which have proven effective in reducing dolphin mortality.

The mortality of dolphins has been reduced from about 133,000 animals in 1986 to less than 4,000 animals in 1993 and 1994, a decline of 97 percent. The dolphin populations involved in the fishery, which number about 9.5 million animals, are either stable or increasing in abundance. The 1993 and 1994 mortalities represent less than 0.04 percent of the population. In 1993, the Commission set into motion a new program to progressively reduce the annual mortality due to fishing to less than 5,000 animals by the end of 1999 through the establishment of dolphin mortality limits for individual vessels. This goal was reached in 1993. It also increased its research directed toward (1) further reduction of incidental mortality of dolphins during purse-seining operations and (2) eliminating dolphin mortality by finding ecologically-sound means of capturing large yellowfin not associated with dolphins.

In the following pages the proposed research program and budget estimates for FY 1997 are presented (see tables following), by projects and specific budget objects. In each case, the amount recommended to be allocated to each of these is shown first, followed by the net change (in parentheses) from anticipated expenditures in FY 1996.

PROGRAM DESCRIPTION, BY PROJECTS

PROJECT A $360,331 (+10,791)
Administrative and Other Costs Jointly Chargeable to All Projects

For purposes of accounting, the costs of administration and bookkeeping and various expenses of the headquarters laboratory, such as some of the printing, translation, library, postage costs, etc., not easily allocated to individual research projects are allocated and accounted for under this heading.

Expenses in FY 1997 are expected to increase by $10,791 to cover an expected 2.5% rate of inflation, in-grade salary changes, and other minor adjustments.

PROJECT C $745,345 (+22,308)
Collection, Compilation, and Analysis of Catch Statistics and Logbook Data

Statistical records of the tuna fishery, obtained directly from the fishing fleet and processing plants, provide the data base for measuring the effects of fishing on the abundance of the stocks, and hence are of paramount and continuing importance to the Commission's program. The costs for this project are expected to increase by $22,308, due to inflation and in-grade salary changes.

PROJECT D 1,762,445 (+37,382)

Investigations of the Biology, Life History, Vital Statistics, Population Structure, and Behavior of Tunas and Billfishes

This project consists of a number of important studies which are designed to increase the available knowledge of the life history of the tunas and billfishes of the eastern Pacific. Such knowledge, along with catch and effort data, is used to formulate models for evaluating the effect of fishing on the abundance of the stocks. The project has several important objectives, which can be grouped into the following categories:

1. Understanding the population structure of each species, to identify subpopulations as a basis for more refined studies of their population dynamics and as a basis of determining the most practical natural units for management. The total catches can be maximized over the long term if the effort is distributed over such natural units, so that each is fished at the optimum level. Included in this category are the use and evaluation of both genetic and non-genetic approaches to population discrimination. The principal genetic approach would be further studies of such indicators of genetic characteristics as blood enzymes and mitochondrial DNA, and the non-genetic approaches might include analysis of characteristics acquired from the environment, such as chemical composition of body parts, morphometric and meristic studies, or tagging studies.
2. Estimation of various vital statistics, such as growth and fishing and natural mortality. Processing and analysis of a variety of information, particularly length-frequency data obtained from samples of the catches, are required to estimate these rates.
3. Investigation of biology and behavior. These studies include identification of the patterns of spawning in space and time, feeding behavior and requirements, the energy demands of swimming, and the general energy requirements of maintenance, growth, and reproduction.
4. Determination of the important features of the early life history of the fish and the factors which affect the recruitment of young fish to the exploitable population. Included in this category are studies of the identification and distribution of larval tunas and the artificial maintenance of post-larval and juvenile tunas to study their growth and factors that affect their survival. These studies are carried out at the laboratory facilities at La Jolla, California, USA, and Achotines, Panama.
5. The formulation of a variety of types of mathematical models which describe the dynamics of the populations of tunas and other fishes in the eastern Pacific Ocean. Such models incorporate the various aspects of life history and estimates of vital rates which are inferred from the results of the overall research program. These models, along with catch and effort data from the fishery, provide the tools to assess the impact of man's activities on the abundance of the stocks so that management recommendations can be formulated when research shows them to be necessary.
6. In addition to biological studies of tunas, the Commission staff has conducted a number of studies concerning some of the species of billfishes taken commercially, and by recreational fishing, in the eastern Pacific Ocean. Most of these studies have concentrated on the analyses of catch statistical data. The Commission has published numerous scientific papers on billfishes. Because of the increasing importance of these species to both commercial and recreational interests, the Commission augmented these biological studies in FY 1993 to examine the position of billfishes in the food web of the major pelagic species in the region.

Data for these types of research are obtained from the examination of tunas and billfishes at ports of landing, the analysis of information from vessel logbooks, studies at sea from research and fishing vessels, and laboratory experiments.

The costs in this project during FY 1997 are expected to increase by $37,382 because of inflation.

PROJECT E $87,368 (+2,727)

Investigations of the Oceanic Circulation and Other Aspects of Chemical and Biological Oceanography and their Relationship to the Populations of Tunas and Billfishes

Tunas and other fishes caught by tuna vessels, being completely pelagic at all stages of their lives, are oriented to the physical, chemical, and biological properties of the sea in which they live. Therefore, to understand their life history, behavior, and variations in their abundance and distribution, some understanding of their environment is necessary. The study of the ocean and its effect on these species is therefore an important part of the Commission's program.

The IATTC staff uses mathematical models to evaluate the effect of fishing upon the abundance of tunas and other fishes caught by tuna vessels. Such models, which incorporate various aspects of their life histories, account for part of the variation noted in their abundance. The residual variation in the abundance, that is, the variation not accounted for by the mathematical models, is attributable mostly to the effect of variations in the environment upon their biology. Therefore, to be able to relate such effects to their abundance, and eventually to predict the magnitude and time of occurrence of these effects, an understanding of the environment is necessary.

Large-scale oceanographic studies are extremely costly and beyond the financial capabilities of the Commission. Consequently, the Commission's program has generally involved pooling resources with other agencies interested in the oceanography of the eastern Pacific, and in this manner a great deal of oceanographic research has been accomplished on a limited budget. It is planned to continue such cooperative research during FY 1997 on a reduced scale, similar to that of FY 1996. The reduced program is considered temporary, and is recommended in order to concentrate more fully on other important problems.

The costs in this project during FY 1997 are expected to increase by $2,727 because of inflation.

PROJECT F $148,355 (+4,443)

Tuna Tagging and Recovery to Study Migrations, Rates of Intermingling of Stocks, Mortality, and Growth

Tuna tagging experiments yield knowledge on migrations, population structure, growth, mortality, behavior, and availability and vulnerability to capture of tunas in various areas of the fishery at various times. The results obtained from tagging experiments are usually integrated with those from other studies to obtain the maximum understanding of the life history and population dynamics of the species in question. This project is shown separately, however, because its operational aspects are to some degree separate from those of other types of investigations.

The staff of the IATTC has been studying bluefin on a modest scale since 1973. These studies have made it clear that considerably more information is needed on several phases of its history. The catches of bluefin in the eastern Pacific Ocean have been low during the last few years, which makes it especially important that this information be obtained as quickly as possible. Spawning occurs only in the vicinity of Japan. Some of the fish remain in the western Pacific throughout their lives, and others migrate to the eastern Pacific, remain there for a while, and then return to the western Pacific before they spawn. A history of each year class should be reconstructed. Ideally this would include, for each year class, estimates of the numbers of fish recruited into the surface fishery of the western Pacific, the numbers of them caught each year by the surface fishery in the western Pacific, the numbers of them migrating each year to the eastern Pacific, the numbers of them caught each year by the surface fishery in the eastern Pacific, the numbers of them migrating each year from the eastern to the western Pacific, and the numbers of them caught each year by the longline fishery. This information could be estimated by analysis of adequate catch statistics data, length- and age-frequency data, and tagging data.

Tagging of bluefin was carried out during the late 1970s and early 1980s in the western Pacific in cooperation with Japanese scientists from the Far Seas Fisheries Research Laboratory (now the National Research Institute of Far Seas Fisheries). Commission scientists have also tagged bluefin in the eastern Pacific Ocean on an opportunistic basis. In FY 1997 this project will continue, but no tagging by Commission personnel will be carried out in the western Pacific. If possible, some opportunistic tagging will be conducted in the eastern Pacific.

Yellowfin and skipjack may be tagged on an opportunistic basis at the Achotines Laboratory during FY 1997. The fish would be caught by trolling from the research vessel Achotines III while it is running between oceanographic stations, etc., and at a fish-aggregating device (FAD) which is anchored near Achotines. Tagging near the FAD should produce some useful information about the attractiveness of floating objects to fish. Most of the tagging of tunas off Central America carried out in the past has been conducted during April and May. Because the tagging at the Achotines Laboratory would be carried out in all months of the year, it is expected that these experiments would yield some new and useful information.

The expenses for Project F in FY 1997 are expected to increase by $4,443 from those estimated for FY 1996 because of inflation.

PROJECT H $1,894,686 (+54,112)
Tuna-Dolphin Program

In keeping with the objectives of the Commission's dolphin investigations and the major areas of research outlined in the introductory statement, this research program has been grouped into five major areas of activity, summarized below. A detailed description has been presented in previous budgets.

1. Collection of dolphin data aboard purse seiners by observers. The objective in the past was to have these observers aboard enough trips of Class-6 purse seiners equipped to fish for tunas associated with dolphins to ensure that the estimates of total dolphin mortality derived from the data collected were statistically reliable. The Commission staff determined that the level of coverage required is about 30%; however, coverage has now been expanded to 100% for all fleets. The observers' principal duties are collecting data on dolphin mortality caused by fishing operations, and data used in estimating relative population sizes. They also make observations pertinent to other studies; for example, they gather information on dolphin behavior, operation of the net, and number of dolphins caught per set, which are useful for gear studies.

2. Participation in the planning, execution, and analysis of aerial and shipboard surveys, and the distribution of the results to the cooperating nations, or these plus the members of the IATTC. In addition, project personnel participate in those aspects of the planning of observed fishing trips and research vessel trips which relate to population estimation, and also participate in the analyses of the data. Although no surveys are proposed by the staff for FY 1997, we are continuing to work on the analyses of information collected from such surveys during previous years.

3. Studies of indices of dolphin abundance.

4. Keeping abreast of current gear and behavioral research and evaluating new concepts aimed at reducing dolphin mortality, disseminating research findings, placing Commission scientists on research cruises when appropriate, organizing gear workshops, distributing contributions from member nations for supporting gear and behavioral research, and identifying, developing, preparing recommendations for the adoption of dolphin-saving technology, and furnishing individual advice and assistance to fishermen to ensure that their dolphin-saving gear is working properly.

5. Providing logistical and administrative support for the dolphin conservation program to reduce mortality caused by the fishery, including performing the duties of the secretariat for two groups created by the IATTC resolution of June 1992, the International Review Panel and the Scientific Advisory Board.

The costs of this project during FY 1997 are expected to increase by $54,112 because of inflation.

The cost of these items is expected to increase by only $1,657.

Equipment and Property (07) $44,986 (+1,097)

Funds budgeted to this category in FY 1997 are expected to increase by $1,097 to compensate for inflation.

Postage (08) $33,299 (+812)

The cost of postage is high because overseas mail is generally sent by air. Costs of mailing Commission publications contribute substantially to the cost. The increase of $812 is budgeted to meet increasing postal rates.

Printing and Reproduction (09) $40,528 (+988)

The prompt publication of research results is a necessary and important part of the Commission's scientific program. By this means, the member governments, other scientists, and the general public are kept informed of research findings. Also included here is the cost of photocopying and microfilming. The costs in this category are expected to increase by $988, due to increasing costs of printing services and the expansion of the Commission's mailing list.

Travel and Subsistence (10) $328,141 (+199)

Includes travel and subsistence costs incurred by Commission staff members during the course of their duties, but excludes travel and associated costs for observers, which are accounted for under Contractual Services (11). The funds allotted to this item in FY 1997 are expected to increase only slightly.

Contractual Services (11) $1,023,701 (+24,968)

Includes legal and professional fees (e.g. auditing), bonding insurance, contracts with short-term specialists, casual labor costs, computer charges, simultaneous interpretation services, vessel charter, and all of the expenses of the tuna-dolphin data collection program.

The costs in this category are expected to increase by $24,968 because of the expected 2.5% rate of inflation in FY 1997.

Freight and Handling (12) $8,156 (+199)

The transportation of equipment, personal effects of field employees, and perishable biological samples are the principal items included under this heading. The costs in this category during FY 1997 are expected to increase only slightly ($199).

Taxes, Insurance, and Licenses (14) $28,495 (+695)

Includes the cost of insurance and licenses for Commission vehicles, insurance and taxes on real property, and the cost of permits. The costs in FY 1997 are expected to increase by $695 because of inflation.

Miscellaneous (15) $22,835 (+557)

Covers dues, subscriptions, interest, bank and finance charges, losses (or gains) on currency exchange, and similar miscellaneous costs. The costs in FY 1997 are expected to increase by $557 because of inflation.

SUBJECT: Guatemala: Next Steps in Bamaca and Devine Cases

ISSUES FOR DECISION

(1) Whether to approve the strategy outlined below for pursuing our interests in the human rights cases of Michael Devine and Efrain Bamaca; and (2) whether to send a memorandum to the President informing him of our strategy.

ESSENTIAL FACTORS

Publicly aired charges that Guatemalan army Colonel Julio Roberto Alpirez was a paid informant of the CIA at the time of the Devine and Bamaca killings have created new difficulties for our ongoing efforts to resolve the Bamaca case in particular. Alpirez is flatly denying the charge and continues to deny any culpability in either the Devine or Bamaca case. In a March 29 demarche to ARA, Guatemalan Ambassador Mulet insisted that, in order to pursue the Bamaca case effectively, his government requires information about the alleged USG relationship with Alpirez. He also sought more information about Alpirez' alleged role in the Bamaca killing than we have provided so far, trying to shift to us responsibility for production of evidence.

Our response to Mulet emphasized that allegations about Alpirez and the USG in no way diminish Guatemala's responsibility to investigate and prosecute as appropriate. We also said that Ambassador McAfee's demarches of November 11 and February 6 give the GOG substantial information with which to pursue the case. With respect to Devine, we told Mulet Guatemala must secure the rendition and imprisonment of convicted army Captain Hugo Contreras.

Along with five enlisted men, Contreras was convicted and sentenced to prison in May 1993, but he was allowed to escape from military custody the same day and remains a fugitive. Recent intelligence indicates he is in Venezuela. DIA is trying to determine his exact location but must proceed with caution to avoid his taking flight. Alpirez helped cover up

UNCLASSIFIED

Devine's murder but avoided prosecution for his role. Press allegations that he ordered Devine's and Bamaca's murders are not borne out by intelligence reports, although he likely played a direct role in Bamaca's interrogation.

Issues Raised

These latest developments come against a backdrop of five years of USG effort on the Devine case and two years of intensive focus on Bamaca, as well as similar efforts relating to other cases involving Americans, including the 1985 murders by civil defense patrollers of Nicholas Blake and Griffin Davis and the 1989 abduction and abuse of Sister Dianna Ortiz by army personnel. Embassy and Department officials have assisted Devine's widow and Jennifer Harbury, repeatedly urged the GOG to take action, and encouraged UN involvement in investigating Bamaca's disappearance. Assistant Secretary Shattuck also pressed the Guatemalan government on the Bamaca case, and raised other human rights cases, including that of Michael Devine, during his November 1994 trip to Guatemala.

In the Devine case, the Department of Justice, which the CIA consulted following the acquisition in October 1991 of intelligence suggesting that Alpirez was directly involved in Devine's murder, ultimately determined that it did not have a law enforcement interest. As the fundamental problem in both cases has been the unwillingness of civilian authorities to press the military to make full disclosure, we have not previously considered providing official investigative assistance.

In light of the new situation, however, it is possible that providing FBI investigative assistance might aid Guatemalan authorities to find a face-saving exit from the corner in which they have painted themselves, as well as uncovering new information. After the DOJ agreed March 30 to consider providing such assistance, a reluctant Guatemalan Foreign Minister de Vielman told me that she would consider the idea. We are following this up.

We are continually reviewing any information provided to us by other USG agencies with the intention of providing the GOG additional information that would be helpful. If you should separately decide, in the context of any internal Department review of these cases to declassify a large number of documents, an added benefit would be our ability to make these documents available to the Guatemalan government. They would also be available to the Historical Clarification Commission (similar to El Salvador's Truth Commission), which will begin work once a final peace accord is signed. We do not believe, however, that declassification of documents in hand would substantially add to the information already provided to the GOG on Alpirez' alleged involvement in the two cases.

Immediate Steps

To pressure and assist the Guatemalan government to undertake more thorough investigations and aggressive action, over the near term, we propose that:

— Ambassador McAfee again demarche President De Leon, responding formally to Guatemala's March 29 demarche. As we did March 29, Ambassador McAfee would insist that our policy of neither confirming nor denying allegations involving intelligence is no impediment to a good faith investigation.

— We offer FBI police-to-police cooperation in the Bamaca case. (That, too, is reflected in the instructions to Ambassador McAfee.)

— You send President De Leon a letter, which McAfee would deliver, reiterating our continuing strong interest in seeing justice done in these cases. A cable instructing McAfee and containing the proposed letter is at Tab 1.

— The intelligence community be asked to redouble efforts to collect additional intelligence on the Devine (e.g. location of Contreras) and Bamaca cases (INR to take this action).

UNCLASSIFIED

— We continue to make the pursuit of justice in these cases a central issue in our relationship with the GOG. We must deliver the message in every available channel that these cases must be credibly investigated and resolved.

We also suggest you inform the President of the steps we are taking. A memorandum is at Tab 2.

Looking Ahead

We also need to look ahead, should these efforts not bear fruit, to what further steps we might take. In fact, we have previously given thorough consideration to a wide range of punitive measures. But the possibilities are not promising. The most appropriate tool — military assistance — has been suspended since 1990. On March 10, we announced the suspension of Guatemalan participation in our (already small) IMET program in the United States for the remainder of 1995. We could cut off the remaining courses (to be conducted in Guatemala) but should not anticipate that such action would constitute severe pressure. We have judged that curtailing our development assistance, dedicated to democracy-strengthening projects and basic human needs, would be self-defeating and mean-spirited. Trade sanctions would be disproportionate, would hurt millions of poor Guatemalans and would not directly affect the military leadership in any event.

Our best leverage probably remains the desire of all Guatemalans for a full and productive relationship with the United States. We will need to continue to drive home the message in all official contacts, at all levels and in a variety of channels, that unresolved human rights cases remain a major impediment to the development of that relationship.

In the ongoing UN-mediated peace process we also have a more positive tool. The U.S. is one of six international "Friends" of that process. Nothing would do more to improve Guatemala's human rights situation overall than ending its thirty-four-year old internal conflict. Talks made encouraging progress in the first six months of 1994 but bogged down in the second half — in large measure owing to guerrilla intransigence. Prospects for reaching a final accord before Guatemalan elections later this year are uncertain at best, though the parties signed a subsidiary accord on the agenda item on indigenous rights in Mexico City March 31. INR believes continuing turmoil resulting from the Bamaca and Devine cases could further set back prospects for a peace accord.

The peace process has produced one quite significant result: a UN Verification Mission in Guatemala (MINUGUA), whose 245 human rights and police monitors are working throughout the country. MINUGUA's first hard-hitting report essentially corroborated the negative findings of our own human rights report. By accepting so large and extensive an international monitoring presence, the GOG has opened the door to much-needed scrutiny of its human rights record. At our request, MINUGUA is monitoring the GOG investigation into the Bamaca case. That applies at least some pressure for that investigation to be vigorous. We are planning to provide MINUGUA with $500,000 to enhance its police monitoring capability.

MEMORANDUM FOR: THE PRESIDENT

FROM: Warren Christopher

SUBJECT: Guatemala: The Bamaca and Devine Cases

We continue to seek the fullest possible accounting of the facts of the Efrain Bamaca and Michael Devine cases to keep the onus for resolving these and other human rights cases on the Guatemalan government. If we conclude that anyone connected with the U.S. government was in any way responsible for abuses or for covering them up, we will make a full disclosure to the American people.

We have been working on these two cases for many years. We have pressed President De Leon and his government to resolve them and have provided information as it became available to us.

Seizing upon the public charges that Colonel Julio Roberto Alpirez -- allegedly responsible for Bamaca's death -- was a paid informant of the CIA, the Guatemalan government is demanding information about the alleged relationship, the implication being it cannot solve the case unless we provide it. This is a transparent effort to transfer responsibility for resolving the cases to us. We have responded that Guatemala's duty to conduct a thorough investigation is in no way diminished by our long-standing policy to neither confirm nor deny (NCND) allegations of intelligence affiliations. B

In any event, to the extent possible, we will provide President De Leon with new information that would assist an investigation. We are also exploring the possibility of providing the GOG with FBI investigative assistance. In the meantime, I am instructing Ambassador McAfee to make a new demarche to President De Leon and am sending De Leon a personal message insisting that these cases must be resolved for Guatemala and the United States to have the kind of productive relationship we both want. I am making clear to him that we will make cooperation and progress in the resolution of these cases a key element of our relationship.

We have both short- and long-term concerns. In the short term, it is essential that we obtain a clear picture of responsibility in the Devine and Bamaca cases. I have directed that relevant bureaus give full cooperation with the review you ordered March 30. Once we evaluate the information developed, we will need to consider whether to declassify documents pertaining to these and other human rights cases. The Department is also processing, on an expeditious basis, two Freedom of Information Act requests by Bamaca's widow, Jennifer Harbury.

If our current efforts do not bear fruit, we will need to examine other measures.

The most relevant sanction -- cutting off military sales and financing -- was taken in December 1990, related to the Devine case. We cut our small military training program on March 10, 1995, after a month had passed without any action by Guatemalan authorities to interrogate Alpirez, as we had requested February 6.

Over the long run, our best hope for bringing about lasting improvement in the human rights situation in Guatemala lies in ending the 34-year old internal conflict. We are serving as one of six international "Friends" of the UN-mediated peace talks. Talks made good progress early last year, then slowed down. Nonetheless, the peace process has already produced important results. Pursuant to a human rights accord reached in March 1994, the UN has deployed 250 human rights and police monitors throughout Guatemala. These monitors work closely with NGOs and government officials on human rights cases and democratic institution-building.

Parties also agreed last year to create a Guatemala "Historical Clarification Commission" to conduct inquiries into human rights abuses once a comprehensive agreement is reached. Another important agreement, dealing with the rights of indigenous peoples, was signed in Mexico City on March 31. These developments are important in addressing Guatemala's grim history of human rights abuse and could be instrumental in specific cases of concern to us. We actively pursue a comprehensive accord and UN-sponsored oversight of compliance with it.

In Guatemala's Dark Heart, C.I.A. Lent Succor to Death

BYLINE: This article is based on reporting by Sam Dillon in Guatemala City and Tim Weiner in Washington and was written by Mr. Weiner.

BODY:

Adjacent to La Aurora Air Base in Guatemala City, the workplace of Col. Julio Roberto Alpirez, a C.I.A. informer linked to two murders, stands a new military intelligence school, a two-story concrete building flanked by high walls and barbed wire and guarded by 30-foot towers and soldiers armed with Israeli Galil rifles.

The school was built with the encouragement and financial help of the Central Intelligence Agency, said Gen. Hector Gramajo, Guatemala's Defense Minister from 1987 to 1990. "I got a lot of help from United States Central Intelligence," General Gramajo said.

Its aim is to instill professionalism, and on its walls hangs a plaque thanking the C.I.A. for its support, said the general, who in the early 1980's was a field commander in a campaign against a small leftist insurgency in which tens of thousands of Guatemalan villagers were killed.

The existence of the school and the case of Colonel Alpirez, who is accused of ordering the murders of an American innkeeper and a guerrilla married to an American lawyer, are glimpses of a hidden history: the C.I.A.'s close ties to the Guatemalan Army.

The army gained a reputation as Central America's most violent military for killing as many as 110,000 people, mostly Maya Indians, razing hundreds of villages and resorting to torture over the last three decades in an effort to destroy a guerrilla force that may have been no larger than 2,000 armed rebels.

American and Guatemalan officials, who long denied those links, now acknowledge that the C.I.A. gave the Guatemalan military millions of dollars in the 1980's and 1990's, used some of the money as bribes to buy information from high-ranking military intelligence officials, and provided intelligence to the army for its long war against guerrillas, farmers, peasants and other opponents.

The case also suggests that the C.I.A. sometimes had a closer cooperation with the Guatemalan military than with the State Department. The State Department, voicing fury at the death of the American innkeeper, cut off official military assistance to Guatemala in December 1990, but the C.I.A. continued making payments to the Guatemalan military, officials of the Bush and Clinton Administrations said.

The ties between American intelligence officers and Guatemalan soldiers go back to the C.I.A.'s "Operation Success," the 1954 coup that overthrew President Jacobo Arbenz Guzman and installed a military regime. The secret relationship was strengthened by a Reagan Administration edict in 1981, which remained in effect under President Bush: It ordered the intelligence agency to provide "training, equipment and related assistance to cooperating governments throughout Central America in order to counter foreign-sponsored subversion."

But it took the disclosure of Colonel Alpirez's suspected involvement in the two killings -- and a long effort by rights groups and some State Department officials -- to shed light on some of those secrets.

The Murder
The Ambassador Knew Too Little

In June 1990, after only eight months as United States Ambassador in Guatemala, Thomas F. Stroock, a broad-shouldered, affable oil man from Wyoming, found himself staring into the heart of darkness.

An American innkeeper, Michael DeVine, had been killed in the village of Poptun, in the northern jungles of Guatemala. No one knew why. So much else in Guatemala was murky, the former ambassador said in an interview, but this much was clear: the military were the culprits.

"We knew that they had murdered this guy," he said.

What the ambassador says he never knew, and has come to learn only in recent days, was how closely his own embassy was tied to the Guatemalan army.

The C.I.A. station chief in Guatemala from 1988 to 1991 was, like many intelligence officers who had served there, a Cuban-American who had worked on the Reagan Administration's secret programs in Central America.

He had about 20 officers under him, an operating budget of about $5 million a year, and an equal or greater sum for "liaison" with the Guatemalan military, American intelligence officials said. They said his job included placing and keeping senior Guatemalan officers on his payroll, giving them sums far in excess of their government salaries, in exchange for inside intelligence.

A Pentagon official of the era said the information gleaned by the station was second-rate. "C.I.A. seduced the policymakers with their old line -- 'We can give you the secret information on what's really happening inside Guatemala' -- but they never produced it," he said.

Among the officers on the payroll was Colonel Alpirez, American intelligence officials said. They said the colonel recruited other officers, spotting talented soldiers who might serve the C.I.A. They said the colonel himself was recruited in the late 1980's, as a senior officer of an elite intelligence unit attached to the presidential staff. The Archivo, as the intelligence unit is known, spied on Guatemalans and is accused by rights groups of carrying out assassinations.

The C.I.A. station also gave the Guatemalan Army "special information" on the guerrillas, Vinicio Cerezo, the President of Guatemala from 1986 to 1990, said in an interview.

"Sometimes there was special information, intelligence information on the area," Mr. Cerezo said. "Certainly the C.I.A. gave information about guerrilla movements or contacts in some areas."

His account contradicts repeated statements from United States Embassy officials that the United States was never involved with the counterinsurgency campaign.

Mr. Cerezo said he realized during his presidency that the overwhelming presence of the C.I.A. in Guatemala was a fact of life, but tried to keep some control over his military by establishing rules of conduct.

"We demanded that Guatemalan officers inform us of issues that they handled with the U.S. intelligence agents, and that they not undertake any operation with them that was not authorized by the Government or by the general staff of the army," he said. "This was the official policy -- but that doesn't mean that in some cases some officials don't do things that could be considered irregular."

Mr. Cerezo, now a member of a regional parliament, said he was well aware that many high-ranking Guatemalan military intelligence officers -- including Colonel Alpirez -- had maintained contacts with the C.I.A.'s station.

"We knew that he communicated with the C.I.A.," Mr. Cerezo said of the colonel. "But we never saw Alpirez involved in any suspicious activity. He was an intelligence man, and you know that they usually have very conservative attitudes."

The Cover-Up
Army and C.I.A. Deny Murder Link

The Guatemalan military has been accused by human-rights groups of killing at least 10 Americans -- including priests, nuns and journalists -- between 1976 and the 1990 murder of Mr. DeVine. Other Americans reported being kidnapped, tortured or abused. Some of them, and their families, said in interviews last week that they felt they received insufficient support from the United States Embassy.

The DeVine case was different. Ambassador Stroock said he had summoned the station chief, the deputy chief of mission, the consul and the military attache to his third-floor office and ordered them to investigate. If they did not, he said, the Guatemalan military "would think it was open season on Americans."

The ambassador helicoptered up to Poptun after Mr. DeVine's funeral and found the man's widow, Carole DeVine. She had already gathered an impressive amount of information: a white pickup truck filled with soldiers appeared in the village a few days before the murder. The men questioned villagers about Mr. DeVine. The truck had been seen entering and leaving a training base for the Guatemalan army's counter-guerrilla forces.

Every vehicle that entered or left the base was officially logged in and out.

The base was run by Colonel Alpirez.

Ambassador Stroock said he sent his military attache, Col. Allen C. Cornell, and his naval attache, Lieut. Jeff Kammerer of the Marines, "to talk to Alpirez about the white truck, to see the logs, and to find out how long those enlisted men stayed on the base."

"And guess what?" he said. "The logs were missing. Alpirez stiffed them.

"I was furious. Here was a peaceful American citizen being murdered by an army we were sending aid to, and then the army that did the murder was trying to cover it up. I just figured that this was something that the average American taxpayer wouldn't stand for."

About six weeks after the murder, Mr. Stroock said, the thought occurred to him that the C.I.A.'s paid agents in the Guatemalan army might be mixed up in the killing. But the station chief denied it. The ambassador believed him.

"If I didn't know about this Alpirez thing," Mr. Stoock says now, "I'd have gone to my grave thinking that the station did a good job."

In December 1990, the White House angrily cut off about $3 million a year in military aid to Guatemala, citing Mr. DeVine's death as the cause. But the C.I.A. continued "liaison" support for Guatemala's military intelligence programs -- about $5 million to $7 million a year, according to Bush Administration officials.

State Department officials say they did not know of the liaison program and never intended to send a mixed message to the Guatemalan military.

The Connection
A Colonel Tied To Two Murders

In October 1991, the C.I.A. became worried about its connection to Colonel Alpirez and asked the Justice Department for an opinion about his "potential criminal involvement" in the murder of Mr. DeVine, a senior Bush Administration official said last week.

"Their question was, do we have to disclose our relationship with Alpirez?" he said.

He said the Justice Department took six months to get back to the C.I.A. with an answer -- that the agency did not have a legal problem -- but that no written record of this inquiry had been found.

The C.I.A. still did not tell the State Department about Colonel Alpirez, he said, even after it ended its financial arrangement with the colonel -- $44,000 in severance pay in July 1992.

That same month, Santiago Cabrera Lopez, a 23-year-old guerrilla captured in 1991, swears that he saw Colonel Alpirez presiding over the brutal interrogation of a well-known guerrilla commander -- Efrain Bamaca Velasquez.

The prisoner was the husband of Jennifer Harbury, an American lawyer who supported the guerrillas' cause. Colonel Alpirez, Mr. Cabrera insisted, was the senior officer present.

"I remember Alpirez well," Mr. Cabrera said in a telephone interview from Mexico. "Very demanding. Very strict. A hard man, even on his own soldiers."

Mr. Cabrera said he escaped to Mexico in December 1992. He presented his testimony to the United Nations in Geneva in March 1993. His sworn affidavit, which circulated widely among human rights groups but was apparently disregarded by American diplomats, contradicted the official position of the Guatemalan Government that Mr. Bamaca had been killed in a shootout a year earlier.

And it identified Colonel Alpirez as the last high-ranking officer to have seen the captured commander alive.

In the fall of 1992, according to Clinton Administration officials, the C.I.A.'s Guatemala station, now run by a new chief, sent classified cables about the Bamaca case to headquarters in Langley, Va. They were not shared with Ambassador Stroock.

The officials said heavily edited summaries of those cables were sent to the State Department, where they apparently went unnoticed for nearly two years -- until Ms. Harbury's well-publicized hunger strike last October at Guatemala's Justice Ministry, which was aimed at discovering the facts behind her husband's death.

Her protest sent State Department officials searching their files. When they saw what was in them, they said, a few officials began to realize they had unwittingly misled Ms. Harbury.

They then demanded more information from the C.I.A., but it took from October 1994 to the end of January, the Clinton Administration officials said, before they saw the connection between the DeVine and Bamaca cases. That connection was Colonel Alpirez.

The Colonel
Just the Man C.I.A. Looked For

Last week, Colonel Alpirez emerged from a long interrogation by the Attorney General's office in Guatemala. He denied that he had had anything to do with the C.I.A. or with the killings of Mr. DeVine and Mr. Bamaca.

C.I.A. officials also say they did nothing wrong in the case.

Investigations are now under way at the C.I.A., the Pentagon, the National Security Agency, which conducts global electronic eavesdropping operations, and other branches of the United States Government.

Scholars of Guatemala's military say that whatever the outcome of the inquiries, Guatemala's political landscape has been transformed by the public acknowledgment of secret and intimate ties between American intelligence and the Guatemalan military.

Jennifer Schirmer, an anthropologist at the Harvard Divinity School, has interviewed 36 Guatemalan military officers, including four former defense ministers, for a book on the Guatemalan military. She said the

C.I.A.-sponsored training school adjacent to La Aurora and the dual career of Colonel Alpirez stood as symbols of the intelligence agency's operations in Guatemala for the last four decades.

"Colonel Alpirez is precisely the kind of elite intelligence officer the Guatemalan Army -- and apparently the C.I.A. -- want to create," she said.

She defined that kind of officer as "one who proudly believes in the army's moral right to kill those they perceive to be enemies of the state" -- but one who, by virtue of better training, may do so far more selectively than when following the scorched-earth policies of the past.

HEADLINE: The C.I.A.: A Pattern of Deceit

BODY:

There is a pathology of secrecy and deceit at the Central Intelligence Agency that seems to defeat all remedial efforts, starting with the Congressional inquiries 20 years ago into intelligence abuses. The latest sign of the agency's chilling indifference to democratic principles is the still unfolding story of two killings in Guatemala and the C.I.A.'s role in impeding the investigations and subverting a suspension of aid to Guatemala.

Each day seems to bring a disturbing new disclosure in these cases. First Representative Robert Torricelli reported that a Guatemalan colonel on the C.I.A. payroll as an informant ordered the killing of Michael DeVine, an American living in Guatemala, and Efrain Bamaca Velasquez, a rebel leader married to an American, Jennifer Harbury. Though there is no evidence so far that the agency knew of the killings in advance, it withheld information about them after it learned, impeding the State Department's efforts to determine what had happened to the men.

Then Tim Weiner of The Times discovered that even as the Bush Administration suspended $3 million in open military assistance to Guatemala in 1990 to protest the killing of Mr. DeVine, the C.I.A. kept right on sending somewhere between $5 million and $7 million as part of its secret relationship with the Guatemalan military. Now there have been allegations that documents were destroyed in Washington relating to the two murders and the handling of them by the C.I.A. and the Pentagon.

President Clinton has properly ordered investigations into the roles of all the agencies that dealt with the DeVine and Bamaca cases, as well as the earlier deaths in Guatemala of other Americans. One of the first questions that needs to be answered is who in the C.I.A., or elsewhere, approved continuation of the secret payments.

But the situation in Guatemala raises broader questions about how intelligence agencies function in a democracy. They cannot be allowed to operate with their own agenda, thwarting national policy.

Whenever revelations of C.I.A. misconduct emerge, defenders of the agency patiently explain that intelligence is a dirty game, and that you cannot get information on bad people without having a relationship with them. This is true. But such relationships need careful monitoring to make sure they do not get too cozy nor function to support and give tacit approval to a murderous military culture. Another problem arises when American spies not only rely on informants for information on their activities, but also absorb their attitudes and use their analysis of events in their countries.

The kind of working ties the C.I.A. maintained with the Guatemalan military and intelligence services, known in the trade as a "liaison relationship," have been used in the past to deal with undemocratic regimes with minimal oversight. This happened during the Iran-Iraq war, when the C.I.A. shared battlefield information with Saddam Hussein. Such relationships are rarely reported to Congressional oversight committees.

Mr. Clinton and Congress need to take a careful look at the liaison system, and prevent these relationships from shielding abuses and uncontrolled C.I.A. activities. It would not hurt to start by taking apart the entire Guatemala operation piece by piece to see what happened, and to make public the information. No matter how risky their mission, American spies must be answerable to the American people.

HEADLINE: Clinton Orders Wide Review Of U.S. Activity in Guatemala

BYLINE: By DAVID JOHNSTON

DATELINE: WASHINGTON, March 30

BODY:

The swirl of allegations over the United States role in two deaths ordered by a Guatemalan colonel spread today into a broad Government-wide review of the affair.

The inquiries, ordered by President Clinton on Wednesday, are being conducted by Inspectors General at the Justice Department, the State Department, the Central Intelligence Agency and the Pentagon. The Pentagon is also conducting reviews at three of its agencies -- the National Security Agency, the Defense Intelligence Agency and the Army.

"We need to know the facts, and we're going to do everything we can to find out the facts," Mr. Clinton said on Wednesday.

The Federal Bureau of Investigation has begun a separate criminal inquiry into the accusations in an anonymous letter sent earlier this week to Representative Robert G. Torricelli, Democrat of New Jersey, asserting that a United States Army colonel has recently destroyed documents related to the killings.

The letter said that the documents being destroyed include intercepted communications obtained by the United States showing involvement by Army intelligence officials in the 1990 killing of Michael DeVine, a American innkeeper in Guatemala, and the 1992 killing of Efrain Bamaca Valesquez, a Guatemalan who was married to an American lawyer.

President Clinton ordered the review on Wednesday evening after being told that several agencies had appeared unwilling or unable to describe how much they knew about the killings before last week, when Mr. Torricelli accused the C.I.A. of withholding information about the deaths, Administration officials said.

C.I.A. officials have denied the assertion.

Asked after an appearance in Tampa, Fla., this afternoon whether he believed the C.I.A. had covered up the two killings, Mr. Clinton said he had no information to that effect.

But the President said he had now taken "exceptional steps to make sure that there is a good investigation and to make sure that the records are secure."

The New York Times, March 31, 1995

Secretary of State Warren Christopher said he did not yet have all the facts about other reports that the C.I.A. continued to provide covert assistance to Guatemala after the Bush Administration cut off millions of dollars in aid to protest the lack of progress in investigating the DeVine killing.

Mr. Christopher said he is urgently trying to get the facts, but added, "I must say I am not sure of them at the present time, nor is the President."

At a House International Relations Committee hearing today, Mr. Torricelli reacted caustically to Mr. Christopher's statements. He said the continuation of covert financial assistance to Guatemala would constitute "one of the most cynical chapters in American history."

Those who will carry out the review are Ann Z. Caracristi, a former deputy director of the National Security Agency; Anthony S. Harrington, a Washington attorney who is a former general counsel of the Democratic National Committee, and Harold W. Pote, a former partner in a Philadelphia investment group, the White House said.

It said the three were chosen because they sit on the Intelligence Oversight Board, a standing committee of the broader advisory board, which is chaired by Les Aspin, the former Defense Secretary.

Administration officials denied they had sought to avoid scrutiny by deploying the Inspectors General, some of whom had been examining the case for weeks before the President's order. They said the Inspectors General had been specifically ordered to refer any possible criminality to the Justice Department or the United States Attorney.

In announcing Mr. Clinton's decision, the White House said the President had directed that the scope of the review include any available information on the deaths of other Americans in Guatemala or rights abuses against them. A written statement from Michael D. McCurry, the White House spokesman, mentioned the torture of Sister Dianna Ortiz in 1989 and the deaths of Griffith Davis and Nicholas Blake in 1985.

Administration officials said they knew of no evidence that the American Government had played a role in any of the three cases. But as attention to the American activities in Guatemala becomes more intensive, they said it was both wise and prudent to expand the investigation.

HEADLINE: Guatemalan Military Has Violent History

BODY:

To the Editor:

Gen. Hector Gramajo of Guatemala offers highest praise for Col. Julio Roberto Alpirez, the man accused of murdering one United States citizen and the husband of another, Jennifer Harbury, calling him "a soldier above all" (news article, March 26).

As the military commander of the indigenous highland regions in the early 1980's, General Gramajo designed and implemented a brutal campaign of human rights abuses against civilian men, women and children. Hundreds of peaceful villagers were hacked to death and burned alive by his soldiers, under his orders. Their survivors often starved to death in the mountains or in Government relocation camps.

As Defense Minister 1987-90, he was responsible for a campaign to eliminate independent social, political and religious organizations.

Much of this is public record in this country. While obtaining a master's degree from Harvard's Kennedy School in 1991, General Gramajo was sued by victims of his abuses and by Sister Dianna Ortiz, an American nun who was kidnapped and tortured by the general's forces. A default has been entered against him; the victims are awaiting an award of money damages.

HEADLINE: What Else Did The C.I.A. Know?

BYLINE: By Samuel Blake; Samuel Blake is a consultant to the Pentagon on national security affairs.

BODY:

The disclosure that the C.I.A employed a Guatemalan Army colonel involved in the torture and murder of Michael DeVine, an American who ran an inn in the jungle, and an insurgent married to Jennifer Harbury, an American lawyer, comes as no surprise to my family.

Exactly 10 years ago, Guatemalan paramilitary forces escorted my brother Nick Blake, a freelance journalist, and a photographer, Griffin Davis, out of the village of El Llano in the highlands and shot them dead with high-powered rifles. Both men had gone into the mountains to try to interview left-wing guerrillas who had been waging a civil war in Guatemala for more than three decades.

The paramilitary forces hid the bodies for a year until public pressure forced the army to burn and rebury the remains in hopes that the truth would never be known.

From 1985 to 1992, the highest levels of Guatemala's Government lied to my family about what had happened to Nick and Griff, blaming guerrillas for their disappearance.

In June 1992, after information implicating the army in the deaths came to our attention, my brother and I went to the highlands where their remains lay, 90 miles northwest of Guatemala City. We excavated the remains, and Dr. Douglas Owsley, a forensic anthropologist at the Smithsonian Institution, identified them.

In December 1992, the U.S. Ambassador, Marilyn McAfee, took me to see President Ramiro de Leon Carpio. He admitted that the security forces had killed Nick and Griff and that the army high command had covered up the murders. He promised to seek justice for our families.

To this day, the promises remain empty. The Government won't admit officially who ordered Nick's and Griff's executions, why they were killed, why their deaths were covered up and by whom, and it refuses to discipline or prosecute those involved in the murders and cover-up.

For the most part, for 10 years Washington has parroted the nonsense spouted by the Guatemalans that guerrillas or "brigands" killed Nick and Griff. As we pressed our own investigation, it became clear that elements of our Government, mainly C.I.A. and State Department officials, were running interference for their friends in the Guatemalan Army.

We always suspected that our Government knew a great deal about the army's role in the murders. With the disclosures about Mr. DeVine and Ms. Harbury's husband, Efrain Bamaca Velasquez (a guerrilla supposedly protected by the Geneva Convention on the treatment of prisoners), our worst fears have been confirmed -- that our intelligence and national security agencies are withholding information that could shed light on the slayings.

Our families would like the Congressional intelligence committees to hold public hearings and subpoena officials and documents from the C.I.A. and the State and Defense Departments that might help in the quest for truth and justice in our case and the other cases.

HEADLINE: Tale of Evasion Of Ban on Aid For Guatemala

BYLINE: By TIM WEINER

BODY:

The Bush Administration, in a show of public anger over the killing of an American, cut off military aid to Guatemala in 1990 but secretly allowed the Central Intelligence Agency to send millions of dollars to the military Government to make up for the loss, members of the Bush and Clinton Administrations said today.

The payments apparently continued into the Clinton Administration but it could not be learned if they are still being made.

About $5 million to $7 million flowed annually from the C.I.A. through the agency's Guatemala station to the military, the officials said.

The delivery of funds started after the White House formally halted military aid approved by Congress, a public display of frustration at the Guatemalan military's failure to assist in the investigation of the killing of the American, Michael DeVine, the officials said. Mr. DeVine, an innkeeper in the northern forests, was killed by Guatemalan soldiers in June 1990.

Two Bush Administration officials familiar with the payments, who insisted on not being identified, said the money did not buy weapons but went to mollify the Guatemalan military and to pay C.I.A. sources.

"The agency ran this program on the basis that it was the key to keeping U.S. policymakers informed about what was going on within the Guatemalan Government and the Guatemalan military," one official said. But he noted that it did not buy crucial information about the death of Mr. DeVine.

The apparent contradiction between the public policy and the approval of secret funds raises the question of how deeply committed the White House and the C.I.A. were to investigating Mr. DeVine's death.

Representative Robert G. Torricelli, a New Jersey Democrat who is a member of the House Intelligence Committee, has linked a C.I.A. agent, Col. Julio Roberto Alpirez of the Guatemalan Army, to the killing of Mr. DeVine and to the death of a guerrilla leader who was married to an American lawyer.

The White House, acting for the first time in the matter, has begun an inquiry into the killings, and said late tonight that the National Security Agency, the electronic-eavesdropping branch of United States intelligence, had secured an area where "document shredding is allegedly occurring." The White House gave no further details.

The White House also said it had ordered all relevant agencies to preserve documents and had instructed the Justice Department to begin a formal investigation.

President Clinton also plans to ask the Intelligence Oversight Board, senior officials charged with reviewing United States intelligence activities, to review the case of Colonel Alpirez.

Within the Bush Administration, some officials said, there were arguments over whether the Administration was being hypocritical by sending contradictory messages to the Guatemalan military.

"Guatemalan military officers told us: 'You guys are crazy. You shut us down in public, and then you give us stuff through the back door, and everyone in the military knows it,' " one Bush Administration official said.

The C.I.A.'s payments to the Guatemalan military apparently fell under the veil of a "liaison" relationship with a foreign intelligence service, the Bush Administration official said. The details of such relationships are rarely shared with Congressional oversight committees, though it is not known whether Congress was informed in this instance.

The Bush Administration's public decision to withhold military aid to Guatemala in 1990 came as its Ambassador, Thomas F. Stroock, was protesting increasing rights abuses in Guatemala and the inability or unwillingness of political leaders there to assert control the army.

Washington cut economic aid to Guatemala to $113.4 million in 1990, from $141.3 million in 1989; military aid fell to $3.3 million, from $7 million. In 1990 the State Department also placed Guatemala on its list of major drug-trafficking countries.

Mr. DeVine was kidnapped and nearly beheaded by members of the Guatemalan military in June 1990, and left by the roadside near his inn in Poptun, a village in the Guatemalan jungle. His body was discovered near a Guatemalan Army Special Forces training camp run by Colonel Alpirez, the officer accused by Representative Torricelli of complicity in the murder. At the time, the colonel was on the payroll of the C.I.A., Mr. Torricelli says.

Ambassador Stroock said in an interview that he dispatched his military attache, Col. Allen C. Cornell, to interview Colonel Alpirez at his jungle base but that the attache was rebuffed.

Mr. Stroock said he went to see the C.I.A. station chief after Colonel Cornell reported the incident.

"I looked him in the eye and I said, 'Are any of your 'assets' involved in this?' " the former Ambassador said. "And he said no. And I believed him. I had absolutely no idea that Alpirez was a C.I.A. asset."

The New York Times, March 30, 1995

But Mr. Stroock said that after Colonel Alpirez refused to cooperate, he told senior officials at the American Embassy that they were not to help the colonel again.

Colonel Alpirez received at least $60,000 from the C.I.A. between the time of the killing and the end of his financial relationship with the C.I.A. in the summer of 1992, Administration officials have said.

In December, after Ambassador Stroock had tried and failed to persuade the Guatemalan Government and military to find the officers responsible for the death of Mr. DeVine, the Bush Administration halted military aid to Guatemala.

In addition to $3.3 million appropriated that year, millions more in the pipeline were withdrawn, said a third former high-ranking State Department official who served in the Bush and Clinton Administrations.

"The DeVine case was a big issue with us," he said. "It was the central issue between the United States and Guatemala, and we were breaking their arms and legs over DeVine. We were very angry."

This official said he was certain the C.I.A. did not inform the State Department and the National Security Council that Colonel Alpirez was its paid agent, even after the State Department received intelligence reports in 1991 that the colonel was implicated in the DeVine case.

"This raises a very serious question," he said. "The C.I.A. absolutely knew that the U.S. Government at the highest levels was confronting the Guatemalan Government and insisting they investigate. They knew it was a central issue in U.S.-Guatemalan relations. For them not to have disclosed that to State and to N.S.C. is a serious issue."

HEADLINE: Congressman Seeks Intelligence Data on Slayings in Guatemala

BYLINE: By TIM WEINER

BODY:

A member of Congress told the National Security Agency and the United States Army tonight to secure records that might shed light on what the United States Government knew about the killings in Guatemala of an American citizen and a guerrilla married to an American lawyer.

Representative Robert G. Torricelli, Democrat of New Jersey, a member of the House intelligence committee, said he acted after he received an anonymous letter, apparently from inside the National Security Agency, which conducts global electronic-eavesdropping operations, that the agency had intercepted communications suggesting that both the Central Intelligence Agency and the Army were aware of the circumstances surrounding the killings at the time they occurred.

The allegations, written on the National Security Agency's stationery, included suggestions that Army personnel had provided information to a Guatemalan Army colonel on the C.I.A.'s payroll, Col. Julio Roberto Alpírez, about Michael DeVine, an American innkeeper in Guatemala who was killed by Guatemalan soldiers in June 1990.

The letter also said that "efforts are currently being made to cover up involvement of the U.S. Army in the affair," including attempts to destroy "records recording communications, intercepts, which show U.S. Army Intelligence involvement in these incidents."

The authenticity of the letter could not be independently verified.

Last week, Mr. Torricelli made public charges that Colonel Alpirez, who had been on the payroll of the C.I.A.'s Guatemala station since the mid- to late-1980's, was implicated in the killings of Mr. DeVine and of Efrain Bamaca Velasquez, a leftist guerrilla married to an American lawyer, Jennifer Harbury.

The question of who knew about the killings, and when, has sparked an investigation by the C.I.A.'s inspector general and is likely to lead to Congressional hearings, Mr. Torricelli said.

Colonel Alpirez, now second-in-command of the largest military base in Guatemala City, emerged Monday night from a long interrogation by the Guatemalan Attorney General's office and denied any involvement in the killings or with the C.I.A. He called the accusations "perverse and without foundation."

"I never worked for any U.S. agency," Colonel Alpirez said. "I am a man with ethical principles. I am prepared to do anything to clear my name."

Guatemala's public prosecutor's office must now decide whether there is sufficient evidence to open a case against Colonel Alpirez.

Despite overwhelming evidence that the Guatemalan Army killed thousands of its own people, the only Guatemalan military officer known to have been sentenced to prison for human rights abuses was Captain Hugo Contreras, who mysteriously escaped from an army base hours after being convicted of the killing in June 1990 of Mr. DeVine.

The C.I.A., for its part, has denied that it knew of the colonel's connections to the deaths of the American innkeeper and the Guatemalan guerrilla at the time they occurred, and it has denied that it concealed its knowledge of the facts once it possessed them.

HEADLINE: On Her Guatemalan Ranch, American Retraces Slaying

BYLINE: By SAM DILLON

DATELINE: GUATEMALA, March 27

BODY:

Five years ago, when an American innkeeper disappeared in Guatemala, his wife, Carole A. DeVine, visited the local army garrison and asked to speak to Col. Julio Roberto Alpirez, the commander, hoping he could help her find her husband.

"Neither Colonel Alpirez nor any other officer would see me," Mrs. DeVine said in an interview at her ranch in Guatemala's northern rain forest. "I was turned away at the gate. They were very rude."

The next morning, the body of her husband, Michael DeVine, was found on a roadside near their ranch, with his hands tied and his head nearly cut off. And over the next days and weeks, Mrs. DeVine and United States Embassy officials collected evidence that Colonel Alpirez had known of the killing and had helped to cover it up, she said.

"We knew from the start that Colonel Alpirez was implicated," she said.

What Mrs. DeVine did not know, and was not disclosed until last week, was that the Guatemalan colonel was a paid informant for the Central Intelligence Agency.

[Thomas F. Strook, the United States Ambassador in Guatemala from 1989 to 1992, said in a telephone interview from Houston that he made the Guatemalan Army's involvement in the killing of Mr. DeVine "a centerpiece of our policy," and stopped American military aid to the Central American nation as a consequence.

["We knew that they had murdered this guy," he said. "So much else was murky. But we had this one cold."

[He said he sent his military attache to interview Colonel Alpirez at his post in Poptun, but the colonel refused to cooperate, to the point of refusing to hand over evidence. Afterward, Mr. Strook said, he told his staff at the embassy that they were to have nothing more to do with the colonel. But the C.I.A. station chief in Guatemala kept him on his payroll for close to two more years, United States Government officials say.]

The killing of Mr. DeVine in June 1990, and Colonel Alpirez's involvement in it, returned to the spotlight last week after Representative Robert G.

Torricelli, a New Jersey Democrat, disclosed that the colonel was a paid agent of the C.I.A. at the time of Mr. DeVine's killing and remained on the payroll until 1992, about the time he ordered the killing of a captive insurgent, Efrain Bamaca Velasquez, who was the husband of an American citizen, Jennifer Harbury.

In his first public appearance since Representative Torricelli's disclosures, Colonel Alpirez today visited the offices of f Attorney General Ramses Cuestas. After six hours of questioning by government prosecutors, the colonel denied to reporters that he had ever worked for the C.I.A. or had any involvement in the killings of Mr. Bamaca and Mr. DeVine. "I'm totally innocent," he said.

Ms. Harbury has gained worldwide fame in pressing the Guatemalan and American Governments for information about her husband's fate through hunger strikes and other public protests. In contrast, Mrs. DeVine has kept a low profile during her five-year effort to obtain justice.

Mrs. DeVine had never discussed her husband's case publicly until the weekend, when a reporter traveled by light plane to Poptun, 140 miles north of Guatemala City, to visit her at her ranch, which has no working telephone. Although word of Colonel Alpirez's C.I.A. ties was broadcast to the world last week, she first heard the details from a reporter.

"This is a total shock," Mrs. DeVine said, sitting for a few moments in a silence broken only by the squawk of a distant parrot before continuing. "The C.I.A. sounds like it has gotten totally out of control."

Mrs. DeVine said that shortly after the killing, Poptun residents gave her and United States Embassy officials information that showed that Colonel Alpirez had sheltered at his Poptun base an army death squad sent from another garrison to kill Mr. DeVine.

"If a death squad goes into his base and he gives them food and says O.K. go ahead and kill Mike DeVine, he's as guilty as those who did the killing," she said.

Mrs. DeVine, a Californian, and her husband, who was raised on a farm in Iowa, moved to Guatemala in 1971, bought land in the rain forest and built a collection of plank-board guest houses. Adopting two Mayan Indian children, Conrado and Maria, they lived a quiet frontier life, feeling largely isolated, she said, from the Guatemalan counterinsurgency raging around them, in which more than 100,000 civilians have been killed since the early 1980's.

The couple even occasionally attended dances and other social events at the army special forces training base in Poptun, Mrs. DeVine said. But relations with the military chilled after a confrontation Mr. DeVine had in the mid-1980's with an army officer who became "drunk and abusive" in the DeVines' restaurant.

The officer began banging his bottle on a counter when Mr. DeVine served an Indian before serving him, and Mr. DeVine, a tall, muscular man, ejected him. The officer responded by pulling his service revolver. "He said, 'I'll get you someday,' " Mrs. DeVine said.

American officials have offered many hypotheses for the killing of Mr. DeVine, including the possibility that he had stumbled across army involvement in drug or timber smuggling. But Mrs. DeVine pointed to that drunken incident.

"I can't imagine why anybody would ever kill Michael," she said. "The only plausible thing we came up with was that threat."

After the killing, circumstantial evidence implicating the army soon emerged, Mrs. DeVine said. Several Poptun residents stepped forward to say they had seen a white pickup truck filled with armed men waiting along a road outside the DeVine ranch, and other residents said the armed men had questioned them about Mr. DeVine's whereabouts. Others saw the white truck entering and leaving Colonel Alpirez's base over several days before the killing, she said.

Mrs. DeVine hired a private American investigator to pursue these leads, and within weeks he traced registration of the white truck to a military base in Flores, the provincial capital 60 miles north of Poptun. Several American officials, including the former United States Ambassador, Mr. Strook, and the former United States military attache, Col. Allen C. Cornell, also helped in the investigation, traveling to Poptun to question army officers and others about it.

Colonel Alpirez refused to cooperate, asserting in response to United States requests that the traffic records that could identify vehicles that had entered and left his base were missing, Mrs. Devine said. [Ambassador Strook confirmed her account of the refusal, and said he told her at the time that his embassy would not lift a finger for the colonel in the future.]

In the face of that and other Guatemalan Government intransigence, Washington suspended its $3.3 million military aid program in December 1990.

[The Acting Director of Central Intelligence, Adm. William O. Studeman, has said the C.I.A. had no information about Mr. DeVine's death at the time it occurred, and called assertions by Representative Torricelli that it later concealed that information "completely false." He also rejected Mr. Torricelli's assertion that there was a "a criminal element" inside the C.I.A., calling it "a great disservice" to the agency and its employees.]

Partly because of the American pressure, the Guatemalan Government eventually tried and convicted five foot soldiers in the murder, several of whom testified that an army intelligence officer, Capt. Hugo Contreras, based at the garrison in Flores, had sent them to Poptun to kill Mr. DeVine. The soldiers testified that they had operated out of Colonel Alpirez's base for several days before the killing, Mrs. DeVine said. An American official confirmed here outline of the investigation and trial.

Mrs. DeVine said she believes that the officer who threatened her husband in the restaurant was Captain Contreras.

In 1993, Captain Contreras was tried and convicted of masterminding Mr. DeVine's killing, but he escaped from a military barracks soon afterward and has not been recaptured. Colonel Alpirez was never even interrogated about his involvement in the crime until today. He is currently the second in command at an air base in Guatemala City.

HEADLINE: The Rebel and the Lawyer: Unlikely Love in Guatemala

BYLINE: By CATHERINE S. MANEGOLD

DATELINE: WASHINGTON, March 26

BODY:

Theirs was the most improbable of intimacies. The first time they touched was in an awkward dance in a rebel camp on the slope of a volcano, he, blushing furiously with a machete still slung over one shoulder, she, nervous, too, but laughing anyway and unwilling to pull back. Their shadows dusted the barren ground by firelight as the soldiers clapped and urged them on, two dancers, a spark of something.

Jennifer Harbury was 39 when she first saw Efrain Bamaca Velasquez. She was a lawyer working on a book about the women in Guatemala's rebel army, following an idiosyncratic path that led her deeper and deeper inside a well-hidden, war-hardened society of guerrilla fighters. She had traveled from Texas to Mexico City to the jungles of western Guatemala in her research. She was there to tell their story. She made no pretense of objectivity. She did not see gray and did not want to.

He was a 35-year-old rebel leader known mostly by his nom de guerre, Commander Evarardo. He had a reputation for leading swift and punishing attacks. The only Maya Indian to reach the top ranks in the rebel army, he was born a peasant and was illiterate until he joined the rebels at 18. The war was his adult life. He had lost two lovers to it, and countless friends.

She had expected someone older, harsh and unappealing. But he was not like that, she said in interviews in Guatemala last November and in Washington recently. When she first glimpsed him in the camp she was startled and quite moved: "He looked almost like a fawn," she said.

The prospect of death ordered his days. A fear of banality ordered hers. Their attraction was immediate, but they parted chaste. No path seemed possible or wise. A year later, when they met again in Mexico, wisdom gave way to passion. They married in 1991 in a party with her friends at a rented house in rural Texas. In the tradition of the leftist guerrilla army, they exchanged spoons, not rings.

Commander Evarardo disappeared during an ambush by the Guatemalan military on March 12, 1992. It took three years and 10 days and help from Congress to find out his fate.

On Wednesday, Congressman Robert G. Torricelli, a New Jersey Democrat, sent a letter to President Clinton, accusing the Central Intelligence Agency of operating beyond civilian control. Documents he had obtained showed that a colonel in the Guatemalan Army, a contract employee of the C.I.A., had supervised Mr. Bamaca's torture, then ordered his death.

That announcement began what is sure to be a difficult round of inquiries for the Government. But for Ms. Harbury it was the end of a three-year ordeal of sorrow, uncertainty and fear. "It lets me know he's not suffering anymore," she said. "But I want his body. It's mine. I want to bury him."

There were those in Guatemala who suggested that no Harvard-trained lawyer would marry an elusive rebel leader unsophisticated in the ways of modern life. "Do you mean to say that Jenny, after having eaten caviar and hobnobbed with the jet set of Boston, would tie her luck with a man who killed soldiers, civilians and cows, set off bombs and abused his countrymen, costing many lives?" wrote Jose Eduardo Zarco, a columnist, in Guatemala City's Prensa Libra last Nov. 26. "Is that normal?" Her motivation, he suggested, must be money. "Bah!"

But Ms. Harbury tells it as a love story, her first, though she was married once before to a Texas lawyer whom she lived with only briefly.

No tale of two lovers is ever quite ordinary. Yet Ms. Harbury's romance carried special poignancy and sadness. Even before Mr. Bamaca's disappearance in the jungles of Guatemala, the pair had seen clearly that their time together might be short. They never said goodbye, fearing it might be bad luck.

They met in 1990. By then she had worked with the underground for years, first hearing tales of atrocities from exiles living in southern Texas where she worked with immigrants, then among expatriates in Mexico City and finally in the shady networks that trailed through Guatemala City's grimy urban sprawl.

Slowly, she gained the rebels' trust and their grudging respect. It was rare for outsiders to be welcomed in the mountain camps. But her request for access was approved. Foot soldiers in civilian disguise met her in a remote village. At the edge of town they quickly changed into combat fatigues and began an eight-hour trek up rugged, mountainous terrain.

In her interviews, she came to know the rebel commander well. She watched him guard over younger soldiers and coolly run the camp. Night after night, while the others settled to sleep under the stars, she asked about his life, his loves and losses.

But he turned the questions back and asked about her, too. She told him of her childhood in Baltimore, her father, a biochemist who now teaches at Dartmouth, her mother and her sister, Katherine, an anthropologist who was born deaf and sat beside Ms. Harbury every day at school. She talked about her endless wandering, her younger brothers, Olin, a doctor, and Alex, a computer expert. She recalled her studies at Cornell, where she learned Chinese, then Harvard, where she learned law.

"He took me by the ankles and shook me out," she said. Then she listened as he talked, haltingly, of a childhood spent working "like a donkey" in the fields.

At 18 he ran away to join Gaspar Ilom, the son of a Nobel prize winner and leader of a new revolutionary army, the Organization of the People in Arms.

The revolution taught him to think for himself, he told her. Mr. Ilom taught him to read.

He left the camp early most mornings. But she awoke to subtle tokens of a deepening friendship -- fresh tortillas he had set aside for her. One night they kissed, but went no further. He told her, "Women are not toys."

The visit ended and she retraced the old grooves of her life, traveling between Texas and Mexico on $25 bus tickets and subsisting on the generosity of friends. For a year he smuggled notes to her through the underground. One explained that he was leaving for Mexico to take part in the peace talks. He suggested that they meet again.

They did and found that their unlikely connection had not dissolved. "We thought we needed to just knock this out of our heads," she said. "We had this insane relationship for about a month." It only drew them closer.

He worried she would be unfaithful. She worried he might die. They married on Sept. 25, 1991. Eight friends came to join that celebration. There was no priest or justice of the peace present. But in their minds, and under Texas law, it was a wedding. Ms. Harbury translated their vows from Spanish to English. "It was a side of Jennifer that I had never seen," said Emily Jones, an old friend who now teaches education at the University of Texas in Austin. Ms. Harbury had never seemed so happy.

Shortly after that the couple moved back to Mexico where they stayed in a rented apartment. There, she typed her notes for her book, and he vanished every day to confer about the peace effort. In the evenings they twined their legs together on the couch and sat in silence, reading. Tentatively, they explored the city and their growing bond. He danced, though he didn't like to. She cooked, though she hated to. One afternoon she drew a picture of the dashboard of her old Toyota truck on a large sheet of paper and taught him how to drive a stick shift.

"We were in love," Ms. Harbury said simply. "We hardly ever fought." Still, there were tensions and intrusions. Fighting continued unabated in Guatemala and day by day, Mr. Bamaca learned of friends and colleagues killed in that little-noticed war. Finally he said he had to go. "He was in agony," Ms. Harbury recalls. "I knew he had to leave." With strained cheerfulness, she told him they would meet again in several months. But he would not meet her gaze.

She left first, kissing him goodbye in their apartment and then going alone to New Hampshire where a college friend was terminally ill with cancer. Later, he packed up everything, she said, jamming their photographs and billets doux into a box that he buried at the border. He left a letter for her with the underground.

Months passed with no news. Then one day there was a call from Mexico. There was a problem, the voice on the phone said. Ms. Harbury should come back. She packed hurriedly and left. It was there, in a safe house outside the city, that she heard the news. There was a gunfight. He was gone.

Her college friend died not long after that. Then Ms. Harbury lost a child she had conceived in Mexico. The next year was a blur.

In 1992 a Guatemalan rebel who escaped from military detention to find sanctuary in Mexico testified that he had seen Mr. Bamaca alive, under torture. For two years she sought the truth. Scattered reports hinted that Commander Evarardo was still living. She wanted to believe it. But the Guatemalan military said he had died in battle and took her to one gravesite after another to inspect the remains of other soldiers and other brutal deaths.

Last week, in Washington, she got her answer and she wept. Now, all that remains is a proper burial.

HEADLINE: Long Road to Truth About Killings in Guatemala

BYLINE: By TIM WEINER

DATELINE: WASHINGTON, March 23

BODY:

In November President Clinton's national security adviser, Anthony Lake, told Jennifer Harbury, an American lawyer married to a Guatemalan guerrilla, that the United States had no information that her common-law husband was alive.

That was the truth, but not the whole truth.

A month earlier, provoked by a long hunger strike Ms. Harbury had conducted in front of the American Embassy in Guatemala, State Department officials began searching their files. From October to January, they made a series of discoveries that horrified them.

The Administration possessed secret documents linking a Guatemalan Army colonel who was a paid informer of the Central Intelligence Agency to the killings of Ms. Harbury's husband and of an American innkeeper in Guatemala. The files had been in the possession of the C.I.A. and the State Department since the Administration took office.

The C.I.A. has refused to comment on the case.

The files said the intelligence agent, Col. Julio Roberto Alpirez, became a C.I.A. informer in the 1980's. In 1989 he spent a year at an elite United States Army training program for foreign soldiers, the School of the Americas. He had overseen the 1990 killing of Michael DeVine, an American citizen who ran a hotel in the Guatemalan rain forest and apparently had stumbled onto a smuggling operation involving the Guatemalan military.

Colonel Alpirez was not dropped from the C.I.A.'s payroll until 1992, about the time he supervised the interrogation and killing of the leftist guerrilla, Efrain Bamaca Velasquez, Government officials said.

By late January, when the State Department and the National Security Council pieced together what the C.I.A. knew, a struggle erupted at the intelligence agencies, Government officials said. The Ambassador in Guatemala demanded the removal of the C.I.A.'s station chief, they said, and the National Security Council ordered a internal investigation at the intelligence agency.

The C.I.A. fought to stop disclosure of its relationship with the colonel in the Guatemalan military. Administration officials began to mistrust what the C.I.A. was saying about the case. They tried to find a way to release the information -- or at least to tell Ms. Harbury what they knew.

In the end, both sides lost: The information was disclosed on Wednesday by Representative Robert G. Torricelli, a New Jersey Democrat who is a member of the House Intelligence Committee.

The story of the strange case of Colonel Alpirez, what and when Administration officials knew about his role in the two killings, was provided by several officials from the White House and the intelligence agenices and members of Congress briefed by the C.I.A. Most asked for anonymity.

Colonel Alpirez first came to the United States in 1970 as an army cadet to receive combat training at the School of the Americas.

When he returned to the School of the Americas in 1989, to take the yearlong Command and General Staff course, he was already on the C.I.A. payroll, officials said.

He returned to Guatemala as a senior officer at a special-forces base in the northern town of Poptun. In June 1990 he crossed paths with Mr. DeVine, who ran an inn in Poptun. The encounter was fatal for Mr. DeVine, Government officials said.

Ms. Harbury's husband, Mr. Bamaca, who used the nom de guerre Comandante Edvardo, was captured by the Guatemalan military on March 12, 1992, tortured for an unknown time and killed. Colonel Alpirez was removed from the C.I.A. payroll around the time of the capture, Government officials said.

What happened next is in dispute.

Adm. William O. Studeman, the acting Director of Central Intelligence, said today that the C.I.A. had no information about the deaths of Mr. Bamaca or Mr. DeVine "at the time the deaths occurred."

But several members of Congress briefed by the C.I.A. said the agency's reports on the killing of Mr. Bamaca date from the summer and fall of 1992, and were not shared with senior diplomats.

On Oct. 19, 1994, as Ms. Harbury conducted her hunger strike in front of the Embassy in Guatemala, officials of National Security Council and State Department began searching their files on the case. They asked the C.I.A. for its records on Mr. Bamaca, which produced files. But when Mr. Lake briefed Ms. Harbury, he still did not know everything the C.I.A. knew about the case.

A few weeks later, someone thought to ask the C.I.A. for its files on "Comandante Edvardo" -- same man, different name. That request produced far more files, and spawned more distrust between the Administration and the C.I.A. Finally, on Jan. 25, 1995, the C.I.A. produced information that linked its agent, Colonel Alpirez, to the killings.

Now the State Department agonized over what to tell Ms. Harbury. On March 7, the American Ambassador in Guatemala, Marilyn McAfee, told her: "Bamaca is dead. I am convinced he is dead, but I do not know what happened to him."

But others knew: he had died on the orders of Colonel Alpirez.

HEADLINE: Shameful C.I.A. Secrets

BODY:

In 1990 Michael DeVine, an American who ran an inn in the Guatemalan rain forest, was mysteriously abducted and killed. In 1992 Efrain Bamaca Velasquez, a member of a guerrilla movement fighting the Guatemalan Government, was taken captive after a firefight and disappeared. His American wife, Jennifer Harbury, received word that he had been seen alive in a secret military prison and began trying to find out what happened to him. Now, it turns out, both were killed at the direction of a paid agent of the Central Intelligence Agency. Adding to the shame of these events for America is the fact that the man implicated in the killings was a Guatemalan colonel trained by the U.S. Army.

Ms. Harbury was given contrary reports of her husband's death. In frustration she staged a hunger strike in Guatemala City that finally embarrassed both Guatemalan and U.S. authorities into promises that they would pursue the case more energetically. But Ms. Harbury never found out what happened to her husband until Wednesday, when she was told by Representative Robert Torricelli.

Mr. Torricelli wrote a letter to the President protesting the C.I.A.'s methods and the secrecy that kept both it and other Government agencies from telling Ms. Harbury the truth. He rightly said that such information reveals an organization out of control. When a Federal agency pays people who kill U.S. citizens, and then lies about it, it underscores again the clear need for deep, comprehensive reform. The C.I.A. said yesterday that it had not improperly concealed information, but its slippery wording does nothing to undermine Mr. Torricelli's main points.

As The Times's Tim Weiner points out, the secrecy surrounding the fate of Ms. Harbury's husband did not stop with the C.I.A. itself. Other Government agencies -- most notably the State Department and the National Security Council -- and individuals were aware of what had happened to him and withheld the information.

Mr. Torricelli has asked President Clinton to request a Justice Department investigation into the activities of all Government agencies involved in the Harbury case. The President would do well to act on that suggestion, and to extend any inquiry to cover the case of Mr. DeVine, an apparently innocent U.S. citizen who was murdered by someone on the U.S. payroll.

The Clinton Administration can use this occasion to signal a new approach to covert operations. It can lay open all the facts of this case and make it clear that in the future rogue operators, who abuse their relationship with the United States, will be exposed rather than protected. It can announce that America will no longer train and encourage Latin American thugs. It can make an even stronger case for thorough, systemic reform of the C.I.A. to make it lean, honest, less wasteful and more accountable for the millions of taxpayer dollars it spends.

Paolo's welcome to talk to the two desk officers but am not sure there's any need to at this point; I've spoken secure to DCM GT and John Dawson in AND is doing the same with Emb Caracas with view to them informing us of this and other pertinent pol/legal context. I will make sure they're focusing on determining, inter alia, what the legal/treaty relationship between the two countries is. Thanks for your help. Would copy Paolo but can't find him in the FAIS directory.

John - DOJ/OIA advises that there are no/no outstanding charges pending in the U.S. with respect to the individual in question. I was unable to verify from L/T's files whether there is a bilateral extradition treaty in force between Guatemala and Venezuela. We can try the Library of Congress tomorrow. Alternatively, we might need to check with our respective Embassies in Guatemala and Caracas. Also, Treaties in Force indicates that Venezuela is not a party to the Montevideo multilateral extradition convention (although Guatemala is), so that appears to be a non-starter.

I will be at Justice all day Wed and Thurs for law enforcement meetings with Mexico. In my absence, Paolo DiRosa, who handles Venezuela, will follow up on these issues. Do you have any objection to his talking to Peg Willingham and the Venezuelan desk officer about checking with our Embassies? I'm not sure how closely held this information currently is. Thanks.

DEPARTMENT OF STATE
ARA/NEA-REARCS

A: THERE IS AN ONGOING INTENSE CRIMINAL INVESTIGATION OF THIS INCIDENT UNDERWAY. AS YOU KNOW, A 16-PERSON FBI TEAM HAS BEEN DISPATCHED TO HAITI AT THE REQUEST OF THE HAITIAN GOVERNMENT, AND OUR INVESTIGATORS ARE WORKING IN CLOSE COLLABORATION WITH HAITIAN AUTHORITIES.

WE DO NOT AS A MATTER OF COURSE COMMENT ON THE DETAILS OF SUCH AN INVESTIGATION. ANY FURTHER QUESTIONS REGARDING THE INVESTIGATION SHOULD BE DIRECTED TO THE DEPARTMENT OF JUSTICE.

-HAITI: PROLONGATION OF MISSION-

Q: THE WALL STREET JOURNAL REPORTS THE "PROBABILITY" THAT U.S. TROOPS WILL BE IN HAITI LONGER THAN ONE YEAR FROM NOW. WHAT COMMENT DO YOU HAVE?

A: U.S. TROOPS HAVE BEEN DEPLOYED TO HAITI PURSUANT TO UN SECURITY COUNCIL RESOLUTION 940, WHICH STIPULATES THAT UNMIH'S MISSION WILL END IN FEBRUARY 1996 WHEN PRESIDENT ARISTIDE'S SUCCESSOR IS DUE TO BE INAUGURATED. THERE ARE NO PLANS TO EXTEND THE MISSION BEYOND FEBRUARY 1996.

-HAITI: CLINTON VISIT-

Q: WHAT IS THE PRESIDENT'S SCHEDULE IN HAITI TODAY?

A: FOLLOWING AN ARRIVAL CEREMONY AT 8:45 AM AT THE PORT-AU-PRINCE AIRPORT, THE PRESIDENT MET WITH U.S. TROOPS AT WARRIOR BASE FOR MORE THAN AN HOUR. AT 11:15 AM, PRESIDENT ARISTIDE HOSTED A WELCOMING CEREMONY FOR PRESIDENT CLINTON OUTSIDE THE NATIONAL PALACE, AFTER WHICH THE TWO PRESIDENTS AND THE UN SECRETARY-GENERAL WERE TO MEET PRIVATELY AND THEN TAKE PART IN A RECEPTION INCLUDING PROMINENT HAITIANS AND VISITING DIGNITARIES. THIS WILL BE FOLLOWED BY THE MNF-UNMIH TRANSITION CEREMONY AT 2:00 PM, FOLLOWED BY A MEETING WITH THE MEMBERS OF THE PROVISIONAL ELECTORAL COUNCIL. IMMEDIATELY PRIOR TO HIS 7:00 PM DEPARTURE, THE PRESIDENT WILL MEET WITH AMBASSADOR SWING AND THE U.S. EMBASSY STAFF.

-HAITI: ACHIEVEMENTS OF MISSION-

Q: DESCRIBE THE ACHIEVEMENTS OF OUR MISSION IN HAITI, TO COUNTER STORIES IN THE PRESS THAT THE MISSION HAS BEEN DISAPPOINTING TO MANY HAITIANS. WHAT ABOUT THE QUESTIONS ON HUMAN RIGHTS ISSUES WHICH ARISTIDE RAISED IN HIS INTERVIEW YESTERDAY WITH TWO JOURNALISTS?

A: IT'S ONLY NATURAL THAT THE INITIAL EXCITEMENT AND ANTICIPATION WHICH SURROUNDED PRESIDENT ARISTIDE'S RETURN FROM EXILE IN OCTOBER WOULD GIVE WAY AFTER A WHILE TO MORE SOBER ASSESSMENTS OF THE DAUNTING CHALLENGES WHICH THE COUNTRY FACES.

PRESIDENT ARISTIDE, SEEKING TO RESTRAIN EXPECTATIONS, HAS ASSERTED THE GOAL OF MOVING THE PEOPLE OF HAITI FROM

"MISERY TO POVERTY WITH DIGNITY." POLITICALLY, FOR ALL INTENTS AND PURPOSES, HAITI HAD BEEN WITHOUT A FUNCTIONING GOVERNMENT FOR OVER THREE YEARS, AS MILITARY STRONGMEN USED SIMPLE REPRESSION TO STAY IN POWER. THE ECONOMY WAS A WRECK: PER CAPITA GNP, ALREADY THE LOWEST IN THIS HEMISPHERE, WAS BROUGHT DOWN EVEN FURTHER BY THE POLITICAL CRISIS AND THE INTERNATIONAL EMBARGO.

WE HAVE SEEN POSITIVE, HOPEFUL DEVELOPMENTS ACROSS THE BOARD SINCE THE LEGITIMATE, ELECTED CENTRAL GOVERNMENT

WAS REINSTALLED THANKS TO THE EFFORTS OF THE MULTINATIONAL FORCE. THE COUNTRY'S DEMOCRATIC INSTITUTIONS ARE RETURNING TO LIFE: PARLIAMENT PASSED A LAW ESTABLISHING A CIVILIAN POLICE FORCE, A NATIONAL BUDGET (THE FIRST IN FIVE YEARS) AND AN ELECTORAL LAW CALLING FOR LEGISLATIVE AND LOCAL ELECTIONS THIS SPRING. ARISTIDE HAS FORMED A BROADLY REPRESENTATIVE CABINET AND THE VARIOUS MINISTRIES, ALTHOUGH THEY ARE BUILDING UP FROM NOTHING, ARE ALL AT WORK ON THEIR MOST IMMEDIATE PRIORITIES.

THE U.S. JUSTICE DEPARTMENT'S TRAINING OF A NEW CIVILIAN POLICE FORCE IS WELL UNDERWAY. THIS FORCE WILL GRADUALLY REPLACE THE INTERIM POLICE STARTING IN JUNE. THE U.S. IS ALSO WORKING CLOSELY WITH HAITI'S ENERGETIC JUSTICE MINISTER ON REFORMING THE JUSTICE SECTOR. THESE TWIN EFFORTS STAND TO HAVE A NOTICEABLE IMPACT ON LAW AND ORDER AND HAITIANS' SENSE OF PERSONAL SECURITY, AND WE ARE CONFIDENT THEY WILL SEE THE CRIME RATE FALL.

NOTWITHSTANDING SPORADIC INCIDENTS OF POLITICALLY

MOTIVATED VIOLENCE LIKE THE DUROCHER BERTIN ASSASSINATION EARLIER THIS WEEK, THE HUMAN RIGHTS SITUATION HAS IMPROVED ACROSS THE BOARD SINCE THE COUP LEADERS WERE OUSTED. MOST IMPORTANTLY, THE FORMERLY REPRESSIVE HAITIAN ARMY HAS BEEN EFFECTIVELY DISBANDED AND THEIR PARAMILITARY ALLIES DISARMED AND DISBANDED. CONTRARY TO PRESS REPORTS, THE MNF HAS DEMONSTRATED BY RANDOM SWEEPS AND OTHER MEANS THAT THERE ARE RELATIVELY FEW WEAPONS ON THE STREETS NOW. OVER 30,000 WEAPONS HAVE BEEN TAKEN OUT OF CIRCULATION SINCE THE MNF ARRIVED IN SEPTEMBER.

PROGRESS IS ALSO EVIDENT ON THE ECONOMIC FRONT: ARISTIDE HAS SIGNED A STANDBY AGREEMENT WITH THE INTERNATIONAL MONETARY FUND AND A PRIVATIZATION AGREEMENT WITH THE WORLD BANK. THE HAITIAN GOVERNMENT HAS DEVELOPED A COHERENT PROGRAM CALLING FOR ECONOMIC AND SOCIAL REFORM. AND INTERNATIONAL AID IS ON THE WAY: ON JANUARY 31, A GROUP OF INTERNATIONAL DONORS MEETING IN PARIS SURPASSED EXPECTATIONS BY PLEDGING UP TO 1.2 BILLION U.S. DOLLARS IN SUPPORT OF HAITI'S EMERGENCY RECOVERY NEEDS OVER THE NEXT 18 MONTHS. WE HAVE EVERY EXPECTATION THAT INCREASED LEVELS OF DOMESTIC AND FOREIGN INVESTMENT WILL FOLLOW, AND HAITIANS WILL SOON BEGIN TO SEE NOTICEABLE IMPROVEMENT IN THEIR STANDARD OF LIVING.

-HAITI: UPDATE-

Q: PROVIDE AN UPDATE ON THE UPCOMING ELECTIONS, U.S. TROOP LEVELS, AND UNMIH TROOP LEVELS.

A: THE FIRST ROUND OF PARLIAMENTARY AND LOCAL ELECTIONS

IS SCHEDULED TO TAKE PLACE JUNE 4, WITH RUN-OFFS AS NEEDED JUNE 25. VOTER REGISTRATION BEGAN ON MARCH 26.

AS OF MARCH 30, THERE WERE 4,830 U.S. TROOPS IN HAITI AND 1,864 TROOPS FROM EIGHT OTHER COUNTRIES PARTICIPATING IN THE MULTINATIONAL FORCE.

QUESTIONS ON UNMIH TROOP LEVELS SHOULD BE REFERRED TO THE UN.

-HAITI: EMMANUEL CONSTANT-

Q: WHAT IS THE STATUS OF FRAPH LEADER EMMANUEL CONSTANT? IS HE IN THE U.S.? WHY ARE YOU ALLOWING HIM TO STAY HERE?

DEPARTMENT OF STATE
ARA/NEA REARCS

A: ACTING PURSUANT TO THE IMMIGRATION AND NATIONALITY ACT, THE SECRETARY DETERMINED YESTERDAY THAT THE CONTINUED PRESENCE AND ACTIVITIES OF EMMANUEL CONSTANT IN THE UNITED STATES WOULD HAVE POTENTIALLY SERIOUS ADVERSE FOREIGN POLICY CONSEQUENCES FOR THE UNITED STATES AND WOULD COMPROMISE A COMPELLING UNITED STATES FOREIGN POLICY INTEREST. THIS DECISION WAS TAKEN IN LIGHT OF FRAPH'S RECORD AS AN ILLEGITIMATE PARAMILITARY ORGANIZATION WHICH WE CONSIDER RESPONSIBLE FOR NUMEROUS HUMAN RIGHTS VIOLATIONS DURING THE COUP PERIOD, AND OUT OF CONCERN FOR THE FRAGILE DEMOCRATIC PROCESS IN HAITI.

THIS FORMAL DETERMINATION CONCERNING CONSTANT WILL PROVIDE THE BASIS FOR INITIATING DEPORTATION PROCEEDINGS ONCE THE IMMIGRATION AND NATURALIZATION SERVICE IS ABLE

TO LOCATE HIM. FURTHER QUESTIONS ON THIS SHOULD BE REFERRED TO THAT SERVICE.

-MEXICO: COMMENT ON D'AMATO AMENDMENT?-

Q: WHAT IS YOUR COMMENT ON THE AMENDMENT INTRODUCED BY SEN. ALFONSE D'AMATO TO CAP DISBURSEMENTS FROM THE ESF AT 5 BILLION FOR ANY COUNTRY IN ONE YEAR?

A: ASSISTING MEXICO OVERCOME ITS ECONOMIC DIFFICULTIES IS IN OUR VITAL ECONOMIC AND STRATEGIC INTERESTS

OUR CONDITIONAL FINANCIAL ASSISTANCE PACKAGE HAS RECEIVED THE STRONG SUPPORT OF THE BIPARTISAN LEADERSHIP OF THE HOUSE AND SENATE.

MEXICO HAS IMPLEMENTED VERY TOUGH AUSTERITY MEASURES WHICH REPRESENT THE BEST CHANCE FOR MEXICO'S ECONOMY TO RECOVER AND RESUME GROWTH.

OUR ASSISTANCE AND THAT OF THE INTERNATIONAL COMMUNITY ARE KEY TO THE RECOVERY EFFORT. THIS IS NOT THE TIME TO ABANDON THE EFFORT.

-GUATEMALA: PRESSING FOR ANSWERS-

Q: WHAT IS BEING DONE TO GET TO THE FACTS IN THE BAMACA AND DEVINE CASES?

A: AS SECRETARY CHRISTOPHER TOLD THE HOUSE INTERNATIONAL RELATIONS COMMITTEE YESTERDAY, WE SYMPATHIZE WITH MS.

HARBURY AND THE FAMILY OF MICHAEL DEVINE, AND UNDERSTAND THEIR FRUSTRATION AND PAIN.

BECAUSE THIS ADMINISTRATION IS COMMITTED TO DETERMINING ALL RELEVANT INFORMATION PERTAINING TO THESE CASES, THE PRESIDENT HAS ASKED THE INTELLIGENCE OVERSIGHT BOARD TO CONDUCT A GOVERNMENT-WIDE REVIEW OF THE FACTS AND ALLEGATIONS SURROUNDING THE DEATH OF MR. DEVINE AND THE DISAPPEARANCE OF MR. BAMACA, AND TO MAKE RECOMMENDATIONS BASED ON ITS FINDINGS.

AS YOU KNOW, THE INTELLIGENCE OVERSIGHT BOARD IS COMPOSED OF TRUSTWORTHY AND DISTINGUISHED CITIZENS OUTSIDE THE GOVERNMENT WHO ARE QUALIFIED ON THE BASIS OF ACHIEVEMENT, EXPERIENCE, AND INDEPENDENCE.

OUR ACTIONS WILL BE GUIDED BY THREE BASIC PRINCIPLES, AS OUTLINED BY SECRETARY CHRISTOPHER: GET THE FACTS, CALL FOR APPROPRIATE ACTION WHEN THE FACTS ARE IN, AND MAKE AVAILABLE ALL THE INFORMATION THAT IS POSSIBLE.

WE ALSO HAVE PRESSED GUATEMALAN GOVERNMENT AUTHORITIES TO CONDUCT THE KIND OF THOROUGH AND CREDIBLE INVESTIGATIONS THAT WOULD RESULT IN PROSECUTION OF ALL RESPONSIBLE PARTIES. THERE ARE PARTS OF THIS STORY THAT CAN ONLY BE CLARIFIED BY THE GUATEMALAN GOVERNMENT. WE ARE PREPARED TO COOPERATE WITH THEM, AS APPROPRIATE.

2. PRM PRESS GUIDANCE OF MARCH 31, 1995:

-CUBA: TRANSPORT OF CUBAN REFUGEES TO THE U.S.-

Q. ARE CUBANS APPROVED FOR ADMISSION TO THE U.S. THROUGH THE IN-COUNTRY REFUGEE PROGRAM IN HAVANA BEING FLOWN TO THE U.S. VIA MEXICO?

A. YES. ARRANGEMENTS HAVE BEEN MADE FOR CUBANS APPROVED FOR ADMISSION TO THE U.S. UNDER THE IN-COUNTRY REFUGEE PROCESSING PROGRAM IN HAVANA TO FLY ON AIR CARIBE FLIGHTS TO CANCUN, MEXICO, WHERE THEY WILL CONNECT WITH AMERICAN AIRLINES FLIGHTS TO MIAMI.

THE FIRST GROUP IS EXPECTED TO LEAVE HAVANA SOMETIME NEXT WEEK.

Q. WHY IS THIS NECESSARY?

A. THIS IS THE MOST COST-EFFECTIVE WAY FOR THE REFUGEES TO REACH THE UNITED STATES AND IS NECESSARY BECAUSE OF THE EXCESSIVE TRANSPORTATION COSTS CHARGED FOR FLIGHTS UNDER THE CONTROL OF THE CUBAN TRAVEL AGENCY HAVANATUR.

WE HAVE EXPRESSED TO THE CUBAN GOVERNMENT OUR SERIOUS CONCERNS ABOUT THESE EXORBITANT FARES, PARTICULARLY IN VIEW OF OUR JOINT COMMITMENT TO FACILITATE LEGAL MIGRATION.

Q. HOW MANY APPROVED REFUGEES ARE AWAITING TRANSPORTATION TO THE U.S.?

A. OVER 6,000 CUBANS HAVE BEEN APPROVED FOR ADMISSION TO THE UNITED STATES UNDER THE IN-COUNTRY REFUGEE PROCESSING PROGRAM SINCE THE SEPTEMBER 9 MIGRATION AGREEMENT WITH CUBA. MORE THAN HALF OF THESE ARE NOW TRAVEL READY.

Q. HOW MANY HAVE ARRIVED IN THE U.S. SINCE THE SEPTEMBER 9 AGREEMENT?

A. SOME 600 ARRIVED IN THE U.S. SINCE THE SEPTEMBER 9 AGREEMENT AND PRIOR TO THE INSTITUTION OF THE EXCESSIVE TRANSPORTATION COSTS BY HAVANTUR AT THE END OF LAST YEAR.

CHRISTOPHER

ACTION MEMORANDUM

S/S

TO: The Secretary

FROM: ARA - Alexander F. Watson

SUBJECT: Guatemala: Next Steps in Bamaca and Devine Cases

ISSUES FOR DECISION

(1) Whether to approve the strategy outlined below for pursuing our interests in the human rights cases of Michael Devine and Efrain Bamaca; and (2) whether to send a memorandum to the President informing him of our strategy.

ESSENTIAL FACTORS

Publicly aired charges that Guatemalan army Colonel Julio Roberto Alpirez was a paid informant of the CIA at the time of the Devine and Bamaca killings have created new difficulties for our ongoing efforts to resolve the Bamaca case in particular. Alpirez is flatly denying the charge and continues to deny any culpability in either the Devine or Bamaca case. In a March 29 demarche to ARA, Guatemalan Ambassador Mulet insisted that, in order to pursue the Bamaca case effectively, his government requires information about the alleged USG relationship with Alpirez. He also sought more information about Alpirez' alleged role in the Bamaca killing than we have provided so far, trying to shift to us responsibility for production of evidence.

Our response to Mulet emphasized that allegations about Alpirez and the USG in no way diminish Guatemala's responsibility to investigate and prosecute as appropriate. We also said that Ambassador McAfee's demarches of November 11 and February 6 give the GOG substantial information with which to pursue the case. With respect to Devine, we told Mulet Guatemala must secure the rendition and imprisonment of convicted army Captain Hugo Contreras.

Along with five enlisted men, Contreras was convicted and sentenced to prison in May 1993, but he was allowed to escape from military custody the same day and remains a fugitive. Recent intelligence indicates he is in Venezuela. DIA is trying to determine his exact location but must proceed with caution to avoid his taking flight. Alpirez helped cover up

Devine's murder but avoided prosecution for his role. Press allegations that he ordered Devine's and Bamaca's murders are not borne out by intelligence reports, although he likely played a direct role in Bamaca's interrogation.

Issues Raised

These latest developments come against a backdrop of five years of USG effort on the Devine case and two years of intensive focus on Bamaca, as well as similar efforts relating to other cases involving Americans, including the 1985 murders by civil defense patrollers of Nicholas Blake and Griffin Davi and the 1989 abduction and abuse of Sister Dianna Ortiz by arm personnel. Embassy and Department officials have assisted Devine's widow and Jennifer Harbury, repeatedly urged the GOG to take action, and encouraged UN involvement in investigating Bamaca's disappearance. Assistant Secretary Shattuck also pressed the Guatemalan government on the Bamaca case, and raised other human rights cases, including that of Michael Devine, during his November 1994 trip to Guatemala.

In the Devine case, the Department of Justice, which the CIA consulted following the acquisition in October 1991 of intelligence suggesting that Alpirez was directly involved in Devine's murder, ultimately determined that it did not have a law enforcement interest. As the fundamental problem in both cases has been the unwillingness of civilian authorities to press the military to make full disclosure, we have not previously considered providing official investigative assistance.

In light of the new situation, however, it is possible tha providing FBI investigative assistance might aid Guatemalan authorities to find a face-saving exit from the corner in whic they have painted themselves, as well as uncovering new information. After the DOJ agreed March 30 to consider providing such assistance, a reluctant Guatemalan Foreign Minister de Vielman told me that she would consider the idea. We are following this up.

We are continually reviewing any information provided to by other USG agencies with the intention of providing the GOG additional information that would be helpful. If you should separately decide, in the context of any internal Department review of these cases to declassify a large number of documents, an added benefit would be our ability to make these documents available to the Guatemalan government. They would also be available to the Historical Clarification Commission (similar to El Salvador's Truth Commission), which will begin work once a final peace accord is signed. We do not believe, however, that declassification of documents in hand would substantially add to the information already provided to the GOG on Alpirez' alleged involvement in the two cases.

Immediate Steps

To pressure and assist the Guatemalan government to undertake more thorough investigations and aggressive action, over the near term, we propose that:

-- Ambassador McAfee again demarche President De Leon, responding formally to Guatemala's March 29 demarche. As we did March 29, Ambassador McAfee would insist that our policy of neither confirming nor denying allegations involving intelligence is no impediment to a good faith investigation.

-- We offer FBI police-to-police cooperation in the Bamaca case. (That, too, is reflected in the instructions to Ambassador McAfee.)

-- You send President De Leon a letter, which McAfee would deliver, reiterating our continuing strong interest in seeing justice done in these cases. A cable instructing McAfee and containing the proposed letter is at Tab 1.

-- The intelligence community be asked to redouble efforts to collect additional intelligence on the Devine (e.g. location of Contreras) and Bamaca cases (INR to take this action).

-- We continue to make the pursuit of justice in these cases central issue in our relationship with the GOG. We must deliver the message in every available channel that these cases must be credibly investigated and resolved.

We also suggest you inform the President of the steps we are taking. A memorandum is at Tab 2.

Looking Ahead

We also need to look ahead, should these efforts not bear fruit, to what further steps we might take. In fact, we have previously given thorough consideration to a wide range of punitive measures. But the possibilities are not promising. The most appropriate tool -- military assistance -- has been suspended since 1990. On March 10, we announced the suspension of Guatemalan participation in our (already small) IMET program in the United States for the remainder of 1995. We could cut off the remaining courses (to be conducted in Guatemala) but should not anticipate that such action would constitute severe pressure. We have judged that curtailing our development assistance, dedicated to democracy-strengthening projects and basic human needs, would be self-defeating and mean-spirited. Trade sanctions would be disproportionate, would hurt millions of poor Guatemalans and would not directly affect the military leadership in any event.

Our best leverage probably remains the desire of all Guatemalans for a full and productive relationship with the United States. We will need to continue to drive home the message in all official contacts, at all levels and in a variety of channels, that unresolved human rights cases remain a major impediment to the development of that relationship.

In the ongoing UN-mediated peace process we also have a more positive tool. The U.S. is one of six international "Friends" of that process. Nothing would do more to improve Guatemala's human rights situation overall than ending its thirty-four-year old internal conflict. Talks made encouraging progress in the first six months of 1994 but bogged down in the second half -- in large measure owing to guerrilla intransigence. Prospects for reaching a final accord before Guatemalan elections later this year are uncertain at best, though the parties signed a subsidiary accord on the agenda item on indigenous rights in Mexico City March 31. INR believes continuing turmoil resulting from the Bamaca and Devine cases could further set back prospects for a peace accord.

The peace process has produced one quite significant result: a UN Verification Mission in Guatemala (MINUGUA), whose 245 human rights and police monitors are working throughout the country. MINUGUA's first hard-hitting report essentially corroborated the negative findings of our own human rights report. By accepting so large and extensive an international monitoring presence, the GOG has opened the door to much-needed scrutiny of its human rights record. At our request, MINUGUA is monitoring the GOG investigation into the Bamaca case. That applies at least some pressure for that investigation to be vigorous. We are planning to provide MINUGUA with $500,000 to enhance its police monitoring capability.

1. confidential - entire text.

2. On Friday, March 31, ARA senior policy adviser Richard Nuccio dined with four members of COPAZ: Hector Rosada, Antonio Arenales, and Major Generals Pineda and Balconi. He was not accompanied by embassy staff. Nuccio again congratulate COPAZ on their success in the peace process and reviewed a number of issues with them.

3. Although cordial, the conversation was strained at several points and lacked the usual give-and-take to which Nuccio is accustomed in his conversations with them. They were not interested in his views on the peace process or the URNG, something about which they nearly always ask.

4. Both Rosada and Arenales reminded Nuccio that in his last trip to Guatemala in October 1994 he had promised to visit more frequently to avoid the kind of misunderstandings that had resulted from a memo written for Foreign Minister de Vielman after a meeting at the UN General Assembly. Septel X

5. Nuccio acknowledged that he had not fulfilled this pledge, but said that he doubted the time was appropriate to visit Guatemala now. They agreed when Nuccio said that continuing on to Guatemala from Mexico as he usually did would detract from the success of the peace process and draw attention again to the Bamaca/Devine controversy. He told them that Ambassador McAfee appropriately referred questions about intelligence aspects of the cases to Washington, but that Nuccio was from Washington and would not be able to do that. Nuccio also suggested obliquely that he might find himself in the position of disagreeing publicly with certain recent statements of President De Leon about particular individuals and that he did not wish to do so.

6. Generals Pineda and Balconi were especially non-communicative. They chatted throughout the dinner, but when the Bamaca/Devine subject arose General Pineda was vocal in his criticism of Rep. Torricelli and of those who "have been fooled" by Ms. Harbury's story. He asked at one point why anyone would believe her. Nuccio replied that that was because her version of events was more credible than that of the GOG.

7. Nuccio also reviewed with COPAZ the decisions of President Clinton to order a National Intelligence Oversight Board examination of the case and to sanction any officials responsible for misleading the public or other government agencies. He also suggested that one option available to the USG was to conduct a massive declassification effort similar to what had been done by the USG in the case of El Salvador. Antonio Arenales commented with vehemence that any review by the NIOB would reveal nothing about Guatemala because "no one in Guatemala has collaborated with the CIA." Nuccio merely replied that we would have to wait for the conclusions of the Oversight Board.

8. Nuccio reviewed with COPAZ their views as to the next steps in the peace process; they shared the same understanding as the URNG. They told Nuccio that they expected to be in Washington soon to consult with the World Bank. Nuccio remarked that the State Department would be pleased to assist their visit in any way it could and that, even though there might be some difficult moments, it was important for them to visit Washington. Nuccio also asked them to inform him with sufficient notice to arrange a repeat of a dinner he had organized for Rosada nearly a decade ago when he first began to visit the United States professionally. Nuccio concluded the evening's conversation by regretting again that he did not expect to be in Guatemala soon. He asked Rosada, however, to advise him when he thought a visit would be useful and to never hesitate to communicate to Nuccio through Ambassador McAfee that a discrete or more public visit would be useful for the GOG or the peace process.

9. Comment: There were no confrontations between COPAZ and any representatives of the USG at the ceremonies in Mexico, but events of recent weeks have clearly chilled relations, especially with the representatives of the armed forces on COPAZ who are among those most convinced of the need for change and peace in Guatemala. Regardless of the merits of the steps taken to eliminate IMET and otherwise express directly USG dissatisfaction with the military, we now have little to say to them. Progressive elements of the armed forces have been a key element of support for the peace process until now; the process will have to draw strength from other sources, perhaps CACIF, the group of Friends, or other internal actors. Even these two progressive officers, who have had more contact with the international community than the vast majority of the officer corps, are resisting the message that impunity must end. \\

Secretary Christopher that the USG would be as open as possible with the American people about these cases, and by President Clinton that any [illegible] officials would be punished. He told them that when all this information was made public, they would see that the conduct of the State Department had been professional and appropriate throughout. He also shared his belief that, within the limits imposed by our laws about the use of classified material, the State Department had shared with Jennifer the conclusions that she now accepted: that Bamaca had been captured alive, that he was interrogated by the Guatemalan army, and probably killed.

4. ORPA commander Gaspar Ilom responded that he wished to underline that the comandancia had always believed that Nuccio was acting in good faith on this issue and that he had done my best to help Jennifer. He repeated the comments made before that her cause was not intended as a criticism of the United States.

5. Negotiation process -- Nuccio asked the comandancia what they understood to be the next steps in the process. They responded that they had received that afternoon from the ASC its documents on economic and social questions and that each party would present its documents to the UN moderator around April 10. From that point, the UN would prepare its own draft to submit to the parties within ten days.

5. Nuccio asked what timetable the URNG had for the next phase of the process. Pablo Monsanto responded that this round was surely one of the most difficult. When asked if that meant some five months of negotiations, he merely smiled.

6. Elections -- Nuccio asked when the electoral platform first discussed by the URNG with me in February would be made public. With great pride Ilom said that it was nearly ready and that it was a "modern and progressive" document. Nuccio told them that he looked forward to seeing it and was also interested in their views about what minimal conditions they required for participation in the elections, something for which he had asked in January. Ilom responded that he would fax Nuccio some thoughts on this as well. Monsanto mentioned that the comandancia would meet shortly with a representative of a Guatemalan political party

1. confidential - entire text.

2. On Friday, March 31, 1995 ARA senior policy adviser Richard Nuccio met with the four commanders of the URNG. He was not accompanied by embassy staff. After congratulating them again on the signing of the indigenous rights accord that morning, he moved on to a number of other topics.

3. Bamaca/Devine Cases -- Nuccio reviewed with the comandancia the decisions of President Clinton to order the National Intelligence Oversight Board to review the actions of various federal agencies with respect to these two cases. He also informed them of the statements by

7. MINUGUA -- Nuccio asked for their opinion of the first MINUGUA report and their relations with MINUGUA. They said that although they had experienced doubts about the effectiveness of MINUGUA during its first three months they had noticed an important change in its operations when it deployed fully throughout the country. Both Ilom and Moran praised the report for its quality and, when asked, said that they agreed with its conclusions and recommendations.

8. Nuccio questioned Moran (EGP) about an armed incident between MINUGUA and a group of EGP fighters. Moran seemed somewhat defensive and offered a /personal/ opinion that a scheduled meeting between the URNG and MINUGUA to review this incident would demonstrate that the MINUGUA members had made an /error/ in seeking to approach the group directly. [redacted]

9. Nuccio then reminded Ilom (ORPA) that MINUGUA's report had criticized "war taxes" as a violation by the URNG. He then demarched Ilom about the American-owned finca described in reftel X. Ilom responded that he would be glad to show Nuccio the letter distributed to this and "about fifty other fincas." When Nuccio saw the letter, he would see that this was not properly speaking "war taxes," but rather "an invitation to collaborate with the URNG in building peace." Nuccio responded that he would be glad to receive the letter or any other information related to this incident. However, the same owner of this finca had received an earlier "invitation" to which he had not responded. That failure to respond had resulted in the burning of the finca. Nuccio expressed doubts, therefore, that the owner viewed this letter as an invitation he was free to refuse. At this point Monsanto laughed loudly and Ilom, somewhat embarrassed, agreed that this needed further investigation. He promised to send me a formal reply to the concerns expressed.

10. Comment: The URNG was in good spirits and elated about the signing of the accord. They also appeared tired and pale, especially Ilom, who had just overcome a long bout of bronchitis. They see the uproar in the US over the Bamaca/Devine cases as of great advantage to them. It is not inconceivable that some of them recognize that the difficulties of the De Leon government not only advantage them in the talks, but may mean that this government will be the best partner they are likely to have for a final peace settlement. \\

UNITED STATES POLICY TOWARD GUATEMALA: THE CASES OF MICHAEL DEVINE AND EFRAIN BAMACA

April 5, 1995

Review Authority: MOSKOWITZ, SAM

Mr. Chairman:

I welcome this opportunity to appear before you and your colleagues on the Senate Select Committee on Intelligence to discuss United States policy in Guatemala and the human rights cases of Michael Devine and Efrain Bamaca. You're doing the right thing to conduct these hearings. It is important to get the facts out -- to the Congress, to the public and to the families of human rights victims.

That is precisely the purpose of the President and Secretary of State Christopher. As you know, the President has asked the Intelligence Oversight Board (IOB) to conduct a thorough review of any and all aspects of the allegations associated with and the policy issues raised by these two cases. The IOB will determine the facts surrounding these cases and make recommendations. As the Secretary stated before the Congress last week, whatever disciplinary or other action may be appropriate will be taken. Finally, the Administration will provide to the American people as much information about the review as possible. The Bureau of Inter-American Affairs that I head has already recommended the fullest disclosure possible.

Mr. Chairman, promotion of human rights abroad has long been a central aspect of American foreign policy. The responsibility to protection United States citizens abroad is equally compelling. We take both duties very seriously and this statement therefore deals in large part with how the Department and our embassy in Guatemala discharged those responsibilities in the two cases at hand. Your staff has indicated, howver, that an overview of United States policy in Guatemala -- and how it has evolved over time -- would be helpful. Let me do that before turning to the cases of Michael Devine and Efrain Bamaca.

Overview of U.S. Policy in Guatemala

When the Central American crisis erupted in Nicaragua and El Salvador in the late 1970's, our relations with Guatemala were troubled. For much of the previous two decades Guatemala had been under military rule as it fought a guerrilla insurgency that had grown out of dissident elements from within the military itself. The insurgency was largely rural but in several periods it demonstrated significant capability to carry out attacks in Guatemala City itself. In 1968, for example, guerrillas assassinated U.S. Ambassador John Gordon Mein in downtown Guatemala City.

The United States had provided substantial assistance to Guatemala during the Alliance for Progress (figure available?). There, as elsewhere in Central America, we were seeking to promote the development of democratic institutions and broad-based economic growth. We also sought to stimulate regional economic integration. Promotion of greater respect for human rights became a particular concern under the Carter Administration. The emphasis on human rights and the conditionality the United States placed on military assistance in particular stimulated a nationalistic reaction in Guatemala, leading its government in 1977 to reject our military aid. It would be restored until nearly a decade later.

In the late 1970's and early 1980's, the guerrilla insurgency acquired much larger dimensions. It was met by a brutal counter-insurgency campaign carried out under a succession of military leaders: Laugerud Garcia (1974-78); Lucas Garcia (1978-1982); and Rios Montt (1982-83). Large-scale out-migration began during this period, much of it taking refuge in Mexico, many of the migrants continuing to the United States. Several hundred thousand Guatemalans who were uprooted by the war reside in the United States today; some 100,000 have pending asylum claims. Human rights abuses throughout this period were pervasive and are well-documented in the annual reports of the Department and in those of non-governmental organizations. It was under Rios Montt that the military formed community based civil defense patrols (PACs) and armed the nearly half million Indian peasants who made them up. In 1983 Rios Montt was overthrown by the Guatemalan Army itself. His Defense Minister, General Mejia, was named head of state and moved to hold constituent assembly elections the following year.

Following adoption of a new constitution in 1985, Guatemala held free and fair elections, won by the Christian Democratic candidate, Vinicio Cerezo. During the next eight years, between 1985-1992, we provided Guatemala approximately 936 million dollars of what was overwhelmingly economic aid. (Desk: Find out how much was military) This was a significant amount of aid but, for purposes of comparison, in the same period we gave $2.5 billion dollars to El Salvador and $1.175 billion to Honduras. In terms of aid per capita, the disproportionality was even more pronounced, as Guatemala is a nation of ten million people, compared to El Salvador's five and Honduras' three. I think it is accurate to say that during the 1980's we did not have the degree of involvement and engagement in Guatemala that characterized our engagement in El Salvador or Nicaragua.

When Cerezo took office in January 1986, a regional diplomatic effort spearheaded by Mexico, known as the Contadora Process, had been underway for nearly three years. It was about to give way to an all-Central American effort -- the Esquipulas Process. Both diplomatic efforts were aimed at bringing the Central American insurgencies to an end through peaceful negotiations. The Esquipulas Process produced a series of agreements beginning in 1987 that provided the framework for free elections in Nicaragua in 1990 and the resulting demobilization of the Nicaraguan resistance. Peace negotiations had begun on a separate track in El Salvador in 1984; they eventually culminated in the 1992 comprehensive accords that ended that conflict. President Cerezo initiated talks with the Guatemalan guerrilla umbrella organization -- the URNG -- in 1987. Those talks made only limited progress but were continued and made better progress under President Serrano, elected in 1990. It was during Serrano's term, during the last year of the Bush Administration, that the United States initiated direct contacts with the URNG. Those contacts have continued during the Clinton Administration, when at the request of the Guatemalan Government and the URNG, the United States joined five other governments to constitute a so-called Group of Friends of the Peace Process.

Democratically elected, President Serrano betrayed his oath of office to uphold the constitution and attempted to dissolve the Congress and Supreme Court on May 25, 1993. In the ensuing twelve-day crisis, the Clinton Administration worked closely with the Organization of American States, other interested governments and with key sectors of Guatemalan society itself to produce a peaceful and constitutional outcome. The result was the election by the Guatemalan Congress of Ramiro De Leon Carpio, the widely respected Human Rights Ombudsman. It was our judgment at the conclusion of the crisis that the Guatemalan military had acted with considerable civic responsibility. In particular, the military had backed the finding of Guatemala's constitutional court that the actions of Serrano and his vice president were unconstitutional.

De Leon's selection and the role of the military during the crisis gave us considerable hope that Guatemala could move to consolidate its democracy, improve respect for human rights and to end its insurgency through negotiations. Nothing in our view would have a more dramatic and immediately favorable effect on the human rights situation than an end to the conflict and, with the aid resources available to us declining rapidly as a result of the fiscal austerity we were facing here, our policy placed considerable emphasis on that goal.

In late 1993 the government and URNG resumed talks and in January 1994 agreed to a new framework agreement and timetable for concluding the talks. Under the new framework the talks were moderated by the United Nations and the Friends were given a supporting role. We appointed a special representative to the Friends Group to give our own support emphasis and focus.

Under the calendar, the parties laid out a schedule of issues to be negotiated and set the end of 1994 as the date for a comprehensive agreement. Talks made excellent progress during the first half of 1994. Three accords were particularly noteworthy. A human rights agreement reached in March last year provided for a United Nations human rights verification mission, which has now deployed some 250 human rights monitors throughout Guatemala. The accord also provides that the Human Rights Ombudsman has the responsibility to verify that service in the Civil Defense Patrols is voluntary and to determine whether PAC members have committed human rights abuses. The Government declares it will not support htese patrols or arm new volunteer civil defense committees once peace is obtained.

Acceptance by Guatemala and its military of this international presence was in our view a hopeful sign of Guatemala's growing desire to abide by internationally accepted norms of human rights. The Guatemalan government and the URNG also reached an accords on aid to persons displaced by the war, which is being implemented, and for a Historical Clarification Commission. The latter accord provoked controversy. The commission will begin to function only after a comprehensive agreement is reached. It will have the mandate to report on human rights violations on both sides during the war but it does not have the authority to assign individual responsibility and its findings are not to be used for prosecutions.

Partly owing to the adverse reaction to this accord from within its own ranks, the URNG suspended talks in June, 1994. They did not resume until last October. Progress thereafter was slow but last week, in Mexico City, the parties did sign a new agreement concerning the rights of Guatemala's indigenous population and the parties are now attempting to reach a final agreement by a target date of this August. That is an ambitious goal, especially as Guatemala holds presidential elections in November and the De Leon transitional presidency is drawing to a close. But the Clinton Administration believes that the peace talks still offer the most concrete hope for ending the last of Central America's wars and for bringing about a lasting improvement in respect for human rights in Guatemala. A small but symbolic step that we took was to convert $4.6 million of the military assistance suspended in 1990 into a Peace Fund to support implementation of peace accords. In sum, the peace talks are key to Guatemala's future and will continue to receive our full support.

That is not to say that our human rights policy in Guatemala is limited to support for the peace process. Far from it. Read our human rights reports. They are candid and detailed. They pull no punches. We believe that they have encouraged Guatemalan human rights supports to be active and that our policy has given them some protection and greater space to act. Our policy is not confined to advocacy and support of cases in which we have a United States citizen interest. We have been vocal and active in countless others as well -- the cases of Myrna Mack, Maritza Urrutia and Amilcar Mendez to cite just three cases active in the last two years.

Our human rights policy also seeks to strengthen Guatemalan institutions that have responsibility for protecting and improving respect for human rights. Specifically, we have:

-- supported the Office of the Human Rights Ombudsman to improve its ability to gather and analyze information on human rights abuses. Grants totalling $2.6 million in the last five years have enabled the office to set up regional bureaus, install a computer tracking system and extend education programs to indigenous audiences.

-- launched a $2 million program this year of education, technical assistance and other support to help indigenous and grassroots non-governmental organizations increase participation of the disenfranchised in civil society;

-- worked to improve the administration of justice by providing $6 million to increase the judicial system's independence and professionalism and supporting efforts by the Public Ministry and MINUGUA to prepare cases for trial under a new Criminal Procedures Code that took effect last July;

-- assisted municipalities to pursue legal reforms through the Local Government Outreach Strategy Project;

-- provided training to civilian investigators in the Public Ministry; and

-- supported the protection of street children by providing financial assistance to NGO's and the children's bureau of the Human Rights Ombudsman's office.

Mr. Chairman, hundreds of thousands of American tourists visit Guatemala every year -- not only Guatemala City and the major attractions of Antigua, Lake Aititlan and Chichicastenango. They also visit the Mayan sites of the Peten and the less accessible highlands. Protection of citizens who encounter problems is an interest to which we devote the full time services of a consular officer. Other consular staff lend assistance as required and on occasion consular welfare cases become the all-consuming focus of the entire embassy team. There have been numerous instances of such all-out efforts in the last two years in particular, as violent crime throughout in Guatemala has increased. Kidnappings have been a problem in the last year. In those cases we turn to Guatemalan authorities -- political, police and sometimes military for help. Cooperation is generally quite good. I make that point because -- in fairness to the Guatemalan government and people -- it's the truth.

It is not always the case, however. Let me now turn to the two cases that bring us here today.

Case of Michael Vernon Devine

U.S. citizen Michael Devine was murdered June 8, 1990 near his ranch in Poptun, Guatemala. Given the remote location and the absence of any police investigative ability in the area, our embassy in Guatemala initially sought investigative assistance from the Guatemala military. The embassy concluded in a matter of weeks, however, that the military itself was likely involved. Thereafter, and until the senior military commanders at the time of Devine's murder were replaced, we pressed our interest in resolving the case with the civilian government, first under President Cerezo and thereafter with Presidents Serrano and De Leon. Our goals throughout were to see the killers, intellectual authors and senior officers whom we believed to have covered up the crime punished and, in doing so, to have civilian control over the military effectively exerted.

In December 1990, and to drive home our dissatisfaction with the lack of real progress toward achieving these goals, the Department suspended nearly (give correct # in dollars) million of FMF pipeline and new assistance to the Guatemalan military. It also stopped authorization of the commercial sale of defense items to Guatemala's military.

By dint of sheer persistence on the part of former Ambassador Stroock and his staff and owing to the effective and courageous work of a private investigator and a Guatemalan attorney hired by Mrs. Devine, a military court convicted five enlisted men for the murder in September 1992, giving them 30-year sentences. Those sentences subsequently were upheld by the Supreme Court of Guatemala. Those men are now serving those sentences. Guatemalan army Captain Hugo Contreras was also tried and convicted of complicity in the murder in May, 1993. He was given a 20-year sentence but, in our view, allowed to escape from military custody the very same day. We have pressed continually for the Guatemalan military to find and recapture Contreras. We have not been successful but neither have we abandoned that effort.

We believe that senior officials of the Guatemalan Army likely ordered the detention and interrogation of Michael Devine, possibly in connection with a case of missing army rifles. We have absolutely no reason to believe that Devine was engaged in any illegal or even improper activity. Nor is it the case that Devine was a DEA informant, as has been alleged in the press. It is virtually certain that the two colonels (Garcia Catalan and Portillo) who commanded the base from which the five enlisted men operated were conspirators in the subsequent cover up. Early on, certainly by August 1990, we had reached the same conclusion about Colonel Alpirez, the commander of the ranger training base at which the enlisted men who killed Devine were housed and fed for two days prior to the murder. Colonel Alpirez was uncooperative with us and with investigating authorities. He almost surely perjured himself at the trial of the enlisted men. Despite our persistent pressure, Guatemalan authorties never did conduct an adequate investigation into the coverup and no senior officers were charged.

Our records provide a number of instances of the Embassy pressing the Government of Guatemala and senior military officials themselves to obtain an honest account from Alpirez, both before and after October 1991 (when information was provided to the Department that Alpirez might have been involved in the killing itself). Records we have retrieved so far do not answer the question how that particular piece of intelligence altered our perceptions and actions. What the records do portray is an aggressive ambassador and embassy staff vigorously pursuing the case throughout, with the Department providing guidance and backstopping. As indicated above, however, the Embassy and Department believed that Alpirez was guilty of covering up the crime, not of committing or ordering it. We say that not in defense of Alpirez. It simply represents our best judgment as to his role.

Guatemalan guerrilla Efrain Bamaca Velasquez disappeared on March 12, 1992 after a firefight with the Guatemalan army. For nearly a year, his colleagues and American citizen wife, Jennifer Harbury, believed he died in combat. However, a former guerrilla, Santiago Cabrera Lopez, testified in February 1993 that, while detained by the Guatemalan military, he had seen Bamaca alive in military custody at the San Marcos military base in March and July 1992. Ms. Harbury contacted our Embassy for the first time on March 9, 1993, identifying herself as Bamaca's wife and seeking our assistance. The Embassy responded quickly. Our Charge d' Affaires asked the Guatemalan Attorney General about the case on March 15.

On March 18, embassy officials contacted then Human Rights Ombudsman Ramiro De Leon. He told them of inquiries the previous year -- in 1992 -- from the URNG and the approaches he made as a result to the Guatemalan military. The military claimed Bamaca was probably buried in an unmarked grave in Retalhuleu, the site of the firefight. De Leon had obtained permission to exhume the grave in May, 1992, but the proceeding was halted on the grounds that no family members or dental or other identifying records were present.

On March 22, 1993 the Embassy raised the case with the Guatemalan president's top human rights adviser. We also raised the case directly, in several channels, with senior military and military intelligence officials. From the outset, however, and to this day, the Guatemalan military maintained that they did not capture Mr. Bamaca.

Ambasador Marilyn McAfee arrived in Guatemala two days after President De Leon took office in June, 1993. She raised the subject of clandestine prisons -- an issue raised by the Bamaca case -- with President De Leon July 11. She brought up the same issue, specifically referring to Bamaca, with Minister of Defense Enriquez July 29 and did so again with President De Leon August 2. This pattern of aggressively pressing our interest in the Bamaca case continued throughout 1993, 1994 and until the present. U.S. Government meetings with Ms. Harbury herself were frequent and often at a high level. Ambassador McAfee was continuously available. In Washington Ms. Harbury met on numerous occasions with ranking officials in our Bureau of Inter-American Affairs, with Assistant Secretary for Democracy, Human Rights and Labor Affairs John Shattuck and, following her October-November 1994 hunger strike, with National Security Adviser Anthony Lake.

During that hunger strike Ambassador McAfee and her staff visited Ms. Harbury daily. Concerned for her physical safety, they had the Embassy's security guard visit the central plaza where she conducted the strike several times a day. A consular officer visited her daily. Photographs of a visit to her by Ambassador McAfee and Senior ARA Adviser Richard Nuccio appeared on the front pages of most Guatemalan dailies, conveying a graphic message of official U.S. support and concern.

At the same time we were asking our intelligence services to search their files and data bases for all available information, to evaluate and re-assess the information available (as is often the case, much was from secondary or subsources) and to collect new intelligence. As additional information was acquired, we became more and more persuaded that the Guatemalan military had in fact captured Bamaca in 1992. The Department instructed Ambassador McAfee to meet with President De Leon on November 11, 1994. The Ambassador told De Leon that, according to information available to the USG, Bamaca was captured alive by the military, transferred to the San Marcos military base and that his wounds were not life-threatening. On the same day, Ambassador McAfee shared this same information with Jennifer Harbury, who had just ended her hunger strike. Ambassador McAfee also shared with Ms. Harbury our candid observation that there were unfortunately no indications that Bamaca survived much beyond the first few weeks of his captivity. Ms. Harbury understandably wanted to know more. We felt that we had a strong obligation to share with her the conclusions drawn from intelligence sources -- once we were confident of their accuracy -- but did not feel we could share specific intelligence except pursuant to the procedures prescribed by the Freedom of Information Act.

As additional information was acquired in the ensuing months, the intelligence community became increasingly persuaded that Bamaca had in fact been killed while in military custody. On several occasions between November 1994 and March 1995 Administration officials told Ms. Harbury of our belief that Bamaca had not survived. Ms. Harbury during the same period told us of numerous instances of people coming to her anonymously with reports that Bamaca had recently been seen alive in military custody. The only such report lending itself to verification turned out to be bogus. None of the intelligence supported Ms. Harbury's hope that Bamaca was still alive and we repeatedly conveyed that message.

When, in late January of this year, additional intelligence concerning Colonel Alpirez was received and evaluated, we instructed Ambassador McAfee to approach President De Leon again, urging him to order the re-interrogation of senior military officers who might have been involved in Bamaca's disappearance. We specifically cited Colonel Alpirez. We did not assert to President De Leon any conclusion as to his role -- the information available was not that definitive -- but we were confident that Alpirez must have had direct knowledge of what happened to Bamaca and we strongly urged that he be interrogated again.

Ambassador McAfee made this demarche on February 6. On February 8 Department officials informed Ms. Harbury of the demarche, telling her as well that "the information available to us, while it is not conclusive, suggests your husband was killed following his capture." We did not feel, however, that we could properly mention Alpirez' name. When, after a month, Alpirez still had not been questioned again, we announced on March 10 the suspension of the participation of Guatemalan military personnel in IMET programs conducted in the United States for the remainder of FY 1995. Our announcement of that suspension also contained the considered assessment of the U.S. intelligence community that Bamaca had died in Guatemalan military custody. An NSC official met with Ms. Harbury the same day to give her the press statement and to reiterate that information.

Mr. Chairman, we have pressed the Guatemalan government hard on both these cases and we will continue to do so. We believe Guatemala could do much more to find and imprison Captain Contreras. We believe Guatemala has yet to conduct the kind of vigorous, credible inquiry in the Bamaca case that we have consistently called for and we will stay the course on that issue, too. We will continue to protect U.S. citizen interests in Guatemala to the best of our ability. We will speak up and remain active in our Guatemalan human rights policy across the board and we will stay engaged in support of the peace process. Enlightened policy demands no less.

p. 10 Nuccio and McAfee meet at ambassador's residence that evening with Harbury. This is first meeting with Harbury in which Nuccio is aware of intelligence information about Bamaca. Goes beyond previous conversations to communicate conviction that Bamaca is not alive despite claims by Harbury that he has been seen alive during her hunger strike.

p. 11 November 9, 1994: ORPA commander Ilom calls Nuccio. Asks for help to prevent GOG from threatening Jennifer's health by making her attend pointless exhumations. Nuccio agrees to try, but points out that Harbury is attacking him personally, reducing his effectiveness. Ilom mentions NYTimes editorial charging Amb. McAfee and Nuccio with "silence" on case and says is unjust. Offers to send "messenger" to Harbury to warn her against "converting an attack on GOG and military into an attack on USG."

p. 11 November 11, 1994: Nuccio meets with URNG in Mexico City. Ilom takes credit for having ended Harbury hunger strike the day before by saying that he sent messenger to her that he had mentioned on November 11. Nuccio thanks Ilom and says that preservation of Jennifer's health is important since solution to the case will take a great deal of time.

Mr. Chairman:

I welcome this opportunity to appear before you and your colleagues on the Senate Select Committee on Intelligence to discuss United States policy in Guatemala and the human rights cases of Michael Devine and Efrain Bamaca. You're doing the right thing to conduct these hearings. It is important to get the facts out -- to the Congress, to the public and to the families of human rights victims.

That is precisely the intent of the President and Secretary of State Christopher. As you know, the President has asked the Intelligence Oversight Board (IOB) to conduct a thorough review of any and all aspects of the allegations associated with and the policy issues raised by these two cases. The IOB will review the facts surrounding these cases and make appropriate recommendations. As the Secretary stated before the Congress last week, should disciplinary or other such action be indicated, it will be taken. The Administration will provide to the American people as much information about the review as possible. The Bureau of Inter-American Affairs that I head has already recommended the fullest disclosure possible.

Mr. Chairman, promotion of human rights abroad has long been a central aspect of American foreign policy. The responsibility to protect and assist United States citizens abroad is equally compelling. We take both duties very seriously and this statement therefore deals in large part with how the Department and our embassy in Guatemala discharged those responsibilities in the two cases at hand. Your staff has indicated, however, that an overview of United States policy in Guatemala -- and how it has evolved over time -- would be helpful. Let me do that before turning to the cases of Michael Devine and Efrain Bamaca.

Overview of U.S. Policy in Guatemala

When the Central American crisis erupted in Nicaragua and El Salvador in the late 1970's, our relations with Guatemala were troubled. For much of the previous two decades Guatemala had been under military rule. For much of that time Guatemala was also the scene of guerrilla activity that had originated with dissident elements from within the military itself. The insurgency was largely rural but in several periods it demonstrated significant capability to carry out attacks in urban areas. In 1968, for example, guerrillas assassinated U.S. Ambassador John Gordon Mein in downtown Guatemala City.

The United States had provided substantial assistance to Guatemala during the Alliance for Progress. There, as elsewhere in Central America, we were seeking to promote the development of democratic institutions and broad-based economic growth. We also sought to stimulate regional economic integration. Promotion of greater respect for human rights became a particular concern under the Carter Administration. The emphasis on human rights and the conditionality the United States placed on military assistance in particular stimulated a nationalistic reaction in Guatemala, leading its government in 1977 to reject our military aid. It would note be restored until fiscal year 1986.

In the late 1970's and early 1980's, the guerrilla insurgency acquired much larger dimensions. It was met by an increasingly brutal counter-insurgency campaign carried out under a succession of military leaders: Laugerud Garcia (1974-78); Lucas Garcia (1978-1982); and Rios Montt (1982-83). Large-scale out-migration of Guatemalans began during this period, some 45,000 of them taking refuge in Mexico. Several hundred thousand Guatemalans who were uprooted by the war reside in the United States today; about 100,000 have pending asylum claims. Human rights abuses throughout this period were pervasive and are well-documented in the annual human rights reports of the Department and in those of non-governmental organizations. It was also under Rios Montt that the military formed community-based civil defense patrols (PACs) and armed the nearly half million Indian peasants who were recruited into them. In time two problems associated with the PACs emerged: forced recruitment into their ranks and human rights abuses which they committed. In 1983 Rios Montt was overthrown by the Guatemalan Army itself. His Defense Minister, General Mejia, was named head of state and moved to hold constituent assembly elections the following year.

Following adoption of a new constitution in 1985, Guatemala held free and fair elections, won by the Christian Democratic candidate, Vinicio Cerezo. During the next eight years, between 1985-1992, we provided Guatemala approximately 936 million dollars total aid. Approximately $33 million of that amount was military, including financing and training. This was a significant amount of total aid but, for purposes of comparison, in the same period we gave $2.5 billion dollars to El Salvador and $1.175 billion to Honduras. In terms of aid per capita, the disproportionality was even more pronounced. El Salvador received between four and five times as much total aid as Guatemala.

Process, had been underway for nearly three years. It was about to give way to an all-Central American effort -- the Esquipulas Process. Both diplomatic efforts were aimed at bringing the Central American insurgencies to an end through peaceful negotiations. The Esquipulas Process produced a series of agreements beginning in 1987 that provided the framework for free elections in Nicaragua in 1990 and the resulting demobilization of the Nicaraguan resistance. Peace negotiations had begun on a separate track in El Salvador in 1984; they eventually culminated in the 1992 comprehensive accords that ended that conflict. President Cerezo initiated talks with the Guatemalan guerrilla umbrella organization -- the URNG -- in 1987. Those talks made only limited progress but were continued and made better progress under President Serrano, elected in 1990. It was during Serrano's term, during the last year of the Bush Administration, that the United States initiated direct contacts with the URNG to encourage forward movement in the peace process. This activism on behalf of the peace process continued and have become more intense during the Clinton Administration, when at the request of the Guatemalan Government and the URNG, the United States joined five other governments to constitute a so-called Group of Friends of the Peace Process.

President Cerezo was able to complete his term and become the first civilian elected leader in Guatemala's history to turn power over to another civilian elected leader -- Jorge Serrano, in 1991. But it was during the last year of the Cerezo Administration that Michael Devine was murdered. Our conclusion that elements of the military were involved and that the military was seeking to cover that up led directly to the suspension of military assistance to Guatemala in 1990.

Democratically elected, President Serrano betrayed his oath of office to uphold the constitution and attempted to dissolve the Congress and Supreme Court on May 25, 1993. In the ensuing twelve-day crisis, the Clinton Administration worked closely with the Organization of American States, other interested governments and with key sectors of Guatemalan society itself to produce a peaceful and constitutional outcome. The result was the election by the Guatemalan Congress of Ramiro De Leon Carpio, the widely respected Human Rights Ombudsman. It was our judgment at the conclusion of the crisis that the Guatemalan military had acted with considerable civic responsibility. In particular, the military had backed the finding of Guatemala's constitutional court that the actions of Serrano and his vice president were unconstitutional.

De Leon's selection and the role of the military during the crisis gave us considerable hope that Guatemala could move to consolidate its democracy, improve respect for human rights and end its insurgency through negotiations. Nothing in our view would have a more dramatic and immediately favorable effect on the human rights situation than an end to the internal conflict. Our policy has thus placed considerable emphasis on that goal.

In late 1993 the government and URNG resumed negotiations and in January 1994 agreed to a new framework agreement and timetable for concluding the talks. Under the new framework, the talks were moderated by the United Nations and the Friends were given a supporting role. We appointed a special representative to the Friends Group to give our own support emphasis and focus.

Under the calendar, the parties laid out a schedule of issues to be negotiated and set the end of 1994 as the date for a comprehensive agreement. Talks made excellent progress during the first half of 1994. Three accords were particularly noteworthy. A human rights agreement reached in March last year provided for a United Nations Human Rights Verification Mission (MINUGUA), which has now deployed 313 human rights monitors throughout Guatemala. The accord also provides that the Human Rights Ombudsman has the responsibility to verify that service in the Civil Defense Patrols is voluntary and to determine whether PAC members have committed human rights abuses. The Government declares it will not support these patrols or arm new volunteer civil defense committees once peace is obtained. Acceptance by Guatemala of this international presence was in our view a hopeful sign of its growing desire to abide by internationally accepted norms of human rights.

The Guatemalan government and the URNG also reached accords on aid to persons displaced by the war, which is already attracting international economic and technical support, and for a Historical Clarification Commission. The latter accord provoked controversy. The commission will begin to function only after a comprehensive agreement is reached. It will have the mandate to make a public report on human rights violations on both sides during the war but it does not have the authority to assign individual responsibility and its findings are not to be used for prosecutions.

Partly owing to the adverse reaction to this accord from within its own ranks, the URNG suspended talks in June, 1994. They did not resume until last October. Progress thereafter was slow but last week, in Mexico City, the parties did sign a new agreement concerning the rights of Guatemala's indigenous population and the parties are now attempting to reach a final accord by a target date of this August. That is an ambitious goal, especially as Guatemala holds presidential elections in November and the De Leon transitional presidency is drawing to a close. But the Clinton Administration believes that the peace talks still offer the most concrete hope for ending the last of Central America's wars and for bringing about a lasting improvement in respect for human rights in Guatemala. In a step full of symbolism, last year we redirected the remaining $4.6 million of the military assistance suspended in 1990 into a Peace Fund to support implementation of peace accords. In sum, the peace talks are key to Guatemala's future and will continue to receive our full support.

That is not to say that our human rights policy in Guatemala is limited to support for the peace process. Far from it. Read our human rights reports. They are candid and detailed. They pull no punches. We believe that they have encouraged Guatemalan human rights supporters to be active and that our policy has given them some protection and greater space to act. Our human rights policy is not confined to advocacy and support of cases in which we have a United States citizen interest. We have been vocal and active in countless others as well -- the cases of Myrna Mack, Maritza Urrutia and Amilcar Mendez to cite just three cases active in recent years.

Our human rights policy also seeks to strengthen Guatemalan institutions that have responsibility for protecting and improving respect for human rights. Specifically, we have:

-- supported the Office of the Human Rights Ombudsman to improve its ability to gather and analyze information on human rights abuses. Grants totalling $2.6 million in the last five years have enabled the office to set up regional bureaus, install a computer tracking system and extend education programs to indigenous audiences.

-- launched this year a three-year, $2 million program of education, technical assistance and other support to help indigenous and grassroots non-governmental organizations increase participation of the disenfranchised in civil society;

-- worked to improve the administration of justice through a $5 million project to increase the judicial system's independence and professionalism and supporting efforts by the Public Ministry and MINUGUA to prepare cases for trial under a new Criminal Procedures Code that took effect last July;

-- assisted municipalities to pursue legal reforms through the Local Government Outreach Strategy Project;

-- provided training to civilian investigators in the Public Ministry; and

-- supported the protection of street children by providing financial assistance to NGO's and the children's bureau of the Human Rights Ombudsman's office.

Mr. Chairman, hundreds of thousands of American tourists visit Guatemala every year -- not only Guatemala City and the major attractions of Antigua, Lake Atitlan and Chichicastenango. They also visit the Mayan sites of the Peten and the less accessible highlands. Protection of citizens who encounter problems is an interest to which we devote considerable resources: publication of consular information sheets and travel advisories; warden systems for checking on the welfare of citizens in the event of a natural disaster. In Guatemala we devote the services of one consular officer full time to the needs of U.S. citizens. Other consular staff lend assistance as required and on occasion consular welfare cases become the all-consuming focus of the entire embassy team. There have been numerous instances of such all-out efforts in the last two years in particular, as violent crime throughout in Guatemala has increased. Kidnappings have been a problem in the last year. In those cases we turn to Guatemalan authorities -- political, police and sometimes military for help. Cooperation is generally quite good. I make that point because -- in fairness to the Guatemalan government and people -- it's the truth.

It is not always the case, however. Let me now turn to the two cases that bring us here today.

Case of Michael Vernon Devine

U.S. citizen Michael Devine was murdered June 8, 1990 near his ranch in Poptun, Guatemala. Given the remote location and the absence of any police investigative ability in the area, our embassy in Guatemala initially sought investigative assistance from the Guatemalan military. The embassy concluded in a matter of weeks, however, that the military itself was likely involved. Thereafter, and until the senior military commanders at the time of Devine's murder were replaced, we pressed our interest in resolving the case with the civilian government, first under President Cerezo and thereafter with Presidents Serrano and De Leon. Our goals throughout were to see the killers, intellectual authors and senior officers whom we believed to have covered up the crime face punishment and, in doing so, to have civilian control over the military effectively exerted.

In December 1990, and to drive home our dissatisfaction with the lack of real progress toward achieving these goals, the Department suspended FMF pipeline and new assistance to the Guatemalan military. It also stopped authorization of the commercial sale of defense items to Guatemala's military.

Sheer persistence on the part of former Ambassador Stroock and his staff, together with the effective and courageous work of a private investigator and a Guatemalan attorney hired by Mrs. Devine, resulted in the conviction by a military court of five enlisted men for the murder in September 1992. The men were given 30-year sentences. Those sentences subsequently were upheld by the Supreme Court of Guatemala. Those men are now serving those sentences. Guatemalan army Captain Hugo Contreras was also tried and convicted of complicity in the murder in May, 1993. He was given a 20-year sentence but, in our view, was allowed to escape from military custody the very same day. We have pressed continually for the Guatemalan military to find and reapprehend Contreras. We have not been successful but neither have we abandoned that effort.

We believe that senior officials of the Guatemalan Army likely ordered the detention and interrogation of Michael Devine, possibly in connection with a case of missing army rifles. We have absolutely no reason to believe that Devine was engaged in any illegal or even improper activity. Nor is it the case that Devine was a DEA informant, as has been alleged in the press. It is virtually certain that the two colonels (Garcia Catalan and Portillo) who commanded the base from which the five enlisted men operated were conspirators in the subsequent cover up. Early on, certainly by August 1990, we had reached the same conclusion about Colonel Alpirez, the commander of the ranger training base at which the enlisted men who killed Devine were housed and fed for two days prior to the murder. Colonel Alpirez was uncooperative with us and with investigating authorities. He almost surely perjured himself at the trial of the enlisted men. Despite our persistent pressure, Guatemalan authorities never did conduct an adequate investigation into the coverup and no senior officers were charged.

The Embassy pressed the Government of Guatemala and senior military officials themselves to obtain an honest account from Alpirez, both before and after October 1991 (when information was provided to the Department that Alpirez might have been involved in the killing itself). It is uncertain how that single piece of intelligence affected perceptions at that time. What the records do portray is an aggressive ambassador and embassy staff vigorously pursuing the case throughout, with the Department providing guidance and backstopping. As indicated above, however, the Embassy and Department's judgment was that Alpirez was likely guilty of covering up the crime, not of committing or ordering it. We say that not in defense of Alpirez. It simply represents our best judgment as to his role.

Guatemalan guerrilla Efrain Bamaca Velasquez disappeared on March 12, 1992 after a firefight with the Guatemalan army. For nearly a year, his colleagues and American citizen wife, Jennifer Harbury, believed he died in combat. However, a former guerrilla, Santiago Cabrera Lopez, testified in February 1993 that, while detained by the Guatemalan military, he had seen Bamaca alive in military custody at the San Marcos military base in March and July 1992. Ms. Harbury contacted our Embassy for the first time on March 9, 1993, identifying herself as Bamaca's wife and seeking our assistance. The Embassy responded quickly. Our Charge d' Affaires asked the Guatemalan Attorney General about the case on March 15.

On March 18, embassy officials contacted then Human Rights Ombudsman Ramiro De Leon. He told them of inquiries about Bamaca the previous year -- in 1992 -- from the URNG and the approaches he made as a result to the Guatemalan military. The military claimed Bamaca was probably buried in an unmarked grave in Retalhuleu, the site of the firefight. De Leon had obtained permission to exhume the grave in May, 1992, but the proceeding was halted on the grounds that no family members or dental or other identifying records were present.

On March 22, 1993 the Embassy raised the case with the Guatemalan president's top human rights adviser. We also raised the case directly, in several channels, with senior military and military intelligence officials. From the outset, however, and to this day, the Guatemalan military maintained that they did not capture Mr. Bamaca.

Ambasador Marilyn McAfee arrived in Guatemala two days after President De Leon took office in June, 1993. She addressed the subject of clandestine prisons -- an issue raised by the Bamaca case -- with President De Leon July 11. She referring to Bamaca, with Minister of Defense Enriquez July 29 and did so again with President De Leon August 2. This pattern of aggressively pressing our interest in the Bamaca case continued throughout 1993, 1994 and until the present. U.S. Government meetings with Ms. Harbury herself were frequent and often at a level that underscored our extraordinary interest in the case. Ambassador McAfee made herself continuously available. In Washington Ms. Harbury met on numerous occasions with ranking officials in our Bureau of Inter-American Affairs, with Assistant Secretary for Democracy, Human Rights and Labor Affairs John Shattuck, with Ambassador Geraldine Ferraro and, following her October-November 1994 hunger strike in Guatemala City, with National Security Adviser Anthony Lake.

During that hunger strike Ambassador McAfee visited Ms. Harbury on numerous occasions and a consular officer visited her daily. Concerned for her physical safety, they had the Embassy's security guard visit the central plaza where she conducted the strike several times a day. Photographs of a visit to her by Ambassador McAfee and Senior ARA Adviser Richard Nuccio appeared on the front pages of most Guatemalan dailies, conveying a graphic message of official U.S. protection, support and concern.

At the same time we were asking our intelligence services to search their files and data bases for all available information, to evaluate and re-assess the information available (as is often the case, much was from secondary or subsources) and to collect new intelligence. As additional information was acquired, we became more and more persuaded that the Guatemalan military had in fact captured Bamaca in 1992. The Department instructed Ambassador McAfee to meet with President De Leon on November 11, 1994. The Ambassador told De Leon that, according to information available to the USG, Bamaca was captured alive by the military, transferred to the San Marcos military base and that his wounds were not life-threatening.

On the same day, Ambassador McAfee met with Jennifer Harbury, who had just ended her hunger strike. Ambassador McAfee told Ms. Harbury that she had informed President De Leon that we had credible information that Bamaca had been captured alive by the military and that his wounds were not life-threatening. The Ambassador also shared with Ms. Harbury our candid assessment that there were unfortunately no indications that Bamaca survived much beyond the first few weeks of his captivity. Ms. Harbury understandably wanted to know more. We felt that we had a strong obligation to share with her the conclusions drawn from intelligence sources -- once we were confident of their accuracy -- but could not share specific intelligence except in accord with U.S. laws and procedures prescribed by the Freedom of Information Act.

As additional information was acquired in the ensuing months, the intelligence community became increasingly persuaded that Bamaca had in fact been killed while in military custody. On several occasions between December 1994 and March 1995 Administration officials told Ms. Harbury of our belief that, while we lacked conclusive evidence, Bamaca had not survived. Ms. Harbury during the same period told us of numerous instances of people coming to her anonymously with reports that Bamaca had recently been seen alive in military custody. The only such report lending itself to verification turned out to be bogus. None of the intelligence supported Ms. Harbury's hope that Bamaca was still alive and we repeatedly conveyed that message.

When, in late January of this year, additional intelligence was received and evaluated, we instructed Ambassador McAfee to approach President De Leon again, urging him to order the re-interrogation of senior military officers who might have been involved in Bamaca's disappearance. We specifically cited Colonel Alpirez. We did not assert to President De Leon any conclusion as to his role -- the information available was not that definitive -- but we were confident that Alpirez must have had direct knowledge of what happened to Bamaca and we strongly urged that he be interrogated again.

Ambassador McAfee made this demarche on February 6. On February 8 Department officials informed Ms. Harbury of the demarche, telling her as well that "the information available to us, while it is not conclusive, suggests your husband was killed following his capture." It was the considered view within the Administration, however, that we could not properly mention Alpirez' name. When, after a month, Alpirez still had not been questioned again, we announced on March 10 the suspension of the participation of Guatemalan military personnel in IMET programs conducted in the United States for the remainder of FY 1995. Our announcement of that suspension also contained the considered assessment of the U.S. intelligence community that Bamaca had died in Guatemalan military custody.

Mr. Chairman, I do not want to leave the impression that we think we could not have done better. Certainly, with the benefit of hindsight, we who were dealing with Jennifer Harbury should have ensured at an earlier point in our support for her that we had in our hands all the relevant intelligence that had been reported. At the same time, we made extraordinary efforts on her behalf and we acted in good faith throughout. We have pressed the Guatemalan government hard on both these cases and we will continue to do so. We believe Guatemala could do much more to find and imprison Captain Contreras. We believe Guatemala has yet to conduct the kind of vigorous, credible inquiry in the Bamaca case that we have consistently called for and we will stay the course on that issue, too. We will continue to protect U.S. citizen interests in Guatemala to the best of our ability. We will speak up and remain active in our Guatemalan human rights policy across the board and we will stay engaged in support of the peace process and the consolidation of democracy. Enlightened policy demands no less.

John - DOJ/OIA advises that there are no/no outstanding charges pending in the U.S. with respect to the individual in question. I was unable to verify from L/T's files whether there is a bilateral extradition treaty in force between Guatemala and Venezuela. We can try the Library of Congress tomorrow. Alternatively, we might need to check with our respective Embassies in Guatemala and Caracas. Also, Treaties in Force indicates that Venezuela is not a party to the Montevideo multilateral extradition convention (although Guatemala is), so that appears to be a non-starter.

I will be at Justice all day Wed and Thurs for law enforcement meetings with Mexico. In my absence, Paolo DiRosa, who handles Venezuela, will follow up on these issues. Do you have any objection to his talking to Peg Willingham and the Venezuelan desk officer about checking with our Embassies? I'm not sure how closely held this information currently is. Thanks.

Mr. Chairman:

I welcome this opportunity to appear before you and your colleagues on the Senate Select Committee on Intelligence to discuss United States policy in Guatemala and the human rights cases of Michael Devine and Efrain Bamaca. You're doing the right thing to conduct these hearings. It is important to get the facts out -- to the Congress, to the public and to the families of human rights victims.

That is precisely the purpose of the President and Secretary of State Christopher. As you know, the President has asked the Intelligence Oversight Board (IOB) to conduct a thorough review of any and all aspects of the allegations associated with and the policy issues raised by these two cases. The IOB will determine the facts surrounding these cases and make recommendations. As the Secretary stated before the Congress last week, whatever disciplinary or other action may be appropriate will be taken. Finally, the Administration will provide to the American people as much information about the review as possible. The Bureau of Inter-American Affairs that I head has already recommended the fullest disclosure possible.

Mr. Chairman, promotion of human rights abroad has long been a central aspect of American foreign policy. The responsibility to protection United States citizens abroad is equally compelling. We take both duties very seriously and this statement therefore deals in large part with how the Department and our embassy in Guatemala discharged those responsibilities in the two cases at hand. Your staff has indicated, howver, that an overview of United States policy in Guatemala -- and how it has evolved over time -- would be helpful. Let me do that before turning to the cases of Michael Devine and Efrain Bamaca.

Overview of U.S. Policy in Guatemala

When the Central American crisis erupted in Nicaragua and El Salvador in the late 1970's, our relations with Guatemala were troubled. For much of the previous two decades Guatemala had been under military rule as it fought a guerrilla insurgency that had grown out of dissident elements from within the military itself. The insurgency was largely rural but in several periods it demonstrated significant capability to carry out attacks in Guatemala City itself. In 1968, for example, guerrillas assassinated U.S. Ambassador John Gordon Mein in downtown Guatemala City.

UNCLASSIFIED

The United States had provided substantial assistance to Guatemala during the Alliance for Progress (figure available?). There, as elsewhere in Central America, we were seeking to promote the development of democratic institutions and broad-based economic growth. We also sought to stimulate regional economic integration. Promotion of greater respect for human rights became a particular concern under the Carter Administration. The emphasis on human rights and the conditionality the United States placed on military assistance in particular stimulated a nationalistic reaction in Guatemala, leading its government in 1977 to reject our military aid. It would be restored until nearly a decade later.

In the late 1970's and early 1980's, the guerrilla insurgency acquired much larger dimensions. It was met by a brutal counter-insurgency campaign carried out under a succession of military leaders: Laugerud Garcia (1974-78); Lucas Garcia (1978-1982); and Rios Montt (1982-83). Large-scale out-migration began during this period, much of it taking refuge in Mexico, many of the migrants continuing to the United States. Several hundred thousand Guatemalans who were uprooted by the war reside in the United States today; some 100,000 have pending asylum claims. Human rights abuses throughout this period were pervasive and are well-documented in the annual reports of the Department and in those of non-governmental organizations. It was under Rios Montt that the military formed community based civil defense patrols (PACs) and armed the nearly half million Indian peasants who made them up. In 1983 Rios Montt was overthrown by the Guatemalan Army itself. His Defense Minister, General Mejia, was named head of state and moved to hold constituent assembly elections the following year.

Following adoption of a new constitution in 1985, Guatemala held free and fair elections, won by the Christian Democratic candidate, Vinicio Cerezo. During the next eight years, between 1985-1992, we provided Guatemala approximately 936 million dollars of what was overwhelmingly economic aid. (Desk: Find out how much was military) This was a significant amount of aid but, for purposes of comparison, in the same period we gave $2.5 billion dollars to El Salvador and $1.175 billion to Honduras. In terms of aid per capita, the disproportionality was even more pronounced, as Guatemala is a nation of ten million people, compared to El Salvador's five and Honduras' three. It is accurate to say that during the 1980's we did not have the degree of involvement and engagement in Guatemala that characterized our engagement in El Salvador or Nicaragua.

When Cerezo took office in January 1986, a regional diplomatic effort spearheaded by Mexico, known as the Contadora Process, had been underway for nearly three years. It was about to give way to an all-Central American effort -- the Esquipulas Process. Both diplomatic efforts were aimed at bringing the Central American insurgencies to an end through peaceful negotiations. The Esquipulas Process produced a series of agreements beginning in 1987 that provided the framework for free elections in Nicaragua in 1990 and the resulting demobilization of the Nicaraguan resistance. Peace negotiations had begun on a separate track in El Salvador in 1984; they eventually culminated in the 1992 comprehensive accords that ended that conflict. President Cerezo initiated talks with the Guatemalan guerrilla umbrella organization -- the URNG -- in 1987. Those talks made only limited progress but were continued and made better progress under President Serrano, elected in 1990. It was during Serrano's term, during the last year of the Bush Administration, that the United States initiated direct contacts with the URNG. Those contacts have continued during the Clinton Administration, when at the request of the Guatemalan Government and the URNG, the United States joined five other governments to constitute a so-called Group of Friends of the Peace Process.

Democratically elected, President Serrano betrayed his oath of office to uphold the constitution and attempted to dissolve the Congress and Supreme Court on May 25, 1993. In the ensuing twelve-day crisis, the Clinton Administration worked closely with the Organization of American States, other interested governments and with key sectors of Guatemalan society itself to produce a peaceful and constitutional outcome. The result was the election by the Guatemalan Congress of Ramiro De Leon Carpio, the widely respected Human Rights Ombudsman. It was our judgment at the conclusion of the crisis that the Guatemalan military had acted with considerable civic responsibility. In particular, the military had backed the finding of Guatemala's constitutional court that the actions of Serrano and his vice president were unconstitutional..

De Leon's selection and the role of the military during the crisis gave us considerable hope that Guatemala could move to consolidate its democracy, improve respect for human rights and to end its insurgency through negotiations. Nothing in our view would have a more dramatic and immediately favorable effect on the human rights situation than an end to the conflict and, with the aid resources available to us declining rapidly as a result of the fiscal austerity we were facing here, our policy placed considerable emphasis on that goal.

In late 1993 the government and URNG resumed talks and in January 1994 agreed to a new framework agreement and timetable for concluding the talks. Under the new framework the talks were moderated by the United Nations and the Friends were given a supporting role. We appointed a special representative to the Friends Group to give our own support emphasis and focus.

Under the calendar, the parties laid out a schedule of issues to be negotiated and set the end of 1994 as the date for a comprehensive agreement. Talks made excellent progress during the first half of 1994. Three accords were particularly noteworthy. A human rights agreement reached in March last year provided for a United Nations human rights verification mission, which has now deployed some 250 human rights monitors throughout Guatemala. The accord also provides that the Human Rights Ombudsman has the responsibility to verify that service in the Civil Defense Patrols is voluntary and to determine whether PAC members have committed human rights abuses. The Government declares it will not support htese patrols or arm new volunteer civil defense committees once peace is obtained.

Acceptance by Guatemala and its military of this international presence was in our view a hopeful sign of Guatemala's growing desire to abide by internationally accepted norms of human rights. The Guatemalan government and the URNG also reached an accords on aid to persons displaced by the war, which is being implemented, and for a Historical Clarification Commission. The latter accord provoked controversy. The commission will begin to function only after a comprehensive agreement is reached. It will have the mandate to report on human rights violations on both sides during the war but it does not have the authority to assign individual responsibility and its findings are not to be used for prosecutions.

Partly owing to the adverse reaction to this accord from within its own ranks, the URNG suspended talks in June, 1994. They did not resume until last October. Progress thereafter was slow but last week, in Mexico City, the parties did sign a new agreement concerning the rights of Guatemala's indigenous population and the parties are now attempting to reach a final agreement by a target date of this August. That is an ambitious goal, especially as Guatemala holds presidential elections in November and the De Leon transitional presidency is drawing to a close. But the Clinton Administration believes that the peace talks still offer the most concrete hope for ending the last of Central America's wars and for bringing about a lasting improvement in respect for human rights in Guatemala. A small but symbolic step that we took was to convert $4.6 million of the military assistance suspended in 1990 into a Peace Fund to support implementation of peace accords. In sum, the peace talks are key to Guatemala's future and will continue to receive our full support.

That is not to say that our human rights policy in Guatemala is limited to support for the peace process. Far from it. Read our human rights reports. They are candid and detailed. They pull no punches. We believe that they have encouraged Guatemalan human rights supports to be active and that our policy has given them some protection and greater space to act. Our policy is not confined to advocacy and support of cases in which we have a United States citizen interest. We have been vocal and active in countless others as well -- the cases of Myrna Mack, Maritza Urrutia and Amilcar Mendez to cite just three cases active in the last two years.

Our human rights policy also seeks to strengthen Guatemalan institutions that have responsibility for protecting and improving respect for human rights. Specifically, we have:

UNCLASSIFIED

-- supported the Office of the Human Rights Ombudsman to improve its ability to gather and analyze information on human rights abuses. Grants totalling $2.6 million in the last five years have enabled the office to set up regional bureaus, install a computer tracking system and extend education programs to indigenous audiences.

-- launched a $2 million program this year of education, technical assistance and other support to help indigenous and grassroots non-governmental organizations increase participation of the disenfranchised in civil society;

-- worked to improve the administration of justice by providing $6 million to increase the judicial system's independence and professionalism and supporting efforts by the Public Ministry and MINUGUA to prepare cases for trial under a new Criminal Procedures Code that took effect last July;

-- assisted municipalities to pursue legal reforms through the Local Government Outreach Strategy Project;

-- provided training to civilian investigators in the Public Ministry; and

-- supported the protection of street children by providing financial assistance to NGO's and the children's bureau of the Human Rights Ombudsman's office.

Mr. Chairman, hundreds of thousands of American tourists visit Guatemala every year -- not only Guatemala City and the major attractions of Antigua, Lake Aititlan and Chichicastenango. They also visit the Mayan sites of the Peten and the less accessible highlands. Protection of citizens who encounter problems is an interest to which we devote the full time services of a consular officer. Other consular staff lend assistance as required and on occasion consular welfare cases become the all-consuming focus of the entire embassy team. There have been numerous instances of such all-out efforts in the last two years in particular, as violent crime throughout in Guatemala has increased. Kidnappings have been a problem in the last year. In those cases we turn to Guatemalan authorities -- political, police and sometimes military for help. Cooperation is generally quite good. I make that point because -- in fairness to the Guatemalan government and people -- it's the truth.

It is not always the case, however. Let me now turn to the two cases that bring us here today.

Case of Michael Vernon Devine

U.S. citizen Michael Devine was murdered June 8, 1990 near his ranch in Poptun, Guatemala. Given the remote location and the absence of any police investigative ability in the area, our embassy in Guatemala initially sought investigative assistance from the Guatemala military. The embassy concluded in a matter of weeks, however, that the military itself was likely involved. Thereafter, and until the senior military commanders at the time of Devine's murder were replaced, we pressed our interest in resolving the case with the civilian government, first under President Cerezo and thereafter with Presidents Serrano and De Leon. Our goals throughout were to see the killers, intellectual authors and senior officers whom we believed to have covered up the crime punished and, in doing so, to have civilian control over the military effectively exerted.

In December 1990, and to drive home our dissatisfaction with the lack of real progress toward achieving these goals, the Department suspended nearly (give correct # in dollars) million of FMF pipeline and new assistance to the Guatemalan military. It also stopped authorization of the commercial sale of defense items to Guatemala's military.

By dint of sheer persistence on the part of former Ambassador Stroock and his staff and owing to the effective and courageous work of a private investigator and a Guatemalan attorney hired by Mrs. Devine, a military court convicted five enlisted men for the murder in September 1992, giving them 30-year sentences. Those sentences subsequently were upheld by the Supreme Court of Guatemala. Those men are now serving those sentences. Guatemalan army Captain Hugo Contreras was also tried and convicted of complicity in the murder in May, 1993. He was given a 20-year sentence but, in our view, allowed to escape from military custody the very same day. We have pressed continually for the Guatemalan military to find and recapture Contreras. We have not been successful but neither have we abandoned that effort.

We believe that senior officials of the Guatemalan Army likely ordered the detention and interrogation of Michael Devine, possibly in connection with a case of missing army rifles. We have absolutely no reason to believe that Devine was engaged in any illegal or even improper activity. Nor is it the case that Devine was a DEA informant, as has been alleged in the press. It is virtually certain that the two colonels (Garcia Catalan and Portillo) who commanded the base from which the five enlisted men operated were conspirators in the subsequent cover up. Early on, certainly by August 1990, we had reached the same conclusion about Colonel Alpirez, the commander of the ranger training base at which the enlisted men who killed Devine were housed and fed for two days prior to the murder. Colonel Alpirez was uncooperative with us and with investigating authorities. He almost surely perjured himself at the trial of the enlisted men. Despite our persistent pressure, Guatemalan authorties never did conduct an adequate investigation into the coverup and no senior officers were charged.

Our records provide a number of instances of the Embassy pressing the Government of Guatemala and senior military officials themselves to obtain an honest account from Alpirez, both before and after October 1991 (when information was provided to the Department that Alpirez might have been involved in the killing itself). Records we have retrieved so far do not answer the question how that particular piece of intelligence altered our perceptions and actions. What the records do portray is an aggressive ambassador and embassy staff vigorously pursuing the case throughout, with the Department providing guidance and backstopping. As indicated above, however, the Embassy and Department believed that Alpirez was guilty of covering up the crime, not of committing or ordering it. We say that not in defense of Alpirez. It simply represents our best judgment as to his role.

Guatemalan guerrilla Efrain Bamaca Velasquez disappeared on March 12, 1992 after a firefight with the Guatemalan army. For nearly a year, his colleagues and American citizen wife, Jennifer Harbury, believed he died in combat. However, a former guerrilla, Santiago Cabrera Lopez, testified in February 1993 that, while detained by the Guatemalan military, he had seen Bamaca alive in military custody at the San Marcos military base in March and July 1992. Ms. Harbury contacted our Embassy for the first time on March 9, 1993, identifying herself as Bamaca's wife and seeking our assistance. The Embassy responded quickly. Our Charge d' Affaires asked the Guatemalan Attorney General about the case on March 15.

On March 18, embassy officials contacted then Human Rights Ombudsman Ramiro De Leon. He told them of inquiries the previous year -- in 1992 -- from the URNG and the approaches he made as a result to the Guatemalan military. The military claimed Bamaca was probably buried in an unmarked grave in Retalhuleu, the site of the firefight. De Leon had obtained permission to exhume the grave in May, 1992, but the proceeding was halted on the grounds that no family members or dental or other identifying records were present.

On March 22, 1993 the Embassy raised the case with the Guatemalan president's top human rights adviser. We also raised the case directly, in several channels, with senior military and military intelligence officials. From the outset, however, and to this day, the Guatemalan military maintained that they did not capture Mr. Bamaca.

Ambasador Marilyn McAfee arrived in Guatemala two days after President De Leon took office in June, 1993. She raised the subject of clandestine prisons -- an issue raised by the Bamaca case -- with President De Leon July 11. She brought up the same issue, specifically referring to Bamaca, with Minister of Defense Enriquez July 29 and did so again with President De Leon August 2. This pattern of aggressively pressing our interest in the Bamaca case continued throughout 1993, 1994 and until the present. U.S. Government meetings with Ms. Harbury herself were frequent and often at a high level. Ambassador McAfee was continuously available. In Washington Ms. Harbury met on numerous occasions with ranking officials in our Bureau of Inter-American Affairs, with Assistant Secretary for Democracy, Human Rights and Labor Affairs John Shattuck and, following her October-November 1994 hunger strike, with National Security Adviser Anthony Lake.

During that hunger strike Ambassador McAfee and her staff visited Ms. Harbury daily. Concerned for her physical safety, they had the Embassy's security guard visit the central plaza where she conducted the strike several times a day. A consular officer visited her daily. Photographs of a visit to her by Ambassador McAfee and Senior ARA Adviser Richard Nuccio appeared on the front pages of most Guatemalan dailies, conveying a graphic message of official U.S. support and concern.

NUCCIO ADDENDUM TO BAMACA CHRONOLOGY

P. 4 Mid-May: Did McAfee see this report? When? When was it received in ARA? By whom? When did current action officers on Guatemala see it? (Nuccio, Oct. 19, 1994; JH?, PW?, AP?)

p. 6 October 21: Does Anne know of existence of mid-May report in her first meeting with Harbury?

P. 6 December 9, 1993: Nuccio and Guatemala desk officer Charles Herrington meet with Jennifer Harbury. With Herrington present Nuccio tells Harbury that we do not know more about Bamaca case than what we have been told by GOG.

p. 7 July 1, 1994: Nuccio meets with Harbury; she describes "offer" by MOD to release Bamaca if Harbury will drop case; asks Nuccio if he will assure MOD that she is sincere in offering to drop case in exchange for Bamaca's release; Nuccio expresses doubt that MOD has really made such an offer; Harbury claims McAfee has changed attitude about case and is no longer pressing it; Nuccio assures Harbury this is not true, agrees to bring up case with URNG and with MOD on his next trip to Mexico and Guatemala.

p. 7 August 10-11: Nuccio visits Guatemala, meets with MOD and raises Bamaca case; MOD rejects idea that he ever offered to release Bamaca, claims no knowledge of case; Nuccio urges MOD to take whatever steps on case are possible now before it becomes bigger issue in US-Guatemalan relations.

p. 7 August 11-12: Nuccio visits Mexico, questions Bamaca commander Gaspar Ilom about Bamaca. Ilom recounts personal relationship with Bamaca, that he personally recruited him into ORPA faction of URNG, taught him to read, feels that he is "like a son." Ilom asks Nuccio to do all he can on case.

p. 8 September 29, 1994: Nuccio meets with Harbury, conveys essence of conversation with MOD and Ilom. Possible that Harbury is accompanied by Santiago Cabrera at this meeting. Cabrera reviews his testimony to OAS with Nuccio.

p. 8 October 19, 1994: Nuccio is presented with May 1993 report on Bamca for first time, documenting that USG has had info on Bamaca case beyond what GOG has been telling us. A/S Watson reviews May 1993 report, concludes it is not definitive.

UNCLASSIFIED

p. 9 October 26, 1994: Nuccio meets with URNG command in Mexico City. Raises Bamaca case. Asks ORPA commander Ilom what solution to Bamaca case is possible. Ilom says Bamaca must be released if alive. Nuccio asks what can be done if he is not alive. Ilom says case must be pursued through judicial process and body must be handed over. Nuccio asks what if body cannot be produced. Ilom says judicial process is answer. Nuccio has side conversation with Ilom, says that he now has new information about case. Ilom says that he has noted new activism on USG part and thanks Nuccio for efforts.

p. 10 October 27, 1994: Nuccio and Amb. McAfee visit Jennifer in central plaza during hunger strike, agree to meet later at ambassador's residence.

p. 10 Nuccio and McAfee meet at ambassador's residence that evening with Harbury.

p. 11 November 9, 1994: ORPA commander Ilom calls Nuccio. Asks for help to prevent GOG from threatening Jennifer's health by making her attend pointless exhumations. Nuccio agrees to try, but points out that Harbury is attacking him personally, reducing his effectiveness. Ilom mentions NYTimes editorial chanrging Amb. McAfee and Nuccio with "silence" on case and says is unjust. Offers to send "messenger" to Harbury to warn her against "converting an attack on GOG and military into an attack on USG."

p. 11 November 11, 1994: Nuccio meets with URNG in Mexico City. Ilom takes credit for having ended Harbury hunger strike the day before by saying that he sent messenger to her that he had mentioned on November 11. Nuccio thanks Ilom and says that preservation of Jennifer's health is important since solution to the case will take a great deal of time.

It's probably a garble of the above. And we want to stay as far away from this one as possible, since there is no way that we should be smeared with what is really CIA's bad handling of some of these issues. CIA, I think, given my phone call earlier in the day, would love to have us participate so we could deflect some of the questions.

I agree it is getting hard to manage proliferating document requests.

It is also getting hard to track Hill events:
The SSCI is getting a Guatemala briefing from the intel community at 2:00 on Thursday. INR/IL said their bureau did not want to join in, the briefing team is CIA-only. If you think a policy target, I mean a policy rep, should be there, let me and Maria know and we can try to get ARA invited.
(Don't confuse this with SSCI getting a briefing on Somalia from State and CIA at 3:15 that same day.)

SSCi is getting a briefing on intel support for Mexico policy on Wednesday morning. INR/EC (Hinson) and INR/IAA (Smith or Ioffreda) will go with the intel community team, at my request. No policy rep was wanted.

I don't have info on a HPSCI briefing on Guatemala/Bamaca. Do you have more specific details, or could it be a garble of the above?

HPSCI is getting a staff briefing on Haiti intel issues Wednesday 2pm. INR/GGI (Bill Wood) is prepping to attend, the issue is UN intelligence sharing for UNMIH, which I alerted you to last week.

HPSCI is also getting an intel briefing on Mexico Thursday afternoon. CIA is going with Treasury. State was not invited. If we should be, I recommend your bureau getting Treasury to insist on including us. Let me and Maria know. If Treasury should include us, your bureau could enquire directly.

I did. Machak said his office assembled some 1,500 documents which are being looked at (by whom?). The retrieval process was done in-house, some off of microfilm. It was not necessary to spend time at the Suitland, MD archives.

Machak thinks the doc review should be done within two weeks. His office tries to do congressional requests quickly, which is why this is not taking "months." I'd be grateful if you keep me and Maria informed. As you put the cover letter for the documents together, let me know. There is a formula to follow and I can copy you an example.

The separate request by Jennifer Harbury is also underway, Machak said.

Jim -- did you get any info from Jim Machak of Info management about responding to the Specter/Kerrey ltr of Feb 23 asking for documents on the Devine and Bamaca cases? I have been tasked with responding to the letter but obviously the actual document search needs to be done by A/IM/IS/FPC.

Thx. Peg W.

COURT RAIDS ON ILLEGAL FOSTER CARE CENTERS AND THE COURT SEIZURES OF NUMEROUS INFANTS WHICH WERE DESTINED FOR THE INTERNATIONAL ADOPTION TRADE. ONE OF THE JUDGES INVOLVED, MERCEDES AMIDEY, HAS LONG BEEN AN OUTSPOKEN CRITIC OF INTERNATIONAL ADOPTIONS. CHARGES AND COUNTER CHARGES REGARDING BOTH LEGAL JURISDICTION AND CORRUPTION WERE TRADED BETWEEN THE ATTORNEYS AND THE JUDGES. NOW IT APPEARS THAT THE ADOPTION ATTORNEYS (NO MODELS OF PROBITY, THEMSELVES) HAVE MANAGED TO MAKE THEIR ACCUSATIONS AGAINST AMIDEY STICK. SHE HAS BEEN SUSPENDED BY THE DISCIPLINARY COUNCIL OF THE PARAGUAYAN SUPREME COURT ON CHARGES OF EXTORTION AND BLACKMAIL.

3. THE ATTORNEYS, LED BY PROMINENT ADOPTION LAWYER, ESTELA SANCHEZ, FREELY ADMIT THAT THEY HAD PAID AMILEY BETWEEN USD 15-20,000 TO GET ALL THEIR INFANTS RELEASED FROM COURT CUSTODY. OUR INFORMANT IN THE COURT HAD INITIALLY TOLD US THAT THE FIX WAS IN--BUT GAVE NO AMOUNT--AND THAT ALL THE CASES, BOTH GOOD AND BAD--WERE GOING TO BE RELEASED TO THE ATTORNEYS. AT THAT POINT, AMIDEY EITHER RENEGED ON THE DEAL OR DEMANDED EVEN LARGER PAYOFFS.

4. THE ATTORNEYS NOW CLAIM THAT THEY ONLY PAID THE BRIBES AS PART OF STING OPERATION IN THEIR OWN PRIVATE INVESTIGATION OF AMIDEY'S WRONGDOING (COMMENT: SHADES OF ABSCAM!) WHATEVER THE DEAL, THE EVIDENCE AGAINST AMIDEY SEEMS STRONG. THE ATTORNEYS PAID HALF OF THE BRIBES BY PERSONAL CHECK--AND AMIDEY'S SECRETARY AND HER NEIGHBORS CASHED THEM FOR HER.

5. COMMENT: AT THIS POINT, THE CASE IS PURELY AN ADMINISTRATIVE (DISCIPLINARY) COURT MATTER: SHE HAS NOT YET BEEN CHARGED IN A CRIMINAL COURT. AND LIKE SO MANY CRIMINAL CASES IN PARAGUAY, THE MATTER COULD QUIETLY DROP AND/OR THE FILES DISAPPEAR AFTER A FEW MONTHS. THIS SAME PATTERN HAS OCCURRED WHEN ESTELA SANCHEZ WAS HERSELF CHARGED WITH CRIMINAL WRONGDOING (BABY TRAFFICKING). MANY OF THE PROMINENT ADOPTION ATTORNEYS HAVE BEEN CHARGED-- EVEN INCARCERATED-- AND THEY ARE STILL PRACTICING. END COMMENT.

6. THERE IS NO INDICATION HOW THE SEIZED INFANTS WILL BE HANDLED. THEY APPEAR TO BE A MIX OF OTHERWISE LEGITIMATE CASES HOUSED IN

ILLEGAL FOSTER CARE CENTERS AND SOME OF THE INFANTS WHO MAY HAVE BEEN STOLEN. SOME OF THEM HAVE BEEN PLACED IN THE GUARDIANSHIP OF PARAGUAYAN FAMILIES. MANY OF THESE FAMILIES HAVE, THEMSELVES, BEEN WAITING TO ADOPT FOR MANY YEARS AND ARE QUITE LIKELY TO EXERCISE THEIR RIGHTS, UNDER PARAGUAYAN LAW, FOR FIRST PREFERENCE IN ADOPTING CHILDREN. OTHER INFANTS MAY BE RETURNED TO COMMERCIAL FOSTER CARE SITES.

6. COMMENT: ANOTHER INFORMANT TOLD US THAT UNTIL RECENTLY AMIDEY AND BEEN A CLEAN, IF SOMEWHAT ECCENTRIC, JUDGE. SEVERAL MONTHS AGO, SHE ALLEGEDLY GAVE IN AND TOOK MONEY TO EXPEDITE A GERMAN ADOPTION CASE. THE EXPERIENCE WAS, APPARENTLY AN EPIPHANY FOR HER, AND IN HER EXCESSIVE DEMANDS ON THE ADOPTION ATTORNEYS, SHE WANTED TO MAKE UP FOR LOST TIME. END COMMENT.

7. MEANWHILE, THE OTHER CRUSADING JUDGE, PATRICIA BLASCO, REMAINS UNTARRED BY THE CORRUPTION BRUSH. SEVERAL WRITS HAVE BEEN FILED CLAIMING THAT SHE WAS OVER-REACHING HER JURISDICTION. IN ONE CASE THE DECISION WENT AGAINST HER.

IN ONE OF BLASCO'S RECENT RAIDS (REF-A), SHE AND THE PRESS ENCOUNTERED A BIOMOTHER WHO HAD JUST UNDERGONE A CESAREAN DELIVERY. THE BIOMOTHER ALLEGED THAT SHE HAD BEEN FORCED TO UNDERGO SUCH THE OPERATION AND THAT THE ADOPTION ATTORNEYS HAD CHEATED HER, FIRST PROMISING HER OVER USD1200 FOR HER BABY BUT THEN ONLY PAYING HER USD650. THAT MOTHER IS NOW HOSPITALIZED, IN CRITICIAL CONDITION, WITH PERITONITIS STEMMING FROM THE CESAREAN. (COMMENT: THIS TYPE OF CASE IS LIKELY TO FURTHER RAISE PARAGUAYAN EMOTIONS ON THE INTERNATIONAL ADOPTION ISSUE.)

2. PARAGUAYAN JUVENILE COURT JUDGE SONIA TELLECHEA DE MILLER, WHO SIGNS AT LEAST 80 PER CENT OF THE INTERNATIONAL ADOPTIONS, IS REFUSING TO SIGN ADOPTION DECREES. THE OTHER JUVENILE COURT JUDGE WHO DOES ADOPTIONS, VICTOR LLANOS, APPEARS TO BE DRAGGING HIS FEET ON HIS CASE LOAD, BUT HE HAS MADE NO FORMAL DECLARATION.

3. IN RESPONSE TO THE EXPRESSED CONCERNS OF AMCIT ADOPTIVE PARENTS, CONOFF AND A TDY INS OFFICER CALLED UPON JUDGE TELLECHEA TO CLARIFY THE ISSUES AND SCOTCH RUMORS OF A UNILATERAL ADOPTION FREEZE. TELLECHEA TOLD US FLATLY, THAT THE RUMORS WERE TRUE, THAT SHE WAS NOT SIGNING DECREES, AND THAT IT WAS THE US EMBASSY'S RESPONSIBILITY TO HELP HER OUT IN HER LEGAL SQUABBLES WITH ANOTHER JUDGE IN THE JUVENILE COURT. SHE POINTEDLY SINGLED OUT ONE CASE WHEREIN THE ADOPTIVE ORPHAN WAS VERY SICK AND NEEDED MEDICAL TREATMENT. SHE TOLD US THAT SHE WAS EVEN HOLDING THIS CASE HOSTAGE AND UNLESS THE EMBASSY INTERCEDED, WITH THE SUPREME COURT, ON HER BEHALF, THE CHILD'S WELL BEING WOULD BE OUR--NOT HER--RESPONSIBILITY. (COMMENT: SHE HAS SINCE RELENTED AND SIGNED THIS, AND AT LEAST ONE OTHER, CASE).

4. POST HAS PREVIOUSLY REPORTED ON THE POLICE/JUVENILE COURT RAIDS, CARRIED OUT BY JUVENILE COURT JUDGES PATRICIA BLASCO AND MERCEDES AMIDEY (REFTELS). THEY HAVE SEIZED AT LEAST TWENTY ADOPTABLE INFANTS AND PLACED THEM IN FOSTER CARE--PENDING INVESTIGATION OF THEIR LEGAL STATUS AND IDENTITIES. A NUMBER OF THE PROMINENT ADOPTION ATTORNEYS MANAGED TO GET AMIDEY SUSPENDED FOR EXTORTION (REF C) BUT HAVE NOT MANAGED TO TAR JUDGE BLASCO WITH THE SAME BRUSH. INSTEAD, THEY (AND JUDGES TELLECHEA AND LLANOS) ARE ATTACKING BLASCO ON PROCEDURAL GROUNDS. THEY HAVE FILED VARIOUS WRITS AND COMPLAINTS TO THE EFFECT THAT BLASCO HAS OVERSTEPPED HER AUTHORITY (COMMENT: THE OPINION OF OTHER PARAGUAYAN JURISTS IS MIXED--AND CLOSELY TIED TO THEIR OPINIONS OF INTERNATIONAL ADOPTIONS OR OF THE PERSONALITIES INVOLVED. THE MEDIA SUPPORTS BLASCO). JUDGE BLASCO CONTINUES IN OFFICE AND THE SUPREME COURT HAS REFUSED TO EXAMINE THE MORE SUBSTANTIAL ELEMENTS OF THE ACCUSATIONS AGAINST HER.

5. TELLECHEA APPARENTLY BEGAN HER UNILATERAL

FREEZE DURING THE LAST WEEK OF MARCH BUT USED HER ATTENDANCE AT A JUDICIAL CONFERENCE IN SANTA CRUZ, BOLIVIA, TO MASK HER INTENT. SHE APPARENTLY FILED HER OWN COMPLAINTS AGAINST BLASCO AT VARIOUS COURTS BUT COULD NOT GET SATISFACTION. SHE THEN ATTEMPTED TO UTILIZE THE FRUSTRATION OF THE ADOPTIVE AMCITS TO PRESSURE THE EMBASSY TO, IN TURN, PRESSURE THE SUPREME COURT TO REMOVE BLASCO. (COMMENT: TELLECHEA USED ESSENTIALLY THE SAME TACTIC A YEAR AGO TO WREST A VOTE OF CONFIDENCE OUT OF THE SUPREME COURT IN RESPONSE TO CHARGES IN THE PRESS THAT SHE WAS ACCEPTING BRIBES.)

6. CONOFF EXPRESSED HIS DISAPPOINTMENT WITH HER TACTIC AND POINTED OUT THE INEQUITY OF USING THESE TWENTY PLUS FINALIZED CASES AS HOSTAGES. DURING THE DISCUSSION, TELLECHEA CONCEDED THAT HER TACTIC WAS ILLEGAL (AND THIS IS THE OPINION OF EVEN JURISTS SYMPATHETIC TO HER CAUSE.) CONOFF FIRMLY POINTED OUT THAT THE EMBASSY COULD NOT INTERCEDE IN WHAT WAS CLEARLY AN INTERNAL COURT PROCEDURAL MATTER.

7. COMMENT: TO WHATEVER DEGREE BLASCO HAS EXCEEDED HER AUTHORITY, IT IS CLEAR THAT TELLECHEA IS EVEN FURTHER OUT OF LINE. IT REMAINS UNCLEAR HOW THIS WILL PLAY ITSELF OUT. EVEN IF THE SUPREME COURT WERE TO TAKE AN INTEREST, IT WOULD BE MONTHS BEFORE THEY COULD ACT. THE NEW COURT IS JUST TAKING OFFICE (REF D). MOREOVER, THE NEW MAGISTRATES WERE ELECTED UNDER A MAJOR COURT REFORM BILL. IT WILL TAKE SOME TIME TO SORT OUT THE ENABLING LEGISLATION AND REGULATIONS. THEN, THEY MUST PRIORITIZE THEIR CASELOADS. AT ANY RATE, THE EMBASSY WILL CONTINUE TO FOLLOW THE ISSUE CLOSELY AND DO WHAT WE CAN TO MOVE THE PIPELINE CASES TO CLOSURE AS QUICKLY AS POSSIBLE.

1. ARA PRESS GUIDANCES OF APRIL 11, 1995:

-CHILE: RELATIONS WITH CUBA-

Q: WHAT IS THE US REACTION TO CHILE'S ANNOUNCEMENT OF DIPLOMATIC RELATIONS WITH CUBA?

A: THE UNITED STATES IS DISAPPOINTED BY THE DECISION OF THE GOVERNMENT OF CHILE TO RESTORE FULL DIPLOMATIC RELATIONS WITH CUBA. THE REGIME IN HAVANA CONTINUES TO VIOLATE THE BASIC HUMAN RIGHTS OF THE CUBAN PEOPLE AND IS THE SOLE GOVERNMENT IN THE HEMISPHERE WHICH RESISTS THE WAVE OF DEMOCRATIC CHANGE THAT HAS SWEPT THE REGION. LONG AS THIS SITUATION PREVAILS, WE BELIEVE CUBA SHOULD BE DENIED THE BENEFITS OF FULL DIPLOMATIC RECOGNITION.

Q. WILL CHILE USE ITS INFLUENCE WITH HAVANA TO INSIST ON RESPECT FOR HUMAN RIGHTS?

A: WE HOPE CHILE WILL USE ITS INFLUENCE TO PRESS THE CUBAN GOVERNMENT ON THE URGENT NEED FOR DEMOCRATIC REFORMS AND FULL OBSERVANCE OF HUMAN RIGHTS.

-GUATEMALA: WIDENING OF IOB PROBE-

Q: ANY COMMENT ON THE WP STORY REPORTING WIDENING OF THE INTELLIGENCE OVERSIGHT BOARD (IOB) REVIEW ORDERED BY THE PRESIDENT?

A: AS THE SECRETARY HAS SAID REPEATEDLY, THE DEPARTMENT SUPPORTS THE FULLEST POSSIBLE DISCLOSURE TO THE AMERICAN PEOPLE OF THE FACTS SURROUNDING THE DEATHS IN GUATEMALA OF MICHAEL DEVINE AND CERTAIN OTHER AMERICANS, AS WELL AS EFRAIN BAMACA. THE DEPARTMENT WILL COOPERATE FULLY WITH THE IOB REVIEW.

IF ASKED

THERE IS NOTHING FURTHER TO SAY. THE WHITE HOUSE PRESS ANNOUNCEMENT GIVES DETAILS ON HOW THE INTELLIGENCE OVERSIGHT BOARD WILL PROCEED.

-HAITI: DUROCHER BERTIN ASSASSINATION-

Q: DO YOU HAVE ANY COMMENT ON THE STORY IN TODAY'S NEW YORK TIMES ON THE STATUS OF THE DUROCHER BERTIN MURDER INVESTIGATION? IS IT TRUE THAT THE INVESTIGATION IS GETTING NOWHERE? WHAT ABOUT THE REPORTED SUSPICIONS THAT THE ATTACK WAS IN FACT AIMED AT HER COMPANION, EUGENE BAILLERGEAU?

A: THE CRIMINAL INVESTIGATION OF THIS INCIDENT BY THE FBI AND HAITIAN AUTHORITIES REMAINS ONGOING. WE DO NOT AS A MATTER OF COURSE COMMENT ON THE DETAILS OF SUCH AN INVESTIGATION.

ANY FURTHER QUESTIONS REGARDING THE INVESTIGATION SHOULD BE DIRECTED TO THE DEPARTMENT OF JUSTICE.

-HAITI: POLITICAL VIOLENCE-

Q: IS THE U.S. GOVERNMENT WARNING INDIVIDUALS DIRECTLY THAT THEY ARE FACING RISK OF ASSASSINATION? WHAT COMMENT DO YOU HAVE ON PRESS REPORTS THAT TENSION IS GROWING IN HAITI DUE TO THE THREAT OF POLITICALLY MOTIVATED VIOLENCE?

A: THE U.S. GOVERNMENT HAS RECEIVED FROM A VARIETY OF SOURCES INFORMATION OF VARYING QUALITY REGARDING POSSIBLE

THREATS TO INDIVIDUAL HAITIANS. WE HAVE MADE THIS INFORMATION AVAILABLE TO OUR MISSION IN PORT-AU-PRINCE AND ASKED THAT THEY IN TURN DISCUSS WITH THE UN MISSION AND THE GOVERNMENT OF HAITI THE APPROPRIATE ACTION TO BE TAKEN IN CASES WHERE THERE IS A CREDIBLE INDICATION OF A THREAT.

HOW TO ACT UPON THE INFORMATION IS PRIMARILY A DECISION FOR THE GOVERNMENT OF HAITI AND THE UN MISSION, WHICH IS RESPONSIBLE FOR ASSISTING THE GOVERNMENT OF HAITI IN MAINTAINING A SECURE AND STABLE ENVIRONMENT. WE ARE READY, OF COURSE, TO WORK WITH THEM IN THIS EFFORT. WE WILL, FOR INSTANCE, TAKE STEPS TO ENSURE THAT INDIVIDUALS ARE WARNED DIRECTLY WHEN THERE IS CREDIBLE INFORMATION OF A SPECIFIC THREAT AGAINST THEM.

AS THE INVESTIGATION INTO THE MARCH 28 ASSASSINATION CONTINUES, THE INTERNATIONAL COMMUNITY IS WORKING CLOSELY WITH THE GOVERNMENT OF HAITI TO PREVENT VIOLENT INCIDENTS FROM OCCURRING, AND OTHERWISE TO MAINTAIN A SECURE AND STABLE ENVIRONMENT IN HAITI.

6,000 UN PEACEKEEPING TROOPS, 900 UN CIVILIAN POLICE, AND HUMAN RIGHTS MONITORING TEAMS ARE ALL ACTIVELY WORKING TO SAFEGUARD HUMAN RIGHTS IN HAITI.

CURRENTLY THE UN/OAS INTERNATIONAL CIVILIAN MISSION (ICM) HAS 99 MONITORS IN HAITI. WE UNDERSTAND THE ICM'S PRESENCE WILL BE DOUBLED IN COMING WEEKS AS THE ELECTION CAMPAIGN GETS UNDERWAY, AND THEN INCREASED FURTHER AS THE ELECTION APPROACHES.

-HAITI: ELECTIONS-

Q: WERE THE ELECTIONS DELAYED AS A RESULT OF CRIME/SECURITY ISSUES?

A: NO. THE THREE-WEEK DELAY IN THE ELECTIONS CALENDAR IS DUE PRIMARILY TO LOGISTICAL PROBLEMS IN BOTH VOTER AND CANDIDATE REGISTRATION, WHICH ARE IN TURN RELATED TO THE CHALLENGE OF LOCATING AND SETTING UP THOUSANDS OF REGISTRATION SITES, IN ADDITION TO OTHER ADMINISTRATIVE CHALLENGES INHERENT IN ORGANIZING NATIONWIDE ELECTIONS.

THE DELAY WAS AGREED UPON BY GOVERNMENT AND OPPOSITION POLITICAL PARTIES -- ALL OF WHOM AGREED ON THE NEED TO REGISTER NEW VOTERS AND GIVE PARTIES A BETTER CHANCE TO ORGANIZE.

-MEXICO: SHOOTING OF TRANSIT CHIEF-

Q. WHAT CAN YOU TELL US ABOUT THE APRIL 11 SHOOTING OF MEXICO CITY'S DIRECT OF TRANSPORTATION?

A. OUR UNDERSTANDING IS THAT MEXICO CITY TRANSPORTATION DIRECTOR LUIS MIGUEL MORENO WAS FOUND DEAD FROM GUNSHOT WOUNDS ON APRIL 10.

WE HAVE NO FURTHER DETAILS ON MR. MORENO'S DEATH, NOR DO WE HAVE ANY INFORMATION CONNECTING IT TO THE ARRESTS. WE TRUST THE MEXICAN GOVERNMENT WILL THOROUGHLY INVESTIGATE THE CIRCUMSTANCES SURROUNDING MR. MORENO'S DEATH.

2. PRM PRESS GUIDANCE OF APRIL 11, 1995:

-CUBA: CUBAN MIGRANTS-

Q. HOW MANY CUBANS HAVE BEEN PAROLED/MEDEVACED INTO THE U.S.?

A. SOME 8,300 CUBAN MIGRANTS HAVE BEEN PAROLED INTO THE U.S. ON HUMANITARIAN GROUNDS OR HAVE BEEN MEDICALLY EVACUATED TO THE U.S.

7,542 FROM GUANTANAMO, AND 1,278 FROM PANAMA.

Q. HOW MANY MORE CUBANS WILL BE PAROLED IN?

A. SINCE HUMANITARIAN PAROLE IS GRANTED ON A CASE-BY-CASE BASIS BY THE ATTORNEY-GENERAL, I AM UNABLE TO TELL YOU HOW MANY MORE CUBANS AT GUANTANAMO WILL BE PAROLED INTO THE U.S.

CUBANS AT GUANTANAMO WILL CONTINUE TO BE CONSIDERED FOR HUMANITARIAN PAROLE IN ACCORDANCE WITH THE CRITERIA AUTHORIZED BY THE PRESIDENT.

ON OCTOBER 14, THE PRESIDENT ANNOUNCED THAT PAROLE WOULD BE EXTENDED TO UNACCOMPANIED MINORS, THE CHRONICALLY ILL, AND THE ELDERLY.

ON DECEMBER 2, THE ATTORNEY GENERAL ANNOUNCED THAT CUBAN CHILDREN, FOR WHOM LONG-TERM PRESENCE IN SAFE HAVEN WOULD CONSTITUTE AN EXTRAORDINARY HARDSHIP WOULD BE CONSIDERED FOR PAROLE, TOGETHER WITH THEIR IMMEDIATE FAMILES.

THESE CRITERIA REMAIN IN EFFECT.

Q. HOW MANY CUBAN MIGRANTS ARE NOW IN GUANTANAMO?

A. 22,355 CUBANS ARE AT GUANTANAMO.

NO CUBAN MIGRANTS REMAIN IN THE CAMPS IN PANAMA.

Q. HOW MANY CUBANS HAVE RETURNED TO CUBA?

A. 584 CUBANS HAVE RETURNED VOLUNTARILY TO CUBA THROUGH OFFICIAL CHANNELS.

950 CUBANS, THAT WE KNOW OF, HAVE LEFT THE BASE AND RETURNED TO CUBA OF THEIR OWN ACCORD.

IF ASKED

Q. WHEN WAS THE LAST VOLUNTARY RETURN FLIGHT TO HAVANA?

A. THE LAST VOLUNTARY RETURN FLIGHT WAS ON MARCH 28.

Q. HOW MANY MORE ARE AWAITING VOLUNTARY RETURN?

A. THE NAMES OF 143 CUBANS WHO HAVE ASKED TO RETURN HOME ARE BEFORE THE GOVERNMENT OF CUBA FOR APPROVAL.

Q. HOW MANY CUBANS HAVE BEEN MOVED TO THIRD COUNTRIES?

A. 18 CUBANS FROM PANAMA HAVE BEEN RESETTLED IN VENEZUELA.

118 CUBAN FROM PANAMA HAVE BEEN MOVED TO SPAIN TO JOIN FAMILLY MEMBERS THERE.

1 CUBAN HAS BEEN MOVED TO ITALY TO JOIN FAMILY THERE.

WE ARE CONTINING OUR DISCUSSIONS ON RESETTLEMENT POSSIBILITIES WITH OTHER COUNTRIES.

Judy, could you please pass the following info to Amb Watson? Thx.

Sir -

You had written a note on a cable from Guatemala recently regarding a proposed visit to the US by Leonel Machuca, the Guatemalan special prosecutor investigating the Bamaca case. He originally planned to come here the last week of April but has now decided to wait until the first week of May. He will apparently be accompanied by representatives of MINUGUA and the GOG's Presidential Human Rights Commission (Spanish acronym COPREDEH). He wants to interview Santiago Cabrera Lopez, the ex-URNG guerrilla who said he saw Bamaca in custody (Cabrera evidently lives in Mexico but will be in Washington then). Machuca also reportedly wants to see Rep. Torricelli; the Guatemalan Embassy is aware of this request but told Machuca they can't guarantee anything (and told him to postpone his trip until after the Congressional recess).

Subject: Orphan Adoption Fraud in Paraguay - Trip Report

During the period April 1-15, 1995, Immigration Officer Eduardo Sotomayor of this office was assigned to conduct a Deterrence Liaison Program visit to Paraguay specifically for the purpose of investigating the seriousness of allegations of adoption fraud, baby buying and abduction for international adoption ongoing in Paraguay. His visit was at the request of the U.S. Embassy-Asuncion.

I.O. Sotomayor did an excellent job given the time available in surfacing a number of serious deficiencies in the international adoption control regime, apparent collusion with attorneys on the part of several family court judges presiding over international adoption cases, and numerous examples of fraud, unethical conduct and aiding and abetting in the smuggling of migrants on the part of several attorneys. The picture that emerges is that of an international adoption regime that presents serious risks to adoptive parents, birth mothers, and Paraguayan infants and children. Given the exceptionally limited resources available to the sole Consul in Paraguay, effective policing of the adoption regime to ensure against fraud, misrepresentation and child buying is presently impossible. This is a powder keg that could easily explode in the coming months...to the disbenefit of prospective adoptive parents now and in the future.

I.O. Sotomayor has made a number of recommendations for actions to be taken by the Government of Paraguay, the Department of State and INS. Several of these, especially his recommendation of a temporary suspension of orphan petition processing in Paraguay may appear draconian. Properly structured and pursued, I believe this proposal and his several other recommendations have merit. I encourage your careful review, discussion of this report with HQ Adjudications and with the Department of State. Paraguay has become Romania-West. It needs the attention proposed.

On April 3, 1995 I visited the Consular Section at Asuncion, Paraguay and had a meeting with Mr. Eigel Hansen the consular officer. During the meeting we discussed the possibility of arranging various meetings with some of the judges that are involved in international and domestic adoptions. A review of all the pending adoption cases was requested and in fact, conducted.

During the review of adoption cases it was disclosed that at the present time the U.S. Embassy in Asuncion, Paraguay has well over 600 adoption cases pending. Unfortunately these cases cannot be investigated since they are only I-600A cases where the pre-adoption requirements have been met. In those cases, the only document available is a cable stating that the prospective adoptive parents have met the pre-adoption requirements. I was instructed to investigate ten cases. When I arrived at Asuncion there were only seven cases pending with almost all of the supporting documents being available. However, during the two weeks that I was there a total of seventeen cases were investigated to different stages, this will be explained further on in this report.

A meeting was conducted with Judge Sonia Tellechea de Miller who is one of four Asuncion adoption judges. Ms. Tellechea admitted that there is a lot of fraud on the international adoption scene as well as domestic adoptions. She stated that she is unable to do anything about it. Although it is not known whether Ms. Tellechea is independently wealthy, it is obvious that she lives very well. This writer was informed that Ms. Tellechea's monthly salary is approximately $2,000.00 Guaranies the equivalent of about $1,000.00 USD a month. She is able to drive a new four wheel drive Montero with an estimated value of $35,000.00 dollars. Ms. Tellechea was asked how many adoption cases her office processed during calendar year 1994. She initially refused to answer but with a little insistence, she stated that they average about one hundred cases a year. A review was conducted at the statistical section of the court building where her office is and it was disclosed that this particular judge had processed a total of 450 adoptions out of the total 538 international and domestic adoptions countrywide. Ms. Sonia Tellechea is the leader in international and domestic adoptions. The rest of the adoptions were handled by the following Judges in descending order as to total cases closed; Judge Victor Llanos: 52 international adoptions with no domestic cases; Judge Irma de Bogarin, (an outspoken critic of international adoptions) signed 23 domestic adoptions and Judge Mercedes Amidey, who was suspended for corruption charges, signed 3 domestic adoptions.

Paraguayan law requires that adoption cases be assigned to the judges in batches of no more than 20 cases at a time. When the first judge receives 20 cases, the next batch must go to the second sitting judge and so on. Upon reaching the fourth judge the cycle begins anew. Theoretically, each judge should have processed an equal amount of domestic and international adoption cases. The statistics that were gathered clearly show that the law stipulating the order of assignment of adoption cases was being ignored and that the adoption attorneys were taking all of their cases to the same two judges.

Mrs. Tellechea claims that every judge has the right to refuse to process any case because of possible collusion. In such a case, the next judge in line will receive such case, however, a number of cases were checked and there was no indication that any cases had been refused by other judges. Mrs. Tellechea was asked about this finding and she had no answer whatsoever. However, Ms. Tellechea, wasted no time in referring us to the Second Court of Appeals where all adoption cases need to go to be certified. Judge Mirian Peña de Ortiz was informed of our presence, and granted us an immediate appointment. It is believed by Consular personnel that Ms. Mirian Peña de Ortiz is the brain behind the corruption related to adoptions in Paraguay. I asked her opinion as to the bad publicity in newspapers everyday regarding adoptions, to which she replied, that it was a shame. She stated that she has heard the rumors but stated that no concrete evidence has ever been presented. I asked her what she knew about the criminal case against Judge Mercedes Amidey. Her reply was that she felt that Judge Amidey didn't know what she was doing. (Judge Mercedes Amidey was suspended for alleged corruption). Judge Peña de Ortiz said that all adoption cases have to go through the appeals court where the three judges sit. The cases are certified to be in compliance with all legal requirement. She stated that that is all that matters in her section. She also was asked about the adoption process for Paraguayan citizens to which she responded that Paraguayans have priority over prospective international adopting parents. She was asked how they do that and she said that there is a waiting list for Paraguayans who are interested in adopting. However, she stated that the list was maintained on another floor of the same building. I asked to see the list but the person in charge of it was not able to find it. This interview was conducted with Asuncion Consular Officer Eigel Hansen who believed as I, that unfortunately, all Ms. Peña was doing was covering for her colleague.

A meeting was then conducted with the Judge of the Court of First Instance for the Criminal Section, Luis Maria Benitez-Riera. He stated for the record that corruption in the Paraguayan government is out of control and that he was aware that Judge Mirian Peña and Judge Sonia Tellechea de Miller are both corrupt. He stated that they receive money in order to expedite cases. A review was conducted of 17 completed cases and they all complied with legal adoption requirements. However, the main problem with adoption cases is that Paraguay does not have an adoption law and what they use to adjudicate cases is what they call ACORDADAS. Acordadas are like administrative guidelines that were established by the judges who conduct adoption cases with the exception of one of them who decided to go into private practice and is at the present time the leader in international adoptions. Judge Benitez said that the major problem lies with the acquisition of the babies that are presented for adoption. He claimed that the majority of these children are acquired through pressure, intimidation and misleading promises. As an example, he stated that they (the attorneys) tell the biological mothers that they will be taking care of the child. They tell the biological mothers that they will be able to see the child any time they want. The bio-mother is also told that if the child is taken out of the country the adoptive parents will bring the child back so the bio-mother could see how the child is doing. This commitment is not written anywhere.

A visit was conducted at the most commonly used civil registrar office where it was observed by this writer that the office was left unattended for a period of about fifteen minutes. During this period, a young man that was at the office started looking for one of the clerks that was supposed to be on duty. This gave me the opportunity to look at some registry books and also to notice a stack of unattended birth certificate. After a short conversation with one of the clerks, he showed me all the registry books that I wanted to review. It was noticed that some of the annotations on the books were not signed by the officer in charge, nor were any notations made in the empty blocks of the certificates, in order to avoid extraneous information being added after the fact. It was also noticed that one of the clerks was altering a birth certificate based on an applicants request. The name was changed according to the applicant's desire without submitting any documentation whatsoever. It was also disclosed that cases of children that had been adopted months prior to our visit had no information in the books stating that the child was carrying a new name nor that the child had even been adopted. It was discovered that there is no law relating to the registry of a child within any specific period of time from birth. As a practical matter, a mother can bring her child to be registered at any time after birth and at any place even if the child was born one thousand kilometers away.

A visit was made to an organization named TECOJOJACK which works with people who don't have resources to pay for a private attorney. At the present time there are four cases relating to adoptions of which two of the four are under litigation. One of the cases is the Hillman case, where the adoption was processed presenting another baby to the court. The evidence presented to us clearly shows that the child that was presented to complete the adoption procedure was another child. The Tecojojack showed us a set of foot prints of the child in question and it clearly shows that the child presented for adoption at the court was bigger than the child that was given for adoption. The signature of the mother was also obviously falsified. This case is pending at the court since there are two ladies claiming to be the biological mother of the same child. At the present time the child in the custody of the court and is being held at a guarderia, (child care center).

Another case that was discussed is the Zerby case. This case is currently pending at the court because it is alleged that the attorney of record purchased the child from the common-law husband of the bio-mother. She claims that she was not aware of this situation and that she wants her child back since the bio-father doesn't want the child to be given for adoption. The judge of the Appeals Court was asked about this case. Ms. Mirian de Peña stated that the individual claiming to be the father only wanted more money. I asked her if that action was illegal and she said no. I immediately asked her why she was not doing anything about this situation and she stated that she hadn't meant to say that. That particular case was not in her jurisdiction. She was again asked why this case was not reported to the proper authorities for investigation to which she did not respond. The bio-mother in this case was interviewed and she claimed that the attorney of record had told her that if she doesn't stop making noise he is going to put her in jail and that she would lose another of her-children that is four years old. The conversation that we had with her was in the Guarani language, but it was clear that she was very nervous about the situation.

An interview was conducted with Judge Patricia Blasco as relates to the guarderias and also about her opinion on adoption cases. She said that the main problem was that there are no laws as relates to the adoption processes or any major regulation as relates to the guarderias. As a result, some of the attorneys, including an ex-judge who is now in private practice and only regarding adoptions, is the owner of one of the guarderias. Once the adoptive parent has been granted legal custody of a child, the attorneys begin charging the adoptive parent for the child to be at the guarderia. Judge Patricia Blasco also stated that there are over 100 case reported of stolen babies and that either no or little action is been taken to recover those children.

A total of 17 cases were reviewed by this writer and the consular section FSN Officer and the following were the results:

Nine bio-mothers were interviewed of which one DNA test was recommended, four hospital record checks were conducted, ten adoption cases were recommended for approval and seven birth certificate records were checked. Those case are as follows:

1. On the DNA test recommended, the bio-mother was interviewed and there were many discrepancies in her interview, such as stating that the judge who interviewed her for the proceeding was a female when in fact he was a male Judge. Subject was asked to look at some pictures of babies and select hers but she identified another baby, not her own.

2. A bio-mother that was interviewed requested her child be given back to her because she claimed that her baby was taken from her when she was sent by her employer to purchase some groceries. She stated that when she returned from the store her baby was no longer in her house. This case is in court since there are two mothers claiming the same child.

3. A bio-mother who at interview claimed that she was forced by the attorney of record to give her child up for adoption. She claims that the attorney of record told her that if she continued making noise she would be killed or she was going to lose her other baby. This case is at the present time in court.

4. A bio-mother who was interviewed stated that she wanted her baby back and she gave a statement to that effect. However, on the next working day she presented herself to the embassy and stated that she received a lot of pressure from her family. She stated that she was unable to take care of the baby by herself. She was again interviewed and it really appeared that she was being pressured by the attorney. Unfortunately, she didn't want to change her decision again.

5. A bio-mother was interviewed and it was disclosed that the bio-mother only visited the courthouse one time when the average visits to court are at least three. This particular case shows how attorneys with the right connections at the courthouse can expedite the adoption process.

6. A bio-mother's documents were returned since some of the documents were not properly signed by the escribano (the notary public).

The investigations that were conducted by this writer and the consular section FSN demonstrate that there is rampant corruption within the Paraguayan Court systems. Unfortunately, we were unable to gather any concrete evidence of corruption in Asuncion, Paraguay. However, when you have judges from different courts telling you with witnesses about the corruption it is difficult to say that no corruption exists. During the investigative process, various judges and attorneys accused one another of accepting bribes for the expedited service of processing adoption cases in order to remove the child from the country when their is doubt as to where the child came from.

The recommendations made were discussed with various Judges, Attorneys, Consular Officer Hansen, the FSN investigator and the DCM.

RECOMMENDED ACTION TO BE TAKEN BY THE EMBASSY:

Establish a new procedure for all cases presented to the embassy for immigrant visas relating to adoption cases, such as presenting all documents to the Embassy as they are processed by the courts. This will allow for timely investigation of cases as they progress. Those processes include:

- A copy of the attorney's first presentation at the court. (Document where the attorney advises the court of an adoption process). Average processing time 60 days.

- A copy of the District Attorney's first opinion where the court agrees to the adoption. Average processing time 15 days.

- A copy of the judge's subpoena requesting that the bio-mother present herself in court. This will allow for a picture to be taken of the bio-mother and even allow for an interview with her. Average processing time 15 days.

Bio-mother affirms that she wants to give her child up for adoption. Average processing time 15 days.

District Attorney documents that all acordadas have been complied with. Average processing time 60 days.

e - Remove attorney's from the guarderias, in order to avoid the judge's from assigning children to specific guarderias.

f - Enforce laws against corrupt attorneys and or judge's and their clerks.

g - Establish a list to be made available to the public for prospective Paraguayan citizens who have a desire to adopt a child.

PROFILE OF THE BIO-MOTHER OF CHILD GIVEN FOR ADOPTION.

1 - Prostitute, unemployed, minors and/or maids.

2 - Illiterate or at best fourth or fifth grade of elementary school completed.

3 - All the bio-mothers have the same story, a friend (female) introduced them to the attorney and they never know how this so-called friend met the attorney and cannot remember the friends name. If they do, they don't now their address.

4 - No financial means to raise the child.

5 - They are unable to identify which documents they signed in court or cannot identify the location of that court nor do they know the names of people who were present at court.

6 - Bio-mother unable to remember the date that she declared her intention of releasing her child for adoption.

7 - No idea who the adoptive parents are or the nationality even though some declare their intention in only giving their child for international adoption.

8 - Bio-father always disappears when advised that the bio-mother is going to have a baby.

9 - Bio-mother is coached by the attorney as to which hospital to go for patient care and also which registrar's office and which notary public to see in order to give the child for adoption. In many cases the bio-mother gives birth to the child 50 or more kilometers from where the location of the child's registration.

10 - They all claimed that they have received no money for their baby.

11 - In the majority of cases midwives are reported to have been used and the current location of that midwife is unknown.

RECOMMENDED ACTIONS BY INS/MEXICO:

a - An officer should be assigned to Asuncion, Paraguay periodically, (every two or three months) to work on orphan/adoption investigations for a period of one or two weeks depending on the cases necessary. Not only will this give INS a closer understanding of new and recurrent trends relating to fraud, it will impress on GOP the importance which the USG places on all kinds of fraud endemic to Paraguay. Prior arrangements should be made as it relates to appointments.

b - International adoptions should not be accepted or processed in Asuncion, Paraguay, until an adoption Law is established.

c - All licensed agencies who are involved in international adoptions should be required to participated in a standard adoption seminar presented by the INS within the jurisdiction of such agency in order to be accepted by INS for international adoption processing.

d - Lookouts should be posted relating to Judges and Attorneys that are involved in the documented, suspected or possible smuggling operations relating to children or orphan processing.

e - Request that State Department revoke NIV's of all the Judges and Attorney's who are suspected of being involved in corruption relating to adoption/orphan processing in Paraguay.

f - Create a database relating to international adoptions. This database should have information such as, attorneys who are involved in international and domestic adoptions, and a list of all the adoption agencies with a risk code to it.

WITH THE ASSISTANCE OF THE CIA. RONALD GLASS OF USAID, WHO BY CHANCE WAS THE ASSISTANT ARMY ATTACHE AT THE EMBASSY HERE IN THE MID 1980'S, MET WITH THE FAMILY AND CONVEYED THE SAME VERSION OF FATHER CARNEY'S DEATH AS GIVEN BY THE AMBASSADOR. AFTER EXPRESSING THEIR GRATITUDE TO RON GLASS, THEY STATED THAT CONDITIONS IN HONDURAS HAD CHANGED A GREAT DEAL AND THEY NOW BELIEVE THEY COULD CONDUCT THEIR INVESTIGATION WITHOUT HINDRANCE AND FEAR FROM THE MILITARY. THEY ALSO STATED THAT THE AMBASSADOR AND THE EMBASSY WERE BEING VERY HELPFUL AND WERE SATISFIED THEY COULD DEPEND ON US FOR ASSISTANCE. THEY LEFT HONDURAS MAY 16 BOUND FOR ENGLAND. END SUMMARY.

3. ON MAY 15, DRS. W. JOSEPH AND EILEEN CONNOLLY (BROTHER IN LAW AND SISTER OF FATHER CARNEY) AND JOHN PATRICK CARNEY (BROTHER) VISITED THE AMBASSADOR TO INTRODUCE THEMSELVES AND DISCUSS THEIR INVESTIGATION INTO THE DEATH OF FATHER JAMES FRANCIS CARNEY, A ROMAN CATHOLIC PRIEST, WHO WAS REPORTED KILLED IN HONDURAS AROUND SEPTEMBER 14-16, 1983. THE FAMILY ASKED THE AMBASSADOR FOR THE FULL, PRACTICAL SUPPORT OF THE EMBASSY BY REQUESTING THAT WE REVIEW OUR FILES AND ASK THE HONDURAN GOVERNMENT AND

MILITARY TO COME FORTH WITH DATA RELEVANT TO THIS CASE. THEY EXPRESSED A DEEP DESIRE TO CLOSE THIS MATTER BY LEARNING THE TRUE CIRCUMSTANCES OF FATHER CARNEY'S DEATH AND, IF POSSIBLE TO LOCATE HIS BODY AND RETURN IT THE UNITED STATES.

4. PRIOR TO MEETING WITH THE FAMILY, THE AMBASSADOR WAS BRIEFED ON THE CASE OF FATHER JAMES FRANCIS CARNEY (WHO CALLED HIMSELF PADRE GUADALUPE IN HONDURAS) BY RONALD GLASS WHO WAS THE ASSISTANT ARMY ATTACHE DURING THE TIME OF THE DISAPPEARANCE OF FATHER CARNEY IN 1983 AND WHO INVESTIGATED THE INCIDENT AT THAT TIME.. GLASS IS NOW A RETIRED ARMY OFFICER WHO HAS WORKED AS A PROJECT OFFICER AT USAID FOR THE LAST THREE YEARS. RON GLASS WAS TOLD THAT FATHER CARNEY JOINED A GROUP OF 96 HONDURANS WHO HAD BEEN TRAINED IN CUBA AND RETURNED TO HONDURAS WITH THE MISSION OF ORGANIZING AN INSURGENCY SUPPORT NETWORK AND TO LAY THE GROUNDWORK FOR FUTURE MILITARY OPERATIONS AGAINST THE HONDURAN GOVERNMENT. IN BRIEF, THE GROUP IN JULY 1983 WAS ON A NINE DAY FORCED MARCH TO REACH THEIR BASE CAMP ON A MOUNTAIN IN THE OLANCHO REGION OF HONDURAS. IT WAS A GRUELING MARCH AND TOOK A HEAVY TOLL ON THE HEALTH OF FATHER CARNEY. MOST OF THEIR FOOD SUPPLIES HAD RUN OUT BY THE TIME THEY REACHED THE CAMP.

5. THE GROUP'S PRESENCE WAS BETRAYED ON AUGUST 1 BY TWO OF ITS MEMBERS WHO DESERTED UPON CROSSING INTO HONDURAS.

A MORE IN-DEPTH VERSION OF THIS WAS RELAYED TO THE FAMILY BY THE AMBASSADOR WHO ALSO EXPLAINED THAT THE EMBASSY HAD NO RECORDS ON THIS CASE SINCE THEY WERE ALL SENT TO THE DEPARTMENT YEARS AGO; FOR THIS REASON, IT WAS FORTUITOUS THAT RON GLASS WAS HERE AND ABLE TO BRIEF THE AMBASSADOR FROM PERSONAL EXPERIENCE, HAVING BEEN RESPONSIBLE FOR EMBASSY/DAO REPORTING IN JULY - SEPTEMBER 1983 ON THE PRTC GROUP INVESTIGATION AS TO THE STATUS OF FATHER CARNEY. THE GROUP IS IN POSSESSION OF MANY OF THE REPORTS WRITTEN BY THEN ASSISTANT ATTACHE GLASS WHICH THEY OBTAINED THROUGH THE FREEDOM OF INFORMATION PROCESS.

VIVIDLY DESCRIBED. HOWEVER, THEY SAID SEVERAL OTHER VERSIONS OF THE CIRCUMSTANCES OF FATHER CARNEY'S DEATH WERE TOLD TO THEM BY VARIOUS HONDURANS. JOSEPH CONNOLLY SAID HE INTERVIEWED 16 MEMBERS OF THE GROUP IN SEPTEMBER 1983 THAT WERE TAKEN PRISONER BY GOVERNMENT FORCES.

7. JOSEPH CONNOLLY ALLEGES THAT FATHER CARNEY WAS CAPTURED BY THE HONDURAN MILITARY WITH THE HELP OF THE U.S. NATIONAL GUARD AND ELEMENTS OF THE SOUTHERN MILITARY COMMAND ON SEPTEMBER 4, 1983. THE FAMILY ALLEGES FATHER CARNEY WAS HELD AND TORTURED AT CIA/CONTRA BASE AT EL AGUACATE, HONDURAS DURING THE PERIOD OF SEPTEMBER 4-16, 1983 (SUPPOSEDLY THIS BASE WAS STAFFED WITH SOME CIA AND PENTAGON PEOPLE WORKING WITH THE CONTRAS).

8. ON SEPTEMBER 16, 1983, ACCORDING TO ONE OF THE FAMILY'S SOURCES, HE WAS ALLEGEDLY EXECUTED BY BEING THROWN FROM A HELICOPTER PROVIDED BY THE U.S. GOVERNMENT. THE BASIS FOR THIS SCENARIO IS AN INTERVIEW SUPPOSEDLY CONDUCTED BY THE CONNOLLY FAMILY OF THREE FORMER HONDURAN MILITARY OFFICERS WHO REPORTEDLY STATED THAT FATHER CARNEY WAS CAPTURED ALIVE, WAS TORTURED AND THEN TAKEN ALIVE TO THE MOUNTAINS TO BE DROPPED FROM A HELICOPTER. THEY ALSO POINT TO HONDURAN NEWSPAPER ARTICLES AND THREE INVESTIGATIVE FILMS BY THE BBC AS CORROBORATING THIS VERSION OF CARNEY'S DEATH.

9. THE AMBASSADOR AND DCM STATED THAT IT WAS NOT LIKELY THAT THE HONDURANS WOULD USE A HELICOPTER IN AN EXECUTION. THIS HAD OCCURRED IN ARGENTINA BUT WAS NOT USED IN HONDURAS AS FAR AS WE KNOW. MORE LIKELY, IF HE HAD BEEN KILLED THE BODY WOULD HAVE BEEN BURIED IN SOME CLANDESTINE CEMETERY WHERE IT COULD NOT BE FOUND. THE AMBASSADOR FURTHER STATED THAT HE HAD SEEN NO EVIDENCE, NOR DID HE BELIEVE THAT THE UNITED STATES MILITARY AND CIA INVOLVED THEMSELVES IN TORTURE OR THE KILLING OF FATHER CARNEY. REGARDLESS OF THE MERITS OF THE AMBASSADOR'S ARGUMENT, MR. CONNOLLY CONTINUED TO VOICE HIS BELIEF THAT THE CIA AND U.S. MILITARY WERE INVOLVED. MR. CONNOLLY SAID THE LEAVING OF FATHER CARNEY IN THE JUNGLE BECAUSE OF HIS WEAKENED CONDITION WAS PLAUSIBLE AND THEY HAD HEARD THAT VERSION BEFORE BUT DID NOT BELIEVE THAT IS HOW HE DIED.

10. THE GROUP SAID, HOWEVER, THAT ONE OF THEIR SOURCES CLAIMS TO HAVE SEEN FATHER CARNEY IN CAPTIVITY IN SEPTEMBER OR OCTOBER 1983 WITH HIS HANDS TIED BEHIND HIS BACK. THEY SAID ANOTHER SOURCE CLAIMS TO HAVE HEARD A MILITARY RADIO TRANSMISSION DESCRIBING THE CAPTURE OF FATHER CARNEY. IN ANOTHER CASE, THEY ALLEGE THAT A SOLDIER (THEY WOULD NOT DIVULGE HIS NAME) SIGNED A DECLARATION THAT FATHER CARNEY WAS CAPTURED. ALL THREE CONTINUED TO PUSH THEIR CONSPIRACY THEORY BY STATING THAT THE CIA DID NOT WANT CARNEY TO PUBLISH A BOOK HE HAD WRITTEN ON HIS EXPERIENCES IN HONDURAS BECAUSE THERE WERE

NAMES IN HIS WRITINGS THAT COULD GET PEOPLE KILLED. FOR THIS REASON, THEY ALLEGE THAT THE CIA TRACKED FATHER CARNEY AND, IN CONSPIRACY WITH THE HONDURAN MILITARY, BROUGHT ABOUT HIS DEATH. THE BOOK, "TO BE A REVOLUTIONARY", WAS LATER PUBLISHED.

11. TO ASSIST THEM IN THEIR INVESTIGATION, THEY REQUESTED THAT THE EMBASSY OBTAIN FROM THE HONDURAN GOVERNMENT A COPY OF THE INTERROGATION OF FATHER CARNEY THEY SAID WAS CARRIED OUT IN THE CIA/CONTRA BASE AT AGUACATE AND FATHER CARNEY'S DIARY WHICH THEY NEVER RECEIVED WHEN THEY WERE GIVEN HIS VESTMENTS AND OTHER PERSONAL EFFECTS. THEY ALSO REQUESTED THE LOCATION OF COLONEL GERALD CLARK, THE ARMY ATTACHE IN HONDURAS AT THAT TIME WHO ASSISTED IN ATTEMPTING TO LOCATE FATHER CARNEY'S BODY.

12. THE AMBASSADOR READILY AGREED TO ATTEMPT TO OBTAIN THE DIARY AND THE LOCATION OF FATHER CARNEY'S BODY, IF POSSIBLE. HE RECOMMENDED, HOWEVER, THAT THEY NOT REQUEST A COPY OF AN INTERROGATION REPORT WHICH MAY OR MAY NOT EXIST, AT THIS TIME SINCE IT MAY CAUSE DIFFICULTIES IN OBTAINING OTHER DATA NECESSARY TO THEIR INVESTIGATION.

SUBJECT: CONNOLLY/CARNEY FAMILY VISIT WITH AMBASSADOR CONCERNING DISAPPEARANCE OF FATHER JAMES FRANCIS CARNEY IN 1983

1. SUMMARY: JOSEPH CONNOLLY, EILEEN CARNEY CONNOLLY AND JOHN PATRICK CARNEY PAID A CALL ON THE AMBASSADOR MAY 15 TO SEEK THE EMBASSY'S ASSISTANCE IN AN INVESTIGATION INTO THE DEATH OF FATHER JAMES FRANCIS CARNEY (THEIR BROTHER/BROTHER IN LAW) WHO WAS REPORTED KILLED IN HONDURAS IN 1983. THEY REQUESTED ASSISTANCE IN LOCATING HIS BODY AND RETURNING IT TO THE UNITED STATES. THE AMBASSADOR GAVE FULL SUPPORT TO THESE REQUESTS AND SPENT

SOME TWO HOURS WITH THE FAMILY GIVING THEM AN IN-DEPTH ACCOUNT OF FATHER CARNEY'S DEATH AS IT WAS REPORTED BY EMBASSY/DAO ACCOUNTS OF WHAT WAS REPORTED TO THEM AT THE TIME, I.E., THAT FATHER CARNEY MAY HAVE STARVED TO DEATH AFTER BEING ABANDONED IN THE JUNGLE BY HIS HONDURAN COMPANIONS.

THE FAMILY UNANIMOUSLY AGREED WITH THE AMBASSADOR AND WILL HOLD OFF ON THAT REQUEST UNTIL A LATER DATE. WE ALSO LEARNED AND CONVEYED TO THE FAMILY THAT COLONEL GERALD CLARK HAD BEEN KILLED IN AN AUTO ACCIDENT IN PANAMA IN 1986.

13. IN THE MEANTIME, THE AMBASSADOR AND DCM SUGGESTED THEY TAKE OUT ADS IN THE NEWSPAPERS, OFFERING A REWARD FOR ANY INFORMATION LEADING TO THE DISCOVERY OF FATHER CARNEY'S BODY. IT WAS ALSO SUGGESTED THAT THEY GO TO THE OLANCHO REGION WHERE HE WAS LAST SEEN AND TALK WITH THE PEOPLE THERE IN HOPES OF LEARNING SOMETHING ABOUT FATHER

CARNEY AND WHERE HE MIGHT BE BURIED. THEY AGREED THIS WOULD BE A GOOD IDEA BUT STATED THEY HAD NEITHER THE TIME NOR FINANCES FOR SUCH A PROJECT.

14. SINCE RON GLASS WAS AVAILABLE, THE AMBASSADOR SUGGESTED THE FAMILY MEET WITH HIM AND HEAR FROM SOMEONE WHO WAS PERSONALLY INVOLVED IN THE INVESTIGATION. HUMAN RIGHTS OFFICER MEL TURNER ACCOMPANIED THE FAMILY TO THE MEETING. ESSENTIALLY, RON GLASS REPEATED WHAT THE AMBASSADOR HAD TOLD THEM EARLIER, THAT HE WAS SENT TO A PLACE CALLED NUEVO PALESTINA TO INVESTIGATE THE DISAPPEARANCE OF FATHER CARNEY AND INTERVIEW DESERTERS FROM THE HONDURAN INSURGENCY GROUP. THIS IS WHERE HE WAS TOLD BY TWO PRTC GUERILLAS WHO PURPORTED TO BE THE LAST TO SEE FATHER CARNEY, THAT FATHER CARNEY WAS LEFT IN A HAMMOCK AND ABANDONED IN THE JUNGLE ON THE SOUTHEAST BANK OF THE RIO PATUCA BY HIS GUERILLA COMPANIONS, AND THAT HE HAD LIKELY DIED FROM PHYSICAL EXHAUSTION AND STARVATION.

15. AT THE CONCLUSION OF THE MEETING, ALL THREE MEMBERS OF THE FAMILY EXPRESSED THEIR GRATITUDE TO RON GLASS FOR HIS PERSONAL INTEREST IN THEIR QUEST TO FIND THE TRUTH ABOUT HOW FATHER CARNEY HAD DIED. THEY WERE ESPECIALLY GRATEFUL THAT, FOR THE FIRST TIME, THEY HAD SPOKEN WITH SOMEONE WHO WAS IN HONDURAS AT THAT TIME AND SOMEONE WHO WAS BEING HONEST WITH THEM. ALTHOUGH THEY CONTINUED TO FAVOR THE VERSION THAT THE CIA WAS INVOLVED, THEY ADMITTED THAT AFTER HEARING RON GLASS, IT WAS POSSIBLE THAT FATHER CARNEY MAY HAVE DIED AS BOTH HE AND THE AMBASSADOR DESCRIBED. THE MEETING WAS VERY CORDIAL AND ENDED ON A HIGH NOTE WITH THE FAMILY STATING THAT THEY BELIEVE THE EMBASSY CARES AND, UNLIKE IN THE PAST WILL ASSIST.

16. FOLLOWING THE MEETING, EMBOFF SPOKE WITH DR. LEO VALLADARES, HUMAN RIGHTS COMMISSIONER, AND WAS TOLD THAT FATHER CARNEY WAS ON THE LIST OF THE 184 DISAPPEARED PERSONS GIVEN TO THE ATTORNEY GENERAL'S OFFICE FOR INVESTIGATION. THE FAMILY WAS ELATED AND HAD HOPES THAT THE ATTORNEY GENERAL WILL LOOK INTO FATHER CARNEY'S CASE SOON. WE HAVE SCHEDULED A MEETING WITH THE CHIEF OF THE HUMAN RIGHTS SECTION OF THE ATTORNEY GENERAL'S OFFICE FOR MAY 24 AND WILL REQUEST THAT FATHER CARNEY'S CASE BE GIVEN TOP PRIORITY. IN THE MEANTIME, WE HAVE BEGUN REQUESTING INFORMATION ON FATHER CARNEY FROM THE MILITARY. WE ARE ALSO TALKING WITH LOCAL HUMAN RIGHTS GROUPS AND REQUESTING THAT THEY USE THEIR GOOD OFFICES AND SOURCES TO ASSIST IN LOCATING FATHER CARNEY'S BODY, IF POSSIBLE.

17. COMMENT: WHEN EMBOFF FIRST MET THE THREE FAMILY MEMBERS, IT WAS OBVIOUS THEY WERE APPREHENSIVE, DEFENSIVE AND SOMEWHAT HOSTILE TOWARD THE EMBASSY. IN DISCUSSIONS BEFORE MEETING WITH THE AMBASSADOR, PATRICK AND EILEEN SAID THEY HAD BEEN TO HONDURAS A NUMBER OF TIMES SINCE THEIR BROTHER'S DISAPPEARANCE AND HAD ALWAYS FELT AS THOUGH THEY WERE BEING TREATED AS OUTSIDERS AND ANTAGONISTS WHO WOULD NOT LEAVE WELL ENOUGH ALONE.

18. IT HAD BEEN SEVERAL YEARS SINCE THEIR LAST VISIT AND THEY HAD ANTICIPATED A "HARD TIME" AS IN PREVIOUS VISITS. FORTUNATELY, THEY WENT ON TO SAY, THE ENVIRONMENT IN HONDURAS HAS DRAMATICALLY CHANGED AND THEY WERE ABLE TO TALK FREELY TO THEIR SOURCES AND OTHER PEOPLE WITHOUT EITHER OF THEM FEARING THE MILITARY OR THE GOVERNMENT. NOW, THEY SAID, THEY ARE OPTIMISTIC THAT THEY CAN GET TO THE ROOT OF THE CAUSE OF THEIR BROTHER'S DEATH.

BIGEYE TUNA

The world catches of bigeye are less than those of skipjack and yellowfin, but greater than those of albacore and northern and southern bluefin. Bigeye are most often consumed fresh, whereas skipjack and yellowfin are usually canned. Since the prices are much higher for fish which are destined for fresh-fish markets, bigeye are an extremely important component of the world catches of tuna. During the 1984-1993 period, 34 to 44 percent of the world catches of bigeye came from the eastern Pacific Ocean (EPO).

Data on the catches of bigeye in the Pacific Ocean are given in Table 1. (The data for the EPO surface fishery, collected by the IATTC staff, include fish caught east of 150°W. The rest of the data were compiled by the staff of the Food and Agriculture Organization of the United Nations, which considers fish caught east of 175°W to have been caught in the EPO and those caught west of 175°W to have been caught in the western Pacific Ocean. The subsurface catches in the EPO were obtained by subtracting the surface catches (east of 150°W) from the total catches (east of 175°W). Such being the case, small amounts of bigeye caught by surface gear between 150°W and 175°W are recorded in this table as having been caught by subsurface gear.) The combined surface and subsurface catches of this species in the EPO during recent years have been about the same as those of skipjack, but substantially less than those of yellowfin (Background Paper 2, Table 1). Bigeye are caught mostly by longlines. During the early 1950s there was little longline fishing in the EPO, and hence the catches of bigeye in that area were low. During the mid-1950s, however, Japanese longline vessels began to fish in the EPO, and the catches of bigeye increased. Accordingly, beginning during the early 1960s, this species has been given more attention by the IATTC staff. During the 1963-1991 period five Japanese scientists from the National Research Institute of Far Seas Fisheries (NRIFSF; formerly the Far Seas Fisheries Research Laboratory) have spent time in La Jolla working with IATTC scientists on the Japanese longline fishery for bigeye and related species in the EPO, and a sixth is scheduled to begin similar studies in June 1995.

The distribution of the logged catches of bigeye by surface gear in the EPO during 1979-1993 are shown in Figure 1. The catches increased during the late 1960s and the 1970s, declined after 1981, and then rose dramatically in 1994 (Table 1).

The increases during the late 1960s and the 1970s were apparently due to two factors. First, the actual catches probably increased because there were regulations for yellowfin, but not for bigeye, during the 1966-1979 period, which in some instances caused fishermen to seek out bigeye in preference to yellowfin. Concurrently with this, the fishermen's skill in catching bigeye probably increased. Second, the statistics collected after the mid-1960s are more accurate. Bigeye and yellowfin caught by the surface fishery have, in most years, brought the same price to the fishermen, so bigeye have often been reported as yellowfin. Since the advent of regulations, however, the two species have more often been reported separately, and in locations where they are not there has been better coverage by IATTC employees, who estimate the proportions of the two species in mixed landings. A recent study (IATTC Annual Report for 1991: 34-35) indicates that bigeye were not misidentified as yellowfin during the 1987-1989 period. During 1994 most of the canneries began paying slightly lower prices for bigeye than for yellowfin, decreasing the likelihood that bigeye are reported as yellowfin.

The increased catches of bigeye during 1994 were apparently due to the discovery that bigeye associated with floating objects, but well below the surface, can be detected with sonar and caught with purse seines. Many of these floating objects were fish-aggregating devices (FADs) placed in the water by the fishermen. Most of these catches of bigeye were taken between 5°N and 10°S.

During the 1990-1993 period less than half of the sets in which bigeye were caught were made on fish associated with floating objects, and about half of the bigeye caught were taken in such sets (Table 2). In 1994, however, 95 percent of the bigeye sets were made on floating objects and over 95 percent of the bigeye caught came from floating-object sets.

During 1994, the catches of 69 percent of the sets in which bigeye were taken included yellowfin and/or skipjack. In the mixed schools, 55 percent of the catch by weight was bigeye, 9 percent was yellowfin, and 36 percent was skipjack.

The length distributions of bigeye caught by surface gear during each year of the 1989-1994 period are shown in Figure 2. Those caught in 1994 tended to be smaller than those caught during previous years. Data on the length frequencies of bigeye caught in free-swimming schools and in floating-object schools are shown in Figure 3. The year-quarter combinations were selected because adequate numbers of fish from both types of schools had been measured in those strata. In four out of five cases the fish from the floating-object schools were smaller than those from the free-swimming schools.

The IATTC staff's studies of surface-caught bigeye have consisted principally of recording and processing catch and effort data from information on weights of fish unloaded and logbook records, collection of length-frequency data from fish unloaded at canneries, and analysis of these data (Calif. Fish Game, 51 (4): 252-258; IATTC Bull., 20 (8)). In addition, during the 1959-1978 period 611 surface-caught bigeye were tagged, and 15 of these tagged fish have been returned.

An analysis of the surface fishery for bigeye in the EPO (IATTC Bull., 20 (8)), using mostly data for the 1971-1991 period, has recently been completed by scientists from the NRIFSF and the IATTC. It was shown that, during the period in question, about 62 percent of the catch of bigeye was taken in unassociated schools, 33 percent in schools associated with floating objects, and 5 percent in schools associated with whales, sharks, or dolphins. There was considerable overlap in the lengths of the bigeye taken by the surface and longline fisheries. During the 1971-1991 period the average catch per successful set of bigeye was 23 short tons (22, 28, and 17 tons for unassociated schools, floating-object schools, and schools associated with whales, sharks, or dolphins, respectively). (Short tons, rather than metric tons, are used throughout this background paper.)

Studies of the Japanese longline fishery conducted jointly by Japanese and IATTC scientists (IATTC Bull., 9 (6), 11 (2), 11 (3), 13 (2), 16 (2), 19 (1), and 20 (5)) include analyses of data on trends in effort and catches, horizontal, vertical, and temporal distributions of catches, trends in apparent abundance, size composition, and maturity of bigeye.

The distributions of the catches per unit of effort (CPUEs; numbers of fish caught per 100 hooks) of bigeye by Japanese longliners in the EPO, averaged over the 1981-1987 period, are shown in Figure 4. The CPUEs were high in most of the EPO except the area north of 5°N and east of 125°W. The greatest CPUEs were recorded (1) between Ecuador and 120°W and 10°S and 5°N throughout the year, (2) northeast of Hawaii between 20°N and 33°N and 122°W and 140°W during the first and fourth quarters, and (3) off southern Peru and northern Chile between 18°S and 25°S and 80°W and 90°W during the third and fourth quarters.

In the north equatorial region, between the equator and 8°N, where there was heavy fishing effort, the CPUEs were relatively low during the second half of the year, especially in the western part of this region. In the south equatorial region, between the equator and 15°S, however, the CPUEs were relatively high in the western part of the region throughout the year.

The distribution of effort did not coincide well with the areas of greatest CPUEs of bigeye, even though bigeye was the most important species of fish caught by Japanese longliners. For example, heavy concentrations of effort are apparent in equatorial waters (8°N to 15°S and west of 110°W), but the CPUEs of bigeye in this area were not particularly high. Furthermore, although the CPUEs for bigeye were fairly high northeast of Hawaii and off southern Peru and northern Chile, not much effort was exerted in these areas. This may be because in the equatorial region bigeye could be caught throughout the year and the fish tended to be large, whereas in the higher latitudes the occurrence of bigeye was more seasonal and the fish tended to be smaller.

A study utilizing general linear models to standardize the CPUEs of bigeye in the EPO (IATTC Bull., 20 (4)) has recently been completed. The effects of years, seasons, areas, and depths of fishing were considered, and all were found to have significant effects on the CPUEs.

Length-frequency data for bigeye caught by longlines in the area delineated in Figure 5 during 1981-1987 are shown in Figure 6. Most of the fish in the catch ranged from about 90 to 170 cm in length. The length compositions varied considerably from year to year. The proportions of smaller fish were greatest during 1982 and 1986, and those of larger fish were greatest during 1983 and 1984.

Stock assessment

In general, there are three approaches to the analysis of the effects of fishing on a population of fish, age-structured modelling, production modelling, and spawner-recruit modelling. These models are described in Background Paper 2, dealing with yellowfin.

Age-structured models

The yield-per-recruit model, a type of age-structured model, gives information on the yield per recruit to be expected with different combinations of size at entry and fishing effort. The input consists of length-at-age or weight-at-age data and natural mortality data. Both of these, especially natural mortality, are difficult to estimate. Nevertheless, the yields per recruit of bigeye at various combinations of length at entry and fishing effort ($F$) were calculated. The length-at-age data were obtained from the equation $l_t = 186.95(1 - e^{0.38(<f=2>t<f=1> - 0.5275)})$, from IATTC

Bulletin, Vol. 11, No. 1, for the growth of bigeye. The lengths were converted to weights with the equation $w = (8.071 \times 10^{-5})l^{2.90182}$, obtained from the Proceedings of the Governor's (Hawaii) Conference on Central Pacific Fishery Resources, pages 197-201. Trial values of the coefficient of natural mortality ($M$) of 0.4, 0.6, and 0.8 on an annual basis, were used. The value of 0.4 is approximately equal to the estimate of 0.361 given in Report of the Nankai Regional Fisheries Research Laboratory, No. 25, pages 91-103. The value of 0.6 is somewhat greater than an estimate of 0.477 derived by the method given in Journal du Conseil, Vol. 39, No. 2, pages 175-192. The value of 0.8 was used because the results of cohort analyses, to be described later, indicate that $M$ may be greater than 0.6. The results with lengths at entry of 40 cm (4 pounds or 2 kg), 60 cm (12 pounds or 5 kg), 90 cm (38 pounds or 17 kg), 120 cm (87 pounds or 40 kg), and 150 cm (167 pounds or 76 kg) and annual values of $F$ of 0.0 to 1.6, are shown in Figure 7. In all cases the yields per recruit were least with a length at entry of 150 cm, so the discussion will be confined to the other four values, 40, 60, 90, and 120 cm. It appears from Figures 2 and 6 that most of the purse seine- and longline-caught bigeye are recruited at about 60 to 90 and 90 to 120 cm, respectively. (There is considerable inter-annual variation in the length-frequency compositions of the surface-caught fish, however, and in 1980, 1982-1984, and 1994 substantial amounts of bigeye between 40 and 60 cm were caught in the purse-seine fishery.) At an $M$ value of 0.4 the yields per recruit are roughly the same for all lengths at entry at $F$ values up to 0.4. At $F$ values of 0.6 and greater the yields per recruit are less for a length at entry of 40 cm, and at $F$ values of 0.8 and greater they are less for lengths at entry of 40 and 60 cm. At an $M$ value of 0.6 the yields per recruit are roughly the same at all values of $F$ for lengths at entry of 60, 90, and 120 cm. They are also about the same for a length at entry of 40 cm for $F$ values up to 0.6, but at greater $F$ values the yields per recruit are less. At an $M$ value of 0.8 the yields per recruit are approximately the same for all $F$ values regardless of the length at entry. In general, the greatest yields per recruit are realized with intermediate lengths at entry (90 and 120 cm), although the yield per recruit with a length at entry of 60 cm is greater than with a length at entry of 120 cm when $M = 0.8$. This implies that, in most cases, the average length at entry for the surface fishery is less than that which would maximize the yield per recruit and that for the longline fishery is greater than that length. It is emphasized, however, that these estimates are based upon inadequate data, so they may not be reliable.

Production models

Production models are applicable only to fish of a discrete population, so such models can be used with bigeye of the EPO only if there is relatively little interchange of these fish with those of the areas to the west. The movements of bigeye tagged in the Pacific Ocean by various organizations which were at liberty for long periods of time are shown in Table 3. The distances travelled were less than many which have been recorded for the other principal market species of tuna, but not much importance should be attached to this, in view of the small number of returns.

Data on the effort, catch, and CPUE for 1954-1987 for the portion of the EPO delineated in Figure 5 are shown in Figure 8. This area was selected because it includes the major bigeye fishing grounds, and it is believed that inclusion of data for areas with large amounts of effort and low catches of bigeye would tend to mask whatever relationship may exist between effort and bigeye catch. During 1954-1960 the effort and catches were low and the CPUE was high. During 1961 through 1964 the effort and catches were much greater than during 1954-1960. The CPUE was slightly less than 3 fish per 100 hooks in 1961, and declined to less than 1.5 fish per 100 hooks in 1964. During 1964 through 1985 the effort ranged between about 50 and 130 million hooks and the catch between about 0.4 and 1.3 million fish, but the CPUEs remained nearly constant, at about 1 fish per 100 hooks. The effort increased to about 145 million hooks in 1986 and 170 million hooks in 1987, while the CPUEs remained at about 1 fish per hundred hooks. It is normal for the CPUE to decline with increasing effort, and modest decreases do not necessarily indicate overfishing (from the standpoint of reducing the average maximum sustainable yield (AMSY), as discussed earlier in this report in the section dealing with stock assessment of yellowfin). Decline of the CPUE to less than half what it was when the effort was low, however, could be indicative of reduction of the population to a level less than that necessary to produce the AMSY.

It may be significant that the catches more than tripled during the 1965-1987 period, while the CPUEs remained about the same. One possible explanation for this is that individuals which were especially vulnerable to longline gear were selectively removed from the population during the early years of the fishery, reducing the CPUEs more than the abundance of the fish. Another possibility is that, because of the high price of bigeye, the fishermen directed their effort more toward that species during the later years. For example, changes in the areal and temporal distribution of fishing effort, coupled with the adoption of deep longline gear during the late 1970s, may have kept the CPUE of bigeye at the same level while its abundance decreased. A third possibility is that the recruitment of bigeye has increased, permitting the CPUEs to remain the same while the catches were increasing. Uncertainty regarding the interpretation of the data also results from the uncertainty concerning the amount of interchange of fish between the area in question and contiguous areas.

Spawner-recruit models

Spawner-recruit models are discussed in Background Paper 2, dealing with yellowfin. It is not possible, due to lack of knowledge of the stock structure and fishing and natural mortality rates, to apply these models to bigeye in the Pacific Ocean in a meaningful way.

Interaction between the purse-seine and longline fisheries for bigeye tuna in the eastern Pacific Ocean

In spite of the paucity of knowledge available for bigeye, it is possible to obtain some information on the possible effects of increased catches of bigeye by the purse-seine fishery on the catches of that species by the longline fishery, using the data on length frequencies and catches shown in Figure 9, plus the growth equation and natural mortality estimates employed in the section entitled Age-structured models, to conduct cohort analyses.

The data in the top panel of Figure 9, which were obtained by averaging data for the purse-seine fishery for 1990 through 1992, represent a catch of approximately 4,700 tons of fish with an average weight of 54 pounds (24 kg). The data in the middle panel of that figure, which were obtained from data for the purse-seine fishery for 1994, represent a catch of about 31 thousand tons of fish with an average weight of 20 pounds (9 kg). The data in the bottom panel of the figure were obtained by approximating the length-frequency distribution of the fish caught by the longline fishery of 1988 through 1992 with a normal distribution. These data represent a catch of about 64 thousand tons of fish with an average weight of 127 pounds (58 kg).

The data shown in Figure 9 were used to calculate estimates of the catches at age by re-arranging the growth equation mentioned above and using it to assign the fish to age groups. The results are shown in Table 4, Columns 2-4. The values in column 5 of that table, the sums of those in columns 2 and 4, are typical of the fishery prior to 1994. The values in column 6 of the table, the sums of those in columns 3 and 4, represent what the catches would be if the increased purse-seine catches had no effect on the longline catches.

Cohort analyses were used to estimate the number of recruits needed to support the catches listed in Table 4. These analyses are based on the implicit assumption that the purse-seine and longline fisheries are exploiting the same stock(s) of bigeye. It is also necessary to assume that the fishery is in equilibrium, so that the within-year age structure is the same as the age structure of a cohort. The estimates of recruitment (Table 5) are those that would be obtained if the catch for each column in Table 4 came from a stock which was not affected by any other fishery. Column 5, with the combined purse-seine and longline catches for 1990-1992, is most representative of this assumption. If the recruitment estimated from column 2 is added to that from column 4, the result is similar to that obtained using the data in column 5 alone (Table 5). However, when the data in column 6 are used to estimate recruitment, the estimated recruitment is increased by 4 to 7 million fish, depending on the value of $M$. Similar results are obtained if columns 3 and 4 are used separately and the estimated recruitments are summed. Since column 5 corresponds to an observed condition and column 6 does not, it seems more likely that if the purse-seine fishery continues to catch 31 thousand tons of smaller bigeye the longline catch will decline to a level such that the combined catch from the purse-seine fishery (Table 4, Column 3) and the new level for the longline fishery would produce estimates of recruitment similar to those in column 5 of Table 5.

Simulating reduced longline catches with a size structure similar to that shown in Figure 9, combining these with 1994 purse-seine catch data, and then doing a cohort analysis until estimates of recruitment were similar to those in column 5 of Table 5 produced approximations of what might happen to the longline fishery. These approximations depend very strongly on the values of $M$ used.

The simulations demonstrate that if $M$ is 0.4 and the purse-seine fishery continues to catch around 31 thousand tons of smaller bigeye the longline catch will be reduced to less than 1 thousand tons per year. As can be seen in Table 5, when $M = 0.4$ all of the recruitment would be needed to support the purse-seine fishery (compare columns 3 and 5 in Table 5). If the value of $M$ is 0.6 the longline catch would be reduced by about 50 percent, or about 32 thousand tons per year, as only about half of the recruits are needed to support the purse-seine fishery. Finally, if $M$ is as high as 0.8 the longline catch would be reduced by about 25 percent, to about 48 thousand tons, and the purse-seine fishery would require about one third of the recruits.

It is also possible to estimate the yields per recruit which would result from the fisheries for bigeye as obtained from the data in Tables 4 and 5 and from the simulations. From the most realistic data set (Table 4, column 5), the catch of 68,700 tons would be obtained from recruitments of 4.4, 9.2, or 20.9 million fish, depending on $M$ (Table 5). These correspond to yields per recruit of of 31.2 pounds (14.2 kg), 14.9 pounds (6.8 kg), and 6.6 pounds (3.0 kg), respectively. According to the simulations, with a catch of 31 thousand tons in the purse-seine fishery, the total catches would be approximately 32 thousand ($M$ = 0.4), 63 thousand ($M$ = 0.6), or 79 thousand ($M$ = 0.8) tons, respectively. The last three catches correspond to yields per recruit of 14.5 pounds (6.6 kg), 13.7 pounds (6.2 kg), and 7.6 pounds (3.4 kg). Therefore, if the assumptions are fulfilled, the yield per recruit will be reduced if $M$ = 0.4, stay about the same if $M$ = 0.6, and increase slightly if $M$ = 0.8.

In the future, if the surface catch remains at about 30 thousand tons while the longline effort in the EPO remains the same, and the catch of bigeye declines significantly, the two fisheries are probably exploiting the same stock(s) and $M$ is probably not much greater than 0.6. If, however, the longline catches do not decline the two fisheries are probably exploiting independent or semi-independent stocks or $M$ is greater than 0.6 (or both).

NORTHERN BLUEFIN TUNA

Introduction

Northern bluefin tuna occur in both the Atlantic and Pacific Oceans. The world and Pacific Ocean catches of northern bluefin are much less than those of skipjack, yellowfin, bigeye, or albacore, but the fishery is still of considerable economic value. The annual catches of northern bluefin in the Pacific Ocean for the 1951-1994 period are shown in Table 6. Surface gear accounts for the majority of the catches in both the eastern Pacific Ocean (EPO) and the western Pacific Ocean (WPO). In the EPO the catches were below average during 1980-1984, about average during 1985 and 1986, and below average during 1987-1994. In the WPO the catches were well above average during 1978-1983 and about average during 1984-1992, except for 1988 and 1990, when the catches were well below average.

In the EPO nearly all of the catch of bluefin tuna is made by purse seiners fishing relatively close to shore off California and Baja California. The fishing season typically extends from May to October, although sporadic catches are made in other months. The 1994 catch of about 814 tons was the second-lowest of the 1951-1994 period. During 1994 logged catches of bluefin were made between 26°N and 33°N during late July through early October.

The staff of the IATTC has been studying bluefin tuna on a modest scale since 1958, when 122 purse seine-caught bluefin were tagged and released near Guadalupe Island, Mexico. Prior to 1979 the work consisted mostly of collection of logbook data and measurement of samples of fish caught by purse seiners in the EPO to estimate their length compositions. Since 1979, however, more has been done. In 1979 a review of information pertinent to stock assessment of this species was prepared (IATTC Internal Report 12). Also, data on the surface catches of bluefin in the EPO by area, date, vessel size class, size of school, type of school, etc., were assembled, analyzed, and published in 1982 in IATTC Bulletin, Vol. 18, No. 2. In addition, purse seine-caught bluefin were tagged in the EPO in 1979 and 1980, and troll- and trap-caught bluefin were tagged in the WPO by IATTC employees who were stationed in Japan intermittently during 1980-1982. Also, research has been conducted on determination of the age and growth of bluefin from hard parts.

Bluefin tuna taken by the commercial fishery of the EPO were measured during each year of the 1952-1971 period by employees of the California Department of Fish and Game. Since then the sampling has been conducted by the staff of the IATTC. Analysis of these data has produced estimates of the catches of bluefin, in numbers of fish of the various age classes, for the 1952-1991 period (IATTC Bull., 20 (9)). These, and comparable estimates for the WPO made by a scientist from the National Research Institute of Far Seas Fisheries (NRIFSF) of Japan, are listed in Table 7. Length-frequency histograms of the bluefin caught in the EPO during 1989-1994 are shown in Figure 10. Exceptionally large fish, weighing 230 to 1010 pounds (105 to 460 kg) were caught during October-December of 1988 and 1989. The total weights of the large fish were small, but these fish were of considerable economic value, as immediately after they were caught most of them were flown to Japan, where high prices are paid for fresh bluefin. During 1993, for the first time, due to limited availability of commercially-caught bluefin, fish caught by the sport fishery were measured. Most of the samples of bluefin obtained during 1993 and 1994 from fish caught by sport fishermen. Nearly all of these fish were caught near where purse-seine vessels were fishing and during the same time periods.

The results of the tagging experiments described above, plus experiments conducted in the EPO during 1962-1968 by the U.S. Bureau of Commercial Fisheries (now the U.S. National Marine Fisheries Service), the California Department of Fish and Game, and the Mission Bay Research Foundation and in the WPO during 1980-1988 by employees of the Far Seas Fisheries Research Laboratory (FSFRL; now the NRIFSF) of Japan are discussed in IATTC Bulletin, Vol. 20, No. 1.

Analysis of the data for the bluefin tuna released and recaptured in the EPO indicates seasonal north-south movement, with the fish being furthest south during May-June and furthest north during July-October. Ten returns of fish released in the EPO and recaptured in the WPO have been obtained, all from fish which were at liberty more than 22 months.

The fish released and recaptured in the WPO, like those released and recaptured in the EPO, tended to move northward in the spring and summer and southward in the fall and winter. The migrations from the WPO to the EPO are of particular interest. Some year classes, e.g. those of 1983 and 1984, produced large numbers of migrants and others did not. The best catches during the 1980s in the EPO were made in 1985 and 1986 (Table 6), and these consisted mostly of age-2 fish of the 1983 and 1984 year classes. (In this report fish in their first year of life are referred to as 0-year-olds, age-0 fish, or fish 0 years of age, fish in their second year of life are referred to as 1-year-olds, age-1 fish, or fish 1 year of age, and so on.)

During 1993, joint experiments were conducted by staff members of the Japan Sea Farming Association (JASFA) and the IATTC at JASFA's Yaeyama Station on Ishigaka Island, Okinawa Prefecture, to study the early life history of bluefin tuna. The purpose of the experiments was to determine the optimum conditions (e.g. temperature, light, food type, and food concentration) for culture of bluefin larvae. These joint experiments represent the first experimental studies ever undertaken of bluefin tuna larvae.

Four workshops on assessment of bluefin tuna have been held during the last few years. The first, held in October 1985 in Shimizu, Shizuoka, Japan, involved scientists from the FSFRL and the IATTC. This workshop was concerned only with northern bluefin in the Pacific Ocean. The second workshop, sponsored jointly by the IATTC and the Australian Fisheries Service and involving scientists from all over the world, was held in La Jolla, California, USA, in May 1990. Bluefin stocks of the Pacific, Indian, and Atlantic Oceans and the Mediterranean Sea were discussed at that workshop. The proceedings of the workshop were published as Special Report 7 of the IATTC. The third workshop, held in La Jolla in April 1993, involved only scientists from the NRIFSF and the IATTC and was concerned only with northern bluefin of the Pacific Ocean. A list of 14 projects which should be worked on during the next year was prepared at this workshop. The fourth workshop, held in February 1995 in Shimizu, Shizuoka, Japan, was also concerned only with northern bluefin of the Pacific Ocean; it involved participants from the NRIFSF, the IATTC, the Tuna Research Center of National Taiwan University, and the Tohoku National Fisheries Research Institute of Japan, plus observers from several other organizations.

Catches of northern bluefin by the Japanese high-seas longline fishery

Data for the Japanese high-seas longline fishery for tunas have kindly been made available to the IATTC staff by the NRIFSF. The data include summaries of the catches, by species, in numbers of fish, by year (1952-1986), month, and 5-degree area and summaries of the effort, in numbers of hooks, by year, month, and 5-degree area.

Scrutiny of the monthly distributions of the catches reveals that the fish are distributed furthest to the west during the spring and furthest to the east during the fall (Figure 11). It is not surprising that the fish are concentrated in the vicinity of Japan during the spring, as bluefin spawn mostly during the spring, and bluefin larvae have been found only in the open ocean in the vicinity of Japan during the spring and in the Sea of Japan during the summer. Exceptionally large bluefin were caught by purse seiners in the EPO during November and December of 1988 (Calif. Fish Game, 76 (3): 181-186). These fish may have appeared in the EPO fishery because they were distributed further to the east during the fall of 1988 than is usually the case.

Life history and relationships between fish of the WPO and the EPO

The information in this section is presented as background necessary for understanding the section on stock assessment which follows it.

Larvae of bluefin tuna in the Pacific Ocean have been found only in the vicinity of Japan, and it is assumed that spawning occurs only in that area. Spawning occurs during the spring and summer, but in this section, for simplicity, it is assumed that the fish are hatched on January 1. Some fish apparently remain their entire lives in the WPO. Others migrate to the EPO; these migrations begin mostly, or perhaps entirely, during the first and second years of life. The first-year migrants are exposed to the summer and fall troll fisheries for small bluefin and other species off Japan before beginning their journey to the EPO in the fall or winter. The second-year migrants are also exposed to the winter troll fishery and other fisheries which take place in the vicinity of Japan before beginning their journey to the EPO in the spring, summer, or fall. The migrants, after crossing the ocean, are fished by purse seiners off California and Baja California. Eventually, the survivors return to the WPO.

The catches of bluefin tuna in the EPO consist mostly of age-1 and age-2 fish. The catches of age-2 fish in the EPO exceed those of age-2 fish in the WPO in most years, whereas the opposite is the case for age-3 fish (Table 7). This probably indicates that the population of age-2 fish is greater in the EPO and that of age-3 fish is greater in the WPO, although it is possible that area- and/or size-related differences in fishing effort and/or vulnerability to capture are responsible for the differences in the catches. Studies of statistical, length-frequency, and tagging data have resulted in the formulation of the following scenarios for the migration of fish between the EPO and the WPO:

1. The fish arrive in the EPO as 1-year-olds during year i, mostly in June or July, and begin their return journey to the WPO as 2-year-olds late in year i + 1 or as 3-year-olds early in year i + 2;
2. The fish arrive in the EPO as 1-year-olds during year i, mostly in June or July, and begin their return journey to the WPO as 1-year-olds late in year i or as 2-year-olds early in year i + 1;
3. The fish arrive in the EPO as 2-year-olds early in year i + 1 and begin their return journey to the WPO as 2-year-olds late in year i + 1 or as 3-year-olds early in year i + 2;
4. The fish arrive in the EPO as 1-year-olds early in year i and begin their return journey as older fish;
5. The fish arrive in the EPO as 2-year-olds early in year i + 1 and begin their return journey as older fish;
6. The fish arrive in the EPO at ages greater than 2 and subsequently return to the WPO;
7. The fish do not migrate to the EPO at all.

Scenario 7 probably applies to most of the fish of some year classes. This could at least partly explain the reduced catches of bluefin in the EPO during the 1980s and early 1990s. An eighth scenario is a combination of Scenarios 1, 2, 3, 4, or 5 with Scenario 6, i.e. the fish make more than one migration from the WPO to the EPO.

The above does not take into account the possibility that some fish may begin trans-Pacific migrations, but turn back before reaching their destination. The fact that bluefin tuna nearly disappear from the EPO during the winter and early spring may indicate that these fish occupy areas outside the range of the surface fishery during this period. Considerably more data for the central Pacific Ocean (CPO) would be required to establish whether this occurs and, if so, to what extent.

Stock assessment

Abundance of juvenile bluefin in the eastern Pacific Ocean

A discussion of various indices of abundance of bluefin tuna in the eastern Pacific Ocean appears in IATTC Internal Report 23. It is currently believed that the "habitat index" and the "bluefin vessel index" are the most reliable of these.

Habitat index

Bluefin tuna are most often caught by purse-seine vessels in the EPO in waters with sea-surface temperatures of 17° to 23°C (62.6° to 73.4°F), so it was assumed that fishing effort exerted by tuna purse seiners off California and Baja California in waters of that temperature range during May through October is bluefin effort, regardless of whether bluefin were caught. The sums of the logged catches of bluefin in the EPO during May through October of each year were divided by the corresponding sums of the logged purse-seine effort in the 1-degree areas which were suitable bluefin habitat to get the annual catches per unit of effort (CPUEs). These data appear in Figure 12. They appear to indicate that both reduced availability and reduced fishing effort have contributed to the reduced catches of bluefin in the EPO during the 1980s and early 1990s.

Bluefin vessel index

For this method, it is assumed that the fishing effort directed toward bluefin tuna is proportional to the numbers of vessels which direct substantial portions of their effort to fishing for bluefin. Accordingly, each vessel of the purse-seine fleet was classified each year as a "bluefin vessel" or a "non-bluefin vessel." If a vessel caught bluefin in a given year and in two or more of the four closest adjacent years (two years before and two years after the year in question), it was classified as a bluefin vessel for that year. Otherwise it was classified as a non-bluefin vessel. The criteria were relaxed for vessels which entered the EPO tuna fishery less than two years before the year in question or left the fishery less than two years after the year in question. For example, if a vessel entered the EPO tuna fishery in 1971, it was classified as a bluefin vessel for that year if it caught bluefin in 1971 and in either 1972 or 1973. This system of classification is arbitrary, and perhaps some other system would be better. However, it seems to be adequate to give some insight into the value of fleet size as a measure of the effort directed toward bluefin and total catch divided by fleet size as an index of the abundance of bluefin. The bluefin vessel index for a given year is the total commercial catch for that year divided by the number of bluefin vessels in the fleet during that year. The total commercial catches, numbers of bluefin vessels, and bluefin vessel indices for 1961-1989 are shown in Figure 13. They also appear to indicate that both reduced availability and reduced fishing effort have contributed to the reduced catches of bluefin in the EPO during the 1980s and early 1990s.

Cohort analyses

Cohort analyses can produce information concerning the abundance, recruitment, and fishing mortality of fish of individual cohorts, which is highly useful for stock assessment. (A cohort consists of all the fish recruited to the fishery at the same time, such as the 1980 cohort, the members of which hatched and later entered the fishery of the western Pacific Ocean as age-0 fish in that year and entered the fishery of the eastern Pacific Ocean in 1981 as age-1 fish.) As a first step, the fish in the catch must be assigned to cohorts. Then estimates are made of the numbers of fish of each cohort at the time of recruitment and at various intervals thereafter and of the numbers which are caught and which die during each interval. The information needed for these calculations includes the numbers and average weights of fish of each cohort in the catch, an estimate of the natural mortality rate (or estimates of a series of rates if the natural mortality is not constant for the fish of different ages), and an estimate of the fishing mortality rate for at least one catch interval for each cohort. These last are called the "initiating" rates of fishing mortality. All of these estimates are obtained from analyses of catch statistics and length-frequency and weight-length data. The results of these analyses are not as accurate as desired because, although fish of different cohorts can be easily distinguished from one another when they are young, this becomes increasingly difficult as they grow older, so older fish are probably often assigned to the wrong cohorts. Thus the estimates of the catches of fish of each cohort are less accurate than desired. Data on average weights of the fish are given in Table 8. Because of lack of information on natural mortality, six trial vectors of natural mortality, M (Table 9), were used. Also, the catchability of the fish varies according to age, area, season, weather, and other circumstances, the growth rates vary, and the times of recruitment vary. All of these introduce "noise," and possibly bias as well, into the calculations.

The cohort analyses were carried out with data for the 1966-1986 period. Data on the quarterly catches in the eastern Pacific Ocean were obtained from IATTC Bulletin, Vol. 20, No. 9: Appendix 1. Annual catch data for fish of the various age groups for the western Pacific Ocean were obtained from FAO Fisheries Technical Paper 336, Vol. 2: page 284. The quarterly catches for the first, second, third, and fourth quarters were estimated by multiplying the annual catches by 0.10, 0.30, 0.50, and 0.10, respectively. The catch-at-age data by cohort, together with average weight and natural mortality estimates from Tables 8 and 9, provided the data needed to conduct the analyses for 37 cohorts (1950 through 1986). The estimations were carried out using backward calculations, so it was necessary to estimate the final fishing mortality rate (F) for each of the cohorts. The final values of F were selected by a dual procedure that first estimated the minimum recruitment by choosing a high final value of F and comparing the within-quarter values of F for different cohorts of the same age. The objective of this type of search is to reduce the differences among the F values for fish of similar ages being fished at the same time. This procedure does not have an algorithm which would allow different users to arrive at identical answers, so it is somewhat subjective. The method works well for cohorts with long catch histories, e.g. those of 1959 through 1981, but less well for the others.

The cohort analyses produced estimates of the recruitment during each year of the 1966-1986 period and the values of F for each age group during each quarter of that period. These estimates were combined with estimates of M (Table 9) to estimate the catches for the 1966-1986 period obtainable with various combinations of M, multipliers of F, and age at entry into the fishery (Figure 14). (A multiplier of 1 for F corresponds to the best estimate of the average F which existed during this period.) With a multiplier of 1, the catch would have been greater in every case if the age at entry were increased from age 0 to age 1, age 2, or age 3. The gains would be greater for natural mortality vectors 1, 2, or 3 than for natural mortality vectors 4, 5, or 6. If the natural mortality vector is 1, 2, or 3 and the age at entry is to remain at 0 or to be increased to 1, greater catches would be realized if the effort were reduced to about half its present level. With natural mortality vectors 4, 5, or 6, however, reduction in effort to half its present level would result in little or no increase in catch (age at entry = 0) or a decrease in catch (age at entry = 1).

Spawner-recruit and recruit-spawner relationships

Spawner-recruit and recruit-spawner relationships of bluefin tuna are discussed on pages 35-36 of the IATTC Annual Report for 1993. It was determined that fishing has greatly reduced the abundance of mature bluefin in the Pacific Ocean, but there is no evidence that this has resulted in reduction of the recruitment of young fish to the fishery.

Possible causes of recent poor catches of bluefin in the eastern Pacific Ocean

The staff of the IATTC is concerned about the poor catches of bluefin tuna in the EPO and WPO in some years, and particular attention is being given to the poor catches in the EPO during 1980-1984 and 1987-1994. The recent below-average catches of bluefin in the EPO could be due to: (1) a decrease in recruitment; (2) a decrease in the overall abundance of fish greater than about 60 cm in length caused by heavy exploitation of fish during their first year of life in the WPO; (3) reduced fishing effort in the EPO; (4) a decrease vulnerability to capture of the fish which have migrated to the EPO; and/or (5) a decrease in the availability of bluefin in the EPO (i.e. a decrease in the proportion of the population which has migrated to the EPO or a shorter average sojourn in the EPO of the fish which have made that migration).

In regard to Points 1 and 2 above, data compiled by the NRIFSF for the age composition of the catch of bluefin tuna during 1966-1986 by Japanese vessels (Table 7) indicate that there has not been a decline in the catches of age-0 fish, which seems to rule out the first possibility, nor an increase in the proportion of age-0 to older fish, which seems to rule out the second possibility.

Proceeding now to Point 3, the numbers of smaller purse seiners, which previous to the late 1970s had been responsible for most of the catches of bluefin tuna in the EPO, declined during the late 1970s and the 1980s. In the subsection above entitled Abundance of juvenile bluefin in the eastern Pacific Ocean it was concluded that reduced effort is partly, but not entirely, responsible for the reduced catches in the EPO.

In regard to Point 4, the distribution of bluefin tuna in the EPO may have changed during this century. Prior to 1930 bluefin were caught only off California, although they probably occurred off Baja California as well. During the 1930-1947 period they were caught off both California and Baja California, but greater catches were made off California during most years. From 1948 to the present most of the catch has been made off Baja California. This change in the distribution of the catches could be due to increased willingness of California-based fishermen to fish further from port as they acquired larger and more seaworthy boats, however, rather to a change in the distribution of the fish. Fishermen based in California seem to direct more of their effort toward bluefin than do those based in Mexico, so if a shift in distribution occurred it could have decreased the vulnerability of bluefin to capture. If a shift in the distribution of the fish took place, however, it probably did so well before the 1980s, so it does not appear that it could be the cause of the poor catches during that decade.

Tagging and age-composition data provide some useful information in regard to Point 5. It was shown in IATTC Bulletin, Vol. 20, No. 1, that during the 1980s only the 1981 year class contributed significant numbers of tag returns to the EPO fishery during Year 1. It was also shown in that Bulletin that for Year 2 nearly half the returns for the 1979 year class and more than half of those for the 1983 and 1984 year classes were from fish caught in the EPO. This information suggests that the proportion of age-1 fish which migrated to the EPO was greatest for the 1981 year class and that the proportions of age-2 fish which migrated to the EPO were greatest for the 1983 and 1984 year classes, intermediate for the 1979 year class, and least for the 1980, 1981, 1982, and 1985 year classes.

A large proportion of the catch of bluefin tuna in the EPO in 1982 consisted of age-1 fish (Table )7. This is consistent with the evidence from tagging that a large proportion of the fish of the 1981 year class appeared in the EPO as age-1 fish in 1982. The catch of bluefin in the EPO was poor in 1983, however, perhaps because the fish of the 1981 year class experienced heavy mortalities in the EPO in 1982 or mostly began their return trip to the WPO before the start of the 1983 season.

The greatest catches of bluefin tuna in the EPO in recent years were those of 1985 and 1986 (Table 6), and the catches in those years consisted mostly of age-2 fish, i.e. 1983-year-class fish in 1985 and 1984-year-class fish in 1986 (Table 7). This is consistent with the evidence from tagging that large proportions of the fish of the 1983 and 1984 year classes appeared in the EPO as age-2 fish in 1985 and 1986.

If it were certain that the fish which were tagged in the WPO were selected randomly it would be concluded that greater proportions of age-2 fish of the 1983 and 1984 year classes migrated to the EPO, and that this resulted in greater catches of bluefin tuna in the EPO in 1985 and 1986. It is possible, however, that there are separate non-migrant and migrant subpopulations, and that greater proportions of the migrant subpopulation were selected for tagging during 1979, 1981, 1983, and 1984. Thus the relatively high proportion of EPO returns for the 1979 year class, even though the catch in the EPO in 1981 was poor, might be the result of heavy concentration of tagging effort on a relatively small subpopulation of migrants. This possibility has been evaluated by examining data on migrations of tagged age-1 and -2 fish released in different locations in the WPO during different months (IATTC Bull., 20 (1): Table 7). For the most part, the proportions of migrants tended to be about the same for fish of the same year classes released in different area-time strata, so these data do not offer much support for the subpopulation hypothesis. They indicate that for the age-1 fish the tendency to migrate to the EPO was strong for the 1981 year class and much weaker for all the others, and that for the age-2 fish the tendency to migrate was strongest for the fish of the 1983 and 1984 year classes, intermediate for those of the 1979 year class, and weakest for those of the 1980-1982 and 1985 year classes.

Age composition data (Table 7) provide further information pertinent to Point 5. Correlation coefficients were calculated for 12 pairs of data (Table 10, upper panel) from Table 7. Five of the 12 tests were significant at the 5-percent level. The numbers of age-2 fish in the EPO and WPO are negatively correlated (Test 6), indicating that the poor catches in the EPO could be due at least partly to less-than-normal proportions of the total population migrating from the WPO to the EPO. The catches of age-1 and -2 fish in the EPO are positively correlated (Test 7), indicating that the catch of age-2 fish in the EPO can be predicted, albeit poorly, from the catch of age-1 fish in the EPO one year previously. The catches of age-0 and -1 fish in the WPO are highly correlated (Test 8), indicating that the catch of age-1 fish in the WPO can be predicted from the catch of age-0 fish in the WPO one year previously.

Test 11 gave an $r$ value which was significant at the 1-percent level, which is not surprising in view of the fact that an even higher $r$ value was obtained from Test 8. An $r$ value which was significant at the 5-percent level was obtained for Test 12; this, also, is not surprising in view of the fact that a nearly-significant value was obtained from Test 2.

The coefficient of correlation for the catches of age-0 fish in the WPO and the catches of age-2 fish in the EPO two years later is 0.442 (Table 10, Test 2). Although this relationship is not significant at the 5-percent level, it may indicate that the catch of age-2 fish in the EPO is related to recruitment two years previously, assuming that the catch of age-0 fish in the WPO is a valid index of recruitment. Since the catch of age-2 fish in the EPO appears to be related to the recruitment two years previously (Test 2) and the catch of age-2 fish in the WPO in the same year (Test 6), a multiple correlation coefficient was calculated (Test 13). The resulting coefficient of multiple determination was highly significant, indicating that 55.6 percent ($0.746^2$ x 100) of the variation of the catches of age-2 fish in the EPO is explained by (1) a positive relationship to recruitment in the WPO and (2) a negative relationship to the catch of age-2 fish in the WPO. Since the catches of age-2 fish make up the majority of the catch by weight in the EPO in most years, recruitment two years previously and emigration from the WPO appear to have major influences on the total catches in the EPO.

In general, the results of the analysis of the catch-at-age data tend to support the tentative conclusion from the studies of the tagging data that variations in the proportions of fish which migrate from the WPO to the EPO are at least partly responsible for variations in catches in the EPO.

Future research

The above information suggests several types of research which should be carried out.

First, all information which is available on the catches of bluefin tuna in the WPO and the CPO by area, time period, and size of fish, and on the fishing effort expended in those areas to catch bluefin, should be assembled for analysis. The emphasis should be on fish in their first 2 to 4 years of life, particularly the meji (mixed small tunas, bonitos, mackerels, etc.). A scientist from the NRIFSF has used data on the proportions of larger bluefin, yellowfin, and bigeye caught to estimate the proportions of these species in the meji catches of the 1966-1986 period. The estimates obtained from that work are useful, but sampling the meji catches for species composition would probably produce more reliable estimates. The meji are landed at many ports, but perhaps data gathered at a few major ports at intervals of about one week during the July-September period would produce reasonable estimates of the species composition of the meji. Information on the catches of older fish should not be neglected, however, as data on fish of all ages are necessary for stock assessment. CPUE data calculated from the information collected might serve as unbiased, or nearly unbiased, indices of abundance of bluefin in the WPO and the CPO. The information on abundance of bluefin would be used for stock assessment and for studies of migrations and movements of the fish, including the effects of oceanographic conditions on migrations described below. Data on the catches of bluefin by longline vessels (Figure 11) have already shown that mature bluefin are distributed furthest to the west during the spring and furthest to the east during the fall.

Second, research should be carried out to determine where and when the trans-Pacific migrations begin and end, what proportions of the population migrate, and why these proportions vary from year to year. One approach would involve collection of CPUE data for fish of the various age groups, particularly the younger ones, in as many areas as possible and at frequent intervals throughout the year, to attempt to detect movements of the fish.

Data for the WPO would be particularly important, as the highly-variable eastward migrations begin in the WPO. Data for the CPO would also be of great importance, as such data might make it possible to determine whether some of the fish which begin trans-Pacific migrations turn back before reaching their original destination. A second approach would involve tagging of fish with standard external tags in the CPO or with archival tags in the WPO and the EPO. Archival tags collect and record data on time, light, temperature, and pressure continuously, and when the tags are recovered the data can be examined to determine where the fish had been at frequent time intervals between the date of release and the date of recapture. (Unfortunately, archival tags have only recently become commercially available, and the cost is several hundred dollars per tag, which is why none have yet been used on northern bluefin in either the Pacific or Atlantic Ocean.) A third approach would involve chemical analysis of the micro-constituents of the otoliths of bluefin. The rationale for this approach is that different ocean areas have different chemical, physical, and biological properties which influence the chemical makeup of the otoliths. Accordingly, analysis of the otoliths of an individual fish could reveal which ocean areas it had inhabited at various stages of its life, and analyses of the otoliths of samples of fish collected each year in the WPO and the EPO could give far more information on trans-Pacific migration than can data obtained by tagging with conventional tags.

Third, attempts should be made to determine what oceanographic conditions influence the migration of fish from the WPO to the EPO and from the EPO to the WPO. Also, if the studies described above indicate that some of the fish turn back after beginning a trans-Pacific migration, attempts should be made to determine what oceanographic conditions might cause this behavior. Such studies would presumably be conducted jointly by Japanese and IATTC oceanographers and biologists. The first step in such a study would be collection of CPUE data for fish of the various age groups, particularly the younger ones, in as many areas as possible and at frequent intervals throughout the year. The next step would be to compare oceanographic data and data on the movements of the fish to see which are correlated. Finally, attempts would be made to determine which oceanographic conditions actually influence the migrations of the fish.

Finally, further studies of the population structure of bluefin tuna are also appropriate. The tentative conclusion that there is a single major population from which different proportions migrate to the EPO in different years (IATTC Bull., 20 (1): 18) needs further investigation. Also, it would be of great interest to know if the bluefin hatched in the Sea of Japan are genetically distinct from those which are hatched south of Japan. Further knowledge of the population structure might be obtained from biochemical genetic studies.

BLACK SKIPJACK TUNA

Although black skipjack constitute only a minor part of the total landings of tunas caught in the eastern Pacific Ocean, they are of considerable commercial importance in a number of Latin American countries. Furthermore, they represent a resource of significant magnitude, which will be more heavily exploited as the demand for tuna increases. Accordingly, it is prudent to learn as much as possible about this species.

The present knowledge of black skipjack comes mainly from vessel logbook data, data on the weights of fish unloaded at canneries, stomachs, gonads, and measurements of fish taken at canneries, physiological data gathered on one tagging cruise, gonads collected for histological studies on tagging cruises, surveys of fish larvae directed primarily at other species, recapture data for black skipjack tagged incidentally to yellowfin and skipjack, and current studies at the IATTC's laboratories at Achotines Bay, Panama, and La Jolla.

Data on the landings of black skipjack by tuna boats during 1961-1994 are listed in Background Paper 1, Table 3. These data include only the fish which are landed. Additional amounts are known to have been caught but not landed, and these are not included in the statistics. Estimates of the amounts of black skipjack discarded at sea by purse-seine vessels during the 1986-1993 period range from about 4 to 11 thousand tons per year. Black skipjack are also caught by small boats based in Latin America, for which data are not obtained. Therefore the actual catches are greater than those recorded in the table. The areas of the 1980-1983 catches by vessels from which logbook data were obtained are shown in Figure 15.

An analysis of the weight-length relationships of black skipjack is given in IATTC Internal Report 17. Some observations on the swimming performance, body temperatures, and gastric evacuation times of black skipjack were made on a tagging cruise conducted in 1981, and an analysis of the results was published in an outside journal in 1984. A total of 1,502 black skipjack has been tagged, and 107 of these tagged fish have been returned. Information on the movements and growth of black skipjack, as determined from these data, is given in the IATTC Annual Report for 1982, pages 33-34.

Information on the areas and duration of spawning, size at sexual maturity, sex ratios, fecundity, and spawning frequency of black skipjack is published in IATTC Bulletin, Vol. 19, No. 2. The measurement of reproductive potential is of considerable importance with respect to the dynamics of fish populations, since it is a basic determinant of productivity. Furthermore, since the amount of fish of catchable size available to the fishery is largely dependent on the success of spawning and survival during the earliest stages of life, studies of this nature can yield information of potential value for predictive purposes. In addition, large numbers of larval and juvenile black skipjack, along with those of other species of scombrids (tunas and mackerels), have been collected, particularly off Central America and near the entrance to the Gulf of California.

The data on occurrence of larvae and juveniles, tagging data, and logbook data provide indices of abundance of black skipjack relative to the other species of scombrids. It appears, on the basis of this information, that the potential annual production of this species is far greater than the present levels of landings.

A considerable amount of work on black skipjack is currently being conducted at the IATTC laboratories at Achotines Bay, Panama, and La Jolla. These studies are described in recent Annual Reports of the IATTC.

[1] Sources: The data for Japan were obtained from the National Research Institute of Far Seas Fisheries of Japan. The data for 1951-1964 include only large fish (greater than about 15 kg or 33 pounds), while those for 1965-1992 include both small and large fish. The data for the small fish were estimated from the catches of meji (small bluefin, yellowfin, and bigeye) by a proration process based upon the catches of large bluefin, yellowfin, and bigeye. The data for the Republic of China for 1952-1964 were obtained from yearbooks of fisheries statistics of the Food and Agriculture Organization of the United Nations, and those for 1965-1993 were obtained from the Institute of Oceanography, National Taiwan University, Taipei, Taiwan, ROC. The data for the Republic of Korea for 1952-1982 were obtained from yearbooks of fisheries statistics of the Food and Agriculture Organization of the United Nations, and those for 1983-1992 were obtained from yearbooks of fisheries statistics of the National Fisheries Research and Development Agency of Korea.

Los datos de 1951-1965 incluyen solamente peces grandes (de más de unos 15 kg/33 libras), mientras que aquellos de 1966-1992 incluyen también peces pequeños. Se estimaron los datos de los peces pequeños a partir de las capturas de meji (patudos y aletas amarillas y azules pequeños) mediante un procedimiento de prorrateo basado en las capturas de ejemplares grandes de estas especies. Los datos de la República de China correspondientes a 1952-1964 provienen de los registros anuales de estadísticas pesqueras de la Organización de las Naciones Unidas para la Agricultura y la Alimentación, y aquellos correspondientes a 1965-1993 del Instituto de Oceanografía de la Universidad Nacional de Taiwan en Taipei. ## INTRODUCTION

Yellowfin tuna in the size range of about 25 to 100 pounds (11 to 45 kg) frequently associate with marine mammals, especially spotted, spinner, and common dolphins, in the eastern Pacific Ocean (EPO). Purse-seine fishermen have found that their catches of yellowfin in the EPO can be maximized by searching for herds of dolphins or flocks of seabirds which frequently occur with dolphins and tunas, setting their nets around the dolphins and tunas, retrieving most of the net, "backing down" to enable the dolphins to escape over the corkline of the net, and finally retrieving the rest of the net and bringing the fish aboard the vessel. Unfortunately, particularly during the 1960s and 1970s, many dolphins became entangled in the nets and suffocated.

The IATTC's responsibilities were broadened in 1976 to address the problems arising from the incidental mortality in purse-seine nets of dolphins which associate with tunas in the eastern Pacific Ocean. The Commission agreed that it "should strive to maintain a high level of tuna production and also to maintain [dolphin] stocks at or above levels that assure their survival in perpetuity, with every reasonable effort being made to avoid needless or careless killing of [dolphins]" (IATTC, 1976 meeting, minutes: page 9). The principal responsibilities of the IATTC's Tuna-Dolphin Program are (1) to monitor the abundance of dolphins and their mortality incidental to fishing through the collection of data aboard tuna purse seiners fishing in the EPO, (2) to analyze these data and make appropriate recommendations for the conservation of dolphins, (3) to study the causes of mortality of dolphins during fishing operations and encourage fishermen to adopt fishing techniques which minimize the mortalities of dolphins, and (4) to study the effects of different modes of fishing on the various fish and other animals of the pelagic ecosystem.

DATA COLLECTION

Coverage

The design for placement of observers during 1994 called for 100-percent coverage of trips by Class-6 vessels (carrying capacity greater than 400 short tons) fishing for tunas in the EPO. All trips by vessels of fleets other than Mexico and the United States were to be sampled by the IATTC Tuna-Dolphin Program. Half of the trips of vessels of the Mexican and U.S. fleets were to be sampled by observers of their national programs (Programa Nacional para el Aprovechamiento del Atún y Protección de los Delfines (PNAAPD) of Mexico and the U.S. National Marine Fisheries Service (NMFS)) and the remainder by IATTC observers.

During 1994 observers from the IATTC and national programs departed on 466 fishing trips by Class-6 vessels in the EPO. In addition, 45 Class-6 vessels whose last trip of 1993 carried over into 1994 had observers aboard, bringing the total to 511 trips sampled in 1994 by the IATTC and national programs. The IATTC sampled vessels operating under the jurisdictions of Belize, Colombia, Ecuador, Mexico, Panama, St. Vincent and the Grenadines, the United States, Vanuatu, and Venezuela.

The IATTC also sampled one fishing trip of a Class-5 vessel (301-400 short tons capacity) registered in Colombia at the request of the vessel's manager.

The Mexican and IATTC programs combined sampled 100 percent of the trips by vessels of the Mexican fleet. The U.S. and IATTC programs combined also sampled 100 percent of the trips by vessels of the U.S. fleet. The fleets of Belize, Colombia, Panama, St. Vincent and the Grenadines, Vanuatu, and Venezuela all had 100-percent coverage by the IATTC program in 1994. The Ecuadorian fleet fell one trip short of full coverage because the manager of one vessel did not request an IATTC observer for one of its trips. The Ecuadorian government called the vessel back to port after 11 days at sea, and it returned so that an observer could be placed aboard it.

The sampling coverage of Class-6 seiners of the international fleet by the IATTC program and the Mexican and U.S. national programs is summarized in Table 1. Over 72 percent of all trips were sampled by the IATTC program, and over 99 percent of them were sampled by the three programs combined.

The sampling design for 1995 is the same as that for 1994, except that the NMFS ceased its observer program in mid-February 1995, at which time the IATTC coverage of the U.S. fleet was increased from 50 to 100 percent. As of May 21, observers of the IATTC and the national programs had departed on 191 fishing trips of Class-6 vessels in the EPO. In addition, 49 Class-6 vessels whose last trip of 1994 carried over into 1995 had IATTC or national observers aboard, bringing the total to 240 trips sampled thus far in 1995 by the IATTC and national programs. Also, the IATTC staff has placed observers on four trips made by a Class-5 Colombian vessel. Preliminary coverage data for Class-6 vessels for 1995 are shown in Table 2.

Training

Five courses for training observers in the collection of data aboard tuna vessels were held during 1994, and three more have been held during 1995, through May 21 (Table 3). The attendees were instructed in the identification of tunas, marine mammals, turtles, and seabirds, the requirements and procedures for data collection, methods for estimating the sizes of herds of marine mammals, fishing gear and operations, and shipboard protocol and safety.

GEAR PROGRAM

Research

The IATTC tested a modified dolphin safety panel (DSP) designed by Captain Harold Medina (retired). The standard DSP is a rectangular panel of 1 1/4-inch (3.2-cm) mesh, approximately 180 fathoms (329 m) long and 12 fathoms (22 m) deep, which replaces part of the 4 1/4-inch (10.8-cm) mesh adjacent to the corkline; dolphins are less likely to get their snouts entangled with the finer mesh when being released from the net. The modified DSP was originally a 9- by 60-foot (2.7 by 18.3-m) rectangular panel of synthetic cloth, light gray in color, which was laced onto the inside of the existing DSP just below, and parallel to, the corkline in the area that corresponds to the apex of the backdown channel. It was tested by the Mexican purse seiner Akalan II during two consecutive fishing trips. The objectives of the modified DSP were (1) to facilitate the release of dolphins during backdown by promoting corkline sinkage and creating an increased flow of water up and over the corkline and (2) to maintain the apex area of the channel open throughout backdown.

A number of variations in the panel's dimensions, positioning below the corkline, and color were tested during the first trip. The original 9-foot panel proved to be too large; the water pressure against the panel during backdown resulted in the apex corks sinking at reduced backdown speeds, which made it difficult to release the animals, which typically tend to swim slowly toward the vessel during the maneuver. The height was reduced to 3 feet (0.9 m), but this modification greatly diminished the panel's corkline-sinking and apex-widening effects. A final height of 4.5 feet (1.4 m) was established as a workable trade-off between backdown speed and the desired apex effects. The original panel was installed with its upper edge approximately 1 foot (0.3 m) below the corkline. The final modification of the panel's height resulted in its upper edge being approximately 4 feet (1.2 m) below the corkline. Vessel crewmen acting as rescuers during backdown noted that the dolphins appeared to avoid approaching the light-colored panel, especially in bright sunlight. After several sets the panel was painted dark blue, but avoidance behavior was still noted. It was finally painted black, after which the dolphins no longer seemed to avoid it. The panel was used, in its various forms, during 41 sets on dolphins.

The captain was generally pleased with the effects of the modified DSP, and agreed to leave it in the net for the next trip. No modifications were made to the color, shape, or positioning of the modified DSP in the net during that trip, and it was used during 58 additional dolphin sets. The panel was removed from the net after the trip, however, as it had begun to show wear after being deployed in more than 100 dolphin and non-dolphin sets. The captain believed that the panel was useful, and expressed interest in using a modification of this type in the future.

The IATTC has continued its testing of the DSP modification in 1995. A second panel of strong, black, rubberized material was tested aboard the Vanuatu-flag purse seiner Tiuna. This panel, which was 4.5 feet (1.4 m) high by 60 feet (18.3 m) long, was installed just below the corkline and centered at the apex of the backdown channel. The captain reported that, since the panel caused the channel apex corks to sink at a slower backdown speed, it required more time to release the dolphins through the backdown procedure. Vessel crewmen acting as rescuers during backdown said that the dolphins seemed to be reluctant to approach the black panel during some sets. These observations were similar to those made during the tests of the first panel in 1994. The fishing captain noted that the panel would be useful to any vessel that has a problem in maintaining the channel apex area of its net open or of adequately sinking the apex corkline during backdown. However, since his vessel was not experiencing either of these problems, he decided to remove the experimental panel after 12 sets. Further testing of the panel is planned, pending selection of another vessel.

This DSP modification is similar to a panel designed and tested by Mr. John Gonsalves of Progressive Fishing Enterprises, Chula Vista, California, during the mid-1970s. Development of his polyvinyl-coated nylon panel was funded by the U.S. Marine Mammal Commission, and testing was conducted in coastal waters utilizing a truncated version of a purse seine to simulate the backdown area, a towing frame, and a towing vessel. Those tests were encouraging, but testing of the panel during fishing operations at sea was not carried out due to, according to Mr. Gonsalves, discontinuation of funding for the project.

Services

During 1994 the IATTC staff conducted alignments of dolphin safety panels (DSPs), described above, and inspections of dolphin rescue gear aboard 40 vessels, 31 registered in Mexico, 4 registered in Vanuatu, and 5 registered in Venezuela. A trial set, during which an IATTC employee observes the performance of the net from an inflatable raft during backdown, is made to check the alignment of the DSP. The IATTC employee transmits his observations, comments, and suggestions to the captain of the vessel, and attempts are made to resolve any problems which may arise. Afterward, a report is prepared for the vessel owner or manager. This report contains a summary of the IATTC employee's observations and, if necessary, suggestions for improving the vessel's dolphin safety gear and/or procedures.

During 1995, as of May 21, the IATTC staff had participated in gear inspection and alignment procedures aboard 13 purse seiners, all of Mexican registry.

The IATTC also offers other services to help fleet managers and operators of individual vessels to reduce dolphin mortality. Publications and video tapes on the subject are available at IATTC field offices. Trip Analyses, detailed reports of observed fishing trips, are prepared upon request and, after the required authorizations are obtained, sent to the vessel owners to allow them to assess the performance of the vessels and captains.

Workshops on the reduction of dolphin mortality

Five workshops on reducing dolphin mortality were held during 1994, and one more has been held during 1995, through May 21 (Table 4). These workshops are intended not only for captains, who are directly in charge of fishing operations, but also for other crew members and for administrative personnel responsible for vessel equipment and maintenance. Fishermen and others who attend the workshops are presented with certificates of attendance.

"Dolphin-safe" certificates

In 1990 the IATTC began providing "dolphin-safe" certificates to purse-seine vessels which carried IATTC observers whose data verified the fact that no dolphins had been intentionally chased or encircled during that fishing trip. These certificates are issued only at the request of vessel management. In 1994, the IATTC issued 120 of these certificates to vessels under the jurisdictions of Belize, Colombia, Ecuador, Mexico, St. Vincent and the Grenadines, the United States, Vanuatu, and Venezuela. During 1995, as of May 21, the IATTC had issued 54 of these certificates to vessels under the jurisdictions of Colombia, Ecuador, Mexico, the United States, Vanuatu, and Venezuela.

Statements of Participation

Statements of Participation, which were initially requested by representatives of some nations, verify that vessels have been participating in the International Dolphin Conservation Program (described later) at the observer coverage level of 100 percent. A statement can also state that the vessel is equipped with all the dolphin safety equipment recommended by the IATTC and that the IATTC staff has verified the proper alignment and condition of the vessel's dolphin safety gear during a trial set. During 1994 the IATTC issued, on request, statements for 59 fishing trips by vessels under the jurisdictions of Colombia, Ecuador, Mexico, Panama, Spain, the United States, Vanuatu, and Venezuela. During 1995, as of May 21, 36 such statements had been issued to vessels under the jurisdictions of Colombia, Mexico, the United States, Vanuatu, and Venezuela.

ESTIMATES OF THE MORTALITY OF DOLPHINS DUE TO FISHING

The mortality of dolphins incidental to the fishing operations of the international purse-seine tuna fleet in 1994 was 4,095 animals, an increase of 14 percent over that of 1993, but still well below the estimated levels of years prior to 1993 (Figure 1). Because there was virtually complete observer coverage for Class-6 purse-seine vessels in 1994, the total incidental mortality of dolphins was assumed to be known. However, because detailed by-set data collected by the PNAAPD are not yet available to the IATTC staff, species and stock identification was not possible for trips made with PNAAPD observers aboard. The total mortalities, by species and stock, were therefore estimated by the method described on page 51 of the IATTC Annual Report for 1993. The estimated mortalities, by species and stocks, are shown in Table 5. The category "Other dolphins" in that table includes 18 mortalities of currently unidentified dolphins from one trip for which the data were lost. Although no detailed by-set data are available for this trip, species identification data may be obtained from personal contact with the observer in the near future.

The number of sets made on tunas associated with dolphins increased by 11 percent with respect to the 1993, although the level of fishing effort was still below the estimated level for 1986-1992 (Figure 1). Similarly, the number of tons of yellowfin tuna caught in sets on tunas associated with dolphins was 14 percent greater than in 1993. The average mortality per set increased from 0.52 animals in 1993 to 0.53 animals in 1994. However, relative to the estimates for the previous years, the mortality per set is still quite low (Figure 1). The average mortality per ton of yellowfin caught was less than 1 percent greater than in 1993.

Over 13 percent of the total mortality for 1994 occurred in one "disaster set." Although the percentage of sets in which more than 15 mortalities occurred has dropped from 13 percent in 1986 (the first year with adequate sampling coverage for the international fleet) to 0.5 percent in 1994, the contribution of such sets to the total mortality can be considerable. For 1994, without the mortalities incurred in the single disaster set, the total dolphin mortality would have been slightly less than that for 1993. Because the number of sets on tunas associated with dolphins was greater in 1994 than in 1993 (Background Paper 1: Table 4), the estimated mortality per set would have decreased by 12 percent. Unfortunately, while there are a number of factors considered likely to contribute to the occurrence of disaster sets, a reliable method for avoiding such events has not yet been forthcoming.

Preliminary data indicate that the average mortality per set during the first part of 1995 is similar to that for 1994. The number of dolphin sets was about 20 to 25 percent greater during the first part of 1995 than during the same period of 1994. There was one "disaster set" in 1994 which accounted for a considerable portion of the mortality during that year; if there are no disaster sets during the remainder of 1995 the total incidental mortality for that year will be close to that for 1994.

ESTIMATES OF THE RELATIVE ABUNDANCE OF DOLPHINS

The currently-used procedures for estimating trends in abundance of dolphins in the eastern Pacific Ocean employ post-stratification to reduce the bias in conventional line-transect estimates when the searching effort is non-random. Post-stratification is applied separately to estimate each of three parameters: expected encounter rate, expected herd size, and effective half-width of the searching path. To avoid the bias generally associated with post-stratification procedures, an ad-hoc smoothing method is applied independently to the observed encounter rate, mean herd size, and mean detection distance (a proxy which is correlated with the effective half-width of the searching path), each being evaluated for each 1-degree cell. The method performs poorly in areas with little or no searching effort because the values must be smoothed over large areas within which oceanographic variables, and hence the densities of dolphins, may show considerable variation. Furthermore, there are insufficient data to carry out any stratification for the northern and southern stocks of common dolphin, so large biases, and possibly large fluctuations in these biases, can be expected.

Recent work by U.S. National Marine Fisheries Service scientists shows strong correlations between certain oceanographic variables and distributions of dolphins. Those correlations can be exploited to model the density of each species or stock as a continuous surface throughout the appropriate area. Such models provide an alternative means for extrapolating to the stock boundaries in areas of low searching effort. They might also reduce the biases in the estimates of the relative abundances of the stocks for which the sample sizes are inadequate for stratification. A more speculative use of the models would be to estimate the locations of the stock boundaries during previous years, thus allowing for distributional shifts of the stocks during perturbations in oceanographic conditions, such as El Niño events. The IATTC staff uses generalized linear models to relate oceanographic and locational covariates to the observed encounter rates and herd sizes obtained from the tuna vessel observer data for each year. After obtaining annual estimates of the relative abundances, the estimates are smoothed with a generalized additive model. Standard errors of prediction are also obtained from this model, thus avoiding the need to estimate standard errors by computer-intensive methods. The modelled spatial distribution of the offshore stocks of spotted dolphin is shown in Figure 2, and the corresponding estimates of trends during 1975-1990 are shown in Figure 3. The equivalent trend estimated from the annual estimates from the post-stratification method is also shown, for comparison, in Figure 3. Work is currently underway to improve the procedures and to extend the estimation to the remaining years and to the other stocks.

The most recent data on searching effort and sightings for the main dolphin stocks, using the procedure based on the post-stratification method, are shown in Figures 4-11. The data indicate that the changes in the trends of most of the stocks have been minor. The exceptions are the two stocks of offshore spotted dolphin (Figures 4-6), for which the analyses show low values of the indices for the last two years, with significant differences in the values for 1993 relative to those of the mid-1980s. The incidental mortality has been very low for both of these stocks, so it seems likely that the apparent declines are the result of changes in distribution brought about by changes in oceanographic conditions. In support of this hypothesis, preliminary results from the "spatial" models suggest that large movements of offshore spotted dolphins across the presumed stock boundaries occur. This underlines the need to include environmental information into the estimation procedure and revise the current stock boundaries. Further analyses with the spatial model, which incorporates this information, and the addition of data for more years to the analyses with the post-stratification procedure should help determine the extent to which the 1993 estimates are biased.

The post-stratification procedure does not suggest any major change in recent trends of the two stocks of spinner dolphins (Figures 7 and 8). In both cases, the indices have been fluctuating around the same levels for the last decade.

The interpretation of the indices for the northern and southern stocks of common dolphin (Figures 9 and 11) is complicated by sampling problems. The range of the northern stock extends further north than does the fishery for tunas associated with dolphins. There are usually insufficient sightings of dolphins of the southern stock to make it possible to calculate reliable estimates of the trends. The results of the analyses suggest that the population of common dolphins has been stable over the last decade.

THE INTERNATIONAL DOLPHIN CONSERVATION PROGRAM

The events that led to the establishment of the International Dolphin Conservation Program (IDCP) and its objectives and functions are described on pages 60-62 of the IATTC 1993 Annual Report for 1993.

When the IDCP was established in 1992 it was agreed that the overall dolphin mortality limit (DML) for the international fleet for 1994 would be 15,500 animals. However, because the mortality due to fishing in 1993 was only 3,601 animals, the overall DML for 1994 was subsequently reduced, at an intergovernmental meeting held in October 1993, to 9,300 animals. Seventy-three vessels were allocated individual DMLs of 127 animals each. Two of those vessels later relinquished their DMLs. Also, two vessels were issued second-semester DMLs of 63 animals each. The total mortality of dolphins in 1994 caused by the fishery was 4,095 animals, considerably less than the revised overall DML of 9,300 animals. As in the previous year, the low mortality levels achieved by the fleet prompted IATTC and intergovernmental meetings in late 1994, at which it was agreed that the overall DML for 1995 would be reduced from 12,000 to 9,300 animals.

International Review Panel

The International Review Panel (IRP) held its fifth, sixth, seventh, and eighth meetings in 1994 and 1995. The fifth meeting was held in Ensenada, Mexico, on January 26-27, 1994, the sixth meeting in Cumaná, Venezuela, on June 4-6, 1994, the seventh meeting in La Jolla, California, on October 17-19, 1994, and the eighth meeting in Ensenada, Mexico, on January 23-24, 1995.

The IRP follows a general procedure for reporting the compliance by vessels with laws and regulations established for minimizing the mortalities of dolphins during fishing operations to the governments concerned. The observers who accompany the vessels on their fishing trips prepare summaries of information pertinent to dolphin mortalities, and these are sent to the governments having jurisdiction of the vessels by the Secretariat of the IRP (IATTC staff members) soon after the fishing trips are completed. The IRP reviews the observer data for all completed trips at its meetings, and after each meeting reports of possible infractions are sent to the governments of the nations which have jurisdiction of the vessels in question. The governments report back to the IRP on actions taken regarding infractions. The IRP then informs the other governments of compliance and non-compliance by means of an annual report presented to the governments at the next IATTC meeting.

In addition to reviewing completed trip data at each meeting, the IRP made decisions and took action on a number of issues, including the following:

1. Eighty-one vessels were issued DMLs of 114 animals each for 1995.
2. It was agreed that the names of captains suspended by any country participating in the program will be provided to the other participating countries.
3. It was agreed that the observers will be allowed access to certain vessel equipment and work areas to confirm the presence and operation of that equipment, and to facilitate their data collection duties.
4. It was agreed that, to improve the performance of vessels and captains, the IATTC staff will notify the managers of vessels which have exceeded 25, 50, or 75 percent of their dolphin mortality limits (DMLs) by the end of the first, second, or third quarters, respectively, that they are in danger of exceeding their annual DMLs.
5. It was agreed that an observer from the IATTC or a national program will not be placed on a non-DML vessel for its first fishing trip of the year if the vessel has not paid its observer program assessment fees. (Vessels with DMLs are required to pay the assessment fee upon allocation of the DML.)
6. It was agreed that the IRP will send letters to the fishermen of the international fleet congratulating them on the dramatic reduction of dolphin mortality, but also pointing out areas where improvement can still be made.
7. It was agreed that the current policy on research fishing will continue, that is that research can be conducted by either a dedicated research vessel or a fishing vessel which has been allocated a DML. It was further agreed that any mortalities of dolphins resulting from research by a vessel with a DML will be included in the overall DML, but not applied to the vessel's individual DML.
8. A standardized certification system for captains was approved for consideration at the next meeting of the governments party to the Agreement for the Conservation of Dolphins.
9. Recommendations for the collection of observer program fees, including raising the fee from US$10 to US$12 per short ton of carrying capacity, were approved for consideration at the next meeting of the governments party to the Agreement for the Conservation of Dolphins.
10. A policy on the disposition of DMLs for vessels which have been lost was approved for consideration at the next meeting of the governments party to the Agreement for the Conservation of Dolphins.
11. Procedures for dealing with "special problem sets" (sets during which, due to problems with wind, currents, etc., there are high mortalities of dolphins) that occur in 1994 were approved for consideration at the next meeting of the governments party to the Agreement for the Conservation of Dolphins.
12. It was recommended to the participating nations that information on the projected annual mortality of dolphins be considered in the allocation of second-semester DMLs, in addition to the criteria stated in Paragraph 5 of the Agreement for the Conservation of Dolphins.

Due to lack of funds, there have been no meetings of the Scientific Advisory Board during 1994 or 1995.

INTRODUCTION

This paper has been prepared for the Commissioners of the Inter-American Tropical Tuna Commission (IATTC), their advisors, and others attending the Commission's 55th meeting, to be held in La Jolla, California, USA, on June 13-15, 1995. It provides information on fleet size, capacity at sea, annual catches, geographical distribution of the catches, and yellowfin quotas. The statistics for 1994 are the most complete available at the time this report was prepared, but are subject to revision as more data become available.

THE EASTERN PACIFIC TUNA FLEET

Historical description

The IATTC staff maintains records of gear, flag, and fish-carrying capacity for most of the vessels which fish for yellowfin, skipjack, or bluefin tuna in the Pacific Ocean east of 150°W (EPO). Records are not maintained for Far East-flag longline vessels, nor for sport-fishing vessels and small craft such as canoes and launches. The eastern Pacific fleet described here includes vessels which have fished all or part of the year in the EPO for yellowfin, skipjack, or bluefin.

The owner's or builder's estimates of vessel carrying capacities are used until landing records indicate that revision of these is appropriate. The vessels are grouped, by carrying capacity, into the following size classes for reporting purposes: class 1, less than 51 short tons; class 2, 51-100 tons; class 3, 101-200 tons; class 4, 201-300 tons; class 5, 301-400 tons; and class 6, more than 400 tons. Except for longliners and miscellaneous small vessels mentioned in the previous paragraph, all vessels which fished in the EPO during the year are included in the annual estimates of the size of the surface fleet.

Until about 1960, fishing for tunas in the EPO was dominated by baitboats operating in the more coastal regions and in the vicinity of offshore islands. During the late 1950s and early 1960s most of the larger baitboats were converted to purse seiners, and by 1961 the EPO surface fleet was dominated by these vessels. During the 1961-1991 period the number of baitboats decreased from about 95 to 20, where it has since remained, and their capacity decreased from about 10.5 to 1.5 thousand tons. During the same period the number of purse seiners increased from about 125 to 150, and their capacity increased from about 30 to 112 thousand tons. The peak in numbers and capacity of purse seiners occurred during the 1978-1981 period, when the number of these vessels ranged from 248 to 268 and the capacity from 181 to 185 thousand tons (Table 1).

The construction of new and larger purse seiners, which began during the mid-1960s, resulted in an increase in the fleet capacity from 46.3 thousand tons in 1966 to 184.6 thousand tons in 1976. During the 1977-1981 period the fleet capacity remained fairly stable, increasing by only about 2.9 thousand tons. During this period the construction of new vessels continued, but the new capacity was offset by losses due to sinkings and vessels leaving the fishery. In 1982 the fleet capacity declined by 17.5 thousand tons as vessels were deactivated or left the EPO to fish in other areas, primarily the western Pacific. This trend continued through 1983 as the catch rates in the EPO declined, due primarily to anomalous ocean conditions during 1982-1983. The fleet capacity declined by 26.3 thousand tons during 1983, and in 1984 it declined an additional 26.8 thousand tons. The fleet capacity in 1984, about 117.6 thousand tons, was the lowest it had been since 1971. In 1985, however, due primarily to the return of vessels from the western Pacific, the capacity increased to about 132.2 thousand tons, but in 1986 it decreased slightly to about 126.1 thousand tons. During 1987, several new vessels were added to the fleet, and others returned to the EPO fishery from the western Pacific, causing the fleet capacity to increase to 145.7 thousand tons. This trend continued in 1988, resulting in a fleet capacity of 151.5 thousand tons. This was the greatest fleet capacity observed since 1982. The fleet capacity dropped to about 136.6 thousand tons in 1989, and in 1990 it remained at about the same level, 137.6 thousand tons. This fleet capacity was not present in the EPO through the entire year, however. In the spring of 1990, the U.S. tuna-canning industry adopted a policy of not purchasing tunas caught during trips during which sets on tunas associated with dolphins were made. This caused many of the U.S.-flag vessels fishing in the EPO to leave that fishery and enter the fisheries of the Atlantic or western Pacific. The U.S. canners have continued their "dolphin-safe" policy, resulting in further decreases in the number of U.S.-flag vessels fishing in the EPO, and a consequent reduction in the EPO fleet to 111.7 thousand tons and 113.3 thousand tons in 1992 and 1993, respectively. With increases in participation of non-U.S.-flag vessels in the fishery, the 1994 capacity was up slightly to about 116.1 thousand tons.

Preliminary 1994 data for numbers and carrying capacities of surface-gear vessels of the EPO tuna fleet are shown in Table 2. The EPO tuna fleet was dominated by vessels operating under the Mexican and Venezuelan flags during 1994, with about 60 percent of the total capacity of the fleet flying the flags of those nations. The Mexican fleet has been the largest fleet since 1987, with about 40 percent of the total capacity during 1993 and 1994, while Venezuelan-flag vessels comprised about 20 percent of the total capacity during those years. In 1990 the U.S. fleet included 29 large purse seiners, with a total capacity of about 30.1 thousand tons, but following adoption of the U.S. canners' dolphin-safe policy, this number decreased to 13 in 1991 and to 8 in 1992, where it remained at the end of 1993. By the end of 1994, only six large U.S.-flag seiners, with a total of about 7.2 thousand tons of capacity, were operating in the EPO. The U.S. canners' dolphin-safe policy has not had a significant effect on the sizes of the other fleets operating in the EPO, but in recent years the numbers of sets and the catches made on dolphin-associated fish have decreased moderately (see the section entitled CATCHES).

The majority of the total capacity of the EPO tuna fleet consists of purse seiners with capacities of over 400 tons. This group of vessels comprised about 90 percent of the total fishing capacity operating in the EPO in 1994.

Capacity at sea

The average, minimum, and maximum tons of fleet capacity at sea (CAS) by month for the EPO during 1979-1993, and the 1994 values, are shown in Figure 1. These monthly values are the averages of the CAS estimates given in weekly reports prepared by the IATTC staff. The values for the 1979-1993 period were chosen for comparison with those of 1994 because the earlier years, when regulations were in effect, had somewhat different temporal distributions of effort due to restriction of yellowfin fishing in the Commission's Yellowfin Regulatory Area (CYRA; Figure 2). Overall, as was the case in 1993, the 1994

CAS values are significantly less than the 1979-1993 averages. This reduction is attributed to the reduction in the number and capacity of U.S.-flag vessels participating in the fishery, which has resulted from the U.S. canners' dolphin-safe policy discussed above.

During the 1979-1993 period an average of 51 percent of the surface fleet capacity was at sea during each month; in 1994 the average was about 55 percent. Thus, while the total capacity of the fleet in 1994 was approaching historical lows for the period following introduction of large purse-seine vessels, the fishing effort expended by the fleet, in terms of the proportion of the fleet CAS, was significantly greater than the average observed during the preceding 15-year period. The extremes in the average monthly CAS were observed in 1983-1984, during and following the 1982-1983 El Niño, when the average monthly CAS was about 38 percent, and in 1989, when the average monthly CAS was about 61 percent.

CATCHES

Annual catches

Annual estimates of the catches of the various species of tunas and other fishes landed by vessels of the EPO tuna fleet are shown in Table 3. This table includes only the catches by surface gear. The catch data for skipjack and bluefin in the eastern Pacific Ocean (EPO) are essentially complete except for insignificant catches made by the longline, recreational, and artisanal fisheries. The catch data for bigeye and yellowfin do not include catches by longline vessels, as the data from these fisheries are received much later than those for the surface fishery. Bigeye are harvested primarily by the longline fishery, which in most years has accounted for over 95 percent of the catch. About 5 to 10 percent of the total catch of yellowfin is taken by longlines.

Tunas are caught in three types of schools by surface gear, those in which the fish are associated with dolphins, those in which the fish are associated with floating objects, such as logs, and those in which the fish are associated only with other fish. Data on the logged purse-seine sets of each type, the catches of yellowfin, skipjack and bigeye tuna in these sets, and the total catches of these species by purse seines are listed in Table 4. It can be seen that the greatest number of sets on schools associated with floating objects and on schools of tuna associated only with other fish were made during the period from the mid-1970s to the early 1980s. There is considerable opposition to fishing for tunas associated with dolphins by certain environmental groups and individuals concerned with the environment. Despite this opposition, and the previously-mentioned canners' actions, the numbers of sets and catches of tunas made on fish associated with dolphins have decreased only moderately.

There were no restrictions on fishing for tunas in the EPO during the 1979-1993 period, although regulations placed on purse-seine vessels directing their effort at tunas associated with dolphins have probably affected the way certain of these vessels operated, especially during the late 1980s and early 1990s. Studies which may provide measures of this effect are currently in progress, but useful results are not yet available, so the statistics for 1994 are compared to those for 1979-1993. During this period, there was a major El Niño event which began in mid-1982 and persisted until late 1983. The catch rates in the EPO were low during the El Niño episode, which caused a shift of fishing effort from the eastern to the western Pacific, and the fishing effort remained relatively low during 1984-1986.

The catches of the various species from the EPO during 1994, by flag of vessel, are listed in Table 5. The average annual yellowfin catch in the CYRA during the 1979-1993 period was 218.0 thousand short tons (range: 91.4 to 294.7). The preliminary estimate of the 1994 yellowfin catch in the CYRA is 214.9 thousand tons. During the 1979-1993 period, the annual yellowfin catch from the area between the CYRA boundary and 150°W averaged 27.0 thousand tons (range: 13.5 to 51.9). The preliminary estimate of the yellowfin catch from this area for 1994 is 23.1 thousand tons. The estimated 1994 yellowfin catch from the EPO, 238.0 thousand tons, is well below the maximum of 319.2 thousand tons taken in 1989, but not significantly different from the 1979-1993 average of 236.6 thousand tons.

During the 1979-1993 period, the annual catch of skipjack in the EPO averaged 92.6 thousand tons (range: 54.5 to 145.5). The preliminary estimate of the skipjack catch in the EPO in 1994, 82.1 thousand tons, was about 10 percent below the 1979-1993 average.

While yellowfin and skipjack comprise the most significant portion of the catch made in the EPO, bigeye, bluefin, albacore, black skipjack, bonito, and other species contribute to the overall harvest in this area. The total catch of these other species in the EPO was about 42.0 thousand tons in 1994, as compared to the 1979-1993 average of 16.5 thousand tons (range: 8.2 to 32.7). The record-high catch of species other than yellowfin and skipjack was due to a record-high catch of about 31.5 thousand tons of bigeye. The increased catch of bigeye was apparently due to the discovery that bigeye associated with floating objects, but well below the surface, can be detected with sonar and caught with purse seines. Many of these floating objects are fish-aggregating devices (FADs) placed in the water by the fishermen.

The estimated catch of all species in the EPO in 1994 was about 362.1 thousand tons. Mexican-, Venezuelan-, Vanuatu- and Ecuadorian-flag vessels harvested 37, 15, 13, and 12 percent, respectively, of the total EPO catch.

The landings are fish unloaded during a calendar year, regardless of the year of catch. The country of landing is that in which the fish were unloaded from the fishing vessel or, in the case of transshipments, the country which received the transshipped fish. Preliminary landings data (Table 5) indicate that, of the 369.7 thousand tons of tunas landed in 1994, 130.5 thousand tons (35 percent) was landed in Mexico. The landings in Ecuador (106.1 thousand tons; 29 percent), Colombia (45.9 thousand tons; 12 percent) and Venezuela (34.3 thousand tons, 9 percent) were next in terms of magnitude.It is important to note that when final information is available the landings currently assigned to various countries may change due to exports from storage facilities to processors in other nations.

Geographical distribution

The average annual distribution of logged catches of yellowfin by purse seiners in the EPO during the 1979-1993 period is shown in Figure 3, and a preliminary estimate for 1994 is shown in Figure 4. As fishing conditions change throughout the year, the areas of greatest catches vary. The catch of yellowfin during the first quarter of 1994 was generally restricted to regions inside the CYRA, primarily in nearshore areas and along the Inter-Tropical Convergence Zone. Additionally, good fishing occurred offshore between about 10°S and 18°S from about 80°W to 90°W. During the second quarter, catches continued to be made nearshore, with areas of high catch occurring between about 5°N and 23°N. An area of high catches evident in the southern Gulf of California during the first quarter extended well into the Gulf during the second quarter. The catches increased in the offshore area between about 5°N and 15°N from about 110°W to 125°W during the second quarter. During the third quarter, the catches were centered in three regions: (1) the area off Baja California between about 22°N and 27°N and in the southern part of the Gulf of California; (2) the area off Ecuador and northern Peru and offshore to the region of the Galapagos Islands; and (3) the offshore region between about 8°N and 14°N from about 115°W to 130°W. During the fourth quarter, fishing continued throughout most of the EPO, with areas of high catches occurring between about 3°S and 7°S from about 80°W to 85°W and from about 100°W to 115°W. The fishing remained good around the tip of Baja California, but the catches decreased in the northern part of the Gulf of California.

The average annual distribution of logged catches of skipjack by purse seiners in the EPO during the 1979-1993 period is shown in Figure 5, and a preliminary estimate for 1994 is shown in Figure 6. The skipjack catches during the first quarter of 1994 were distributed throughout the region between about 18°S and 5°S and from about 80°W to 90°W. There was also a small region of high catches near the Gulf of Guayaquil during the first quarter. The zone of greatest skipjack catches shifted north, to the Panama Bight region, during the second quarter. As the year progressed, the catches decreased in the Panama Bight, and were more scattered throughout the EPO.

Most of the catches of bigeye made during 1994 were taken between about 5°N and 10°S from about 85°W to 110°W.

YELLOWFIN QUOTAS

The Director and scientific staff of the IATTC have the responsibility for conducting studies of the biology of the tunas and related species of fish inhabiting the eastern Pacific Ocean and the effects of fishing upon them, and recommending appropriate conservation measures when necessary so that the stocks of fish can be maintained at levels which will yield the maximum sustainable catches. The staff first recommended that an annual quota be set on the catch of yellowfin in the CYRA in 1962. However, the member governments could not reach agreement on a yellowfin quota until 1966. Agreement was reached on a quota for every year from 1966 through 1986 and 1988 through 1993. The Commission staff did not recommend a quota for 1987 because, due primarily to exceptionally high levels of recruitment in 1984 and 1985, the abundance of yellowfin appeared to be at its greatest level in recent years.

The IATTC held its 53rd meeting in Cumaná, Venezuela, on June 7-9, 1994. The IATTC staff recommended a yellowfin quota of 250,000 tons for that year, with the option to increase this limit by four increments of 25,000 tons (Appendix). This quota was also adopted.

APPENDIX

The Inter-American Tropical Tuna Commission, having responsibility for the scientific study of the tunas and tuna-like fishes of the eastern Pacific Ocean, and for the formulation of recommendations to the High Contracting Parties with regard to these resources, and having maintained since 1950 a continuing scientific program directed toward the study of those resources,

Notes that the yellowfin tuna resource of the eastern Pacific supports one of the most important surface fisheries for tunas in the world, and

Recognizes, based on past experience in the fishery, that the potential production from the resource can be reduced by excessive fishing effort, and

Recalls that from 1966 through 1979 the implementation of a successful conservation program maintained the yellowfin stock at high levels of abundance, and

Notes that from 1980 through 1993, excepting 1987, although no conservation programs were implemented, conservation measures were recommended to the Commissioners by the scientific staff, and in turn such measures were approved by the Commissioners for recommendation to their respective governments, and

Observes that, although the stock of yellowfin is currently at a level of abundance greater than the optimum, nevertheless it can be over-exploited,

Concludes that, if conditions warrant, a limitation on the catch of yellowfin tuna should be implemented during 1994.

The Inter-American Tropical Tuna Commission therefore recommends to the High Contracting Parties that a quota of 250,000 short tons be established for the 1994 calendar year on the total catch of yellowfin tuna from the CYRA (as defined in the resolution adopted by the Commission on May 17, 1962), and that the Director should be authorized to increase this limit by no more than four successive increments of 25,000 short tons each if he concludes from examination of available data that such increases will pose no substantial danger to the stocks, and

Finally recommends that all member states and other interested states work diligently to achieve the implementation of such a yellowfin conservation program for 1994.

TABLE 2. Preliminary estimates of the numbers and carrying capacities in short tons of vessels (exclusive of longliners and miscellaneous small vessels) operating in the EPO in 1994 by flag, gear, and size class. Each vessel is included in the totals for each flag under which it fished during the year, but is included only once in the fleet total. Therefore the totals for the fleet may not equal the sums of the individual flag entries. (PS = purse seiner; BB = baitboat; JB = jigboat)
TABLA 2. Estimaciones preliminares del número de barcos que pescaron en el OPO en 1994 (sin incluír palangreros y barcos pequeños diversos), y capacidad de acarreo de los mismos, en toneladas cortas, por bandera, arte de pesca, y clase de arqueo. Se incluye cada barco en los totales de cada bandera bajo la cual pescó durante el año, pero solamente una vez en el total de la flota; por consiguiente, los totales de las flotas no son necesariamente iguales a las sumas de las banderas individuales. (PS = cerquero; BB = barco de carnada; JB = curricán)

INTRODUCTION

The world catches of skipjack have exceeded those of any other species of tuna for many years. The proportions of the world catches of the principal market species (skipjack, yellowfin, bigeye, albacore, and northern and southern bluefin) which were skipjack were 45, 45, 51, 48, and 46 percent in 1989, 1990, 1991, 1992, and 1993, respectively. In the Pacific Ocean 47, 48, 55, 51, and 51 percent of the catches in 1989, 1990, 1991, 1992, and 1993, respectively, were skipjack. The world catches of skipjack by area are shown in Figure 1. It is apparent that the catches in the Pacific Ocean are much greater than those in the Atlantic and Indian Oceans and that the catches in the western and central Pacific are much greater than those in the eastern Pacific Ocean (EPO). The catches in the EPO, except for those of the 1975-1981 period, which were greater, have remained at about the same level during the 1961-1994 period, while those of the other areas have greatly increased.

Substantial fisheries for skipjack occur in the northeastern Pacific near Baja California, the Revillagigedo Islands, and Clipperton Island and in the southeastern Pacific near Central America, northern South America, Cocos Island-Brito Bank, and the Galapagos Islands. The area of very warm water off southern Mexico which separates the two areas is usually nearly devoid of skipjack, but in some years, such as 1956, the distribution of skipjack has been continuous from north to south. The fishery for skipjack in the EPO tends to take place closer to shore than that for yellowfin, but in recent years greater portions of the skipjack catches have been made further offshore. In the central Pacific Ocean (CPO) there are lesser fisheries for skipjack near the Hawaiian Islands and French Polynesia (the Marquesas, Tuamotu, and Society Islands). Further to the west, near Fiji, Indonesia, Japan, New Zealand, Papua New Guinea, the Philippines, the Solomon Islands, and many other islands, there are much more substantial fisheries for skipjack.

The total catches of skipjack in the EPO vary considerably from year to year (Figure 1), and the locations at which the fish are caught also vary from year to year. During the late 1950s large catches of skipjack were made south of 5°S, and from the late 1950s to the early 1970s large catches of this species were made close to shore off Ecuador and northern Peru. During the early 1970s, however, the center of abundance of the southeastern group seemed to shift to waters off Colombia and Central America, and then during the early 1980s it seemed to shift back to Colombia and Ecuador. In 1994 substantial catches were made off Colombia, Ecuador, and Peru (Background Paper 1, Figure 6).

The size compositions of skipjack samples taken in the EPO during 1989 through 1994 are shown in Figure 2. Differences among years are apparent; the fish were smaller during 1992 and 1993 than during any of the other years.

Tunas are caught in three types of schools, those in which the fish are associated with dolphins, those in which the fish are associated with floating objects, such as logs, and those in which the fish are associated only with other fish. Unlike yellowfin, skipjack are not often caught in schools associated with dolphins. Data on the numbers of logged purse-seine sets of each type, the catches of yellowfin, skipjack, and bigeye in these sets, and the total catches of yellowfin, skipjack, and bigeye are listed in Table 4 of Background Paper 1. It can be seen that the greatest numbers of sets on schools associated with floating objects and on schools of tuna associated only with other fish ("free-swimming schools") were made during the period from the mid-1970s to the early 1980s, and that this was the period of greatest catches of skipjack. There is currently considerable opposition from environmental groups and from individuals concerned with the environment to fishing for tunas associated with dolphins, so if the vessels which have fished in that manner in recent years were to direct their effort to fishing for schools of tuna associated with floating objects and free-swimming schools the catches of skipjack would probably increase (U.S. Nat. Mar. Fish. Serv., Fish. Bull., 92 (1): 132-143).

If the fishery for surface-dwelling tunas were to depend more on skipjack and less on yellowfin in the future, the total catches of all species of tunas would probably fluctuate more from year to year than they did during the 1970s, 1980s, and early 1990s. This is because the availability of skipjack in the EPO is more variable than that of yellowfin. The catches per unit of effort (CPUEs) of skipjack vary among years by a factor of about seven (IATTC Bulletin, 19 (6): Tables 9 and 10), whereas those of yellowfin vary among years by a factor of about three (Background Paper 2, Table 4). The greater variability of skipjack is due to two factors. First, the recruitment of skipjack (IATTC Bulletin, 19 (6): Table 14) is more variable than that of yellowfin (Background Paper 2, Table 2). Second, fewer age groups of skipjack than of yellowfin are caught, and the presence of more age groups tends to dampen the year-to-year fluctuations in the catches.

POPULATION STRUCTURE

Skipjack occur throughout the tropical and subtropical waters of the Pacific Ocean. It is of fundamental importance to determine whether these fish belong to one or more than one subpopulation and, if the latter is the case, where the different subpopulations occur and how their distributions vary with time and age. This problem has been studied by various methods, including analyses of catch statistics, life history, tagging, and biochemical genetic data, and data on chemical composition of the otoliths of the fish. Research in these fields has been conducted by many organizations, including the IATTC, the South Pacific Commission (SPC), the U.S. National Marine Fisheries Service (NMFS), and various organizations in Japan. The research results pertinent to a solution to this problem were examined at a workshop of fisheries biologists and population geneticists sponsored by the SPC in 1980, and the conclusions reached at that meeting were discussed in detail in the IATTC Annual Report for 1984. In summary, there were two principal hypotheses for skipjack in the Pacific Ocean. The separate-subpopulation hypothesis stated that there are two or more genetically-distinct subpopulations of skipjack in the Pacific Ocean, and the clinal hypothesis stated that separate subpopulations of skipjack do not exist in the Pacific Ocean, but there is isolation by distance, i.e. the probability of any two fish interbreeding is an inverse function of their distance from one another. It was concluded at the workshop that the available data did not favor either the separate-subpopulation or the clinal hypothesis.

A more recent study (Mar. Biol., 79 (3): 315-319) involving analysis of mitochondrial DNA (deoxyribonucleic acid) showed no significant genetic differences between Atlantic and Pacific skipjack. It is important to note, however, that these results do not imply rapid mixing of fish of the two oceans, as even very slow mixing is sufficient for maintenance of genetic homogeneity. If there are no genetic differences between Atlantic and Pacific skipjack, it is unlikely that there are genetic differences among skipjack of different parts of the Pacific Ocean.

Sexually mature skipjack are not often encountered in the EPO, and larval and early-juvenile skipjack are much more abundant in the western and central Pacific Ocean than in the EPO. Twenty-seven tagged skipjack released in the EPO have been recaptured in the central or western Pacific Ocean (IATTC Bull., 19 (4): Appendix 2). Accordingly, it has generally been assumed that nearly all of the skipjack in the EPO have originated from spawning in the central and/or western Pacific and that, after a short sojourn in the EPO, they return to the central and/or western Pacific to spawn.

The IATTC Annual Report for 1984 includes a discussion of the population structure of skipjack in the EPO and their relationship with those in the rest of the Pacific. Tagging has shown that there is little mixing of fish between the northern Mexico and northern South America-Central America areas. The catches of skipjack in the northeastern and southeastern areas are moderately well correlated with one another, however, although in some years, for example 1970, the catch has been above average in one area and below average in the other (Figure 3). Examination of all the data available at that time led to the conclusion that the skipjack of northern Mexico and northern South America-Central America are parts of a single group inhabiting an arc-shaped area with its tips at those two areas, and that the fish at the ends of the distribution mix at least to some extent on the spawning grounds of the central and/or western Pacific.

During the late 1970s and early 1980s the IATTC staff conducted research on the chemical composition of the hard parts of tunas, using proton-induced x-ray emission spectroscopy (PIXE) to estimate the amount of mixing of fish of different areas. The rationale behind this technique is that different ocean areas have different chemical, physical, and biological properties which influence the chemical makeup of the hard parts of the fish, which would make it possible to distinguish fish which have lived in different areas at some time during their lives from one another. The results of this work have been published in IATTC Annual Reports and in the Collective Volume of Scientific Papers, International Commission for the Conservation of Atlantic Tunas, Vol. 24. Unfortunately, stock structure analysis using this technique is expensive and technically difficult. Also, interpretation of the results is difficult because the processes governing the elemental composition of the hard parts are not well understood.

During the late 1980s and early 1990s the IATTC supported research into the use of an energy-dispersive x-ray detector (EDS) attached to a scanning electron microscope to measure the chemical composition of the otoliths of skipjack tuna. This research, which was conducted by Mr. James N. Ianelli, a former IATTC employee, at the University of Washington, was completed during 1993. The results indicate that use of the EDS has potential for stock identification purposes. There was considerable variation among otoliths of fish from the same area, however, so it is not possible to classify the fish with 100-percent accuracy.

Most of the research was conducted with otoliths collected from skipjack caught off Baja California, Hawaii, and Fiji. Three readings for calcium, potassium, strontium, sulfur, magnesium, phosphorus, sodium, and aluminum were recorded from each transverse section of otolith, representing areas of early, mid-life, and recent growth. (No attempts were made to determine the ages of the fish, so the ages corresponding to the early, mid-life, and recent growth are not precisely known. The early growth corresponds to the early juvenile stage of the fish, and the recent growth corresponds to that of fish 44 to 60 cm in length at the time of capture.) Multivariate analyses of variance showed significant differences for the zones of the otoliths. The early, mid-life, and recent growth zones were different for fish from Hawaii and Fiji, indicating that they did not inhabit the same ocean areas during any of these periods. The early and mid-life zones were similar for fish from Hawaii and Baja California, but the recent growth zone was different for fish from those two areas. This seems to indicate that they inhabited the same area during the early and mid-life periods, but acquired different characteristics during the recent period when they were in different areas. This fits perfectly with findings from early life history and tagging studies, which indicate that most of the skipjack which inhabit the EPO were hatched in the CPO and return to that area after a brief sojourn in the EPO. Eventually it may be feasible to take otoliths from samples of large skipjack caught in the CPO and determine which fish had made visits to the EPO and which had not.

Analyses of length-frequency samples of skipjack caught in the EPO and in the vicinity of Hawaii were performed to determine (1) if seasonal recruitment patterns occur in either area and, if so, (2) if there are similarities in the patterns observed in the two areas. Skipjack spawn in all months of the year in the central equatorial Pacific, and seasonally in the northern hemisphere around the Hawaiian Islands and in the southern hemisphere around the Marquesas Islands. It is not known whether the fish caught in these and nearby areas represent fish from dominant seasonal cohorts or from cohorts of varying strength which are distributed more or less uniformly throughout the year. In areas where the spawning is seasonal, these analyses allow comparisons with arriving cohorts which are the products of spawning that occurred during different times of the year. For example, if the dominant cohort of the catch coincides with the local peak spawning period, then spawning from elsewhere may not contribute significantly to the local fishable stock. If the converse is true, however, the fishable stock is likely to be less dependent on local spawning activity. This information should provide a better understanding of the possible relationships between fish caught in the different areas.

Details as to how the analyses were carried out are given in the IATTC Annual Report for 1991, pages 33-34. It was concluded that skipjack are recruited into the fishery of Hawaii mostly during April and May and into the fishery of the EPO mostly during December, January, and February. These fish almost certainly result from spawning at different times of the year, but this does not preclude the possibility that the recruits to the two areas are members of the same stock.

In spite of the information presented above, it is possible that the assumption that there is little spawning of skipjack in the EPO is not valid. The results of research on the reproductive biology of skipjack in the EPO (IATTC Bulletin, 5 (6)) indicated some spawning off Central America and in the vicinity of the Revillagigedo Islands. In addition, larval surveys have indicated that some skipjack spawning occurs in offshore waters and, to a lesser extent, in coastal waters of the EPO. The IATTC staff is investigating further the population structure of skipjack in the EPO by critically evaluating the extent of skipjack spawning in the EPO. A 2-year sampling program has been initiated, beginning with skipjack caught in the commercial fishery in January 1995. Ovaries from skipjack greater than 50 cm in length caught throughout the EPO are being collected. Sampling is being restricted to larger individuals because these are more likely to be sexually mature.

ABUNDANCE, AVAILABILITY, AND VULNERABILITY TO CAPTURE

An examination of the effects of environmental conditions on the abundance, availability, and vulnerability to capture of skipjack in the EPO has been published in IATTC Bulletin, Vol. 19, No. 6. One study described in that report involved analysis of the relationship between the apparent abundance of skipjack in their second year of life in the EPO and (1) the average sea-surface temperature in the area of the Pacific Ocean between 135°W and 180° with sea-surface temperatures exceeding 82°F (27.8°C), and (2) the wind-mixing index (the cube of the average wind speed, which is roughly proportional to the degree of mixing caused by wind in the upper layers of the ocean) in this area.

The first analysis was performed because there is a high positive correlation between the concentration of skipjack larvae in zooplankton net tows and temperature, and it was reasoned that more spawning or greater survival of the eggs and/or larvae might occur in years with higher sea-surface temperatures. The second was performed because the survival of skipjack larvae may depend upon the degree of mixing of the upper layers of the ocean. Investigations conducted at the U.S. NMFS Southwest Fisheries Science Center in La Jolla indicate that in the California Current concentrations of food suitable for first-feeding larval anchovies, Engraulis mordax, tend to occur in aggregations and well-defined layers. Mixing disrupts the layering and disperses the food organisms, so that many of the larvae are unable to obtain sufficient food for survival. It appears that strong year classes of anchovies are associated with weak winds during the larval stages, and vice versa. It was thought that this effect might also occur in the skipjack spawning areas of the CPO. There was a significant relationship between skipjack abundance and sea-surface temperature, and a highly-significant correlation between skipjack abundance and the wind-mixing index, with this index accounting for 46 percent of the variability in the apparent abundance of skipjack in the EPO in their second year of life.

In addition, investigations of the possible relationship between the apparent abundance of skipjack in their second year of life in the EPO and the strength of the eastward-flowing North Equatorial Countercurrent were conducted. If skipjack use this current in their migration it would be expected that young fish would be carried to the EPO in greater-than-average numbers when the current is stronger and in less-than-average numbers when it is weaker. No significant correlation was found, however, between skipjack abundance and indices of current speed.

On the whole, the results of the IATTC staff's attempts to relate the apparent abundance of skipjack with environmental conditions suggest that this relationship is complex and not obvious. The problem might be partially resolved if biological and statistical studies could be made for the entire population unit(s) which contribute(s) to the EPO fishery, instead of the portion of it (or them) which inhabit(s) the EPO during part of the life span. Usable catch, effort, and CPUE data are available for some parts of the Pacific population unit(s), but not for others. Also, there is the problem of separating the catches of fish of the population unit(s) which contribute(s) to the EPO fishery from those which do not.

Age-structured models

The yield-per-recruit approach to age-structured modelling is discussed in Background Paper 2, which deals with yellowfin. The skipjack and yellowfin populations in the EPO are somewhat different, however. The natural attrition of yellowfin consists only of natural mortality, whereas that for skipjack consists of both natural mortality and emigration to the central and western Pacific. The combined annual rate of natural mortality and emigration for skipjack is estimated from length-frequency and tagging data to be roughly 75 to 90 percent per year, as compared to approximately 55 percent for the natural mortality of yellowfin.

The yields per recruit for skipjack with various combinations of natural attrition (natural mortality plus emigration), fishing effort, and size at entry are shown in Figure 4. The IATTC staff's estimates of age-specific fishing mortality for 1986-1987 and of growth and natural attrition have been integrated to obtain the calculations which form the basis for this figure. The sources of the growth-in-weight data were as follows:

| Computation | Equation | Source |
|---|---|---|
| growth in length | 24 cm per year | IATTC Bull., 19 (6) |
| weight-length relationship | $\log w = 3.336 \log l - 8.250$ | IATTC Bull., 4 (2) |

Annual coefficients of natural attrition of 1.5 (about 78 percent) and 2.0 (about 86 percent) were used. The values in the horizontal scale are multiples of the fishing effort, i.e. 0.5, 1.0, and 2.0 represent effort values half of, equal to, and twice the actual effort values for 1986-1987. Various combinations of fishing effort and size at entry give various yields per recruit, which are indicated by curved lines. For example, if the size at entry is fixed at 40 cm (about 2.7 pounds or 1.2 kg) the yield per recruit with a multiplier of 1 is about 1.58 pounds (0.72 kg) in the upper panel and about 0.85 pounds (0.39 kg) in the lower panel. In the upper panel sizes at entry of about 40 cm with a multiplier of 1 or about 48 cm with a multiplier of 2 to 3 would produce the maximum yield per recruit. In the lower panel the yields per recruit are greatest with sizes at entry of 30 cm or less. In general, fishing effort considerably greater or ages at entry considerably less than has been the case so far in the EPO would be required to reduce the yield per recruitment. This is because the losses to the total weight of a cohort of fish by natural mortality and emigration exceed the gains to it by growth, even when the fish are less than 50 cm long and presumably growing rapidly.

Production models

Production models, based on indices of abundance of the fish, are described in Background Paper 2, dealing with yellowfin. It was pointed out that models of this type are not applicable unless the fish in question belong to a discrete population, i.e. there is relatively little interchange between the fish in the area under consideration, in this case the EPO, and those in other areas where the species in question is exploited, or the exchange rates among subpopulations are known. Neither of these requirements is met, as tagging has demonstrated interchange of fish of the eastern, central, and western Pacific Ocean (5), but the exchange rates are not known. Most of the skipjack caught in the EPO are taken relatively near the coast, and most of these are apparently the result of spawning in the central and/or western Pacific, which may also supply skipjack to the offshore portions of the eastern, central, and the western Pacific. Thus the amounts caught in the EPO may be determined by either the abundance of juveniles hatched in the central and/or western Pacific or the portion of juveniles in that or those areas which migrate to the EPO. In the absence of definition of the population being exploited, production modelling is of little or no value for skipjack in the EPO fishery.

Spawner-recruit models

Spawner-recruit models are discussed in Background Paper 2, dealing with yellowfin. It is not possible, due to lack of knowledge of the stock structure, to apply these models to skipjack in the Pacific Ocean in a meaningful way. Skipjack are less heavily exploited than most of the other principal market species of tunas, and it is generally believed that the recruitment of this species has not been affected by reduction in the abundance of spawners due to fishing.

CONSIDERATIONS FOR 1995

The yield-per-recruit model does not indicate that the catches of skipjack could be increased by increasing the minimum size at which they are harvested. This model, with a natural attrition value of 2.0, indicates that the maximum yield per recruit from adolescent skipjack in the EPO can be obtained by increasing the fishing effort on individuals over about 30 cm in length. Conceivably this could reduce the recruitment in subsequent years, but this seems unlikely.

It is reasonably certain that skipjack are underfished in the EPO and that this situation will continue in the foreseeable future. Nevertheless it is important, for at least two reasons, to learn more about this species and its relationships with the environment. First, such knowledge may make it possible to predict the abundance of skipjack in the EPO several months ahead of time, which would be of great value to the fishing industry. Second, knowledge of the environmental conditions favorable to the existence of skipjack, coupled with understanding of the dynamic processes of the ocean, could make it possible to predict where and when skipjack are likely to be caught, which should increase the efficiency of the fishing fleet.

SUMMARY

1. [redacted] THE SUPREME COURT, ON MAY 30, SENT TO THE SENATE A DRAFT BILL THAT WOULD SUSPEND ALL INTERNATIONAL ADOPTIONS FOR ONE YEAR, DURING WHICH TIME THE COURT WOULD COORDINATE EFFORTS TO DEVELOP A NEW ADOPTION LAW. EMBASSY IMMEDIATELY CONTACTED THE SENATE PRESIDENT TO EXPRESS CONCERN THAT THIS MEASURE COULD UNFAIRLY EFFECT PIPELINE CASES INVOLVING AMCIT

THE PROPOSED BILL

2. (U) A COPY OF THE DRAFT BILL WAS PUBLISHED BY THE DAILY "NOTICIAS" ON MAY 31. EMBASSY'S UNOFFICIAL TRANSLATION FOLLOWS:

BEGIN TEXT:

THE CONGRESS OF THE NATION SANCTIONS WITH FORCE OF LAW:

ART. 1. TO SUSPEND FOR THE PERIOD OF ONE YEAR, THE PROCESSING OF INTERNATIONAL ADOPTIONS.

ART. 2. DURING THIS PERIOD, THE SUPREME COURT SHALL INITIATE CONSULTATIONS WITH OTHER AFFECTED ORGANIZATIONS THE ELABORATION OF A LEGISLATIVE PROJECT THAT, IN AN INTEGRAL MANNER, SHALL CONTEMPLATE THE JURIDICAL AND ADMINISTRATIVE REGULATION REQUIRED FOR THE FAMILY AND MINORS.

ART. 3. THE SUPREME COURT SHALL ADOPT THE PROVISIONS APPROPRIATE FOR CARRYING OUT THIS LAW.

END TEXT.

3. (U) IN A DOCUMENT ACCOMPANYING THE PROPOSED LEGISLATION, THE SUPREME COURT EXPLAINED THAT THE PROPOSED LAW WAS IN RESPONSE TO "THE NOTORIOUS CONCERN" OVER ALLEGED CORRUPTION IN INTERNATIONAL ADOPTIONS EXPRESSED BY PUBLIC OPINION, NOTING THAT "THE SCANDALS SUCCEED EACH OTHER WITH A PROFUSION THAT COUNSELS THE TAKING OF RADICAL MEASURES." IT FURTHER RECOGNIZED THE EXISTENCE OF "IRREGULARITIES" IN THE INTERNATIONAL ADOPTION PROCESS, AND OPINED THAT EXISTING LEGISLATION AND REGULATIONS ARE INADEQUATE TO RESOLVE THE PROBLEM. CONSEQUENTLY, THE COURT SOUGHT A ONE-YEAR SUSPENSION OF INTERNATIONAL ADOPTIONS IN WHICH TO DRAFT A NEW LAW AND REGULATIONS. CHIEF JUSTICE OSCAR PACIELLO, IN PRESENTING THE BILL, ALSO URGED CONGRESS TO ACT IMMEDIATELY ON IT "GIVEN THE URGENCY OF THE PROBLEM."

4. [redacted] DCM CONTACTED SENATE PRESIDENT EVELIO FERNANDEZ AREVALOS TO LEARN THE STATUS OF THE PROPOSED BILL AND TO EXPRESS USG CONCERNS THAT THIS MEASURE

COULD UNFAIRLY EFFECT PIPELINE CASES INVOLVING AMCIT PROSPECTIVE PARENTS. FERNANDEZ AREVALOS TOOK OUR CONCERNS UNDER ADVISEMENT, AND SAID THAT THEY WOULD BE FACTORED INTO CONGRESS'S CONSIDERATION OF THE BILL.

5. [redacted] EMBASSY INTENDS SOON TO DISCUSS THE SUPREME COURT'S BILL WITH SENATOR SUSANA MORINIGO, CHAIRWOMAN OF THE SENATE'S HUMAN RIGHTS COMMITTEE, WHO IS WORKING ON NEW ADOPTION LEGISLATION THAT WOULD SAFEGUARD PIPELINE CASES (REF B). THROUGH USIS AND USAID PROGRAMS WE ARE SENDING MORINIGO TO THE U.S. FOR A ONE-MONTH IV IN JUNE, AND ARE SENDING TWO LEGISLATORS RECOMMENDED BY HER TO COLOMBIA TO STUDY THAT COUNTRY'S INTERNATIONAL ADOPTION PROCEDURES.

6. [redacted] EMBASSY WILL ALSO RAISE, AS APPROPRIATE, USG ADOPTION CONCERNS WITH SUPREME COURT CHIEF JUSTICE PACIELLO, AS WELL AS WITH OFFICIALS IN THE FOREIGN MINISTRY AND OTHER GOP AGENCIES.

WHY NOW?

7. (U) AS NOTED IN REFTELS, THE ISSUE OF CORRUPTION AND IRREGULARITIES IN THE INTERNATIONAL ADOPTION PROCESS HAS BEEN SIMMERING FOR SOME TIME IN THE PARAGU
AYAN POLITICAL ARENA. IT APPEARS TO HAVE BEEN BROUGHT TO THE SURFACE NOW BY TWO RECENT AND RELATED EVENTS:

-- ON MAY 12 A GROUP OF NGO'S MARCHED ON THE JUDICIAL PALACE AND ON CONGRESS TO DEMAND THE SUSPENSION OF INTERNATIONAL ADOPTIONS UNTIL ADEQUATE LEGISLATION IS IN PLACE. AT THE JUDICIAL PALACE THEY MET WITH CHIEF JUSTICE PACIELLO, WHO PROMISED TO TAKE APPROPRIATE STEPS TO "HALT THE EXPORTATION OF CHILDREN" AND FAVOR NATIONAL OVER INTERNATIONAL ADOPTIONS.

-- IN MID-MAY DR. MARCEL HOPE, A BRAZILIAN JUDGE WHO HAD BEEN NAMED UNICEF'S 1993 "MAGISTRATE OF THE YEAR," ATTENDED A CONFERENCE ON "PROPOSALS FOR A NEW LEGAL CODE FOR CHILDREN AND ADOLESCENTS." HOPE SPOKE OUT STRONGLY AGAINST THE CURRENT PARAGUAYAN SYSTEM FOR INTERNATIONAL ADOPTIONS AND URGED THAT IT BE SUSPENDED UNTIL A NEW LAW CAN BE PASSED. HIS VIEWS RECEIVED EXTENSIVE COVERAGE, PARTICULARLY IN A FULL-PAGE INTERVIEW WITH ASUNCION'S MAJOR DAILY "ABC COLOR" ON MAY 21.

AN AVALANCHE OF SCANDALS

8. (U) THE FOLLOWING LIST IS A SUMMARY OF PRESS REPORTS HIGHLIGHTING ADOPTION SCANDALS SINCE THE BEGINNING OF 1995. IT SHOULD GIVE WASHINGTON READERS A BETTER UNDERSTANDING WHY THERE IS SUCH VIRULENT POPULAR SENTIMENT AGAINST INTERNATIONAL ADOPTIONS IN PARAGUAY AT THIS TIME:

-- JUVENILE COURT JUDGE ANA ARRELLAGA DE CASTILLO RAIDS A CLANDESTINE NURSERY ON JANUARY 13 AND RESCUES FOUR BABIES AS PART OF AN INVESTIGATION INTO THE THEFT OF A BABY ON DECEMBER 19, 1994, FROM THE BARRIO OBRERO HOSPITAL. TWO MOTHERS WHO HAVE HAD THEIR BABIES STOLEN WERE COOPERATING WITH THE JUDGE.

COMMENT

9. [redacted] EMBASSY HAS TAKEN A PRO-ACTIVE APPROACH TO THE IRREGULARITIES AND ALLEGED CORRUPTION IN PARAGUAY'S INTERNATIONAL ADOPTION PROCESS. THE CONSULATE HAS REQUIRED A PERSONAL INTERVIEW WITH THE BIOLOGICAL MOTHER IN ALL SIMPLE ADOPTIONS IN ORDER TO ENSURE THAT THE BABY IS BEING VOLUNTARILY PUT UP FOR ADOPTION, AND HAS MADE ADOPTIONS A PRIORITY TARGET FOR ITS FRAUD INVESTIGATOR (REF A). PERHAPS BECAUSE OF THESE PRECAUTIONS ADOPTIONS BY AMCITS HAVE NOT FIGURED THE MAJOR SCANDALS UNCOVERED TO DATE.

10. [redacted] WE WILL CONTINUE TO TAKE A PRO-ACTIVE APPROACH TO THE ADOPTION TANGLE IN THE BELIEF THAT AN HONEST, ENFORCEABLE SYSTEM IS IN THE INTERESTS OF ALL, INCLUDING U.S. CITIZEN ADOPTING PARENTS. WE WILL ALSO CONTINUE WORKING TO ENSURE THAT AMERICAN CITIZENS WHOSE ADOPTIONS ARE "IN THE PIPELINE," AND ESPECIALLY THOSE WHO HAVE ALREADY ARRIVED IN PARAGUAY AND TAKEN TEMPORARY CUSTODY OF THEIR PROSPECTIVE CHILD, SHALL BE PERMITTED TO COMPLETE THE ADOPTION PROCESS AND RETURN TO THE U.S. WITH THEIR NEW BABY. WE HAVE AND WILL CONTINUE TO PLACE A PREMIUM ON PROVIDING PROMPT VISA SERVICE TO THE HUNDREDS OF AMERICAN ADOPTIVE COUPLES WHO COME TO PARAGUAY IN THE HOPES OF ADOPTING CHILDREN. REF A PROVIDES SOLID DEPARTMENT BACKING FOR DECIDING ON UNCLEAR CASES IN FAVOR OF RAPID APPROVAL AND PROCESSING. WE DO WISH TO UNDERSCORE THE UNIQUE SITUATION IN PARAGUAY--PARTICULARLY AS IT RELATES TO PARA 2 OF REF B.

2. THE GOVERNMENT OF PARAGUAY HAS RECENTLY TAKEN ACTION TO ADDRESS WHAT IT SEES AS THE SERIOUS PROBLEMS CAUSED BY THE GROWTH HERE OF A VIRTUAL ADOPTION INDUSTRY. THE PARAGUAYAN SUPREME COURT HAS CALLED FOR A SUSPENSION OF INTERNATIONAL ADOPTIONS WHILE THE JUDICIARY AND CONGRESS DRAFT A NEW ADOPTION LAW (SEVERAL ALTERNATIVE BILLS HAVE ALREADY BEEN PROPOSED) AND CREATE A CENTRALIZED ADOPTION AUTHORITY. WE HAVE LOBBIED TO PROTECT THOSE CASES IN THE PIPELINE, AND HAVE BEEN ASSURED THAT ALL SUCH CASES BEGUN WILL BE PROCESSED TO CONCLUSION.

3. POST IS ASSISTING THE GOP IN ITS EFFORTS TO REFORM AND CENTRALIZE ADOPTIONS UNDER THE CONTROL OF THE STATE. EMBASSY OFFICERS, AT ALL LEVELS, HAVE BEEN MEETING WITH GOP CONGRESSPERSONS AND JUDICIARY TO ENSURE THAT ALL AMCIT ADOPTION CASES IN THE PIPELINE WILL CONTINUE TO BE PROCESSED AND TO OFFER GUIDANCE AND ENCOURAGEMENT TO GOP ON ITS EFFORTS TOWARD REFORM.

4. OTHER USG AGENCIES HAVE ALSO MADE SIGNIFICANT CONTRIBUTIONS: USIS HAS SPONSORED SENATOR SUSANA MORINIGO, THE DRAFTER OF THE MOST PROMINENT ADOPTION REFORM BILL, FOR AN IV GRANT IN WASHINGTON. HER VISIT WILL INCLUDE A VISIT TO THE DEPARTMENT'S CHILDREN'S ISSUES BUREAU. A.I.D., ALREADY HEAVILY INVOLVED IN THE GOP'S REFORM OF THE ENTIRE JUDICIARY, IS SPONSORING SENATOR PURA MORENO DE DECOUD AND JUDGE ELIXENO AYALA (OF THE SUPREME COURT) FOR A TRIP TO COLOMBIA TO ATTEND AN ADOPTION SEMINAR AND TO STUDY COLOMBIA'S RECENTLY REFORMED ADOPTION SYSTEM. EMBASSY BOGOTA IS COORDINATING THE VISIT AT THAT END.

5. GIVEN THE POSSIBILITY OF VARIOUS LEGISLATIVE PROPOSALS (AND THE LOCAL ADOPTION INDUSTRY LOBBYING HARD TO FORESTALL ANY REFORM) WE CAN NOT GUESS HOW LONG THE SUSPENSION WILL LAST. CONGRESS IS CURRENTLY DISTRECTED BY

RECENT BANKING SCANDALS AND THE JUDICIARY IS RECREATING ITSELF BY FILLING ALL JUDICIAL POSITIONS UNDER THE CRITERIA OF THE 1992 CONSTITUTION AND ENABLING LEGISLATION. (SIGNIFICANTLY, SEVERAL PROMINENT MINORS COURTS JUDGES ARE SEEKING POSITIONS IN OTHER JUDICIAL AREAS.)

6. WE ARE DISINCLINED TO ABANDON OUR BIOMOTHER INTERVIEWS UNTIL THE REFORM PROCESS IS COMPLETED. THE INTERVIEWS HAVE BECOME ROUTINELY

ACCEPTED AND SERVE TO HEAD OFF ATTEMPTS AT FRAUD. MOREOVER, IN THE VAST MAJORITY OF CASES, THE ADVANCED INTERVIEW OF THE BIOMOTHER ASPECT OF THE PROCESS DOES NOT INTERFERE WITH QUICK AND EFFICIENT PROCESSING ONCE THE ADOPTING PARENTS HAVE ARRIVED IN ASUNCION. CREDIBLE BABY TRAFFICKING/STEALING CASES THAT HAVE COME UP HE RE HAVE NOT BEEN TIED TO U.S
BOUND CASES. MOREOVER, DROPPING OUR PROGRAM AT THIS JUNCTURE WOULD GIVE THE LOCAL ADOPTION ATTORNEYS THE ARGUMENT THAT WE HAVE FAITH IN THE CURRENT SYSTEM, WHICH WE CERTAINLY DO NOT.

7. IN A RECENT CONVERSATION WITH THE NEW FISCAL GENERAL (ATTORNEY GENERAL) ANIBAL CABRERA VERON, HE SURMISED THAT THE MORATORIUM MIGHT ONLY BE LIMITED TO NON-AMERICAN CASES. WHY? HE FELT THAT THE EMBASSY'S FRAUD PREVENTION WAS ADEQUATE TO THE TASK OF DETECTING (OR AT LEAST DRIVING AWAY) THE BAD CASES.

8. MEANWHILE A NUMBER OF US ADOPTION AGENCIES ARE DISTANCING THEMSELVES FROM PARAGUAY. THEY ARE QUESTIONING THE ETHICS OF PARAGUAY'S "PRIVATE" ADOPTION SYSTEM AS WELL AS THE UNCERTAINTIES OF PARAGUAYAN JUDICIAL PROCESSING WHICH PLACE EMOTIONAL STRAINS ON THEIR CLIENTS. MOST RECENTLY, A REPRESENTATIVE OF THE VILLA HOPE AGENCY TOLD US THAT THEY WILL CONFINE THEIR EFFORTS TO BOLIVIA, ECUADOR AND PERU--ALL OF WHICH USE ADOPTION SYSTEMS MODELED ON THE COLOMBIAN SYSTEM.

9. RECENTLY, OUR MOST PROBLEMATIC "ADOPTIONISTA," RAUL ANDRADA, CAME TO THE EMBASSY TO ANNOUNCE THAT HE WAS GETTING OUT OF THE ADOPTION INDUSTRY. WHILE NOT ASSUMING ANY OF THE BLAME, HIMSELF, HE RECOUNTED THE ILLS OF THE PARAGUAYAN SYSTEM WHICH WE HAVE REGULARLY CATALOGED IN REFTELS (BABY STEALING, BROKERING, ETC.). HE ALSO OFFERED FAINT HOPE FOR AN ADEQUATE REFORM LAW--"EVERYONE WANTS TO DO SOMETHING BUT NOBODY REALLY UNDERSTANDS THE PROBLEM." HE VOLUNTEERED THAT THE EMBASSY BIO-MOTHER SCREENING WAS THE SINGLE MOST IMPORTANT SCREENING DEVICE IN THE ENTIRE ADOPTION PROCESS. HE SAID THAT IT KEPT EVERYONE HONEST AND THAT "THE COURTS SHOULD HAVE BEEN DOING THAT ALL ALONG."

10. CHARGE'S COMMENTS: EMBASSY POLITICAL AND ECONOMIC REPORTING REFLECTS THE CULTURE OF CORRUPTION THAT HAS DEVELOPED IN PARAGUAY OVER FIVE DECADES OF AUTHORITARIAN RULE. FIVE OF THE COUNTRY'S MAJOR BANKERS ARE CURRENTLY IN JAIL CHARGED WITH EMBEZZLEMENT. AMONG OTHER THINGS, THE PRESIDENT OF THE CENTRAL BANK HAS BEEN FIRED AFTER FOUR MILLION DOLLARS IN CASH WAS FOUND MISSING FORM THE VAULT. DAILY CHARGES OF CORRUPTION ARE MADE AGAINST THE NATIONAL TELEPHONE COMPANY AND SOCIAL SECURITY ADMINISTRATION EXECUTIVES. THE LIST GOES ON. PREVIOUS CONSULAR OFFICERS HAVE LAMENTED HAVING TO ISSUE IR-3 AND IR-4 VISAS WHEN THEY SMELLED FRAUD BUT HAD NEITHER THE TIME NOR THE RESOURCES TO LOOK BEHIND THE GOP DOCUMENTATION.

11. IN SUM, WE WILL CONTINUE DOING ALL POSSIBLE TO PROCESS THESE CASES EFFICIENTLY WITH THE GOOD OF THE U.S. CITIZEN ADOPTING PARENTS IN MIND. OUR ISSUANCE STATISTICS SHOW THIS IS WHAT OCCURS IN THE VAST MAJORITY OF

CASES. COMPLAINTS REGARDING BIOMOTHER INTERVIEWS HAVE VIRTUALLY DRIED UP AND HAVE GREATLY IMPROVED THE QUALITY OF THE CASES THE LOCAL LAWYERS ARE SENDING US. THOSE LAWYERS, LIKE MR. ANDRADA, RECOGNIZE THAT THERE IS FRAUD IN THE LOCAL PROCESSING (IF THERE WERE NOT, IT WOULD BE THE ONLY PARAGUAYAN INSTITUTION THAT WAS RELATIVELY FREE OF IT). HE AND OTHER LAWYERS INITIALLY TRIED TO STOP THE EMBASSY BIOMOTHER INTERVIEW PROCESS BY TELLING U.S. BASED COMMERCIAL ADOPTION AGENCIES AND ADOPTING PARENTS TO WRITE THEIR CONGRESSMEN AND PRESSURE THE STATE DEPARTMENT TO END THE PRACTICE. THEY STARTED A CAMPAIGN AGAINST OUR SOLE CONSULAR OFFICER IN AN EFFORT TO DEFLECT OUR VIEW FROM THE GROWING NUMBER OF CHARGES AGAINST THEM FOR COERCING BIOMOTHERS TO GIVE UP THEIR BABIES, OR BY OUTRIGHT STEALING THEM. THEIR OWN BEHAVIOR LED TO THE NEW SUPREME COURT CHIEF JUSTICE TO CALL FOR A SUSPENSION OF INTERNATIONAL ADOPTIONS. END CHARGE'S COMMENT.

"BLAZING NEW TRAILS INTO THE 21ST CENTURY"

Sponsored by D.A.R.E. America

BLAZING NEW TRAILS INTO THE 21ST CENTURY

We all have an image of what the 21st Century will be like. For years, movies have shown the future as a world full of spaceships, time travel and alien beings. But the 21st Century is nearly here; how much can the world really change in just a few years? While science fiction may have us zipping around the universe, reality will force us to deal with the problems of family and society -- even if we're someday living in outer space.

By the year 2020, it is estimated that there will be over 255 million people in the United States alone. In the short span of the 20th Century, the world has made great advances in science and technology in order to accommodate this vastly growing population -- from a horse and carriage society to automobiles and speed trains to nuclear powered spaceships and now, cyberspace. The world is in a constant state of change. Even the family structure is evolving. But with such rapid change, also comes a whole new set of problems. Police officers agree that the drug problem cannot be defeated through heightened enforcement in our lifetime, or our children's. Sadly, the presence of gangs and weapons in school has also grown substantially over the past decade. That's why the work of D.A.R.E. is so important. As police officers, educators and parents, we have a responsibility to ensure a drug and violence free future for our children.

This year marks D.A.R.E.'s 13th Anniversary. Today, the program is taught in 250,000 school classrooms in each of the fifty states. The effectiveness of D.A.R.E. stretches far beyond the United States. D.A.R.E. is an official program taught in the Department of Defense schools throughout the world and eighteen other countries including: Australia, New Zealand, American Samoa, Canada, Great Britain, Puerto Rico, Costa Rica, Brazil, Mexico, Hungary, Norway, and Sweden. Overall, more than 25 million children a year are positively impacted. Today, the National D.A.R.E. Officer's Association has over 4,000 members worldwide. It is our great pleasure to welcome you to the 8th Annual N.D.O.A. Training Conference.

In the 21st Century, the concept of parenting will take on added weight and important dimensions. If we want our children to live in a world that is healthy and safe, we must make it that way -- through the 21st Century and beyond.

Dear N.D.O.A. Members:

On behalf of the entire National D.A.R.E. Officers Board of Directors, I would like to welcome you to Houston, Texas and the Eighth Annual NDOA Conference. Although it seems like time slips away, I sit and dream of the many D.A.R.E. success stories we could share from across this great country. Dreams of the many children that have been affected by your love and genuine caring. It was once said that "Success comes to those who dream dreams and pay the price for them to come true." Each and every one of you have paid the price for all your dreams to come true.

As President of the NDOA, I have had the opportunity to travel to various states, attending conferences, meetings and classrooms. I have also received a barrage of calls regarding the D.A.R.E. Program. As I listened to some detractors of the program, I became amazed because, in spite of their negative comments, each region has increased D.A.R.E. Trainings and some even have waiting lists for officers to be trained. Once again, the D.A.R.E. Program has expanded and is expected to increase even further in 1996. The bottom line - when you're at the top, people are going to take shots. My advice is, keep shooting, we're still alive and going strong.

BLAZING NEW TRAILS INTO THE 21ST CENTURY - this year's theme is a great way to start the conference. Those of us involved with the conference had a choice. Do we look back into the sunset, or do we look forward to new trails and bright horizons? We decided that we would not only acknowledge and thank those who have paved our way, but would also bring you a conference full of new hopes, dreams and horizons that you will be able to pass along to your D.A.R.E. kids.

Once again, the Conference Committee and your Board of Directors have put together another outstanding conference. Their commitment, dedication and hard work will be evident over the next few days. When you see these people, please take the time to say a well-deserved thank you for all their tireless efforts.

It has been an honor and pleasure to serve as your President. I wish each and every one of you continued success.

Sincerely,

Bill Finn

Dear Conference Attendees:

On behalf of the Board of Directors of D.A.R.E. America, I would like to thank the City of Houston, the Houston Police Department and the N.D.O.A. Board of Directors for all their accomplishments in coordinating the 8th Annual N.D.O.A. Conference of educational workshops and seminars sponsored by D.A.R.E. America.

BLAZING NEW TRAILS INTO THE 21ST CENTURY is a theme which is fitting for D.A.R.E. As an innovator in drug and violence prevention education, D.A.R.E. has been keenly aware of the need to properly teach and prepare our children to build a brighter future not only for themselves, but for generations as well.

We can be very proud of our accomplishments since the inception of the D.A.R.E. program. With the help of our corporate sponsors, we are now positively impacting over 30 million children worldwide each year!

Please enjoy the conference. There are many excellent workshops and events planned to strengthen our ability to deliver our program. I hope you find the information valuable and useful in you return to the classroom. Thank you for your continuous commitment to our children's future.

Dear D.A.R.E. National Conference Delegates:

It is my special honor to extend greetings to all as you gather for your 1995 D.A.R.E. Officer Association national conference in Houston. I know the citizens of Houston will treat you to their usual terrific Texas hospitality!

Nothing is more important than guiding and encouraging our children, so that they will stay free of drugs and alcohol, and make the right choices about their lives. Houston's D.A.R.E. program is an outstanding example of what community cooperation between our law enforcement officers and the public school system can achieve. Our children are our most precious resource, and in Houston and in communities all across America, all of you are making a real difference.

On behalf of all Texans, please accept my thanks and congratulations, and my personal best wishes for a productive, successful, and enjoyable conference.

Proclamation

National D.A.R.E. Officers Association Days

D.A.R.E. (Drug Abuse Resistance Education) is a proactive initiative designed to prepare young people to resist drugs and alcohol through education. The D.A.R.E. program targets young people in the classroom by utilizing trained, uniformed police officers as instructors and role models. The program teaches young people not only to refuse drugs and alcohol, but also how to do so.

The D.A.R.E. curriculum educates young people about the social, emotional, psychological, and physiological hazards of drug abuse. D.A.R.E. teaches students what being grown-up really means - that is, not giving in to negative peer pressure, making mature decisions, and learning to cope with life's problems in positive ways.

Realizing the importance of ongoing training, the National D.A.R.E. Officers Association will host its eighth annual conference in Houston on July 11 - 15, 1995. The City of Houston is pleased to join the Houston Police Department in welcoming D.A.R.E. officers from across the nation, and extends best wishes for a successful and rewarding conference.

Therefore, I, Robert C. Lanier, Mayor of the City of Houston, hereby proclaim July 11 - 15, 1995, as

Dear D.A.R.E. Officers:

We D.A.R.E. educators with the L.A.U.S.D. wish to congratulate the National D.A.R.E. Officers' Association for their outstanding contribution in promoting standards of excellence for D.A.R.E. throughout our nation and around the world. We are strongly committed to working with law enforcement to further the goals of keeping our kids drug-free and violence-free. As we look back to the first D.A.R.E. conference in Los Angeles in 1987, it is with a feeling of great pride and a sincere sense of accomplishment that we now can acknowledge that D.A.R.E. is well received and accepted worldwide in 1995.

This is true because of the "grassroots efforts" of committed officers and educators working collaboratively in both urban and rural settings to further the purpose of keeping kids off drugs. We respect and commend our D.A.R.E. officers, who are the ambassadors of the program. Only through the dedicated efforts of officers, educators, parents, and community support groups, working cooperatively, will the national education goal 2000--safe, drug-free, and violence-free schools--be reached.

All of us must continually renew our commitment by staying involved, keeping up to date, and supporting our local efforts to maintain the integrity of the D.A.R.E. program in our own communities.

Best wishes for a successful conference!

Warm regards,

Ruth Rich

THE NATIONAL D.A.R.E. OFFICERS ASSOCIATION:

The World's LARGEST Officer and Educator Organization

The major goals of the N.D.O.A. are to promote harmony and goodwill among the membership and to develop a means to disseminate information which is valuable to all D.A.R.E. officers and educators worldwide. The N.D.O.A. is a professional association that does not set policy on the D.A.R.E. curriculum, but serves as the voice of the membership for all their concerns. Each year, the N.D.O.A. organizes an annual training conference for D.A.R.E. officers and educators. The conference provides updated training information; continuing education through the selection of educational workshops and expert presenters; and is an opportunity for D.A.R.E. officers and educators to network and strengthen their D.A.R.E. programs.

To all members of the N.D.O.A., benefits include: An annual essay/scholarship contest for dependents of members in good standing; financial assistance to chartered states for their annual training conferences; quarterly newsletters with updated information and educational training tips; national award winners; and a host of other membership benefits including year round travel discounts, conference related merchandise as well as opportunities to participate in our annual golf tournament and car show.

The National D.A.R.E. Officers Association is also proud to have been able to assist cities affected by recent disasters. In January, 1994, the N.D.O.A. sent D.A.R.E. merchandise to victims of the Northridge, California earthquake. In July, 1994, D.A.R.E. bags, workbags and water bottles were sent to help flood victims of Georgia. Recently, the N.D.O.A. sent 1,000 water bottles to the rescue workers and victims of the Oklahoma City bombing. The N.D.O.A. also established procedures for our members to send letters of support to the children affected by this tragedy. The N.D.O.A. is conscious of its responsibility to be of assistance during these unfortunate times which ultimately affect us all.

The N.D.O.A. conference is regarded as one of the finest training conferences in law enforcement and the education field today. However, the benefits of being involved in the "D.A.R.E. family" year round bring our association to a higher level. Not only are we a professional association, but we are committed to improving the lives of everyone D.A.R.E. touches. The magic experienced by a classroom D.A.R.E. instructor is a feeling that only a few can even describe – those few who are dedicated to helping the children of the world. Thank you for all you have done and continue to do.

NUCLEAR FUEL ASSEMBLY

REF: STATE 158293

SUMMARY

1. MEXICO'S NATIONAL INSTITUTE FOR NUCLEAR RESEARCH (ININ) RECENTLY DELIVERED ITS FIRST NUCLEAR FUEL ASSEMBLY TO THE FEDERAL ELECTRICITY COMMISSION (CFE) FOR USE IN THE LAGUNA VERDE II REACTOR. SMALL-SCALE ASSEMBLY, HOWEVER, DOES NOT PROVE THAT ININ CAN PRODUCE ON A COMPETITIVE BASIS. THE PARTY OF THE DEMOCRATIC REVOLUTION (PRO) HAS AGAIN LED DEMONSTRATIONS AGAINST LAGUNA VERDE THAT ARE WIDELY REPORTED IN THE PRESS. END SUMMARY.

2. MEXICO'S NATIONAL INSTITUTE FOR NUCLEAR RESEARCH (ININ) HAS DELIVERED ITS FIRST NUCLEAR FUEL ASSEMBLY TO MEXICO'S FEDERAL ELECTRICITY COMMISSION (CFE). ALL FOUR ASSEMBLIES, WHICH WERE MANUFACTURED AT ININ'S NUCLEAR FUEL FABRICATION PILOT PLANT USING LICENSED GE TECHNOLOGY, ARE TO BE DELIVERED TO CFE. CFE PLANS TO USE THE ASSEMBLIES IN ITS SECOND REACTOR AT LAGUNA VERDE II WHEN IT IS REFUELED AT THE START OF 1996. ACCORDING TO EMBASSY CONTACTS IN THE GOM, LAGUNA VERDE II, A GE PRESSURIZED WATER REACTOR OF THE SAME DESIGN AS MEXICO'S FIRST PLANT (LAGUNA VERDE I), HAS CERTIFIED IN APRIL AND IS OPERATING AT CAPACITY. EACH UNIT IS RATED AT 675 MEGAWATTS.

3. AS WOULD BE EXPECTED, OPINIONS ON LAGUNA VERDE II ARE MIXED, BUT MOST OFFICIAL COMMENTS SUPPORT THE PLANT. IN PUBLIC STATEMENTS, SECRETARY OF ENERGY PICHARDO HAS EMPHASIZED SAVINGS, IN TERMS OF HARD CURRENCY FUEL OIL IMPORTS, ON THE ORDER OF $1.25 MILLION A DAY, AS WELL AS THE LACK OF

POLLUTION FROM THE PLANT. GREENPEACE AND A FEW LOCAL POLITICIANS IN THE STATE OF VERACRUZ WHERE THE PLANT IS LOCATED HAVE CRITICIZED THE PLANT AS "BEING VERY DANGEROUS BECAUSE OF ITS LACK OF SAFEGUARDS, INSUFFICIENT WASTE DISPOSAL AND ITS LOCATION IN AN EARTHQUAKE ZONE." THE EFFORT HAS BEEN LED BY VERACRUZ SENATOR HEBERTO CASTILLO MARTINEZ OF THE OPPOSTION PARTY OF THE DEMOCRATIC REVOLUTION (PRD). FEDERAL OFFICIALS COUNTER THAT THE CHARGES ARE WITHOUT BASIS. U.S. OBSERVERS HAVE GIVEN IT GOOD GRADES AS WELL.

3. ININ HAS DEMONSTRATED THAT IT CAN, ON A SMALL SCALE BASIS, ASSEMBLE NUCLEAR FUEL. WHETHER IT CAN DO SO ON A COMMERCIAL BASIS IS AN ENTIRELY DIFFERENT QUESTION. ININ ALSO HAS A NEW DIRECTOR, DR. MIGUEL YACAMAN, WHO WAS FORMERLY CONACYT'S DEPUTY DIRECTOR FOR SCIENCE. END COMMENT

WILL BE RESTRICTED TO THE BEIJING AND HUAIROU SITES. ARE WE PERMITTED TO MEET IN OUR HOTEL ROOMS?

A. PRIVATE, NONINTRUSIVE MEETINGS IN YOUR HOTEL ROOMS ARE ACCEPTABLE.

Q. WE HAVE HEARD THAT PUBLIC MEETINGS AND DEMONSTRATIONS ARE NOT PERMITTED OUTSIDE THE CONFERENCE AND FORUM SITES. WHAT IS AND IS NOT ACCEPTABLE?

A. PUBLIC MEETINGS ARE NOT STRICTLY ILLEGAL UNDER CHINESE LAW BUT APPROVAL MUST BE OBTAINED WELL IN ADVANCE FROM THE LOCAL POLICE. ACTIVITIES RELATED TO THE CONFERENCE AND FORUM SHOULD TAKE PLACE ON-SITE ONLY. (CAROL: I COULD REALLY USE SOME HARD INFORMATION ON THE LAWS GOVERNING PUBLIC GATHERINGS HERE; THERE ARE MANY REFERENCES TO THESE REGULATIONS IN OUR FILES BUT NOTHING EXPLICIT).

Q. CAN WE HANG BANNERS FROM OUR HOTEL ROOMS AND BUSES?

A. CONFERENCE AND FORUM ACTIVITIES ARE RESTRICTED TO THE BEIJING AND HUAIROU SITES. BANNERS AND SIGNS AT ANY OTHER LOCATION DO NOT CONFORM TO THE RULES GOVERNING THE CONFERENCE AND COULD BE MISINTERPRETED AS THREATENING OR HOSTILE.

IF YOU CAN THINK OF ANY OTHER ISSUES RELATING TO PUBLIC SECURITY DURING THE CONFERENCE THAT I SHOULD RAISE OR WARN PEOPLE ABOUT, PLEASE ADVISE.

3. (C) FOR REYNOLDS FROM COLE. SMITH LEGISLATION ON 4WC. ON JULY 18 CONGRESSMAN CHRIS SMITH, ALONG WITH REPRESENTATIVES ROS-LEHTINEN, LIPINSKI, WOLF, SALMON, AND KING, INTRODUCED H.R. 2047 WHICH PROPOSES TO WITHOLD FUNDING FOR ANY U.S. OFFICIAL OR DELEGATE TO THE FOURTH WORLD CONFERENCE ON WOMEN UNLESS SPECIFIC BINDING AND NON-BINDING RESOLUTIONS ARE SATISFIED. THERE ARE NINE CONDITIONS TO THE BILL, SEVEN OF WHICH ARE BINDING. THE BINDING RESOLUTIONS DEAL WITH THE ACCREDITATION PROCESS, VISA ISSUANCE, ACCESS TO THE MAIN CONFERENCE SITE, RESPECT FOR INTERNATIONALLY RECOGNIZED HUMAN RIGHTS, AND THE RELEASE OF HARRY WU. SMITH'S BILL STIPULATES THAT AT LEAST ONE GROUP FROM BOTH TAIWAN AND TIBET MUST RECEIVE ACCREDITATION AND THAT THE OVERALL ACCREDITAION PROCESS

MUST BE SHOWN TO BE FAIR. THE TWO NON-BINDING RESOLUTIONS AIM AT PROMOTING AN AUTHENTIC WOMEN'S PERSPECTIVE AT THE CONFERENCE. THEY OPPOSE COERCIVE POPULATION CONTROL MEASURES AND THE ESTABLISHMENT OF AN INTERNATIONALLY PROTECTED RIGHT TO ABORTION. THEY FURTHER DEFINE THE CONCEPTS OF MOTHERHOOD, FAMILY, AND GENDER, AND ADVOCATE "FREEDOM OF CONSCIENCE AND RELIGION" (PARTICULARLY FOR THOSE WHO PROVIDE HEALTH CARE SERVICES).

LEGISLATIVE AFFAIRS BELIEVES THERE IS A STRONG POSSIBILITY THAT THE BILL COULD PASS BY ITSELF OR ATTACHED AS AN AMENDMENT TO APPROPRIATIONS BILLS IN THE [redacted]

HOUSE. THE LEGISLATION ALSO MIGHT BE APPROVED IN THE SENATE IF ATTACHED TO THE STATE DEPARTMENT AUTHORIZATION BILL, WHICH OF COURSE MIGHT BE VETOED.

4. (U) FOR MONROE FROM MICHALAK. MFN UPHELD IN THE HOUSE. THE SCRIPT WE LAID OUT IN THE O-I YESTERDAY CAME TO PASS TODAY. THE BEREUTER/PELOSI/WOLF BILL PASSED OVERWHELMINIGLY, 416-10, AND THE MOTION TO TABLE THE RESOLUTION TO DISAPPROVE MFN ALSO PASSED BY A LARGE MARGIN 321-107. THE FOCUS OF THE ACTION NOW SWITCHES TO THE SENATE. THEORETICALLY, THEY CAN INITIATE A MOTION TO DISAPPROVE AND SEND IT TO THE HOUSE FOR ACTION. THIS IS HIGHLY UNLIKELY.

MFN CONT'D. WHAT IS MORE LIKELY IS THAT WE WILL BEGIN TO SEE UNHELPFUL AMENDMENTS TO VARIOUS SENATE BILLS CALLING FOR FUND CUTOFFS FOR THE WOMEN'S CONFERENCE UNLESS HARRY WU IS RELEASED (PER PARA 3 ABOVE), OR AMENDMENTS CALLING FOR REVOCATION OF MFN FOR ARMS SALES TO PAKISTAN OR IRAN. HELMS' APPROPRIATION BILL COMES UP NEXT WEEK AND WE ARE, YET AGAIN, GEARING UP TO SEND OUT A SLEW OF BACKGROUND PAPERS AND TALKERS FOR THESE SAME BATTLES IN THE SENATE.

5. (U) FOR BOORSTEIN FROM STANTON. POST CLOSINGS. IN CASE YOU HAVEN'T ALREADY HEARD VIA AN ADMIN CABLE, 19 POSTS HAVE BEEN SELECTED BY THE SECRETARY FOR CLOSURE IN FY 1996. DEPENDING ON THE BUDGET SITUATION, OTHER POSTS MAY BE ADDED TO THE LIST AS TIME GOES ON. LISTED BY REGION, THE POSTS ARE:

2. SUMMARY: OVER THE YEARS, POST HAS RECEIVED INNUMERABLE COMPLAINTS ABOUT THE DAWN BONN AGENCY BASED NEAR MINNEAPOLIS. HEARSAY PROVIDED BY AMCIT ADOPTIVE PARENTS ALLUDES TO DAWN BONN PROBLEMS IN OTHER COUNTRIES AND IN VARIOUS STATES(AMONG THEM DELAWARE AND MARYLAND) OF THE UNION. OUR OWN EXPERIENCE HAS REVEALED UNETHICAL IF NOT ILLEGAL BEHAVIOR ON THE PART OF THIS AGENCY. RECENT PARAGUAYAN POLICE INVESTIGATIONS ON BABY STEALING TIE DAWN BONN, AT LEAST TANGENTIALLY, TO A GROUP OF ARRESTED BABY TRAFFICKERS. APPROPRIATE AN INVESTIGATION OF THE AGENCY'S ACTIVITIES. END SUMMARY

3. THE EMOTIONALLY CHARGED ENVIRONMENT OF INTERNATIONAL ADOPTIONS HAS LED TO FREQUENT COMPLAINTS ABOUT PARAGUAYAN ATTORNEYS, THE PARAGUAYAN LEGAL SYSTEM, AND SOMETIMES, US. AMCIT ADOPTIVE PARENTS ALSO FREQUENTLY COMPLAIN ABOUT THEIR US ADOPTION AGENCIES-BUT COMPLAINTS ABOUT ONE AGENCY, DAWN BONN, PROBABLY OUTNUMBER ALL THE OTHER COMPLAINTS COMBINED. MOREOVER, DAWN BONN WORKS THROUGH SOME OF PARAGUAY'S MOST PROBLEMATIC ADOPTION ATTORNEYS.

4. EACH JANUARY, THE PARAGUAYAN COURTS GO INTO A MONTH LONG RECESS. THEREFORE, THERE IS A FLURRY OF ADOPTION DECREE-SIGNING ACTIVITY IN LATE DECEMBER. IN THE FIVE WEEK PERIOD FROM DECEMBER 12 THROUGH JANUARY 20, THIS POST PROCESSED 67 IR-3 VISAS. PROBABLY HALF OF THESE CASES WERE FROM THE DAWN BONN AGENCY. ACCORDING TO VARIOUS AMCITS, ADOPTIVE PARENTS WERE ALL TAKEN TO THEIR HOTELS, INTRODUCED TO THEIR LAWYERS AND/OR TRANSLATORS AND THEN LEFT TO THEIR OWN DEVICES. THE ATTENDING REPRESENTATIVE OF THE DAWN BONN AGENCY (IN THIS CASE, MARY BONN) HAD RETURNED TO THE US.

5. COINCIDENT TO THIS, THE POST HAD BEGUN ITS NEW ANTI-FRAUD SCREENING OF PURPORTED BIOLOGICAL MOTHERS IN ORDER TO: A) PREVENT FRAUD AND B) DEMONSTRATE OUR GOOD FAITH TO THE PARAGUAYAN GOVERNMENT WHICH WAS (AND STILL IS) ACTIVELY CONSIDERING A CUTOFF OF ADOPTIONS. MANY OF THE ADOPTIVE AMCIT PARENTS WERE ALREADY AWARE OF THIS REQUIRMENT. THEY REPORT THAT THEY RAISED THE ISSUE OF THE AVAILABILITY OF THE BIOMOTHERS WITH BOTH THE DAWN BONN AGENCY AND THEIR ATTORNEYS AND WERE ASSURED THAT ALL THE BIOMOTHERS WOULD BE PRESENTED AND THAT THE AMCITS WOULD RECEIVE THEIR IR-3 VISAS IN A TIMELY MATTER. IN MANY CASES, THE LAWYERS NEVER DID PRESENT THE BIOMOTHERS, BUT CONSTANTLY REAFFIRMED, TO THE AMCITS, THAT THE MOTHER HAD BEEN (OR WAS BEING) INTERVIEWED BY THE EMBASSY. THIS LEFT MANY PARENTS TO RUN BACK AND FORTH TO THE EMBASSY, REQUESTING OUR

GM _____

RS _____

CLARIFCATION AND, WHEN APPROPRIATE, INTERCESSION. ON THE OTHER HAND, THE BONN AGENCY'S FAVORITE ATTORNEY, RAUL ANDRADA, DID NOT RETURN MANY AMCIT CALLS AT ALL. MANY DAWN BONN CLIENTS COMPLAINED THAT THEY NEVER GOT TO MEET ANDRADA OR ANY OF HIS JUNIOR PARTNERS SUCH AS TERESITA TORRES OR GRACIELA MELAGAREJO. POST HAD PREVIOUSLY REPORTED DAWN BONN MISINFORMATION IN 1992 (REF C).

6. WHEN THE CURRENT CONOFF ARRIVED IN PARAGUAY, HE RECEIVED A CALL FROM A DISTRESSED AMERICAN COUPLE (THANK YOU LETTER ON FILE) NOTING THAT THE DAWN BONN AGENCY AND ATTORNEY ESTELA SANCHEZ (ANOTHER HIGH VOLUME "ADOPTCIONISTA") WERE FORCING THEM TO TAKE A SICKLY BABY TO WHOM THE EMBASSY'S MEDICAL CONSULTANT HAD GIVEN A POOR PROGNOSIS. ACCORDING TO THE AMCITS, MARY BONN (OF THE AGENCY) TOLD THEM THAT IT WAS THIS BABY OR NOTHING AND THAT IF THEY DID NOT TAKE IT, THEY MIGHT BE LIABLE TO BREACH OF CONTRACT LAWSUITS UNDER PARAGUAYAN LAW. THE CONSUL INTERVENED TO INFORM THE AMCITS THAT THEY WERE NOT REQUIRED TO ADOPT THAT PARTICULAR CHILD.

7. NOTARIALS OF BLANK I-600S; AND OTHER I-600S NOTARIZED IN PARAGUAY.

IN SEVERAL CASES, WE HAVE RECEIVED IRREGULARLY NOTARIZED I-600S. IN TWO OF THE CASES, THE I-600 WAS BLANK EXCEPT FOR AN ADOPTIVE FATHERS SINGATURE AND THE NOTARY SEAL OF TRACY BONN, A NOTARY OF RAMSEY COUNTY MINNESOTA. IN ANOTHER CASE, THE ADOPTIVE AMCIT MOTHER TOLD US UNDER OATH THAT SHE AND HER HUSBAND HAD FILLED OUT THE NOTARIZED I-600 IN PARAGUAY (THE NOTARY WAS A BONN FAMILY MEMBER WITH A RAMSEY COUNTY, MINNESOTA NOTARIAL COMMISSION) AND THAT HER HUSBAND HAD RETURNED TO THE US. (COMMENT: THE AMCITS HAD NO REASON TO QUESTION THE PROCESS.)

8. OTHER AMCITS TELL US THAT DAWN BONN HAS BILLED THEM IN EXCESS OF USD600 FOR PARAGUAYAN DEPARTURE TAXES (THE DEPARTURE TAX IS USD16 AND ONLY FOR ADULTS) WHEN THEY AND THEIR ADOPTED CHILD WERE READY TO LEAVE PARAGUAY.

9. A NUMBER OF AMCITS HAVE COMPLAINED THAT DAWN BONN HAD PRESSURED THEM TO PAY THE BALANCES

A PEER REVIEW OF THE IATTC BYCATCH DATA BASE

(submitted by Natural Resources Consultants, Inc., October 24, 1995)

I.- INTRODUCTION

The international purse-seine fishery for yellowfin tuna in the eastern Pacific Ocean (EPO) has long exploited the association of this species with several species of dolphins. The setting on dolphins using large purse seines resulted in the deaths of significant numbers of several species of dolphins and in the early 1970's; aggregate dolphin deaths were reported to have reached levels of 300,000 animals annually (Marine Mammal Commission, 1991). The Inter-American Tropical Tuna Commission (IATTC) has placed observers aboard tuna vessels to monitor the incidental take of dolphins and make estimates of total mortality incidental to fishing operations since 1979. Similarly, the U.S. National Marine Fisheries Service (NMFS) has been placing observers on U.S.-flag vessels regularly since 1971 (Hall and Lennert, 1994). These efforts were augmented by the government of Mexico in 1991.

Over the course of the past 23 years, there has been a significant reduction in the numbers of dolphins killed as a result of technological developments, operational changes in net handling, and skipper and crew efforts to save captured and/or entangled dolphins (National Research Council, 1992). Although current levels of dolphin mortalities have been reported to less be than 5,000 animals annually, IATTC remains concerned about how to achieve further reduction in dolphin mortalities. One potential approach has been the redeployment of seining activities to concentration on tuna schools not associated with dolphins.

One of the questions raised in regard to this possible change in fishing tactics has been the consequences to the directed tuna fishery and to the numbers and diversity of associated bycatch. In this regard, the IATTC has been collecting data on the species and numbers of animals captured since the latter part of 1992. The data are currently being collected by observers who accompany all vessels with capacities greater than 400 tons. The data, which constitute one of the largest and most complete bycatch data sets in the world, will form the basis for examining the quantities and types of animals taken by applying different fishing modes and for examining the potential interactions among species taken.

II.- TEAM COMPOSITION AND AGENDA

Initial summaries of discards in 1993 and 1994 show substantial differences in rates and quantities of discards taken by sets made on dolphins, school fish, and logs. Nevertheless, the reliability of the observer database for providing useful information in answering basic questions regarding the gear-specific complications of discarding and target fishing performance are of a concern to the IATTC, conservation groups, fishermen, and others responsible for the evolution of responsible fishing policies. In order to obtain an independent view of the observer data base as well as the analyses based on it, a peer review group was established. The review group included:

The peer review group met in La Jolla, California, on September 16-18, 1995. The meeting agenda (Appendix I) included (a) a discussion of the background information used for the Bycatch Database formation, (b) presentations by IATTC staff members regarding duties, functions, and responsibilities of the observer program, (c) a description of the Bycatch Database, (d) a presentation of total set numbers by fishery type, and (e) an examination of bycatch data. The presentations were followed by discussions between the peer group and the IATTC staff. The following report constitutes the group's observations, conclusions, and recommendations.

III.- GENERAL FINDINGS

Data Collection, Formats, and Content

Data are collected by observers from the IATTC who accompany tuna purse seiners during routine fishing trips to the EPO. Observers record all bycatch data on forms for eventual entry in a database called the Marine Fauna Record (MFR). Data are collected both before and after a set, but only the latter information is currently entered into the database. These IATTC observers accompany about 70 percent of all trips during each year. Observers from national observer programs accompany the remainder of the trips and collect similar bycatch data.

The recording form for "Fauna captured in the set" identifies four major groupings; (A) tunas, (B) billfish, sharks, and rays, (C) sea turtles, and large and medium fish other than those recorded in (B), and (D) other fish, invertebrates, and other fauna, including marine mammals. Bycatch of category A (tunas), which can be recorded only as estimated short tons, is subdivided, whenever possible, into estimates of tons of small (< 2.5 kg), medium (2.5-15 kg), and large (>15 kg) tuna caught, and tons of small (< 2.5 kg), medium (2.5-15 kg), and large (>15 kg) tuna loaded. (Unless specified otherwise, all references to "tons" in this report mean short tons (1 short ton = 0.907185 metric ton).) In practice, until recently, the observers actually estimated weights of discards in each size category, and then subtracted "discarded" from "caught" to obtain the recorded "loaded." In the future, observers will record the estimated discards per size category and will cease estimating the weights loaded.

Bycatch of category B can be recorded either as estimated weight or as direct or estimated counts of small (<90 cm), medium (90-150 cm), or large (>150 cm) fish. Bycatch of category C can be recorded either as weight or as direct or estimated counts of small (<30 cm), medium (30-60 cm), or large (>60 cm) animals. Bycatch of category D can be recorded either as estimated total weight or as total numbers of animals, counted or estimated.

Data are reported at the lowest taxonomic level practical. For large pelagic animals, such as billfish, sharks, mahi mahi, wahoo, sea turtles, and large tunas, individual animals are identified to species whenever possible. For smaller pelagic animals, such as forage fish, individual animals are "lumped" into categories, such as "small fish." All invertebrates (jellyfish, squid, crabs, etc.) are "lumped" in the category "invertebrates."

The manual states that "as a general rule, turtles, dolphins, sharks, and large fish are recorded in numbers and small and medium fish in short tons." In addition, observers are instructed that "if you use tons in your estimates, include in the COMMENTS section the weight range of the fauna and the average weight, e.g., 10 tons, 5-30 kg, 10 kg average."

Biological and morphometeric data are collected from individual animals only in a few specialized cases, e.g., for billfishes, sharks, and turtles. For the rest of the species, the data recorded are counts or estimated numbers of individuals, or estimated weights of groups of individuals. Data are recorded as numbers of individuals whenever possible. Counts of individual animals are used when possible (e.g., for billfish, which tend to be few and large, per set). Numbers of individual animals are estimated in cases where the observed individuals are too numerous to count, but the observer feels comfortable estimating numbers, rather than resorting to a weight estimate. Where the observer thinks that he or she can neither count accurately nor estimate the number of individuals, he or she estimates the weight of a given grouping of individual animals.

Due to practical constraints aboard commercial purse seiners, weights are currently estimated rather than measured, and are always recorded in short tons. The weight estimates are made by the observer, rather than a crew member.

Observations and Recommendations

Panel members were concerned principally about the following factors:

1) potential misidentification or lack of identification of some small fishes and invertebrates,

2) quantifying the accuracy and precision of estimates made by observers, both for specific observers from one trip to the next and among observers, and

3) current lack of distinction on the MFR coding form between counts of individual animals and estimates of those numbers made by the observer.

Panel recommendations for alleviating these concerns included:

1) including the training manual as a permanent addition to the database documentation,

2) including more detailed identification guides or species keys, and collecting specimens when possible,

3) conducting statistical analyses of existing records to determine whether observer effects exist,

4) conducting subsampling experiments to evaluate observer's estimation abilities and to better quantify bycatch records,

5) including markers in the MFR to differentiate between counted and estimated quantities, and

6) investigating the possibility of arranging for bycatch subsampling by the crew during sorting, e.g., by providing baskets that could be filled during sorting and examined later by the observer, or marking measuring grids on the deck and/or sorting hopper, to aid the observer in estimating quantities of bycatch.

For example, the training data produced by each observer could provide a common basis for measuring observer accuracy. If these training data were combined with similar periodic video retest(s), observer effects might be estimated and incorporated in any analyses. At the very least, these data could be used to estimate variability among observers and retests could be used to estimate variability for individual observers. The costs associated with this suggestion, though potentially large, might not be exorbitant, since experienced observers are already brought to the training sessions to help train recruits.

In addition, simple experiments could resolve the current uncertainty about the relative accuracies of counts and estimated weights. The results would influence the ways in which the data should be properly analyzed. Subsampling experiments with yellowfin tuna, in particular, appear to be important to resolve uncertainty about the accuracy of estimated size-specific tonnages.

The estimation of observer error using video experiments (as yet undetermined) would probably have little influence on conclusions about total bycatch quantities, because the errors of many observers will tend to average out, but such experiments would provide estimates of one source of variability. The same is true for precision of estimates of weights and numbers.

Alternatively, the panel contends that the variability associated with estimating size distributions could play a substantial role in estimation of the bycatches of some species (e.g., small fishes and invertebrates). In particular, a decision to switch from predominantly dolphin sets to predominantly log or school sets would be influenced by estimates of tuna and non-tuna bycatch for log and school sets, and these estimates may be more variable than it appears if size composition estimates are imprecise and if these types of sets provide more opportunities for errors in the estimation of than do dolphin sets.

Training

The observer training program of the IATTC, summarized below, is a model program for other regional fishery management bodies. The primary responsibility of the observer is to document dolphin mortality and to report these data to the IATTC on a weekly basis. Documentation of bycatch of other species is secondary, but nevertheless the primary activity during periods when documenting dolphin mortalities or sightings is not occurring. The training sessions serve to provide observers with the essential skills and elements necessary for collecting data correctly, neatly, thoroughly, and accurately, according to established standards.

The IATTC trains observers on an "as needed" basis, usually in response to increasing numbers of vessels in a given fleet or to replace observers that have left the program. The IATTC main office in La Jolla coordinates with field offices in tuna-fishing nations to determine the numbers of trainees, based on the number of trips requiring observers in a given year, the number of observers expected to be available during the year, and the "life expectancy" of those observers. The number of trainees per session is between 5 and 25, and, to ensure effective one-on-one contact, the number of instructors is increased with the number of trainees.

From a fairly large pool of applicants, the IATTC accepts only persons with college degrees in biology or related fields for training. Typically, about 75% of those selected for training are subsequently selected to work as observers.

Usually one staff member from La Jolla attends or directs the training course, assisted by one or two members of the staff of one of the field offices. All instructors are required to have experience in at-sea data collection, processing of observer data, and familiarity with the research objectives of the observer data. In addition, to keep abreast of the latest developments, they must make a trip as an observer once every several years.

The actual training courses last for 3 weeks, and are divided into three parts. The first part covers, through slides, video tapes, and illustrated material, the fishery, its history, and procedures. This information provides the basis for understanding the methods and procedures aboard a tuna purse-seine vessel. The second part is devoted to data collection and reporting procedures, use of the Field Manual, species identification, and estimation of abundance. Trainees go on to apply this knowledge by undergoing a series of simulated "days at sea." Through slide illustrations and video presentations, trainees are presented with a variety of situations which might arise during a trip (e.g. sightings of marine mammals, routine recording of weather data, sets of various types, etc.), and are required to gather all the necessary information and record it on the appropriate data forms. The instructors then review these forms with the trainees. The third phase of training provides the trainee with the context in which these data are to be used by the IATTC for conservation, management, and research.

The training program is exemplary for dolphin bycatch; however, reviewers recognized deficiencies regarding training for non-dolphin bycatch estimation. IATTC staff noted that bycatch estimation could be improved with better species identification guides and by producing video tapes illustrating various set types and combinations of bycatch encountered in such sets.

Observers receive training refreshers and updates if more than a year or two has elapsed since their last trip or whenever new or revised sampling procedures are introduced.

Observers receive monetary incentives (increased salary) for increasing experience (days at sea) and for other performance measures.

Trips typically last about 45 days. A typical observer usually makes about 8 to 12 trips before moving on to other employment, although a few observers have logged over 1000 days at sea. At any given time, 5 to 10% (occasionally as many as 20%) of observers at sea are on their first trips.

Observations and Recommendations

Reviewers agreed that coordination and standardization of national training programs with that of the IATTC, especially in regard to the training of observers to collect bycatch data, would improve the quality and consistency of the data.

Coverage

Essentially all purse-seine sets made in the EPO by tuna vessels with capacities greater than 400 tons are currently monitored by observers from either the IATTC or the PNAAPD. The IATTC maintains a randomized 50% coverage of Mexican fleet operations and near 100% coverage for vessels from other countries. PNAAPD observers monitor the other 50% of trips from the Mexican fleet. Observers from both programs collect information on set type, position, etc., and on associated marine mammals. In addition, IATTC observers report bycatch data for both target and non-target fish and other animals. PNAAPD observers also collect bycatch data, but these data are not currently incorporated into the IATTC bycatch database. Observer data are not collected for a very small number of sets due to uncontrollable events, such as observer illness.

Annual total numbers of observed sets and numbers of observed dolphin sets are available from both observer programs. However, numbers of log and school sets monitored by the PNAAPD observers are not currently made available to the IATTC. Thus, estimates for log and school sets for trips not monitored by IATTC observers are computed with information from the IATTC fishing logbook database, which includes fleet-wide data. A very small percentage of sets remain that are not accounted for by the logbook data; the proportions of log and school sets for these must be estimated.

The current IATTC bycatch data collection program was introduced in 1992, and fully implemented for IATTC observers by 1993. IATTC observers accounted for approximately 90% of log sets and 65 to 70% of school and dolphin sets made in 1994. The data indicate that the majority of bycatch for many fish species occurs in log sets, so the observed fraction of bycatch amounts by species is likely to be closer to 90% than to 70% for those species. These data represent a sizable fraction of all sets, and certainly give a good indication of general patterns in bycatch.

Non-reporting errors on data forms for individual fields are insignificant, with the exception of the bycatch size-distribution fields. Records with bycatch reported in tons can have an estimate of total bycatch weight for a particular species when the amounts for the individual size classes (small, medium, and large) are not reported. For species that are always or most often recorded as numbers of individuals (e.g., billfish, mahi mahi), these missing data comprise a zero or very small percentage of the total number of records and total amount of bycatch. For small fish and invertebrate species, no size class information is collected due to practical constraints. For tuna bycatch, which is always reported in tons, approximately 3.5% of records did not include size-class information. Missing size-class information for a given record can be estimated from data for the same species for which there are complete records that are temporally and spatially similar.

Observations and Recommendations

The review group suggested that complete set count information should be shared between the two programs so that this small source of uncertainty in the database can be eliminated. Spatially-stratified counts may be helpful for future analyses.

The review group noted that these missing fields do not greatly affect the data for sea turtles, billfish, sharks, and other large fish. It also noted that collecting only total weight information for small fish and invertebrates is adequate for the current uses of the database, but does not allow for any detailed analysis of these groups.

The review group discussed the problem of extrapolating patterns in bycatch to the remaining unobserved sets, i.e., estimating total or average bycatch for the entire fishery. To do this, one must assume that factors influencing bycatch are the same, on average, for trips covered by observers from the IATTC and the PNAAPD. These factors include spatial, and temporal patterns in effort and fishing methods. It is known that the Mexican fleet tends to make fewer log sets than the rest of the fleet; such differences in effort distribution by set type suggest that the other factors influencing bycatch may also differ among fleets. Trips by Mexican vessels which are monitored by IATTC observers could be used to investigate this possibility and to suggest estimators. For example, spatial stratification of the data may help in reducing biases when estimating total bycatch. However, the PNAAPD should be encouraged to participate in the IATTC bycatch data collection program so that errors due to extrapolation to unobserved trips can be minimized.

Observer Observation Sequence and Methods

Bycatch observations for a given set are composed of three levels of data: species composition, species-specific total amounts (weight or numbers), and species-specific size-class proportions. These three components are estimated simultaneously during the catch-loading phase of a set. While observation of marine mammals is the observer's first priority, this task is complete by the time brailing of the catch is begun, so the observer is free to make observations of bycatch. Observers make estimates of the amount and composition of bycatch from direct observation of the brailers and of the catch-sorting process in the hopper on deck. Most often, the entire contents of the net are brailed aboard the vessel where the observer may make estimates. Occasionally, part or all of the contents of the net may be dumped without being brought on deck for sorting. As each brailer load is brought aboard, the observer makes estimates or counts for that portion of the catch, and then later tallies up these figures. In this way, the observer is presented with a reasonably manageable portion of the catch at one time. The observer's position overlooking the main deck and the hopper afford a clear view of the loading and sorting process. While there are several tens of potential bycatch species, a typical set will include a much smaller number of species.

Observer estimates of tonnages for each brailer are made using visual observations and, at times, advice from the crew. Because crewmembers have a strong incentive to keep track of the amount of tuna loaded, they are very experienced in making estimates of the total weight of fish in a brailer. These estimates of total weight are considered to be accurate. However, species composition must be estimated by the observer during sorting on deck, and species-specific weights are subject to errors in estimating these proportions.

For some species, bycatch amounts are often made in numbers of individuals. The observer makes these counts during the sorting process, when individual fish or turtles can be tallied as they are removed from the hopper. The number of individuals per set for billfish, turtles, and sharks is low enough that these counts are considered to be accurate, or nearly so. The numbers of other large fishes can be much higher for log sets. These counts are considered to be somewhat less accurate.

Size-class proportions are also observed during the sorting process. The observer may be able to make counts of animals for each size class or may estimate the proportions. There is no formal method used in estimating these proportions--they are simply "by-eye" estimates based on the observer's experience. Particularly for proportions of tonnages, these estimates are considered to be less accurate than estimates of total amounts. However, size-class proportions of species that are reported in numbers may be accurate, or nearly so.

The review group discussed some potential problems in the observation process and some possible ways to address them. Major concerns included the inherent uncertainty in estimating proportions, the small amount of calibration information of brailer weight, and the lack of a means to report or quantify uncertainty in a given observation. The group also noted that these concerns were most relevant if the data were to be used in a formal quantitative analysis, and that the current methods are sufficient to provide a qualitative description of bycatch.

Observer estimates of proportions affect both the species-specific totals and the size-class proportions for a given species. The review group discussed primarily the difficulty in estimating the proportions of size classes for a specific species when the observer may have a very limited time to make the estimates. One specific problem discussed was that larger individuals are easier to see, so it is possible that there is a negative bias for the smaller ones. Three suggestions were made. (1) Some way for the observer to report the precision of observations would be helpful if the data are to be used in a quantitative analysis. For example, how much of the final number came from extensive observation of sorting and how much from a rough guess of the contents of a brailer? (2) The possibility of using a more rigorous procedure for estimating proportions was raised. For example, for a given set, the observer might examine a subset of the bycatch in detail and extrapolate proportions to the entire bycatch for that set. However, different brailer loads in a single set can have widely different species and size compositions. Currently, visual observations are made for all brailer loads in a set. However, the IATTC should investigate whether a more formal method of estimating proportions, e.g., subsampling, can be applied. (3) It would be helpful to conduct a formal statistical "ground-truthing" experiment to quantify typical observer errors and biases.

The review group also discussed the uncertainty in estimating weights of brailer contents. Comparisons of loaded tonnage estimates and landed tonnage indicate that the observers are very accurate, on average, in estimating the weight of target species brailed aboard. However, the IATTC should consider using a formal statistical "ground-truthing" experiment to quantify the uncertainty in observer estimates as the species, size composition, and total weight in the brailer changes.

In general, the review group thought it would be useful if experiments were performed to quantify typical accuracy and precision of observer estimates. While extrapolation of patterns in bycatch to unobserved trips is currently a significant source of error in estimating total or average bycatch, observer estimation errors are another, perhaps also significant, source. In addition, while 100% reporting of bycatch would eliminate extrapolation errors, observer estimation errors cannot be removed.

Observations and Recommendations

The IATTC should consider statistical experiments as suggested above to quantify errors and should investigate the possibility of incorporating observers' indications of precision.

Observer/Crew Relationship

The observer is instructed to avoid interfering with crew activities whenever possible. The observer is restricted to the deck overlooking the rear deck during a set, but the layout of the rear deck and sorting hopper are such that observer view of catch and bycatch is relatively unrestricted.

Undue influence of crew and skipper on observer duties is minimized by varying observer assignments to avoid reassignment to a previous vessel or skipper within two years of the original assignment.

Data Processing

The IATTC Bycatch Database is a subset of observer data collected by the observer programs of the IATTC and PNAAPD. This subset documents the amount of discarded catch by species or species groups taken by the international fleet of tuna purse-seine vessels operating in the EPO. At the end of a trip, the completed data forms and notes are turned in by the observer to the IATTC staff at one of the regional offices located in the major ports for tuna landings. The observer records consist of completed data forms documenting vessel activity, fishing operations, catch, and biological samples, and a detailed journal describing the observer's daily activity. The Bycatch Database is actually a subset of the IATTC's Observer Database, and is principally the data from the Marine Fauna Record (MFR) data forms. Initial data editing takes two to three days in the regional offices. During this time a staff member and the observer review the data forms for each vessel day and purse-seine set for completeness and check the recorded data for errors. If necessary, corrections are made in consultation with the observer. Once the review is finished, the records are photocopied and the original is express mailed to the La Jolla Office of IATTC. Staff members in La Jolla conduct a second review of data forms and make any necessary corrections. Once this step is completed, the data on the MFR data forms are entered into a computer, using PC-compatible data-entry program utilizing Microsoft's ACCESS database software. Data recorded on individual sea turtles captured by the set are not entered. The accuracy of the data entry is not verified by double-entry methods. As the data are entered into the computer, the data-entry program makes several data-checking tests to identify potentially erroneous data for immediate correction. Following this step, the data files are stored in the temporary Data-Entry Database (ACCESS) composed of four files; DataEntry_Tuna, DataEntry_Num/TonFish, DataEntry_Others, and DataEntry_RFM. This last file contains the data recorded on the first line of the Marine Fauna Record form, and is used to link the records of all the other files to a given record in DataEntry_RFM and to link a set in the Bycatch Database to the corresponding record in the Observer Database. Once a batch of bycatch records has been entered, they are checked again for entering errors. This examination is done manually and by a series of SQL computer programs. All corrections are made manually and verified against the original data in the MFRs. These programs check for duplicate records, non-valid species, entries with both weights and numbers recorded, unmatched totals, outliers, dubious records, and zero values. Once all the files in the Data-Entry Database have been checked for errors and the corrections made, the data are transferred to the permanent Bycatch Database. This database comprises four files: RFM, Tuna, NumFish, and TonFish. These files become the permanent electronic data archives, which are backed up on tape routinely on site and periodically off site.

Although the review group did not examine or evaluate the details of database design, the editing programs, or error-checking procedures, the IATTC staff is using state-of-the-art software and following current principles of database design and management. The group confirmed that units for fish or animal weight were consistently pounds and short tons, even though observers at sea work in kilograms. The responsibility and authority of managing the database reside with one person. In the group's opinion, the database is well designed and is managed in a highly competent and conscientious fashion. Considerable attention and effort are dedicated to identifying and correcting errors. Because duplicate data entry is not done to detect entering errors, the staff conducted a trial experiment to test the effectiveness of its error-checking programs. Out of 1,176 records in the trial, only two records (0.2%) were found to have one or more errors after completion of DataEntry error-checking routines. Only six fields from a total of 12,936 (0.05%) had errors. This test confirms that the data error-checking routines are very efficient and it is not necessary to have duplicate data entry.

The group believes that duplicate or replicate data entry is not necessary, given that the existing error-checking routines are performing quite well. Any files or tables generated from the permanent Bycatch Database that estimate missing observations, e.g., missing numbers of fish from observed tons of fish, should contain flags to distinguish estimated values from real observations. Also in these files, counts should be flagged as observed or estimated from weights. Conversely, weights should be flagged as observed or estimated from counts. Any conversion factors, with references, should be part of the database documentation similar to the Spcs_Weights file. Data to derive weight-length relationships for the important bycatch species in the EPO fishery used to convert from number to weight of fish and vice-versa should be collected from stocks that reside in the EPO. This will require that the staff set up special projects for a subset of observers to collect weight-length data for critical species. IATTC staff members should maintain a rigid schedule to back-up databases onto tape or secondary disks on-site and off-site; this schedule should be given to all staff members. The units of measurements for all observations made by the observers and stored in databases must be explicitly documented. It is critical that the data manager continues with the practice of updating the database for correcting errors whenever the error-checking routines are modified.

Bycatch Data Summaries and Estimations

The panel discussed how the information collected by the IATTC and the PNAAPD regarding bycatch could be used. The following uses were identified: (1) summarization of species-specific bycatches (SSBs) for all trips where the Marine Fauna Record (MFR) was filled out by the observer; (2) estimation of annual SSBs for the entire EPO purse-seine tuna fleet and evaluating within-year bycatch versus catch of target species by set categories; (3) examination of various hypotheses regarding factors that affect the SSBs (e.g., type of set, location, season); and (4) predicting the annual SSBs in future years, under both currently observed or potentially redistributed patterns of fishing effort.

There was general agreement that the current data base and associated protocols for data collection and data entry were satisfactory for characterizing the observed levels of SSBs for most species.

The panel identified three classes of data in IATTC's Bycatch Database. Class 1 includes data, specifically referring to exact counts of animals of particular species. For these species, statistical analyses should be relatively straight-forward. Class 2 includes moderately inexact (estimated) data; however further exploration of alternate statistical methodology may allow derivation of estimates of variance or other statistical measures of these data. Class 3 includes extremely inexact data, where data collection at present is adequate, at best, for qualitative statements about bycatch patterns. Class-1 data include counts of the easily identifiable and countable species, such as billfishes, sea turtles, and most sharks. Class-2 data include relatively accurate estimates of counts or weights for somewhat less easily-quantified species, such as tunas, rays, mahi mahi, and wahoo. Class-3 data include the groups that are most difficult to quantify, such as small fishes and invertebrates.

Concerning annual estimates of SSBs, there was general agreement that a statistical approach should be developed that allows the level of uncertainty in a particular estimate to be quantified. For each fishing set type, it was noted that the SSB is the product of SSB-per-unit-of-effort and total effort. The panel agreed that total effort, as measured by numbers of sets, was known almost exactly. SSB-per-unit-of-effort was uncertain, however, as it is subject to both process error (e.g. year-to-year variability in SSB-per-unit-of-effort, or some systematic observer bias) and estimation error. The group concluded that it was likely that the existing database and associated protocols were sufficient for estimating SSBs and their associated variances for most of the species of billfish, other large pelagic fish, and sea turtles, but that specific methods for obtaining statistical estimates for these quantities, especially variances, should be the subject of future investigations. The group also identified some factors associated with increased reliability. It noted that count data were probably fairly reliable and, in particular, estimation of dolphin mortality was considerably more reliable than estimates of other SSBs because of the implementation of 100% reporting on all dolphin sets and the ability to count, measure, sex, and collect biological samples from some dolphins killed incidental to the fishery. The group also recognized that increased levels of SSB reporting reduce potential estimation error by decreasing the amount of unreported SSB to be estimated and by reducing potential bias due to nonrepresentativeness of the sample reported.

There was general agreement that the current database and associated protocols would also be sufficient for evaluating hypotheses regarding the significance of whether a particular factor affects the SSBs, if the statistical analyses of the data described in the previous paragraph were completed for those species with appropriate data. In particular, the group noted that testing the hypothesis that SSBs have been equal for dolphin, school, and log sets would be relatively straightforward, but unlikely to change the conclusions drawn from the existing tables, e.g. substantially different SSBs patterns for log versus dolphin fishing. However, the group commented that extrapolating from the observed rates of SSB-per-unit-of-effort to the expected annual levels of SSBs in future years, when the proportions of dolphin, school, and log sets or the total number of sets was changed, could produce unreliable results (see next paragraph).

Observations

Regarding predictions of annual SSBs in future years, the group concluded the following:

1) If the existing allocation of sets among dolphin, school, and log sets is maintained, reliable predictions of future SSBs cannot be determined without the statistical analyses mentioned above and without a longer time series, which is needed to characterize annual variation. However, subject to these conditions, the database contains sufficient information for such predictions.

2) If the existing allocation of effort among dolphin, school, and log sets is changed, a reliable prediction of changes to SSBs could likely not be determined in the near future because of problems of non-linearity in the relationship between SSB rates and the numbers of dolphin, school, and log sets. Although helpful, the database alone does not provide sufficient information for such predictions. At this point, the logistics of increasing the number of school or log sets, and changes in the geographic or temporal distribution of fishing effort could not be ascertained without adopting some sort of adaptive management procedure (e.g. experimental fishing).

Finally, the group concurred that an evaluation of the potential impact of bycatch due to alternate fishing regimes on the stocks of most species could be made only in conjunction with additional data and external assumptions about stock dynamics, fishery dynamics, behavior, etc. However, qualitative statements as to whether a particular level of bycatch would increase or decrease, due to changes in the numbers of dolphin, school, and log sets, are possible for a subset of the species caught incidental to EPO purse-seine fishing. Further, estimates of the impact of such changes on the productivity of the tuna stocks are also possible, using the existing data on length-frequency distributions of the landed catch, estimates derived from existing tuna discard data, and tuna assessments.

IV.- GENERAL CONCLUSIONS

The IATTC Bycatch Database and Data Collection System are robust in terms of the scope of data collected, vessel and geographic coverage, documentation of vessels, gear features, and special operations problems occurring during fishing. Bycatch data can be easily retrieved by vessel classes, set types, times and areas of operation, and species or species assemblages in numbers or weight. Bycatch data are entered into data forms based on counts or estimates of individuals or estimated weights. Bycatches of larger species are further categorized by size groups. The program is supported by an intensive training program for observers, all of whom have college degrees in biology or related fields. Returning observers are also retrained following any extensive absence.

As with many observer programs, the collection and verification of observations may be limited by the lack of access to certain work areas during fishing operations. Thus, lack of proximity to the animals being discarded may impair the observers' ability to identify small species and size categories of discards. Further, the size data are not currently backed by an observer sampling program, although this need has been identified by the IATTC staff.

It is the view of the peer group that the data-processing procedures, including data-entry checking of submitted observer data forms, data archiving, and linkages between the data sets collected and other data sources, are excellent.

The group noted that a number of types of output can be derived or estimated from the database, including total sets by fishing type, dolphin mortality, and rates of discard by species (all by set type). Total discards by set types can also be obtained. Discard estimates vary in quality, as does their capacity to produce accurate total discard levels by fishing mode or aggregated annual bycatch. Counts of dolphin mortalities, a prime objective of the observer program, appear very reliable because they constitute observer counts of all animals. The amounts of fish discarded are probably best estimated for large fish, where counts or estimates of the numbers of weights can generally be made from the observer station. Conversely, estimates of small fish and invertebrates are compromised by difficulties in species identification and rapid discarding when large numbers are involved. All estimates of fish and invertebrate discards which involve transformation of data in tons to numbers of individuals are subject to the errors introduced in estimating the proportion of discards in each size category, in establishing an average number per unit weight of each size category, and in establishing the size proportions for sets with missing size data.

Summaries produced by IATTC based on observer data collected during 1993 and 1994 includied preliminary estimates of (1) total bycatch and, (2) bycatch a) per set, b) per 1000 tons of yellowfin tuna loaded, c) per 1000 tons of tuna loaded, and d) per 10,000 sets--all by dolphin, school, and log set categories. Calculations of discards and discard rates by species, based on the observer sets covered, were also available to the group, along with records (number of sets) for which size-category observations were available and the percent of discards derived from estimates of discard numbers for missing data entries.

The peer group agreed that the various bycatch summaries allowed it to conclude that substantial differences in discard levels occurred for different set types. On the other hand, the peer group did not believe there were adequate data or statistical analyses provided to estimate the degree of these differences. It was agreed that the information provided constituted helpful approximations. Nevertheless, the sheer magnitude of the rate differences by set type makes it difficult to dismiss the conclusion that a major shift in the proportion of each set category would likely lead to substantial differences in levels and species compositions of the bycatches and size categories of harvested target species.

Based on the findings of the peer review panel, it would be prudent that any proposed major shifts in fishing modes take into account the implied ecological impacts.

INTELLECTUAL PROPERTY

Pursuant to article IV of this Memorandum of Understanding:

The Parties shall ensure adequate and effective protection of intellectual property created or furnished under this Memorandum and relevant implementing arrangements. The Parties agree to notify one another in a timely fashion of any inventions or copyrighted works arising under this Memorandum and to seek protection for such intellectual property in a timely fashion. Rights to such intellectual property shall be allocated as provided in this Annex.

I. Scope

A. This Annex is applicable to all cooperative activities undertaken pursuant to this Memorandum, except as otherwise specifically agreed by the Parties or their designs.

B. For purposes of this Memorandum, "intellectual property" shall have the meaning found in Article 2 of the Convention Establishing the World Intellectual Property Organization, done at Stockholm, July 14,1967.

C. This Annex addresses the allocation of rights, interests, and royalties between the Parties. Each Party shall ensure that the other Party can obtain the rights to intellectual property allocated in accordance with the Annex, by obtaining those rights from its own participants through contracts or other legal means, if necessary. This Annex does not otherwise alter or prejudice the allocation between a Party and its nationals, which shall be determined by that Party's laws and practices.

D. Disputes concerning intellectual property arising under this Memorandum should be resolved through discussions between the concerned participating institutions or, if necessary, the Parties or their designees. Upon mutual agreement of the Parties, a dispute shall be submitted to an arbitral tribunal for binding arbitration in accordance with the applicable rules of international law. Unless the Parties or their designees agree otherwise in writing, the arbitration rules of the United Nations Commission on International Trade Law (UNCITRAL) shall govern.

E. Termination or expiration of this Memorandum shall not affect rights or obligations under this Annex.

II. Allocation of rights

A. Each Party shall be entitled to a nonexclusive, irrevocable, royalty-free license in all countries to translate, reproduce, and publicly distribute scientific and technical journal articles, reports, and books directly arising from cooperation under this Memorandum. All publicly distributed copies of a copyrighted work prepared under this provision shall indicate the names of the authors of the work unless an author explicitly declines to be named.

B. Rights to all forms of intellectual property, other than those rights described in Section II(A) above, shall be allocated as follows:

1. Visiting researchers, for example, scientists visiting primarily in furtherance of their education, shall receive intellectual property rights under the policies of the host institution. In addition, each visiting researcher named as an inventor shall be entitled to share in a portion of any royalties earned by the host institution from the licensing of such intellectual property.

2. (a) For intellectual property created during joint research, for example, when the Parties, participating institutions, or participating personnel have agreed in advance on the scope of work, each Party shall be entitled to obtain all rights and interests in its own territory. Rights and interests in third countries will be determined in implementing arrangements. If research is not designated as "joint research" in the relevant implementing arrangement, rights to intellectual property arising from the research will be allocated in accordance with paragraph II.B.1. In addition, each person named as an inventor shall be entitled to share in a portion of any royalties earned by either institution from the licensing of the property.

2 (b) Notwithstanding paragraph II.B.2 (a), if a type of intellectual property is available under the laws of one Party but not the other Party, the Party whose laws provide for this type of protection shall be entitled to all rights and interests worldwide. Persons named as inventors of the property shall nonetheless be entitled to royalties as provided in paragraph II.B.2 (a).

III. Business-confidential information

In the event that information identified in a timely fashion as business-confidential is furnished or created under the Memorandum, each Party and its participants shall protect such information in accordance with applicable laws, regulations, and administrative practice. Information may be identified as "business-confidential" if a person having the information may derive an economic benefit from it or may obtain a competitive advantage over those who do not have it, the information is not generally known or publicly available from other sources, and the owner has not previously made the information available imposing in a timely manner an obligation to keep it confidential.

ANNEXE 2

SECURITY OBLIGATIONS

I. PROTECTION OF INFORMATION

Both Parties agree that no information or equipment requiring protection in the interests of national defense or foreign relations of either Party and classified in accordance with the applicable national laws and regulations shall be provided under this Memorandum. In the event that information or equipment which is known or believed to require such protection is identified in the course of cooperative activities undertaken pursuant to this Memorandum, it shall be brought immediately to the attention of the appropriate officials and the Parties shall consult to identify appropriate security measures to be agreed upon by the Parties in writing and applied to this information and equipment and shall, if appropriate, amend this Memorandum to incorporate such measures.

II. TECHNOLOGY TRANSFER

The transfer of unclassified export-controlled information or equipment between the Parties shall be in accordance with the relevant laws and regulations of each Party. If either Party deems it necessary, detailed provisions for the prevention of unauthorized transfer or retransfer of such information or equipment shall be incorporated into the contracts or implementing arrangements. Export controlled information shall be marked to identify it as export controlled and identify any restrictionson further use or transfer.

1. SUMMARY: CREDIBLE CASES OF ADOPTION FRAUD AND BABY STEALING IN PARAGUAY HAVE BEEN REPORTED TO THE DEPARTMENT FOR MANY YEARS. SUCH STORIES ARE THE DAILY GIST OF THE LOCAL PRESS. CURRENTLY THERE ARE TWO SEPARATE INITIATIVES BEFORE THE GOP TO CURTAIL OR SUSPEND INTERNATIONAL ADOPTIONS. POST HAS ATTEMPTED TO FORESTALL THIS DEVELOPMENT BY MAINTAINING GREATER CONTROL OF POSSIBLE FRAUD IN THE NEARLY 500 IR-3 CASES THAT WE HANDLE EACH YEAR. OUR EFFORTS EVOKED A REACTION BY LOCAL ADOPTION ATTORNEYS AND U.S. BASED ADOPTION AGENCIES. WE AND THE DEPARTMENT HAVE BEEN DELUGED WITH INQUIRIES AND COMPLAINTS (REF A). THIS CABLE WILL BE THE FIRST IN A SERIES WHICH WILL OUTLINE THE ADOPTION FRAUD PROBLEM IN PARAGUAY, THE CONCERNS OF THIS EMBASSY, THE PARGUAYAN GOVERNMENT AND THE PARAGUAYAN PEOPLE. WE WILL DESCRIBE OUR ATTEMPTS TO MAINTAIN HIGH STANDARDS IN OUR CASE SCREENING, THEREBY KEEPING THE ADOPTION DOOR OPEN IN PARAGUAY FOR YEARS TO COME. END SUMMARY.

BACKGROUND:

2. PARAGUAY IS NOW THE FOURTH HIGHEST IR-3& 4 ISSUING POST IN THE NORLD. WE MAY REACH 500 CASES THIS YEAR. AS MORE AND MORE COUNTRIES ARE BEING CLOSED OFF TO INTERNATIONAL ADOPTIONS, EITHER THROUGH DECISIONS OF THE HOST COUNTRY GOVERNMENTS OR BECAUSE OF CHANGES IN INS REGULATIONS, THIS IS FOCUSING EVEN MORE ATTENTION AND DEMAND ON PARAGUAY. REPORTS OF ILLEGAL AND UNETHICAL ADOPTION PRACTICES AND BABY STEALING HAVE APPEARED IN THE PRESS FOR YEARS (REF P. NE HAVE, QUITE LITERALLY, CRATES OF CLIPPINGS). SOME REPORTS ARE EXAGGERATED BUT OTHERS ARE QUITE CREDIBLE. THIS POST (AS WELL AS USINS) HAS BEEN REPORTING THESE CASES FOR YEARS (REFS:M,Q,R,Z,BB, CC). IN 1990, THE CONSUL ACTUALLY ASSEMBLED EVIDENCE (REFS G, H, I) OF ILLEGAL PRACTICES AND PRESENTED IT TO THE PARAGUAYAN COURTS IN THE HOPES OF OBTAINING GOP PROSECUTION. PERIODICALLY THE GOP DOES ACT AGAINST ATTORNEYS AND GOVERNMENT OFFICIALS (I.E. SINCE 1989, DUE TO THIS EMBASSY'S INFLUENCE, NO ADOPTION CAN BE PROCESSED OUTSIDE OF FRAUDS DISCOVERED IN PROVINCIAL COURTS. REF J). SOME OF THOSE INVOLVED HAVE BEEN JAILED, FINED OR FIRED BUT THE PROBLEMS ALWAYS

RE-APPEAR. THIS PAST WEEK(OF DEC. 19), ALONE, THE PRESS HAS REPORTED TWO BABIES STOLEN FROM A PUBLIC HOSPITAL THIS MONTH. EVEN MORE DISTURBING ARE THE REPORTS THAT AS MANY AS FIVE BABIES PER MONTH ARE BORN IN THE NATIONAL PSYCHIATRIC HOSPITAL AND DISAPPEAR INTO THE MAW OF THE ADOPTION INDUSTRY. THE FIGURES MAY BE EXAGGERATED, BUT EVEN THE FINAL VERIFIABLE TOTAL WILL ADD UP TO A LOT OF BABIES-WHO MAY CARRY A HEREDITARY DISPOSITION FOR MENTAL ILLNESS.

UNCLASSIFIED

3. THE GOP HAS PERIODICALLY RESPONDED WITH ADOPTION MORATORIUMS OF VARIOUS LENGTHS (REF D). EACH TIME INTERNATIONAL ADOPTIONS HAVE BEEN REINSTATED UNTIL, AGAIN, THE LEVEL OF GRAFT AND PUBLIC SCANDAL BECOME INTOLERABLE. CURRENTLY THERE ARE TWO SEPARATE INITIATIVES UNDER CONSIDERATION BY THE GOP. ONE WOULD SUSPEND ADOPTIONS FOR AN UNSPECIFIED TIME WHILE A SPECIAL GOP COMMISSION INVESTIGATED ADOPTION AND CHILD STEALING AS A HUMAN RIGHTS ISSUE (REF C). THE SECOND, A BILL ALREADY DRAFTED FOR PRESENTATION AT THE REOPENING OF CONGRESS IN MARCH WOULD REQUIRE A TWO YEAR PARAGUAYAN RESIDENCE REQUIREMENT FOR INTERNATIONAL ADOPTIONS. THIS COULD EFFECTIVELY CUT OFF INTERNATIONAL ADOPTIONS FOR GOOD.

4. BESIDES THE OBVIOUS LEGAL, ETHICAL, AND MORAL REQUIREMENTS THAT WE SHOULD WORK TO PREVENT BABY STEALING AND OTHER ILLEGAL PRACTICES (REF AA), WE ARE HOPING TO FORESTALL THESE ANTI-INTERNATIONAL ADOPTIONS ACTIONS BY DEMONSTRATING NOT ONLY OUR GOOD INTENTIONS BUT OUR EFFECTIVENESS AS WELL.

5. AS MIGHT BE EXPECTED, SOME PARAGUAYANS ARE AS AMBIVALENT ABOUT OUR EFFORTS AS THEY ARE ABOUT INTERNATIONAL ADOPTIONS. WITHOUT EXCEPTION, THEY DECRY THE PROBLEM (REF R) AND THE NEED FOR ACTION, AND LAMENT THEIR INABILITY TO DO ANYTHING ABOUT IT. ON THE OTHER HAND, SOME DO RESENT THE FACT THAT FOREIGNERS ARE SHOWING THEM HOW ITS DONE. MOST OF THOSE WHOM WE HAVE TALKED TO SUPPORT AND APPLAUD US--SOME

ARE FEEDING US LEADS AND INFORMATION. OTHERS--NOT COINCIDENTALLY THOSE MOST IMPLICATED IN CORRUPT PRACTICES (SEE BELOW, PARA 15) HAVE EXPRESSED CONCERN. EVEN THOSE WHO HAVE QUESTIONED OUR ACTIONS WERE NOT CONCERNED ENOUGH TO ASK FOR MEETINGS BEFORE THE JANUARY COURT RECESS.

HOW THE CURRENT UPROAR STARTED:

6. IRONICALLY, OUR INITIAL GOAL WAS TO STREAMLINE THE PROCESS AND SPEED ADOPTING AMERICANS AND THEIR NEW CHILDREN ON THEIR WAY. UP TO NOW, THE MOST FREQUENT COMPLAINT BY ADOPTIVE PARENTS (WHO WERE EAGER TO GET HOME AND START THEIR NEW FAMILY LIVES) WAS THE LENGTH OF THE PROCESS AND THE TIME THAT THEY HAD TO WAIT AROUND IN A FAIRLY EXOTIC FOREIGN COUNTRY. OUR GOAL WAS TO SHORTEN THE AMOUNT OF TIME THAT WE NEEDED TO PROCESS A CASE (GIVEN OUR VERY LIMITED RESOURCES) WITH THE HOPE OF INFLUENCING THE PARAGUAYANS TO DO THE SAME. CURRENTLY, FOREIGN ADOPTIVE PARENTS MUST MAKE TWO TRIPS (OR STAY FOR ONE VERY LONG VISIT) IN ORDER TO FULFILL PARAGUAYAN REQUIREMENTS. WE HOPED TO REDUCE THE IN-COUNTRY TIME TO A SINGLE WEEK.

7. IN A GROUP MEETING WITH MOST OF THE KNOWN ADOPTION ATTORNEYS, WE ASKED THEM TO BRING ALL THE PARAGUAYAN COURT DOCUMENTS, FOR EACH CASE, EARLY TO THE CONSULAR SECTION. IN THEORY, THE ATTORNEY COULD OBTAIN THE FINAL ADOPTION DECREE, THE CHILD'S PASSPORT, THE FINAL EMBASSY APPROVED MEDICAL EXAM (ANOTHER PROBLEM TO BE REPORTED SEPTEL) AND MAKE A FIRM APPOINTMENT FOR THE ADOPTIVE PARENTS FINAL INTERVIEW--EVEN BEFORE THE ADOPTIVE PARENTS HAD EVEN LEFT THE U.S. WE WERE AIMING FOR ONE WEEK TOTAL (US AND PARAGUAYAN) PROCESSING WITH SAME DAY VISA ISSUANCE AT THE END.

8. THE LAWYERS BALKED. QUITE RIGHTLY THEY SUSPECTED THAT THE CONSULAR STAFF WOULD ACTUALLY REVIEW THE DOCUMENTS. WITH THE SYSTEM HE INHERITED( AGAIN, THE RESULT OF OUR

UNCLASSIFIED

OVERSTRETCHED RESOURCES), THE CURRENT CONOFF USUALLY DID NOT SEE THE ASSEMBLED IV PACKAGE UNTIL A FEW MINUTES BEFORE THE INTERVIEW. NEW TO ADOPTION ISSUES, HE LET A FEW EMBARRASSING CASES (LIKE ONE ATTORNEY MORE OR LESS STEALING A BABY FROM ANOTHER AND HAVING IT ADOPTED BY A DIFFERENT AMERICAN FAMILY) SLIP THROUGH. HE WAS DETERMINED NOT TO LET THIS HAPPEN AGAIN. UNFORTUNATELY, UNTIL NOW, HE COULD NOT FLAG AN INDIVIDUAL CASE FOR INVESTIGATIVE ATTENTION UNTIL THE ADOPTIVE PARENTS HAD ARRIVED FOR THEIR FINAL INTERVIEW: SOME OF THEM, QUITE LITERALLY, CLUTCHING THEIR AIRLINE TICKETS IN THEIR HANDS. FORTUNATELY, BECAUSE OF THE STRENUOUS EFFORTS OF HIS PREDECESSOR TO GET SUCH A POSITION CREATED, CONOFF NOW HAD A NEW FRAUD INVESTIGATOR WHO COULD FOLLOW UP ON THESE CASES. LITERALLY WITHIN MINUTES OF STARTING HIS JOB-(ACTUALLY STARTING TRAINING) THE FSN INVESTIGATOR BEGAN FINDING EVIDENCE OF FRAUD; EMBARRASSINGLY IN CASES WHICH, BECAUSE OF OUR LIMITED RESOURCES AND HEAVY WORKLOAD, WE HAD ALLOWED TO SLIP PAST US.

UNCLASSIFIED

9. INITIALLY WE HAD INTENDED FOR THE INVESTIGATOR TO CHECK ON SELECTED CASES--PERHAPS VISITING THE HOMES OF ALLEGED BIOLOGICAL MOTHERS OR VERIFYING INFORMATION BY LESS INTRUSIVE MEANS. UNFORTUNATELY ALMOST NONE OF THE CASES HAD A USABLE ADDRESS. THIS, IN FACT, WAS A MAJOR COMPLAINT OF THE PARAGUAYAN COURT OFFICIALS WHEN THEY SOUGHT TO CHECK ON THE BONA FIDES OF AN ADOPTION. WE FIRST ASKED THE LAWYERS TO PROVIDE USABLE ADDRESSES. THEY CLAIMED THAT THEY COULD NOT. MEANWHILE, AMID THE VARIOUS REPORTS OF STOLEN BABIES, ONE OF THE JUVENILE CRIMINAL JUDGES (AND ONE OF OUR BIGGEST FANS) TOLD US THAT SHE WAS INVESTIGATING A CASE WHEREIN THE SAME WOMAN HAD APPEARED AS THE BIO-MOTHER IN THREE DIFFERENT ADOPTION PROCEEDINGS WITHIN A MATTER OF FEW MONTHS.

10. IN LATE NOVEMBER, WE MAILED LETTERS TO THE ATTORNEYS NOTING THAT SINCE THEY COULD NOT HELP US FIND THE BIO-MOTHERS, THEY WOULD HAVE TO BRING THE BIO-MOTHERS TO US. AGAIN THE INTENT WAS TO ALLOW THE ATTORNEYS TO PROVIDE THEIR ADOPTIVE AMERICANS ARRIVED IN PARAGUAY. AS A CONVENIENCE, WE SUGGESTED A JANUARY ONE, 1995 START DATE--EXPECTING THAT THIS WOULD APPLY TO THOSE CASES THAT WE HANDLED IN FEBRUARY--THE END OF THE JANUARY COURT RECESS. WE WERE, IN FACT, OFFERING A TWO MONTH LEAD TIME.

BEAT THE CLOCK:

11. THE LAWYERS BALKED AGAIN. A GROUP FROM ONE OF THE PURPORTED ADOPTION ATTORNEY ASSOCIATIONS MET WITH THE CONOFF AND EVEN PRESENTED A WRITTEN STATEMENT WHEREIN THEY CLAIMED THAT THEY WOULD BE UNABLE TO FIND ANY OF THEIR BIO-MOTHERS: EVEN IN THOSE CASES WHICH HADN'T BEEN OPENED YET. SEEMINGLY, EVERY ONE OF THE MOTHERS, INCLUDING THOSE WHO HAD RETURNED TO OFFER A SECOND OR THIRD CONSECUTIVE CHILD UP FOR ADOPTION, HAD RUN OFF TO BUENOS AIRES. MORE IMPORTANTLY, THEY ADMITTED THAT THEY WERE ACTUALLY RUSHING TO BEAT THE JANUARY ONE DEADLINE BY HAVING ALL THEIR BIO-MOTHERS

RENOUNCE CUSTODY BEFORE THAT DATE. THEY FREELY ADMITTED THAT THEY EXPECTED TO KEEP THESE CASES FREE OF SCRUTINY. (NOTE: THE CHARGE NOTED THAT ANOTHER PARAGUAYAN ATTORNEY HAD TOLD HIM THE SAME THING.)

THE ATTORNEYS FORCE OUR HAND:

12. AS LUCK WOULD HAVE IT, TWO IR-3 CASES WERE PRESENTED THAT DAY, DECEMBER 13, BY A HIGHLY SUSPECT ATTORNEY (SHE WOULD PRESENT AT LEAST NINE CASES IN THIS ONE WEEK.) IN ONE OF HER CASES WE FOUND A SPECIFIC ADDRESS FOR THE BIO-MOTHER, SO OUR INVESTIGATOR WENT OUT TO VISIT HER. HE FOUND THAT SHE DID NOT AND NEVER HAD LIVED THERE. INTERESTINGLY, THE ADDRESS BELONGED TO A WOMAN WHO WORKS IN ONE OF THE FOSTER CARE CENTERS (REF E. AN UPDATE ON THESE WILL FOLLOW SEPTEL) WHERE THE ADOPTION ATTORNEYS PARK THEIR INFANT CLIENTS.

13. WE FELT COMPELLED, THEREFORE, TO INSIST THAT THIS ATTORNEY (AMONG OTHERS) BRING IN THE BIO-MOTHERS. SHE (AND MOST OF THE ATTORNEYS) DID MANAGE TO BRING IN EITHER THE REAL OR ALLEGED BIO-MOTHERS. OF THE FIRST TWO CASES PRESENTED TO US, THE CASE WITH THE FALSE ADDRESS PROVIDED A CONVINCING BIO-MOTHER. THE

SECOND CASE CONTAINED SUCH SERIOUS DISCREPANCIES THAT WE WERE LEFT WITH NO ALTERNATIVE BUT TO INVESTIGATE FURTHER. THIS CASE RAISED SERIOUS QUESTIONS ABOUT THE IDENTITY OF THE ALLEGED BIOLOGICAL MOTHER AND THE ADOPTIVE PARENTS HAVE RESISTED GENETIC TESTING.

UNCLASSIFIED

WHAT WE HAVE FOUND:

14. MOST OF THE LAWYERS, INCLUDING THE MOST NOTORIOUS, ARE ADAPTING TO THE REQUIREMENT FOR PRESENTING THE BIOLOGICAL MOTHERS. IN THE FIRST 20 OR SO CASES WE HAVE FOUND SEVERAL CASES OF FRAUD, WE HAVE FOUND THREE CASES WHERE THE BIO-MOTHER WAS A MINOR AND SURRENDERED HER CHILD WITHOUT PARENTAL OR COURT APPOINTED GUARDIANSHIP (ONE HAD SINCE REACHED HER MAJORITY AND RE-AFFIRMED (TO US, NOT THE COURT) HER INTENT TO GIVE UP HER CHILD) AND ONE MOTHER WHO HAS ASKED US TO HELP HER GET BACK HER CHILD AND FORESTALL THE ADOPTION.

ADDITIONAL ISSUES:

15. ONE OF THE ARGUMENTS AGAINST OUR PROCEDURES IS THAT THE BIO-MOTHER HAS USUALLY APPEARED IN COURT SEVERAL TIMES, HAD A COURT MANDATED PSYCHOLOGICAL EXAM, AND THAT SHOULD BE SUFFICIENT PROOF OF IDENTITY AND HER INTENT TO GIVE UP HER CHILD. WERE WE QUESTIONING THE INTEGRITY OF THE PARAGUAYAN COURTS? WELL, YES. IN FIVE CASES, IN WHICH WE WERE REASONABLY SATISFIED THAT THESE WERE THE GENUINE BIOLOGICAL MOTHERS, WE FOUND THAT THEY HAD NEVER APPEARED BEFORE THE COURT. WE ASKED THEM TO DESCRIBE THE PROCESS AND THE JUDGE. MOST OF THEM (WITH THE SAME ATTORNEY) DESCRIBED A TALL ELDERLY MAN WITH A MUSTACHE WHO INTERVIEWED THEM. THE COURT RECORDS INDICATE THAT THEY WERE PERSONALLY INTERVIEWED BY SOMEONE QUITE DIFFERENT AND KNOWN BY US TO BE A SHORT--AND AT THE TIME--VERY PREGNANT--WOMAN. ANOTHER WOMAN, WITH A DIFFERENT ATTORNEY, FOUND SIMILAR DISCREPANCIES WITH THE FREQUENTLY DETAILED PSYCHOLOGICAL ASSESSMENTS THAT APPEAR IN THEIR FILES (REF Y). THIS JUDGE (REF 0). WAS NOT SO CONCERNED AS TO POSTPONE HER

UNCLASSIFIED

VACATION. WE WILL NOT BE ABLE TO MEET WITH HER UNTIL FEBRUARY, AFTER THE COURT RECESS. IN ANOTHER CASE, A DIFFERENT JUDGE REFUSED TO REVIEW A CASE WHEN WE SHOWED HIM THAT THE ATTORNEY HAD PRESENTED HIM AND THIS POST WITH TWO VERY DIFFERENT BIRTH CERTIFICATES. THOSE WHO ARE ACTUALLY CONCERNED ABOUT THE INTEGRITY OF PARAGUAYAN ADOPTIONS SUPPORT US. WE HAVE MET WITH THE JUVENILE COURT ATTORNEYS GENERAL (FISCALS), AND ONE OF THEM HAS APPROVINGLY WITNESSED THE INTERVIEWS. IN NEARLY EVERY CASE WE ARE FINDING SOME ELEMENT OF FRAUD OR A MAJOR IRREGULARITY. WE NOTE THAT WE HAVE NOT EVEN BEGUN TO ADDRESS SUCH ISSUES AS COERCION OR PURCHASED BABIES.

UNCLASSIFIED

ADOPTIVE PARENTS CAUGHT IN THE MIDDLE:

16. A NUMBER OF NERVOUS ADOPTIVE PARENTS, WHOSE CASES ARE ALREADY IN THE PIPELINE, HAVE COMPLAINED ABOUT WHAT THEY FEEL WAS A PRECIPITOUS CHANGE IN OUR PROCEDURES. NONE CAN, OF COURSE, COME OUT IN FAVOR OF BABY TRAFFICKING BUT ALL ARE UNDERSTANDABLY CONCERNED ABOUT LOSING THEIR HOPED FOR ADOPTION. THE TIMING OF OUR REQUIREMENT TO SEE BIOLOGICAL MOTHERS, ORIGINALLY SET FOR JANUARY 1, 1995, WAS ADVANCED WHEN SERIOUS SUSPICIONS OF FRAUD WERE RAISED IN THOSE CASES (OF DECEMBER 13) PRESENTED BY UNSCRUPULOUS ATTORNEYS. THE MORE WE LOOKED BEHIND THESE CASES, THE MORE CONVINCED WE WERE THAT FRAUD WAS OCCURING. IN THE CASES OF CLEAR CUT FRAUD, WE ARE UNABLE TO APPROVE THE VISA. FOR THE LESS CLEARLY FRAUDULENT CASES, WE ARE USING AN ADMITTEDLY LOW STANDARD OF PROOF TO SATISFY OUR DEMANDS. FOR EXAMPLE, IN THE CASES WHERE WE BELIEVED THE BIO-MOTHERS, BUT QUESTIONED THE VERACITY OF THE PARAGUAYAN DOCUMENTS, WE HAVE ISSUED THE VISAS. AT THIS POINT, WE DO NOT WANT TO GET DIRECTLY INVOLVED IN POLICING THE PARAGUAYAN COURTS. (REF J).

17. WHAT IF THE LAWYER CAN'T PRODUCE THE BIO-MOTHER? OBVIOUSLY, IF HIS CASE IS A FRAUD, THE LAWYER ISN'T GOING TO PRODUCE HER. WE ARE NOT ACCEPTING AN ATTORNEY'S WORD THAT HE TRIED. AFTER ALL, THE ATTORNEYS HAD ALREADY TOLD US THAT NONE OF THE MOTHERS COULD BE FOUND.

UNCLASSIFIED

18. WE HAVE ALSO ACCEPTED SOME EVIDENCE OF GOOD FAITH ATTEMPTS TO FIND THE BIO-MOTHERS.

SEVERAL ATTORNEYS (INTERESTINGLY, NOT THE REGULAR ADOPTION ATTORNEYS) HAVE BROUGHT IN NEWSPAPER ADS THAT THEY RAN IN THE LOCAL PRESS FOR A WEEK, ADVERTISING FOR THE BIOLOGICAL MOTHER. (THERE ARE REGULAR "ADOPCION" COLUMNS IN THE WANT ADS OF MOST NEWSPAPERS. THIS WILL BE REPORTED, SEPTEL).THIS IS THE SAME PROCEDURE REQUIRED BY THE GOP IN ABANDONMENT CASES. (SEE BELOW) IN ANOTHER CASE, A SPANISH SPEAKING ADOPTIVE PARENT HAS OFFERED TO ACCOMPANY HIS ATTORMEY'S ASSISTANT ON A INVESTIGATION AND VIDEO THE RESULTS. FOR THOSE WITHOUT VIDEO CAMERAS, WE WILL ACCEPT SWORN STATEMENTS FROM THE AMERICANS WHO PARTICIPATE IN SUCH A SEARCH--BUT NOT FROM THEIR ATTORNEYS. DURING OUR WEEKLY TOWN MEETING WITH ADOPTIVE PARENTS, WE HAVE SOLICITED THEIR SUGGESTIONS ON SOME APPROPRIATE NAYS TO SHOW A GOOD FAITH SEARCH FOR THE BIO-MOTHER OR SUPPLY CREDIBLE CORROBORATING EVIDENCE.

UNCLASSIFIED

MORE ORPHAN THAN NOT: ORPHAN VS ABANDONMENT:

19. AFTER FEBRUARY ONE WE WILL ACCEPT THE BIO-MOTHER, AN ACTIONABLE ADDRESS (PERHAPS WITH A MAP)--OR AN "ADOPCION PLENA." ALL OF THE PROBLEMS CITED ABOVE APPLY ONLY TO SINGLE PARENT ORPHAN CASES--NOT TO ABANDONMENTS ("ADOPCION PLENA"). THESE HAVE A MUCH HIGHER STANDARD OF PROOF IN THE GOP SYSTEM AND, FOR THE TIME BEING, WE ARE ACCEPTING THEM AT FACE VALUE. MANY TIMES, IN FACT (REF B) WE HAVE EXPRESSED SURPRISE THAT THERE ARE NOT MORE ABANDONMENT CASES. NOW WE THINK WE KNOW WHY. THE ABANDONMENT HAS A HIGHER STANDARD OF EVIDENCE AND IT TAKES THE LOCAL ATTORNEYS LONGER TO PROCESS THEM. THE LOCAL ADOPTION ATTORNEYS ARE INTERESTED IN A FAST TURNOVER ON THEY ARE AFRAID THAT THIS MERCHANDISE, WAITING ON THE SHELF, MAY BE STOLEN BY ANOTHER ATTORNEY.

OUR APOLOGIES:

20. IT IS UNFORTUNATE THAT SOME ADOPTIVE PARENTS HAVE BEEN CAUGHT IN THIS

UNCLASSIFIED

CROSSFIRE--PARTICULARLY DURING THE CHRISTNAS HOLIDAYS--BUT WE HAD TO START SOMEWHERE AND THE PRECIPITOUS ACTIONS (OF DECEMBER 13. NOTED ABOVE) OF THE LOCAL ADOPTION ATTORNEYS FORCED A RESPONSE FROM US. WE ARE WORKING TO HELP THESE PARENTS GET THROUGH THE SHORT TERM CRISIS. MOST CASES ARE BEING DELAYED ONLY ONE OR TWO DAYS; NANY, NOT AT ALL.

UNCLASSIFIED

THE SYSTEN WORKS:

21. THE BEST PART IS THAT THE LONG TERM EFFECTS ARE STARTING TO SHOW. ALREADY, SEVERAL ATTORNEYS HAVE BROUGHT IN BIO-NOTHERS FOR CASES THAT WON'T BE PROCESSED UNTIL FEBRUARY OR NARCH. HAVING MET OUR STANDARD OF PROOF, THEY CAN DISAPPEAR IN BUENOS AIRES OR INTO THE ETHER. ONE ATTORNEY EVEN WANTED TO BRING IN A BIO-MOTHER FOR WHOSE CHILD HE HAD NOT YET FOUND AN AMERICAN ADOPTIVE COUPLE. OUR SYSTEN IS WORKING AND WE ARE SURE THAT, EVENTUALLY, EVERYONE WILL APPRECIATE OUR THOROUGHNESS AND THE GOP WILL APPLAUD OUR INTEGRITY.

COMMENT:

22. HOW MUCH ADOPTION FRAUD IS THERE IN PARAGUAY? AS NUCH AS IN GUATEMALA WHERE A SIMILAR PROCESS HAS BEEN IN PLACE FOR SEVERAL YEARS? WE DON'T YET REALLY KNOW. CERTAINLY MUCH OF THE LOCAL PRESS REPORTING IS OVERBLOWN. BUT POST HAS ALSO ENCOUNTERED MANY CREDIBLE CASES OVER THE YEARS. OUR NEW SCREENING PROGRAM WILL PROVIDE US WITH A VIABLE SAMPLE SO THAT WE CAN GAUGE ITS TRUE EXTENT. BUT EVEN IF WE PREVENT A SINGLE BABY FROM BEING STOLEN IT WOULD JUSTIFY THE TEMPORARY DISCOMFORT THAT WE HAVE INADVERTENTLY INFLICTED ON OTHERWISE LEGITIMATE CASES. WE ARE REMINDED OF THE STORY STOLEN. SHE STOOD OUTSIDE THE GATES OF THE AMERICAN EMBASSY AND CRIED, "I PRAY TO GOD THAT HE WILL LET ME FORGET MY CHILD." WE PRAY TO GOD THAT THE SAME STORY WILL NEVER BE TOLD ABOUT THIS EMBASSY IN PARAGUAY.

- Mexican authorities captured on January 14 one of the top Mexican drug-trafficking kingpins, Juan Garcia Abrego. AG Reno had added Garcia Abrego to the FBI's list of the most wanted in March 1995. The GOM fully orchestrated the arrest operation in a highly skilled and professional manner, according to DEA. DEA's role was limited to the provision of some initial intelligence. On January 15, the GOM expelled Garcia Abrego to the U.S., and he is now awaiting trial in Houston.

- In 1995, Mexico arrested several other major narcotraffickers including: Hector Luis Palma, the number four Mexican trafficker, Jose Adolfo De La Garza-Robles (a principle contact between the Garcia Abrego organization and Colombian traffickers) and Jose Luis Sosa, a Garcia Abrego organization member who coordinated narcotics-laden flights into Mexico from Guatemala and Colombia. Humberto Garcia Abrego, brother of Juan Garcia Abrego, received a five-year sentence for money laundering.

- Seizures of marijuana were up by 24%, and over 40% more acreage of illicit crops was eradicated in 1995. Cocaine seizures remained unchanged from 1994 levels at 22.1 MTs.

- In November 1995, the Mexican Congress enacted modifications to its fiscal code to deter money laundering. In addition, the GOM has introduced legislation that would fully criminalize money laundering, provide for modern investigative law enforcement techniques and impose controls on certain chemical precursors. The Mexican Congress is expected to take action on the second legislative package during the first half of 1996.

- President Zedillo has expanded the role of the military in the fight against drug traffickers as a way to deal with corruption in the police organizations. The military participated in the successful operation that resulted in the arrest of Hector Luis Palma and military officers have been used to replace the federal judicial police in key locations.

- Attorney General Lozano is confronting corruption. He restructured the PGR within his first nine months in office. He has welcomed the newly expanded role of the Mexican military in the fight against drug trafficking. Lozano is vowing to stay the course to rid the system of corruption, but it will take years to accomplish this task.

11. Documentation of analysis procedures used to produce derived products including gridded data bases from survey data, when such products are the survey objective.

SECTION IV

ORGANIZATION AND MANAGEMENT

IV.1 The management of the overall Program will be exercised cooperatively by the Participants, who will establish suitable management arrangements to provide effective coordination between the Participants. For the UK, the Hydrographer of the Navy will be the authority for technical execution of the MOU. For the U.S., the Commander, Naval Meteorology and Oceanography Command will be the authority for technical execution of the MOU.

IV.2 The Participants will appoint national Program Directors who will together have overall responsibility for the execution of this MOU.

IV.3 Before the commencement of cooperative operations, the Program Directors will cooperatively develop detailed plans for each phase of the survey operations and data reduction. Survey plans will be prioritized and harmonized as far as national considerations permit to achieve optimum cost effectiveness. Areas suitable for cooperative surveys will be identified and survey plans for these areas of mutual interest will be formulated.

IV.4 All original survey data, defined as the initial, unprocessed output from the various on-board sensors and systems, which has been collected in the survey area, will be retained by the collecting Participant for a permanent record. The other Participant will be provided with copies of required data and derived products on completion of the survey and following processing and validation by the collecting Participant's designated technical authority. A list of data and products to be supplied will be jointly decided between the Program Directors prior to the commencement of the survey. Data collected by systems/sensors for which the collecting Participant has no processing or validation capability will be supplied to the other Participant without liability for the validity of the data or any derived products. As approved by each Participant, near real-time data may be requested and provided to either Participant during the conduct of survey operations, noting that the originator can accept no liability for the validity of such data or any derived products. The Participants will be granted unrestricted future access to refer to, examine and copy any or all of the original data collected under this MOU as needed to support operational forces; future access for other purposes will be subject to the approval of the collecting Participant on a case by case basis.

IV.5 The Participants intend to make available their Program Directors and staff for attending and hosting, on an alternating basis, meetings and consultations to discuss issues relating to the implementation of this MOU.

IV.6 The Participants will take the necessary steps to facilitate entries and departures of personnel, equipment, and materials connected with cooperative operations. Prior to entry, the Program Director for the visiting Participant will pass the names and intended length of stay of such personnel to the Program Director for the country to be visited for approval.

SECTION V

FINANCIAL

V.1 Each Participant will fund their own activities under this MOU with no transfer of funds between the Participants.

V.2 Implementation of this MOU by the Participants will be in accordance with their national laws and implementing regulations and subject to the availability of appropriated funds, personnel and other resources. In the event that such laws, implementing regulations, or other policies and procedures prevent a Participant from complying with the provisions of this MOU, the provisions of Section IX will apply.

V.3 The equipment and material used in support of the Program will remain the property of the providing Participant and under the control of its appointed representatives.

V.4 The Participants will ensure that readily identifiable taxes, customs, duties and similar charges or quantitative restrictions on imports and exports, will not be imposed in connection with the Program. If a Participant is unable to waive readily identifiable taxes, customs, duties and similar charges, such charges are to be defined and a mutually acceptable payment mechanism approved as appropriate prior to the start of a survey operation.

SECTION VI

VI.2 Transfers of classified information and material will only be through official government-to-government channels and will be controlled by the Program Directors. Such information and material will bear the level of original classification, denote the country of origin, the conditions of release, and the fact that the information relates to this MOU.

VI.3 Each Participant will take all lawful steps available to it to ensure that information provided or generated pursuant to the MOU is protected from further disclosure (including disclosure under any legislative provision), except as permitted by paragraph VI.8, unless the other Participant consents to such disclosure in writing. Accordingly, each Participant will not release the classified information to any Third Party without the prior written consent of the originating Participant.

VI.4 The Participants will investigate all cases in which it is known, or where there are grounds for suspecting, that classified information or material provided or generated pursuant to this MOU has been lost or disclosed to unauthorized persons. Each Participant also will promptly and fully inform the other Participant of any such occurrences, and of the final results of the investigation and of the corrective action taken to preclude recurrences.

VI.5 In the event that it is necessary for a Participant to disclose information collected or exchanged pursuant to this MOU to a defence consultant or contractor, the Participant will ensure that the consultant or contractors facilities have the capabilities to protect the information and are legally bound to control such information in accordance with national laws and regulations. Disclosure to a contractor or consultant will not occur without the prior approval of both Participants.

VI.6 For any facility wherein classified information or material is to be used as a result of this MOU, the Program Director of the responsible Participant will ensure the safeguarding of such classified information or material at that facility.

VI.7 Information or material provided or generated pursuant to this MOU may be classified as high as SECRET. The existence of the MOU is unclassified and the contents are unclassified. VII.1 Claims arising under this MOU will be dealt with under paragraph 1 of the Agreement Concerning Defense Cooperation Arrangements of 27 May 1993. In accordance with the cost sharing arrangements under paragraph 1(b)(ii) the cost of settlement will be shared equally by the Participants.

SECTION VIII

AMENDMENTS AND DISPUTES

VIII.1 This MOU may be amended, supplemented or extended at any time, through established channels of both nations, subject to the written consent of both Participants.

VIII.2 Any dispute regarding the interpretation or application of this MOU will be resolved through consultation between the two Participants and will not be referred to any national or international tribunal or any Third Party for settlement.

MEXICO: FEINSTEIN/D'AMATO LEGISLATION

Q: What reaction do you have to Senators Feinstein's and D'Amato's proposed legislation on Mexico?

A: We understand that these bills were introduced today. While we have not had a chance to evaluate them, let me underscore that the United States maintains a positive working relationship with Mexico on counternarcotics issues.

While more can always be done to halt the flow of drugs, we believe that in the past year, Mexico has taken some important measures to combat drug trafficking. These include the recent capture of notorious drug kingpin Juan Garcia Abrego, the introduction of legislation to criminalize money laundering, and the expansion of the illicit crop eradication program.

Q: Has the USG decided whether it will certify Mexico?

A: The President will submit his certification decisions to the Congress on March 1. It would therefore be premature for me to comment on what decisions he will make with regard to Mexico or any other country.

VITAL NATIONAL INTERESTS CERTIFICATION

MEXICO

Mexico has long been a major producer of, and transit country for, illicit drugs entering the United States. But, new trends are cause for serious concern. Mexican traffickers who previously assisted Colombian traffickers to move cocaine shipments through Mexico (up to 75 percent of U.S.-bound loads) are now purchasing multi-ton quantities of cocaine directly from producers for distribution through their own expanding U.S. networks. They also dominate the growing methamphetamine trade in the U.S. International criminal organizations increasingly look to Mexico's large, and largely-uncontrolled financial sector as a venue for laundering vast sums of money from their illegal activities. Corruption is a serious problem in Mexico and remains one of President Zedillo's major challenges.

Zedillo pledged to intensify the counter-drug campaign, dismantle the drug cartels, and root out narcotics-related corruption. However, the Government of Mexico (GOM) had only limited success in 1995. Money laundering is still not a criminal offense, thus rendering Mexico in less-than-full compliance with the 1988 UN Convention. Measurable performance indicators, such as seizures and arrests, remained at or below 1994 levels (and far below 1992-3 levels). Illicit crop eradication results improved, due largely to increased military action. At the operational level, the economic crisis further aggravated chronic shortages of resources and equipment and the efforts of GOM personnel were further hampered by continued lack of appropriate legal tools and training to combat modern organized crime. The GOM had some success against the Gulf Cartel, most notably the January 1996 arrest of Juan Garcia Abrego and earlier arrests of 11 members of the cartel as well as narcotrafficker Hector Palma Salazar. However, the operations of the country's most powerful cartels, such as the Carrillo Fuentes and Arrellano Felix organizations, suffered no major disruptions. As a remedial step, Zedillo put the Mexican Army in charge of a number of sensitive operations due to concern about corruption within some police units. The situation in Chihuahua was so severe that he placed the entire anti-drug effort under Army control.

The Zedillo Administration spent much of its first year preparing the legal foundation for confronting organized crime, improving the administration of justice and increasing public sector accountability. However, a key organized crime package was not passed by the Mexican Congress before going out of session for 1995. Many of the Mexican Attorney General's Office (PGR) resources were focused on the ongoing investigations into the 1994 assassinations of presidential candidate Donaldo Colosio and ruling party official Francisco Ruiz Massieu, and on corollary corruption investigations. A key development was the arrest of Raul Salinas, brother of former President Carlos Salinas and a senior official in the Salinas Administration; Mexican investigators are now pursuing drug-related charges as well.

The U.S. and Mexico cooperated well on drug law enforcement in 1995, however, U.S. officials experienced less than full cooperation from many of their Mexican counterparts, particularly on criminal investigations. Corruption concerns continued to inhibit the partnership. The two governments signed a Financial Information Exchange Agreement (FIEA) and an Asset Sharing Agreement to facilitate cooperation in combatting money laundering and other financial crimes. Bilateral cooperation against drug traffickers and their operations resulted in the interdiction of multi-ton cocaine shipments and important arrests. Multilaterally, the two governments also worked with the Central American governments on two coordinated regional anti-drug operations. The USG provided training and technical advice to personnel of the PGR, the National Institute to Combat Drugs (INCD), and the Mexican armed forces, which contributed to operational effectiveness, and to cooperation.

The arrest and expulsion to the U.S. of the notorious trafficker Juan Garcia Abrego in January 1996, while not directly relevant to this certification review, was a major advance and is viewed by the USG as a basis for optimism that U.S./Mexican bilateral cooperation could improve. It is a significant step forward in breaking the illusion of impunity generated by the drug kingpins of the so-called "Mexican Federation" and, if pursued vigorously in 1996, could constitute a real beginning to the GOM's campaign to reverse the expansion of the northern border drug cartels.

The success of Mexico's national anti-drug effort is critical to the defense of the United States from the international drug treat. In addition, Mexico and the U.S. are economic partners with a vast array of mutual interests, from commercial to ecological. As neighbors sharing over 2000 miles of border, trading partners with commerce approaching $100 billion annually, and key allies, it is in the vital national interests of the United States that Mexico's counternarcotics performance, despite its failings, be certified for 1995. Given the very positive improvements in early 1996, the USG will review the situation again in mid-1996 for possible restoration of certification.

Cooperation Between Mexico and Customs

- Since 1990, Mexico has allowed U.S. Customs P-3 aircraft to overfly the country in pursuit of suspect drug trafficking aircraft.

- In 1991, The Attorney General of Mexico requested Citation interceptor training from the U.S. Customs Aviation Program as a prelude to beginning an air interdiction program of their own. Customs continues to provide a variety of interdiction training programs to the Mexican interdiction forces. Thirty pilots were trained in Fiscal Year 1995.

- In 1992, the Government of Mexico (GOM) received delivery of 2 Citation aircraft for their program. The Procuraduria General de la Republica (PGR) pilots have been 95 percent effective in responding to targets entering Mexican airspace from South America.

- In April 1995, the GOM requested intercept training between the Customs P-3 AEW aircraft and its military F-5 fighter aircraft to engage the fast moving large aircraft threat into Mexico.

- Mexico has approved blanket overflight permission for Customs Citation aircraft during a 15-day special operation planned for March 1996 to assist the GOM in prosecuting the suspect aircraft landing just short of the U.S. border.

- President Zedillo and Attorney General Lozano have committed to raising the level of professionalism within the ranks of the military and law enforcement units assigned to counterdrug missions.

- Southwest Border counterdrug programs are currently being developed by the Customs Service, Drug Enforcement Administration, and the GOM. These programs will enhance the ability of both Mexico and the United States to address corruption as one element of the total problem hindering law enforcement efforts in stemming narcotics from entering the southwestern borders of the United States.

- Interdiction and investigative operations have been initiated to complement the Department of Justice Southwest Border Initiative.

- Revised legislative efforts by the GOM would enhance cash transaction reporting requirements and provide for criminal sanctions against money laundering activities to include non- drug "specified unlawful activities" associated with fraud, theft, and corrupt practices.

- Mexico has received assistance from and collaborated closely with the Customs Service to better track flights suspected of containing drugs.

- The Customs Service has provided interdiction training in Mexico for pilots of the Office of the Attorney General of Mexico and apprehension crews of the Mexican Federal Judicial Police.

- A narcotics fugitive and major Mexican narcotics trafficker, Juan Garcia ABREGO was arrested by the GOM and expelled to the United States for prosecution.

MEXICO:
CERTIFICATION DECISION

Q: Why did the President decide to fully certify Mexico's counternarcotics performance for 1995?

A: UNDER PRESIDENT ZEDILLO'S LEADERSHIP, MEXICO'S COUNTERNARCOTICS EFFORT HAS INTENSIFIED AND COOPERATION WITH THE U.S. HAS EXPANDED.

SINCE ZEDILLO TOOK OFFICE IN DECEMBER 1994, MEXICO HAS TAKEN SOME IMPORTANT STEPS TO COMBAT DRUG TRAFFICKING, INCLUDING:

-- THE RECENT CAPTURE AND EXPULSION TO THE U.S. OF NOTORIOUS DRUG KINGPIN, JUAN GARCIA ABREGO,

-- MAJOR REFORMS OF THE CRIMINAL JUSTICE SYSTEM, ADDRESSING LEADERSHIP, ORGANIZATION, AND ETHICAL STANDARDS. NUMEROUS CORRUPTION INVESTIGATIONS AND PROSECUTIONS HAVE BEEN INITIATED.

-- EXPANSION OF THE ROLE OF THE MILITARY IN THE COUNTERNARCOTICS EFFORT.

-- INTRODUCTION OF LEGISLATION TO CRIMINALIZE MONEY LAUNDERING AND CONFRONT MODERN ORGANIZED CRIME.

-- ENHANCEMENT OF THE INTERDICTION PROGRAM, INCLUDING IMPROVED INTEGRATION OF THE AIR, LAND, AND MARITIME COMPONENTS. REINTENSIFICATION OF THE ILLICIT CROP ERADICATION PROGRAM.

ADDITIONAL PROGRESS TO ADDRESS CORRUPTION, PRECURSOR CHEMICAL DIVERSION, AND MONEY LAUNDERING WILL BE NEEDED IN 1996, AND THE GOM IS MOVING TO IMPLEMENT SUCH CONTROLS.

MEXICO DRUG ENFORCEMENT ACCOMPLISHMENTS AND POTENTIAL

The government of Mexico has launched initiatives and had some significant accomplishments in the drug enforcement area including:

- Air Interdiction: 600 hundred aircraft land annually in Northern Mexico with loads of narcotics from Central and South America. Mexico has worked closely with the United States in interdicting these aircraft through permitting our Citations to cross into Mexican airspace, providing personnel on our P3AEW surveillance aircraft, and use of their own 2 Citations and F5 military fighters to respond.

- Port smuggling and port violence: Provided assistance and cooperation to help curb smuggling and port violence including initiating highly mobile law enforcement teams, known as "Beta teams" to respond to border smuggling and penetration threats, attempting to crash the ports of entry and deploying personnel and erecting barriers to prevent port running northbound (such as through a one-way southbound bridge in El Paso through the erecting of barriers) and cooperating to varying degrees with Customs port directors.

- Money laundering: Mexican/U.S. cooperative initiatives in the money laundering area have included joint investigations to return fraudulently transferred funds, task forces to identify and seize assets; joint investigation and targeting of money laundering through Casa Day Combio and banks along the Southwest Border, and assistance including interviews, leads and obtaining documentary evidence.

- Results: From 1990 to the end of 1995, combined Customs and Government of Mexico effort against narcotics trafficking by air resulted in seizure of 205,892 pounds of cocaine, 84 aircraft, 187 vehicles, and 216 arrests.

There are many things however, that the Mexican government should do to improve our joint efforts to deal with the drug smuggling problem along the Southwest Border:

- Air interdiction: Improve their ability to respond to landings of aircraft along the Northern Mexican Border with the United States. Often they are unable to effectively respond to our detections of such smuggling. This could include deploying some of the 12 VH-1 helicopters recently provided to Mexico by the State Department, deploying a larger percentage of their air interdiction resources now along the border with Guatemala to the northern border area, and providing expanded ground based response teams.

- Spotter enforcement: On the Mexican side of the border, there are often "spotters" that monitor Customs port activities and signal drug smugglers or port runners regarding the best time to penetrate our ports of entry. Mexico needs to quickly respond our identification of potential spotters, improve their own ability to detect spotters, and to take prompt action to remove the spotters.

- Investigations/Intelligence: We need to have expanded authority to cross the border into Mexico to collect information and work informants along the Northern Border area.

- Corruption: No Customs Service is free from the potential for corruption in the form of assisting the drug smuggler. The Mexican Government needs to expand its efforts to detect and prevent corruption of Customs and other Government officials along the border area.

In summary, the Government of Mexico has significant successes in the drug enforcement area relative to air interdiction, prevention of smuggling and port violence, and money laundering. Much remains to be done, however, relative to improving response to indications of air smuggling along the northern border, addressing the problem of spotters, improving intelligence collection through permitting a United States law enforcement presence along the Mexican northern border. On the whole, however, we conclude that significant progress has been made and will continue to be made by the Government of Mexico in these important areas.

This report is published by Human Rights Watch/Americas as part of Human Rights Watch's special initiative to examine the impact on human rights internationally of counternarcotic programs and policies. We take no position on the merits of antidrug objectives. But those objectives — like all national and international goals — must be pursued within the framework of internationally reocgnized human rights.

I. SUMMARY AND RECOMMENDATIONS

In 1995, under strong pressure from the United States, the Bolivian government began an aggressive coca eradication effort that was strongly resisted by coca growers. Periods of negotiation alternated with outbursts of violence in the Chapare, the sub-tropical region in which thousands of poor farmers produce most of the Bolivian coca that is destined for the illegal cocaine market. In its efforts to quell their opposition to eradication and to meet its eradication goals, the Bolivian government has engaged in serious human rights abuses such as excessive use of force, arbitrary detention, and the suppression of peaceful demonstrations. The primary agents of this abuse are troops of the Mobil Rural Patrol Unit (Unidad Móvil de Patrullaje Rural, UMOPAR), the rural antinarcotics police controlled by the Ministry of Government.

Recent initiatives by the Bolivian government — including the formation of a human rights office in the Chapare and reforms to anti-drug legislation — hold the promise of mitigating the abuses documented in this report, as does action by the United States Embassy in La Paz to provide name tags for anti-drug police agents who had previously operated anonymously. Nonetheless, these are but the first of several steps required by both governments to bring to an end these abuses.

In this report we document violations that include:

- The misuse of firearms by antinarcotics police resulting in injury and death in some instances. M-16s and shotguns firing rubber pellets were utilized with insufficient care during operations to disperse hostile crowds. In some instances, the evidence indicates police agents may have fired their weapons directly at Chapare residents who were not armed with deadly weapons. Our research does not, however, indicate a pattern of deliberate unlawful use of lethal force by the police.

- A continuation of the arbitrary and unlawful arrests previously documented by Human Rights Watch/Americas. In many cases, the Ministry of Government ordered these arrests. The arrests have taken various forms, including indiscriminate warrantless detentions of individuals against whom there were no reasonable grounds for suspecting criminal conduct; arrests intended to suppress peaceful and lawful political protest activity; and detention of coca growers' union leaders to secure advantage in negotiations with them over government policy. The special drug prosecutors condoned the arrests, despite their obligation to protect individuals from illegal detention.

- Tear gas was used carelessly, with insufficient precautions in residential areas to avoid exposing individuals, particularly children, to health hazards. At least one death, that of a six-month-old baby, has been attributed to exposure to tear gas. Chapare residents also alleged that tear gas was fired directly into their homes and at a clinic where people with serious injuries were receiving medical attention. Children and especially infants reportedly suffered severe trauma with respiratory sequelae from inhaling gas.

- Official investigations into deaths in shooting incidents have been limited in scope, superficial and slipshod. They have relied primarily on statements by commanding police officers, while police and civilians who were eyewitnesses to the deaths have not been questioned. Our review of investigation records shows no serious progress towards obtaining the evidence necessary to ensure accountability.[1]

More generally, our ongoing research supports the conclusion reached by the human rights commission of the Bolivian Chamber of Deputies in its August 1995 report, Police Actions and Deaths in the Chapare:

> [B]loodshed and deaths are part of an increasingly serious picture of violent confrontation in which the police act with an unnecessary display of power, abuse and indiscriminate attacks against the civilian population in the Chapare. Police interdiction activities seem to be guided by the assumption that all Chapare residents are drug trafficking suspects and that therefore the UMOPAR's activities are guided only by the criteria of efficiency without the slightest respect for legal and procedural norms. There are persistent and consistent complaints which indicate police actions are preceded by a sort of armed occupation of the area in question, in which the residents, by sole virtue of suspicions, are subjected to mistreatment, physical aggression, verbal violence, illegal searches of their homes, arbitrary confiscation and taking of their goods and money, not to mention the agitation, tension and fear to which children, women and the elderly are subjected. (Translation from the Spanish by Human Rights Watch/Americas)

Responsibility for these abuses falls largely on the Bolivian government. Minister of Government Carlos Sánchez Berzaín has failed to use his authority to ensure compliance by the antinarcotics police with Bolivian law and international human rights standards and to insist on accountability for abuses. Ministry of Government officials have both ordered and condoned arbitrary arrests and have tried to suppress peaceful political protests.

The United States shares responsibility for these human rights violations. Bolivian drug policies are heavily shaped by U.S. government concerns and priorities. The United States funds, equips, and provides training to the Bolivian antinarcotics police and other agencies responsible for counternarcotics activities, including the special prosecutors responsible for pursuing drug offenses in the courts. U.S. Embassy officials are in constant communication with the minister of government and other officials about counternarcotic operations and closely follow antinarcotic police activities.

Unfortunately, the United States has failed to ensure that effective protection of human rights is a condition of U.S. counternarcotics support. In particular, the United States has failed to use its considerable influence to curtail abuses by the UMOPAR. Although embassy officials pay close attention to the few instances in which the police shoot Chapare residents, they demonstrate comparatively little concern about the more pervasive problems of arbitrary arrest, misuse of tear gas, physical abuse, and theft by the UMOPAR. The United States has failed to press for the establishment of effective investigation and disciplinary procedures that will ensure accountability for human rights abuses committed by the UMOPAR. U.S. officials have acknowledged to our researchers that the UMOPAR's record of civilian deaths and injuries to some extent reflects the lack of adequate training and control.

Two recent initiatives by the Bolivian government that were spearheaded by the Ministry of Justice brighten the otherwise somber panorama of human rights protection for coca farmers in the Chapare. In particular, we are encouraged by the establishment in December 1995 of an official human rights office in the Chapare responsible to the Ministry of Justice. The precise role of the office has yet to be defined, and it is still underfunded and lacking basic equipment. But one of its proposed functions is the receipt, transmission, and monitoring of complaints by Chapare residents against the police. Such activity by the office could play an important role in increasing police accountability and protecting rights in the Chapare.

[1] This report is a follow-up to Human Rights Watch/Americas, "Bolivia: Human Rights Violations and the War on Drugs," A Human Rights Watch Short Report, vol. 7, no. 8, July 1995.

Another important effort by the Ministry of Justice was development of the recently enacted Law of Judicial Bond (Ley de Fianza Juratoria contra la retardación de Justicia Penal). This statute eliminates some of the provisions of Law 1008, the country's antidrug legislation, which flagrantly violated due process principles. For example, drug-offense defendants acquitted by trial courts or who have already served their sentences will no longer have to remain imprisoned pending the results of appeals to the Supreme Court. Unfortunately, in contradiction to international human rights principles, the law still retains a blanket prohibition on pre-trial release for all drug offenders.

Another positive development, facilitated by the support of the U.S. Embassy in La Paz and through U.S. funding, is the name tags that members of UMOPAR are beginning to wear. The name tags end the anonymity of police agents and will enable residents of the Chapare to identify police who abuse them.

Recommendations

No social or political objective, including the elimination of narcotics, justifies disregard for human rights. We call on the Bolivian government to adhere to international human rights standards as it pursues its national drug policies. More specifically, we recommend:

- Guidelines for searches and arrests. Clear rules governing the circumstances in which searches and arrests are permitted and the manner in which they are to be conducted, consistent with Bolivian law and international human rights treaties, should be developed for counternarcotics police and strictly enforced.

- Police training. A review should be undertaken of the training UMOPAR and other police in the Chapare receive to ensure that they have the skills and experience needed to protect civilians from unnecessary, careless or excessive use of firearms and riot control agents.

- Support for the Human Rights Office of the Ministry of Justice. The office should be given the financial, personnel, and logistical resources necessary to function effectively. It should establish an accessible and widely publicized system for receiving complaints from the public against members of the antinarcotics police, for transmitting them to police and prosecutors, and for monitoring actions taken with regard to them. The office's staff should have unrestricted access to internal police and court documentation to enable them to fulfill these monitoring and reporting functions. Information about the complaints and the results of investigations and administrative or judicial proceedings should periodically be made public.

- Reform of Law 1008. Additional reforms of Law 1008 should be enacted to permit judicial consideration, on a case-by-case basis, of pre-trial liberty for persons charged with violations of antinarcotics laws.

- Reform of internal police investigation and disciplinary procedures. We repeat our recommendation for a full and independent investigation into the efficacy of existing procedures for deterring human rights violations during antinarcotics operations and for disciplining abusive antinarcotics agents. The investigation should produce public recommendations for reform. Among the reforms we urge are: 1) the establishment, in cooperation with the Human Rights Office, of adequate, accessible, and publicized complaints procedures; 2) the allocation of sufficient numbers of trained personnel, both within the UMOPAR and within the judicial police force, to investigate such complaints; 3) establishment and enforcement of guidelines for such investigations, including the requirement that every attempt be made to identify and interview police and civilian witnesses to incidents involving physical injury or death; and 4) public disclosure of the findings and results of such investigations.

- Instructions to special drug prosecutors. The attorney general should instruct all special drug prosecutors to fulfill their responsibility to secure full respect for the Constitution and, specifically, to ensure that searches and arrests by antinarcotics police are consistent with Bolivian law and international human rights standards, and to order the release of all persons arbitrarily detained.

- Provisions of record of confiscated property. When property is confiscated or impounded by the UMOPAR, the possessor or owner of the property should be given signed documentation of that fact along with instructions about how to reclaim his or her property. The confiscation should be registered at the UMOPAR command. The Human Rights Office should have unfettered access to such records to respond to civilian complaints of theft or arbitrary confiscation.

We also urge the U.S. government to ensure that it does not underwrite human rights violations through its counternarcotics assistance to Bolivia. It should use its influence and resources to strengthen the Bolivian government's willingness and ability to protect fundamental rights, including by adopting the recommendations noted above.

In addition, the United States should:

- Withhold weapons. The United States should not provide or fund the acquisition of arms and riot control agents for the UMOPAR until it is satisfied that the police have been trained to use them properly and that sufficient controls are established on their use; and

- Condition funding. The United States should condition continued funding of the UMOPAR on the institution of adequately staffed, effective investigation and disciplinary systems; and on the promulgation and enforcement of rules for lawful searches and arrests.

We further recommend an expansion of the scope of the "certification" review the United States undertakes of counternarcotics progress in drug-producing nations to include the human rights implications of antidrug programs. The Clinton administration considers human rights to be a cornerstone of its foreign policy. But verbal assurances of the United States' commitment to human rights will mean little if they are not backed up in practice. The United States must honestly consider the human rights dimensions of programs to suppress drug trafficking and take forceful steps to ensure that the protection of fundamental rights is paramount.

II. BACKGROUND

Frustrated by its inability to significantly reduce the flow of cocaine into the United States through interdiction, in the last two years the United States government has returned to a "source country" strategy, hoping to combat cocaine where it is produced. In Bolivia, the world's third-largest producer of the coca leaf from which cocaine is made as well as the second-largest producer of refined cocaine, U.S. government policy has pressed for the eradication of coca, following the logic of "no coca, no cocaine.[2]"

The Clinton administration has also adopted a more aggressive use of the congressionally mandated certification process that conditions economic and military assistance on counternarcotics performance, as compared with the previous administration of President George Bush.[3] In 1994 and 1995, the United States certified Bolivia,

[2] A focus on foreign coca production was also attempted by the Reagan and Bush administrations."The logic is simple. The cheapest and safest way to eradicate narcotics is to destroy them at their source..." George Bush, quoted in David Hoffman, "Proposal is Marked Shift from Border interdiction," Washington Post, May 27, 1988.

[3] The certification process was created by a 1986 amendment to the Foreign Assistance Act of 1961. Section 490(b) of the Foreign Assistance Act states: the President of the United States by law must certify to Congress whether each producing and/or drug transit country during the previous year has cooperated fully with the United States of has taken adequate steps on its own, to achieve full compliance with the goals and objectives established by the 1988 United Nations Convention Against Illicit Traffic but did so relying on the act's national interest waiver, under which the president may certify a country, despite its lack of counternarcotics progress, if he determines that certification is in the national interest.

Immediately after it announced the certification decisions in March 1995, the United States informed Bolivia that it would nonetheless cut off aid and oppose multilateral bank loans if the Bolivian government did not meet three conditions by June 30: the eradication of 1,750 hectares of coca; the submission of a mid- and long-term eradication plan; and the negotiation of a new extradition treaty. In subsequent communications with Bolivian officials, the United States left no doubt that this "ultimatum" was not negotiable.

Bolivian law mandates progressive coca eradication in the Chapare, subject to national budget constraints and the availability of international support for alternative development.[4] In recent years, however, farmer reliance on the revenue from coca, the slow development of economically viable non-coca products, the militancy of the coca grower unions, and the lack of concerted commitment by the Bolivian government resulted in no net reduction in the area of land under coca cultivation.[5] Faced with the ultimatum from the United States and the prospect of forfeiting crucial economic support, Bolivia met all three conditions. The government eradicated 2,200 hectares by the end of June and managed to attain a subseqüent goal of eradicating a total of 5,400 hectares.

The government was able to obtain these eradication results only by putting enormous pressure on the coca growers to voluntarily eradicate or to face forced eradication. The government also began an unprecedented effort to destroy forcibly coca seedbeds and newly planted coca in the Chapare — both of which are specifically prohibited by Law 1008.[6] Over the course of 1995, the government and the coca growers' unions, sometimes with the mediation of the Catholic Church, undertook a series of fractious negotiations. The tug-of-war between the government and the coca growers was fiercely polarized: the government insisted that the national interest required meeting the U.S.-dictated goals, even if to do so required forcible eradication; the coca growers insisted they would defend their crops by whatever means necessary. The coca growers asserted what they considered to be a legitimate interest in defending their livelihood. Bolivian officials alleged — and their views were shared by U.S. officials — that the growers' unions were manipulated by drug traffickers, who used and financed farmer protests in an effort to in Narcotic Drugs and Psychotropic substances, to accomplish goals described in applicable bilateral narcotics agreements with the United States, and to take legal and law enforcement measures to prevent and punish public corruption related to narcotics." Alternatively, a country may be certified on the grounds that "vital interests of the United States require" that assistance be provided. Countries which are neither certified nor granted a vital interests waiver are cut off from most bilateral U.S. assistance. In addition, the U.S. must vote against multilateral bank loans to there governments.

[4] Law 1008 calls for the eradication of at least 5,000 hectares annually but conditions reaching this goal on "the availability of financial resources from the national budget as well as by the commitments and provision of sufficient bilateral and multilateral technical and financial cooperation destined for Alternative Development."Article 10, Law 1008.

[5] See Human Rights Watch/Americas, "Bolivia: Human Rights Violations," for a more detailed review of the contending political and economic forces affecting counternarcotic efforts, including eradication.

[6] Under Law 1008, coca which was growing in the Chapare at the time of the law's passage, apart from one small area, is deemed excess and transitional, to be eradicated over time. All coca planted in the transitional areas after 1988 is illegal and subject to immediate eradication without compensation. In practice, the government has provided compensation for voluntarily eradicated coca regardless of the date of the planting. The recent eradication of seed beds was performed forcibly without compensation.

guarantee their supply of coca[7], and that increasing numbers of farmers were engaged in the illegal production of coca base, the first stage in the production of cocaine.

In April 1995, the government declared a ninety-day state of siege, primarily to quell serious labor unrest, although the emergency measures provided an opportunity to place leaders of the coca growers' unions under administrative detention and to begin eradication. When the first state of siege expired, the government renewed it for another ninety days, this time expressly to facilitate eradication efforts. In a report on its effort to monitor human rights during the initial months of the state of siege, the Human Rights Commission of the Chamber of Deputies made preliminary findings that "there have been excesses, irregularities and abuses, especially by the police."[8]

Beginning in April, tensions between the government and the coca growers periodically turned violent. The single most serious incident of violence occurred during the second week of July, when the UMOPAR carried out forcible eradication of new seedbeds and immature coca plants in the Isisboro Securé National Park. Growers retaliated by blocking roads and organizing into self-defense committees to prevent eradication. On July 15 near Aroma, unknown people hurled three charges of dynamite packed into tin cans at an UMOPAR truck transporting detainees, causing serious injury to six UMOPAR police, two DINACO[9] agents and twelve peasants, one of whom, Juan Carlos Ventura, later died in the hospital.[10] Serious police abuses, including the beating of peasants, were reported in the same region in August during an operation to eradicate coca seedbeds known as Agua Clara II. In the months that followed, the police repeatedly faced a formidable challenge: to provide law enforcement backup for forced eradication efforts and to respond to often violent disturbances as growers organized to protect their crops and blocked whole sections of the main highway linking Cochabamba and Santa Cruz.[11] Serious confrontations took place in La Chacandora in September and in Entre Ríos and Shinahota in August and November.

III. DEATHS AND INJURIES CAUSED BY FIREARMS

In the course of 1995, four civilians were killed by gunshot and at least a dozen civilians and two police were injured by bullets during violent confrontations between the police and Chapare residents. Some of these

[7] For example, this view is expressed in the UMOPAR's annual report for 1995, which asserts that "national and local drug traffickers are supporting the actions carried out by the [coca] leaders, some of them are involved in inciting people to resist and to provoke violent confrontations while bilateral meetings are in progress with the mediation of the Church. The slogan of the coca leaders is "coca or death"; this intelligence analysis permits us to observe that the unions,.. are linked in some ways with drug-trafficking — at least by providing the most important raw material, the coca leaf, as well as through other activities prohibited under Law 1008...."UMOPAR, Operaciones Antinarcóticos UMOPAR-Chapare, 1995 Balance General, undated document.

[8] Human Rights Commission, Chamber of Deputies, "Vigencia y Respeto de los Derechos Humanos Durante el Estado de Sitio,"(La Paz, Bolivia 1995), p. 64.

[9] DINACO is the Bolivian government agency which regulates the legal sale and distribution of coca leaf.

[10] Three members of the coca farmers' union were later arrested and charged with the crime, but evidence of their participation is weak.

[11] According to the UMOPAR's annual report for 1995 the government tried to reach a negotiated solution with the producers, while carrying out aggressive policing of highways and roads to prevent demonstrations and disruptions of traffic. These operations, conducted jointly by the UMOPAR and the Special Security Group (Grupo Especial de Seguridad, GES) with air support from air force and army helicopters, were known as Operation Clear Road (Via Libre). The GES is a unit of the national police in La Paz that was brought to the Chapare to help with crowd control and to provide additional protection to government personnel forcibly clearing coca fields.

confrontations occurred when cocaleros (the name by which farmers who grow coca are known), alerted by warning whistles from neighboring communities that forcible eradication was in progress, left their villages armed with sticks and slings to block eradication. Other confrontations took place when the police attempted to disband political gatherings or to break up barricades mounted by cocaleros to prevent police from having access to their communities.

The UMOPAR were equipped with U.S. Army-issue M-16 automatic assault rifles, shotguns, and a variety of U.S.-manufactured crowd control weapons such tear gas and smoke grenades.[12] According to senior UMOPAR officials, the shotguns are only used to fire rubber pellets; the UMOPAR is not issued and does not use either birdshot or buckshot.[13] The police used their firearms to halt the advance of, or to disperse, menacing crowds. Senior UMOPAR officers insisted to our representatives that the arms were only used to fire warning shots, and that such shots are fired directly into the air, never over the heads of or in front of advancing crowds.

In many of the confrontations the residents were armed with sticks, stones, and slings capable of inflicting serious injury.[14] In various reports, UMOPAR officials assert the growers were also armed with firearms, machetes and sticks of dynamite. It is difficult to assess these claims because they lack specificity or evidence to substantiate them.[15] For example, none of the scores of residents arrested during the confrontations was detained with a firearm, and the UMOPAR do not claim to have confiscated weapons during the street confrontations.[16] In addition, the reports do not identify individual police who purport to have seen firearms being used during a confrontation. All of the local people we interviewed denied that the coca growers used firearms against the police, although they readily admitted using slings and throwing stones.[17] Most also denied that coca growers used dynamite in confrontations with the police during 1995, although many Chapare residents are former miners known to be versed in the use of explosives, and they acknowledged that dynamite had been used in the past.

[12] See Human Rights Watch/Americas, "Bolivia: Human Rights Violations," p.12 for a general description of the paramilitary characteristics of UMOPAR.

[13] The use of rubber pellets was evident from the piles of spent green cartridge shells amassed by residents of the Chapare. We were informed by Maj. Juan Meleán, vice-commander of UMOPAR, that green shotgun cartridges contain rubber pellets, while red shotgun ammunition contains lead or steel shot, which is lethal, particularly at close range. We did not see any spent red shells during our mission to the Chapare. We were not able to obtain a listing of the arms carried by the other two police agencies that participated in crowd control and eradication efforts in the Chapare in 1995, the GES and the Ecological Police, although we were informed that the GES also uses shotguns with rubber pellet cartridges. The Ecological Police is a new 260-person unit created with U.S. support to assist the government's eradication campaign by carrying out the forced destruction of illegal coca seedbeds and new plantings. According to the U.S. State Department, the Ecological Police destroyed 100,000 square meters of seedbeds and forty-five hectares of new coca within four months of its creation. (Bureau for International Narcotics and Law Enforcement Affairs, Department of State, International Narcotics Control Strategy Report [Washington: March 1996], p. 69.)

[14] Government officials and residents estimate the numbers of peasants involved in these confrontations at between 1,000 to 14,000. None of the estimates is reliable, however, and we have preferred in this report to refer to "thousands" where large crowds were involved, without trying to be more precise.

[15] Police reports routinely recite a litany of weapons supposedly used by the cocaleros, with little indication that in any given incident an effort was made to identify precisely which weapons were present or used.

[17] We received conflicting reports as to the extent to which the Chapare's residents owned firearms. The police and a couple of the residents we interviewed claimed shotguns for hunting are common. Others insisted that shotguns are scarce.

The small number of the injuries recorded by UMOPAR tends to bear out the coca growers' assertions regarding weapons. According to an UMOPAR summary of casualties for 1995, there were no police fatalities during clashes with the public. Two policemen were wounded by gunfire: one of the shootings was unquestionably the work of a coca farmer;[18] the author of the other is unknown. If farmers had been using guns to fire on the police, the number of police bullet injuries would have been greater. No UMOPAR troops were injured by dynamite other than those wounded in the extraordinary dynamite attack on an UMOPAR vehicle in Aroma (described above).[19] One UMOPAR member was injured in a machete attack in Isarsama in April 1995, when a resident is reported to have reacted violently when he saw his pregnant wife being beaten by police.[20]

By contrast, four members of the public were killed by bullets in separate incidents between July and December. Although no reliable lists for those wounded by UMOPAR or other police have been compiled by governmental or nongovernmental sources, our researchers obtained information on more than a dozen cases of residents who received serious gunshot wounds, some of which required major surgery, including the amputation of a leg. The number with minor wounds may well be much higher.[21]

The deaths have been the subject of internal UMOPAR reports and have been investigated by the Technical Judicial Police (Policia Técnica Judicial, PTJ), the judicial police responsible for conducting criminal investigations.[22] Our review indicates these investigations have been cursory, extremely limited in scope, and slipshod. Conclusions have been drawn which are not substantiated by evidence. Gaps and contradictions in the evidence have not been addressed. Witnesses — police and civilians — have not been identified and questioned. (Indeed, the only official body to have made a concerted effort to identify and interview witnesses is the Chamber of Deputies Human Rights Commission, but it has only reported on two of the cases under consideration.) The formal reports submitted by senior police officers provide overviews of the confrontations but contain few facts clarifying how the fatalities actually occured. Neither the UMOPAR reports nor the PTJ investigations reflect an effort to gather the information necessary to assess whether the deaths occurred from the legitimate use of lethal force.

Under established human rights principles for law enforcement, police may only use such force as is reasonably necessary to prevent a crime or to effect an arrest. Force which is disproportionate to the objective may not be used. The use of firearms against persons should be restricted to self-defense or the defense of others against imminent threat of death or serious injury or to effect the arrest of persons presenting such a danger. The intentional lethal use of firearms is permissible only when unavoidable to protect life.[23]

[18] See the case of José Mejía, Section IV. UMOPAR casualty lists indicate ten agents were wounded in 1995, two from gunshot wounds (Edgar Paco Matías, shot in the right thigh by José Mejía Piso, and Sgt. Simón Quisbeth Mamani, shot by an unknown person and hit by a .22 bullet in the right leg in Entre Ríos, November 17). Of the other eight wounded, four were seriously injured by stones, two by grenade fragments (the Aroma incident), one by a machete blow, and one by an unspecified skull fracture. [19] According to government officials, the standard way in which the cocaleros use dynamite is to throw small pieces into the road in front of the police. The effort is not to injure but to prevent advance.

[21] Police reports on violent incidents do not list the number of civilians wounded.

[22] We are not aware of any official investigations into non-fatal injuries.

[23] See, for example, Code of Conduct for Law Enforcement Officials, adopted by U.N. General Assembly resolution 34/169 December 17, 1979; Basic Principles on the Use of Force and Firearms by Law Enforcement Officials, adopted by the Eighth United Nations Congress on the Prevention of Crime and the Treatment of Offenders, Havana, Cuba, August 27 to September

Our investigations and the number and type of fatalities and gunshot wounds suggest that the UMOPAR's own rules for the use of arms and the international principles of proportionality were not always observed.[24] Although the crowds posed some danger to the police, that danger was principally from stones and rocks. The use of a military assault weapon such as the M-16 in such a context is troubling; the potential for serious injury and death is great when such weapons are carried by police operating under great stress and with insufficient training in crowd control measures.[25] In fact, the evidence suggests that at times UMOPAR troops did not limit themselves to safe warning shots but fired their weapons indiscriminately and hazardously against people who were not themselves using deadly force. There is also considerable evidence that some shots may have been fired directly at people under the cover of warning volleys. In addition, although UMOPAR rules preclude firing shotguns with rubber pellets at individuals from a distance of closer than fifteen meters, local residents claimed injuries from such pellets.

Juan Ortiz Díaz

Juan Ortiz Díaz, aged twenty-three, was killed by a gunshot on August 8 in Ayopaya, Carrasco, during a stand-off between police and cocaleros. The fatal shot was fired by one of the police covering his colleagues who were trying to escape by foot across the Ichoa river, pursued by a crowd of cocaleros, including Ortiz, who were allegedly pelting them with stones.

According to the police, an eight-person UMOPAR patrol, commanded by Lt. Eduardo Soliz Tordoya, gave a lift to a campesino who informed them about coca maceration pits in the Colonia Ayopaya and the Colonia 6 de Agosto. Reaching the end of the track, they left their vehicle and proceeded by foot with the informant. On the way they encountered two peasants, Basilio Gálvez and Silverio Canaviri, who aroused their suspicion because they tried to run away, and because they were carrying money in U.S. dollars. They ordered the two to accompany them to check out their stories about the money. (According to Basilio Gálvez's testimony to the Human Rights Commission, the police arrested him when he was on his way to Entre Ríos by bicycle to pay a land debt and took US$1,100 from him. He claimed he had been paid the sum as a compensation for eradicating coca plants.[26] He alleged that the police covered his mouth, beat him and struck his hands with a bayonet). [27]

Arriving at the Ichoa river, the patrol divided into two groups of four persons each. One group stayed guarding Basilio Gálvez, while the other crossed the shallow river on foot and went with Silverio Canaviri into Colonia Ayopaya. There they discovered a maceration pit, which they torched, and they impounded precursor chemicals and cocaine base. They made five arrests on the spot and confiscated a twelve-gauge shotgun belonging to Canaviri. Then the police found themselves surrounded by an angry crowd "armed with machetes, stones and knives" shouting for the return of the money confiscated from Gálvez and Canaviri as well as from another local [24] In our investigation of these deaths we spoke to senior officers of UMOPAR and of the Technical Judicial Police, public prosecutors responsible for police investigations, and forensic doctors as well as eyewitnesses and relatives of the victims. We also had access to official police reports, including the results of autopsies and ballistic findings, and the reports of the Chamber of Deputies Human Rights Commission. We were unable to interview officials of the Special Security Group or the Ecological Police.

[25] The UMOPAR training focuses on jungle operations and actions against drug traffickers. The routine police training UMOPAR members receive prior to joining the UMOPAR provides limited instruction in crowd control.

[26] Basilio Gómez showed our researchers official receipts documenting payments for eradication of coca. He was paid in bolivianos and converted the money into dollars, a common practice in the Chapare.

resident.[28] Outnumbered, they ran toward the river with the villagers in hot pursuit. The five detainees escaped in the mêlée. According to UMOPAR, when the fleeing police were close to the bank, their colleagues who had remained on the other side fired shots into the air to frighten off their pursuers. The police then crossed the river and the eight left the scene unaware that one of the bullets they had fired had struck and killed Juan Ortiz.

There is no dispute about the fact that the bullet that killed Juan Ortiz was fired by a member of UMOPAR. The police claimed that the most likely explanation was that the shot was a ricochet or a spent bullet. Yet one witness who claims to have seen the police firing at the moment Ortiz fell said he saw one policeman fire directly at the victim, from a distance we calculated to be between 120 and 200 yards. Basilio Gálvez, who was in custody of the police who had remained on the opposite bank and who was therefore close to the police who fired the "warning shots in the air," told the Human Rights Commission that he saw the "lieutenant" (presumably Soliz Tordoya) take direct aim in the direction of Ortiz and fire. He claimed the police saw what happened and that the shooter panicked and said, "You have not seen anything, you bastards." ("No han visto nada, carajos.") Gálvez repeated this story to our researchers.

The theory advanced by UMOPAR of a possible ricochet is improbable, considering the topography, the location of the participants, and the nature of the weapon. Although UMOPAR collected statements from some of the police who participated in the incident, they did not carry out a thorough investigation. The police investigation files on the case indicate that none of the UMOPAR patrolmen who fired shots, Lieutenant Soliz included, were questioned after their initial statements, nor were they asked to demonstrate the angle at which they fired.

Senior UMOPAR officers told us that Lieutenant Soliz was subsequently transferred out of the region to La Paz. In January, the Ministry of Justice informed the U.S. embassy that a trial court in Cochabamba was investigating Lieutenant Soliz and three members of his patrol.[29]

Ramón Crespo Condori

Ramón Crespo Condori, a twenty-five-year-old cocalero from Ayopaya, died of a gunshot wound on September 2, 1995, during a violent clash between cocaleros and police in La Chacandora, Carrasco. Those responsible for Crespo's death have not been identified. Police believe a cocalero was responsible; residents claim Crespo was shot by police. Crespo's case exemplifies the great difficulties in establishing responsibility for instances of death or injury in the Chapare and the inability or unwillingness of official investigators to overcome these difficulties.

According to an official report by UMOPAR commander Col. Luis Caballero, at 4:30 a.m. on that day two companies of the Ecological Police, two companies of UMOPAR and personnel from DIRECO[30] and DINACO arrived in La Chacandora on an eradication mission. The patrol eradicated 6,431 square meters of immature coca and 1,132 square meters of coca seedbeds, confiscated a twelve-gauge shotgun and made seventy-eight arrests. On their way back to the main road, a stone shattered a side window of an UMOPAR truck, and the police saw local people gathering together "with the obvious aim of hampering the police operation." The operation commander radioed for help, and Major Meleán flew in by helicopter with two patrols, finding a pitched battle in progress between the police and a 1,000 peasants "armed with stones, sticks, machetes, dynamite and other things." The crowd was finally dispersed with tear gas and warning shots. At about 3:30 p.m., the police returned to base with three of their members wounded — two cut by machetes and one hit by a stone.[31]

Crespo was shot during a confrontation between a group of the cocaleros and the police which took place in the Colonia Gualberto along a narrow track bordered by banana trees. According to witnesses interviewed by our researchers, at the time the bullet struck him, Crespo was at the front of the group and was shooting stones at the police with a sling. Although Ramon Crespo was struck by a bullet and died not more than fifty yards from the police, the police claimed to be unaware that a person had been killed.

On the following day a forensic doctor from Cochabamba performed an autopsy on Crespo's body, witnessed by residents and members of the local coca farmers' union. He found a two-centimeter entry wound on the right side of the abdomen; the bullet had perforated the intestines and severed several arteries. There was no exit wound. Working for several hours in primitive conditions without water, he was unable to locate the bullet and, as night approached, he requested permission from the prosecutor and peasant leaders to move the body to Cochabamba for x-rays. Six peasant leaders accompanied Crespo's body to the hospital in Cochabamba where at 3:30 a.m. the doctor finally located by x-ray a bullet fragment lodged in the spine and extracted it in the presence of peasant leaders in the morgue.[32] Police ballistic analysts concluded that the fragment, weighing 2.60 grams, was part of a home-made buckshot pellet, fired from a twelve-gauge or sixteen-gauge shotgun.[33] The police report concluded that the death had not been caused by a service weapon issued to the UMOPAR. Pointing to the forensic conclusions, the police believe Crespo must have been killed by an armed cocalero. To our knowledge, however, they have not undertaken any additional investigations to support their conclusion — or to identify and bring to justice the person responsible for Crespo's death. No witnesses or participants in the incidents have been questioned by either police investigators or prosecutors.

Witnesses interviewed by our researchers cast doubt on the police version. Two eyewitnesses claim to have seen the police deliberately shoot in the direction of Crespo before he fell. One witness, Severo Angulo, told us that Ramón Crespo was in a group of five people at the front of the crowd facing the police, who were some thirty-five yards in front of them. Crespo was using a sling. Angulo was about ten yards behind him. The police were firing their weapons in spurts and Angulo saw one of them kneel and take careful aim, "as if he were hunting." At that moment Crespo turned around as if he had felt pain, and fell between two banana trees at the edge of the stony track. He got up again and staggered about fifteen yards into a coca field, where he fell again.[34] Angulo went up to him. "What happened, hermano?" he asked him, and Crespo told him, "They shot me here," showing his stomach where there was a small round hole, without blood. Angulo was then surrounded by UMOPAR. He tried to escape, but the police knocked him down, beat and kicked him, then tied his hands and took him away, bleeding heavily.

[33] The police conclusion that the bullet which killed Crespo was homemade is an important detail, because the use of home-made ammunition would indicate the weapon probably belonged to a cocalero. We raised the question of whether Chapare residents make their own ammunition in a meeting on January 22, 1996, with Col. Julio Mejía, director of the PTJ in Cochabamba, and Lieutenant General Cárdenas Méndez, head of the PTJ's homicide division. The officers told us that peasants in the Chapare make their own shotgun ammunition using recycled materials. Spent commercial cartridges are refilled with a charge, and pellets are made by melting down lead from old car batteries and pouring the molten lead through a perforated tin tray, and allowing it to drip into a receptacle of water where it cools and solidifies into a sphere. Nicholas T. Forbes. M.D., a forensic pathologist consulted by our researchers, said that the bullet fragment in the police photographs did not resemble a projectile from any rifled weapon and that at a range of thirty-five meters a home-made twelve-gauge shell could have caused the wounds recorded in the autopsy. (Written communication from Dr. Nicholas T. Forbes to Human Rights Watch, February 8, 1996.)

[34] The head of the PTJ homicide division in Cochabamba also said that Crespo did not die immediately but staggered on and eventually died of an internal hemorrhage. Interview with Lieutenant General Cárdenas Mejía, January 22, 1996.

Another witness, twenty-one-year-old David Quispe Condori, who saw the incident from approximately one hundred yards further down the track, told us that he saw a policeman in a green uniform of the type worn by the GES and Ecological Police (not UMOPAR, who wear camouflage fatigues) kneeling and taking aim "calmly," while a colleague was letting off a burst of automatic weapon fire. Crespo suddenly looked round as the policeman was aiming. Quispe dropped to the ground for cover, but was himself struck by a bullet in the right hand. A few moments later he approached the body of Crespo, then in the middle of the track. Crespo was already dead, and his side and mouth were smeared with mud.[35]

Both witnesses interviewed by our researchers insisted that the cocaleros did not carry any shotguns on the day of the confrontation. Given that Crespo was at the front of the cocaleros, facing the police, it is unlikely that a bullet fired by his companions would have entered his body from the front and lodged in his spine. UMOPAR officers deny using shotguns except for firing rubber bullets. Colonel Caballero's report states that the police had confiscated a twelve-gauge shotgun at some point during the day, but does not indicate where the gun was impounded or whether the police unit that confronted Crespo had it in their possession. We are not aware of any tests having been done to ascertain whether the weapon had been recently fired.

Roxana Janeth Veliz Vargas

Roxana Janeth Veliz Vargas, aged thirteen, died on November 15, 1995, after being struck in the stomach by a bullet during a riot in Shinahota, a town on the main highway between Cochabamba and Santa Cruz. According to UMOPAR's account, on that day UMOPAR had set in motion an "automatic eradication" operation in Shinahota and had taken control of the town to avoid disturbances. According to police reports, at around 5:00 p.m. police guarding the road were attacked by some 3,000 union members, who had been meeting in a hall, armed with slings, sticks, and machetes. According to cocalero leaders, however, the violence erupted because police had prevented a union meeting and occupied the hall. The cocaleros decided instead to hold a campaign meeting to launch their mayoral candidates, but the police also refused to permit that.

The police fired large quantities of tear gas but were eventually outnumbered as more and more protesters appeared. The police retreated in both directions down the road, and the demonstrators set up barricades with tree trunks, cars and burning tires. UMOPAR reinforcements arrived, and after skirmishes lasting several hours — during which police used large quantities of tear gas and rubber bullets and fired numerous warning bursts of automatic weapons fire — they managed to clear the road area.[36] The police made about twenty arrests, and nine police were injured, apparently none of them with bullet wounds. On the civilian side, there were six gunshot injuries, the largest number of any incident during the year. Two of the injured required major surgery: Pedro Franco Bustos, twenty-one, [35] Reports of the incident which circulated afterwards alleged that Crespo was tortured by police and had mud stuffed into his mouth before he was killed. Photos of the body are said to show the mouth full of mud. Our researchers have not seen these photos and are unable to confirm the allegation of torture. Neither Angulo nor Quispe saw the police putting mud in Crespo's mouth or beating him. Dr. Ricardo Mercardo, who performed the autopsy, told us he did not see any mud in Crespo's mouth. It is possible that the mud seen on his face was the result of the body being dragged from the coca field where Crespo fell, to the track, where Quispe approached the body, a distance of some twenty yards.

[36] Memoranda from Lt. Col. Miguel Flores, commander of the Ecological Police, and Maj. Juan Meleán Arias, vice-commander of UMOPAR, to Col. was hit in the stomach and had to have a colostomy; Felipa Mamani Martínez, thirty-seven, was hit in her right thigh by a bullet which severed her femural artery, and ultimately had to have her leg amputated.[37]

We were unable to obtain precise information on the exact circumstances of Veliz's death. The Cochabamba branch of Defense for Children International reported that Veliz had fallen from her bike and was hit in the stomach by a bullet when she was getting up off the ground.[38] We have been unable to confirm this or to establish whether Veliz was facing the police when she was hit.

During the autopsy, a bullet fragment was extracted from her body, described as a "laminated fragment with a coating of lead and copper alloy with a weight of two grams," but the PTJ ballistic experts were unable to identify the weapon caliber. Senior PTJ police officers in Cochabamba told our researchers that the bullet fragmented before entering the body and was too small to permit identification.[39] The autopsy does not establish the distance Veliz was from the weapon that fired the fatal bullet. The balance of evidence nonetheless suggests she was probably shot by government forces. No police were reported hit by gunfire that day, nor were any firearms reported confiscated from demonstrators. Six demonstrators were hit by bullets, and the police in their reports on the incident acknowledged using lethal ammunition to fire "warning shots." According to the U.S. Embassy, the police acknowledge that one of their bullets killed the girl.[40]

Beyond the autopsy and the inconclusive ballistics test, nothing has been done to investigate the circumstances in which Janeth Veliz died. Indeed, on January 9, 1996, almost two months after her death, Dr. Gualberto Villarroel Román, an official in the prosecutor's office, sent a memorandum to the district prosecutor explaining: "It has been clearly established that the investigations were not continued since the event occurred in a violent clash between the forces of UMOPAR and the peasants,...[I]t is therefore impossible to determine the responsibility of the author or authors."[41]

Even though responsibility for Janeth Veliz's death had not been determined, the prefect (the highest regional official) of Cochabamba quickly cleared the regional government of any possible liability in a civil damages suit. Before Veliz had even been buried, the prefect, Dr. Alberto Glasser Vargas, persuaded her father, Bernardo Veliz Soria, and mother, Sebastiana Vargas, to sign a private agreement waiving their right to claim damages. The agreement, drafted in haste on non-official paper, blamed the child for getting into trouble, and the signatories concurred that her death had been an "[u]nfortunate accident," expressed their "[f]ull and absolute confidence" in the investigations into her death, and waived any future right to damages or compensation. The parents were given US$3,000 in "humanitarian assistance" in exchange for signing this document.

In an interview with the couple, we discovered that Bernardo Veliz had only a few years of basic education and was unable to read because a kitchen gas explosion three years ago had almost destroyed his eyesight. His wife speaks only Quechua and is illiterate. They had no lawyer to assist them, and Veliz said he was "drunk with grief"

José Mejía Piso

José Mejía Piso, a campesino in his late fifties or early sixties, was shot and killed by a member of an UMOPAR patrol near San Gabriel on August 18,1995. In an effort to clarify the circumstances of his death, our researchers spoke to residents of San Gabriel but we were not able to speak with any witnesses to the shooting. We have also studied the relevant police reports and the report of an on-site investigation conducted by the congressional Human Rights Commission. From these sources, it appears the UMOPAR patrol, which was present in the area to support eradication efforts, provoked a violent reaction from the peasants. Residents claim the patrol has carried out beatings of residents, including women and children, and stole or destroyed residents' property. The residents attacked the patrol with stones and slings but were dispersed with tear gas and rubber bullets. According to the police version, José Mejía, acting alone, confronted the police with an ancient Mauser rifle. He wounded policeman Edgar Paco Matías in the leg with one bullet and grazed his chest with another. According to the account provided to the Human Rights Commission by Gen. Simón Sejas Tordoya, then-commander of FELCN, the UMOPAR gave chase as Mejía was preparing to fire another round. His rifle jammed, and he was brought down by a burst of fire from another UMOPAR policeman. General Sejas was not present in San Gabriel at the time of the shooting, and we do not know how he acquired this version. The PTJ report on the shooting provided on September 8 to the prosecutor does not describe the specific circumstances of Mejía's death although it notes, almost in passing, that it occurred during "crossfire." The reports filed by Colonel Caballero and the UMOPAR patrol chief, Lt. Marcos Encinas, also fail to describe those circumstances or to establish the existence of "crossfire." The report on Mejía by the congressional Human Rights Commission was inconclusive because of the limited evidence available when it conducted its investigation two days after Mejía's death, but the commission was concerned that Mejía may have been killed in retaliation for having fired on the UMOPAR.

The PTJ did a paraffin test on Mejía's hands with a positive result from the right hand, consistent with his having fired a weapon. They also established that the bullets which killed him had been fired from an M-16. Our researchers have a copy of a handwritten medical certificate attesting to the knee wound of the policeman, Matías, and a copy of his declaration, in which he said he had passed out after being shot and had not seen how Mejía died. Matías was the only witness interviewed by the PTJ. No other police or civilian witnesses have been identified or questioned. The distance at which the bullets were fired has not been established, and there appears to have been no effort to identify which police officer fired the fatal shot or to establish whether Mejía in fact died in an exchange of fire. In short, our review of the PTJ files as well as the UMOPAR internal reports suggests no police effort to gather evidence relevant to the crucial question of whether the UMOPAR killed Mejía during the reasonable defensive use of lethal force.

Rubber Pellets

To our knowledge, no one has attempted to catalogue injuries caused by the police's widespread use of rubber pellets fired from shotguns. Colonel Caballero told our representatives that the police are instructed to avoid using rubber pellets at a range of less than fifteen meters, since at closer range the rounds can inflict serious injury. Two cases were reported to us involving clear breaches of those guidelines.

Dionisio Jamache Nina, a member of the May 12 coca growers' union from San Gabriel, reported being shot in the back twice at a range of five meters while he was running away from the police during a confrontation over eradication on August 18, 1995. He had a scar measuring approximately four centimeters on his back, and he said the injury caused him to be hospitalized in a clinic in Cochabamba.[43]

Angelina Encinas told our researchers that in the same confrontation, her mother, Victoria Campos, was hit by rubber pellets in her right arm, chest, right leg above the knee, and collarbone. Campos had been using a sling to throw stones at an UMOPAR patrol and was captured. According to Encinas, the police ordered Campos to look up at the sky and fired the shots at her from some eight to ten feet away. Campos was detained for six days at the UMOPAR base in Chimoré without medical attention.[44] She later obtained treatment privately in a clinic in Shinahota, where a doctor removed the pellets from her skin.

IV. USE OF TEAR GAS

The police relied heavily on the use of riot control agents, and in particular CS and CN gas, to quell civil disturbances and surmount organized resistance to counternarcotics operations in the Chapare.[45] During a five-day tour of the area we saw scores of spent gas canisters, grenades, and projectiles of different shapes and sizes, which local people had amassed in the previous months.[46] One of the fundamental principles for police conduct is that the use of non-lethal incapacitating weapons such as tear gas must be carefully controlled to minimize the risk of endangering uninvolved persons. This principle was not observed in the Chapare.

When our researchers asked Col. Luis Caballero about UMOPAR tear gas guidelines, he said the use of CS and CN gas inside homes, and in or around hospitals and schools, was strictly banned.[47] Yet we found evidence that tear gas had been used in ways that unnecessarily exposed residents, especially infants and children, to health [44] Encinas was not present during the incident, but told our researchers what her mother had told her. Victoria Campos's name is included on the UMOPAR detention lists for that day.

[45] CS and CN are members of a family of chemical compounds called "lacrimators" whose effects are described as "intensive irritation of the eyes causing crying or temporary blindness, irritation of the mucous membranes of the nose, trachea or lungs, causing coughing, irritation of the throat and stomach, with the induction of vomiting and possibly diarrhea, and irritation of the skin." Although CN is still used all over the world, CS is now preferred in many countries, because its immediate effects are more potent, causing "instantaneous conjunctivitis, with concomitant blepharospasm (involuntary blinking), burning and pain." It is also said to cause less long-term injury. The effects of both gasses depend on their concentration. In large concentrations CS can produce feelings of suffocation accompanied by panic, vomiting, and prostration, and causes blisters on exposed skin. See Howard Hu, M.P.H; Jonathan Fine, M.D., M.P.H; Karl Kelesy, M.D., M.O.H.; Preston Reynolds, M.D., Ph.D; Bailus Walker, Ph.D, M.P.H, "Tear Gas—Harassing Agent or Toxic Chemical Weapon?" Journal of the American Medical Association, August 4,1989, p. 660-663; Thompson S. Crockett, "Chemical Agents" (Washington, D.C.: International Association of Chiefs of Police, 1968).

[46] UMOPAR is equipped with CN and CS gas in canisters, grenades, and projectiles as well as colored smoke grenades and rubber pellet cartridges. According to UMOPAR officials, they are not equipped with the rubber or wooden batons routinely used by police. We were not able to obtain figures on the quantity of riot control supplies used by the UMOPAR in 1995. According to the U.S. Embassy in La Paz, the U.S. Defense Department has provided the following quantities of tear gas to Bolivian antinarcotics police since 1991: 1,168 grenades of CN gas between September 1991 and March 1993; 1,912 cartridges of CN gas in November 1992, and 3,296 in 1995. hazards. Residents alleged, for example, that police fired tear gas deliberately into homes, evidently for no other purpose than to force the inhabitants out; in one instance tear gas canisters hit a school; tear gas canisters also landed at a public health clinic where there were severely injured people receiving treatment. Residents living close to areas where disturbances had taken place complained of lasting effects of tear gas on the health of young children. A six-month-old baby died during one such disturbance, apparently of asphyxiation from prolonged inhalation of tear gas in his home. The harmful effects of tear gas on these occasions were enhanced because it was used for hours on end in densely populated residential areas, in which many houses are ramshackle and open to the elements.

The usefulness of tear gas as a riot control weapon is that it can break up an aggressive and dangerous crowd by temporarily incapacitating people but not inflicting permanent injury. However, tear gas is not harmless, and to avoid hazard it is essential that police be properly trained and responsible in its use.[48] Recent studies have identified a variety of trauma associated with improper use of tear gas, such as penetrating wounds caused by the explosion of gas grenades and canisters, blistering skin burns from direct contact with gas powder, lasting respiratory effects, and increases in miscarriages and stillbirths.[49] Several variables may influence the toxicity of tear gas. Apart from climatic and atmospheric factors, two are frequently stressed in the technical literature: the concentration of the gas itself and the ability of those affected to escape its effects by running clear. Gas used in confined spaces is more concentrated and lasting in its effects and consequently more dangerous,[50] particularly if it is used in homes where there are infants, old or disabled people who are incapable of running outside.[51] Similarly, tear gas can be hazardous if used in or near schools and hospitals.

Medical personnel at the San Martín de Porras Children's and Maternity Hospital (also known as the Ibuelo hospital), who have treated numerous tear gas victims in the Chapare, stressed the greater sensitivity of young children to the effects of tear gas because of its effect of reducing the oxygen supply especially in confined spaces. Although they did not rule out long-term physiological effects, depending on the type of gas used, they considered the psychological sequelae to be more serious. They also told us that two women in their first three months of [48] "Safety is a relative term when used in connection with riot control agents of any kind and there is always a possibility of injury and death under unusual circumstances or when agents are improperly employed. Assurances from commercial and military sources regarding the comparative safety of CS should not be permitted to obscure the fact that, like any other agent, CS must be used with discretion." (Crockett, "Chemical Agents, p. 10.")

[49] See for example research on South Korea in Howard Hu et al., "Tear Gas—Harassing Agent or Toxic Chemical Weapon?", p. 661, and on Israel in Amnesty International, "Israel and the Occupied Territories: The Misuse of Tear Gas by Israeli Army Personnel in the Israeli Occupied Territories," AI Index MDE/15/26/88, (London) June 1988.

[50] CS contamination is extremely difficult to remove. "When used indoors, CS particles settle on floors, walks, ceilings, and merchandise or household furnishings where they remain for extended periods of time. Unless removed, these fine particles are reactivated and become airborne, producing CS symptoms, whenever the air in the contaminated area is disturbed." (Crockett, "Chemical Agents," p. 18). Residents of the Chapare who had gas thrown into their homes complained of the smell lingering for days.

[51] In its study of Israel and the Occupied Territories, Amnesty International refers to the deaths of more than forty Palestinians in which tear gas was the cause of a contributing factor. Hundreds more were hospitalized, suffering from the effects of the gas. Amnesty International found that almost all the victims "belonged to sections of the population particularly vulnerable to tear gas inhalation: babies, the elderly and sick people, particularly those suffering from respiratory diseases." pregnancy had miscarriages two days after the events in Shinahota. They were unable to say whether the miscarriages were a physical effect of the gas or the result of emotional stress.[52]

Isarsama, April 22-23, 1995

According to Peter Richard Gutiérrez, a member of the Civic Committee in the hamlet of Isarsama (population 400 families), UMOPAR and GES police used tear gas in Isarsama on three occasions on April 22 and 23, 1995, firing canisters directly into homes and causing widespread distress, especially to children. An official UMOPAR report states that the purpose of the Isarsama operation was to keep the main Cochabamba-Santa Cruz road open after reports of a planned blockade by peasants with "machetes and long-range weapons, as well as dynamite. Intelligence reports indicated that official vehicles would be attacked and destroyed and their occupants kidnapped."[53]

According to residents, following rumors that UMOPAR was planning to take advantage of the state of siege then in force to carry out forced eradication, a meeting was held in the village at about 2:00 p.m. on April 22. UMOPAR police thought the people were massing for a violent demonstration and fired tear gas into the crowd. Violent skirmishes lasted for an hour and a half. Four men were wounded by gunfire, and those that could, fled the village. There were children lying on the ground unconscious from the gas. At 6:30 p.m. the police returned and fired gas directly into the homes, although there was no resistance or violence. Again the people fled, and the police left around 8:00 p.m. Later people began to return to sleep. At about 4:30 a.m. on the following morning, about 450 UMOPAR and National Police returned in thirty vehicles, this time with dogs. They went on a rampage, breaking into stores, lobbing gas grenades into homes to force the men out. At least two pregnant women were beaten; one husband who went to the defense of his wife with a machete, wounding a policeman, was charged with attempted murder.[54] Among the residents we interviewed were:

- Yolanda Araúz, aged sixteen. "It was five in the morning, I was in a lot of pain, I was five months pregnant. They knocked on the door, and then they kicked it." Three or four UMOPAR police came in and went upstairs, she said. One of them put his hand over her mouth to stop her screaming and another hit her with his rifle butt. "They wanted to rape me," she said. "They put gas in the house, lots of it, my little boy was ill with the gas."

- Ramiro Lazarte Gutiérrez, aged fourteen, who lives with his aunt and uncle. He said that police burst in after kicking in the door. They threw gas canisters into the house. He saw three canisters: the gas was grey, the canisters were silver. It made his eyes burn and he could not breathe. They all escaped from the house and into the countryside.

- Delia Espinoza de Figueroa, aged twenty-three: "We were in my house in the afternoon. The kids were out in the street. The leos [short for leopardo, the name by which the UMOPAR is known locally] arrived and entered the house. 'You are a cocalera!' they said. They kicked my husband and insulted me when I defended him. They let gas off inside the house. I shouted for help, my grandparents are so old now, they could not do anything. 'Drink water!', my husband shouted. Get those babies out of here before they die!' My husband escaped into the countryside. Next day I took the kids to the hospital. I have three kids, the girl was two at the time, the twins were only three months. All the children passed out. I managed to revive the babies by holding urine under their noses. My grandfather was also treated in hospital in Cochabamba."

- Isaura Araúz said that her daughter, who was eight months old at the time of the incident, "was so healthy before, now she's always vomiting and has permanent diarrhea. It was the gas that poisoned her.... I had to take her to see Dr. Lucio in Ivargarsama."

On May 29, the Isarsama Civic Committee drew up a list of eighty-seven children who had been affected by tear gas. In June, the Cochabamba branch of Defense for Children International (DCI) submitted the list to Víctor Hugo Cárdenas, the vice-president of Bolivia. DCI interviewed Isarsama residents in May 1995 and found that ten days after the events the smell of gas was still present in the houses.[55]

Although the UMOPAR report on Isarsama mentions eighty-seven police arrests and one policeman with a knife wound (presumably the machete incident), it makes no reference to tear gas or its effects on residents.[56]

The Clinic in Shinahota

At the height of the Shinahota confrontation on November 15 (see case of Roxana Janeth Veliz, above), a tear gas canister was fired or thrown at the doorway of a public health clinic. Through the open door clouds of gas entered the clinic where nine casualties, three of them in a critical condition from gunshot wounds most likely inflicted by police, were being attended. We interviewed five people who were present: Dr. Edgar Rodríguez Antezana, the young intern in charge of the clinic; Flora Galarza Burgos, a nurse; Quintín Vargas Calderón, a cocalero leader who was assisting patients and was detained at the clinic, Bernardo Véliz Soria, father of Janeth Veliz Vargas, who had died at 5:00 that afternoon of a gunshot wound; and Maj. Juan Meleán Arias, vice-commander of UMOPAR, who arrived at the clinic with an UMOPAR ambulance to evacuate emergency cases.

According to Dr. Rodríguez, the first patients were brought in at about 6:00 p.m. One of them, Felipa Mamani Martínez, age thirty-seven, was bleeding profusely from a severed artery in her leg and needed urgent specialized medical attention.[57] Dr. Rodríguez left the clinic to find emergency transportation for her. After showing his credentials and explaining the situation to an UMOPAR officer, he returned to the clinic with a minibus. Before the serious cases could be evacuated, however, Dr. Rodríguez heard a loud explosion in the doorway, and clouds of white smoke entered the building. He felt an intense irritation of the eyes.[58] At the same time the doctor heard a burst of automatic weapons fire from the street, and was aware that the clinic was surrounded by UMOPAR and Special Security Group police. The police entered the clinic and roughly ordered all the non-patients out, making them lie face down on the ground. Dr. Rodríguez was himself threatened. Police kept the detainees under guard for about thirty minutes while the patients were evacuated in the minibus and taken to the local Ibuelo hospital. Dr.Rodríguez reported speaking to a tall officer in charge of the operation (apparently Major Meleán), who appeared nervous and asked, "What's all this gas doing in here?" [59]

[57] As in the case of Janeth Veliz Vargas, the prefect of Cochabamba, Dr. Alberto Glasser, sought to draw up a "private contract," agreeing to pay Felipa Mamani's medical expenses in exchange for a liability waiver. However, on this occasion negotiations broke down because Mamani, advised by the Permanent Assembly on Human Rights, a nongovernmental human rights advocacy group, rejected the wording of the agreement. The original version of the agreement stated that Mamani "participated together with other people in illegal and criminal actions of confronting and clashing with police units... regrettably causing serious injuries to her person, on being the victim of bullets from guns used by her own companions." We are not aware of any official determination regarding the kind of bullet that struck Mamani.

Quintín Vargas Calderón, a cocalero leader, told our researchers that he was in the clinic helping with the wounded and that some of the patients were already in the minibus when the gas was thrown in. He was arrested between 7:30 and 8:00 p.m. He stated that he was made to lie face down with other detainees before being taken to the UMOPAR base in Chimoré.[60]

Bernardo Veliz Soria said that the gas canister was thrown while large numbers of people were running from the police in the vicinity of the hospital. Although he did not leave the hospital to look outside, he heard helicopters overhead and the sounds of pursuit. The gas canister struck something but did not enter the open door. "Everyone was crying inside. Before entering the leos were shouting, 'Halt, you bastards, get out ! Out, you bastards!'" Veliz did not see anyone being made to lie on the ground. He said that the detainees were taken directly to a waiting van. He was not ordered out but allowed to stay with his daughter's body.[61]

According to Maj. Juan Meleán's official report on the Shinahota events, he "[m]ade contact" with Dr. Rodríguez at about 8:45 p.m., Dr. Rodríguez informed him about the medical emergency, and Meleán ordered UMOPAR ambulances and paramedics to the clinic, where they evacuated six wounded to the Ibuelo hospital. "Once the situation was brought under control, some of the agitators were identified who were instigating the violence, and we proceeded to arrest [them]." Nineteen detainees are named. The report does not mention the presence of tear gas in the clinic or that some of the detainees were in fact arrested at the clinic. In fact it gives the impression that the ringleaders were identified and detained after the events at the clinic, whereas the facts as reported above indicate that police entered the clinic looking for them.[62] If this were the case, it is very probable that the tear gas was used deliberately to force the suspects out of the building, where they were perceived as having taken refuge — an egregious violation of the UMOPAR's guidelines for the use of gas that potentially put wounded persons at risk. When our researchers raised the issue of the tear gas with Major Meleán, he denied categorically that gas had entered the clinic.[63] We asked him in a later meeting if he did not remember commenting on the gas in the clinic when he entered it to evacuate the patients. He said he could not remember.[64]

We cannot definitively rule out the possibility that the gas attack on the clinic was simply due to a careless shot during a mêlée. However, the fact that the police were in pursuit of rioters at that time in the immediate vicinity, and that they later ordered members of the public out of the clinic and promptly arrested them, suggests that the gas was thrown at the door deliberately to force them out of the building. Such an action is a serious violation of basic guidelines for the use of tear gas. Colonel Caballero admitted that it was possible that gas had entered the clinic, but said that he did not know exactly. As far as we are aware, UMOPAR has never undertaken an investigation into the use of tear gas at Shinahota, although the events were widely covered in the press and imply a serious violation of UMOPAR's operational rules.

Remberto García Agreda

Remberto García Agreda, a six-month-old infant, died sometime during the night of November 16, apparently from inhalation of tear gas. Several thousand protesters had occupied a stretch of road about two and one-half miles long in Entre Ríos, setting up roadblocks at intervals and hurling stones at the police. With the help of colored flares fired from helicopters, the police responded for hours with tear gas, rubber pellets, and live ammunition fired into the air. The violence continued from about 10:30 p.m. on November 16 to 2:30 a.m on November 17, when a violent storm drove protesters and police alike off the road.[65] The house in which Remberto García lived was a stone's throw from the blockaded highway. Like most homes in Entre Ríos — indeed, in towns throughout the Chapare — it was a roughly constructed, relatively flimsy wooden structure without glass windows. Gas from outside would readily penetrate inside. In the middle of the night, when most families were home sleeping, the heavy and prolonged use of tear gas foreseeably exposed children and infants to health hazards.

The mother of the deceased infant, Flora Agreda, a resident of Entre Ríos and a mother of five, told our researchers: "They gassed us in the street first, and later I took refuge in the house, but inside they got us again. The baby could not breathe, he was crying, even I could not take it, it was hot like chili pepper. But where else could we go? The bullets were passing by too, and then the rain started...I wrapped the baby up, he could not bear it, he was panting, he could not breathe. He was vomiting, too. It must have been about 1:00 a.m...I got the children to bed and felt tired myself too. I got a bit of sleep and when I got up, the baby was dead. What could I do?"[66]

Víctor Hugo Canelas, Bolivia's national secretary for social defense, who visited Entre Ríos shortly after the incidents, spoke to the parents and gave the father money to cover the baby's funeral expenses. The baby was buried in the local cemetery. Flora Agreda showed us photographs of the funeral and grave. No autopsy was done, so there is no conclusive medical evidence that exposure to tear gas killed the baby. No other explanation for the death has been offered, however.[67]

Near Agreda's home is that of Filomena Ticol de Mamani. Her daughter Andreina, one year and eight months old, passed out for twenty minutes in their home from the effects of gas. Mrs. Ticol brought her round with a fan and by holding urine under her nose.[68]

V. ARBITRARY ARRESTS

According to official records, during 1995 UMOPAR police detained a total of 960 people for drug offenses in the Chapare, 387 of them in the July-December period. Of these detainees, 36.4 percent were released without charge, and 58.6 percent were referred to the special drug courts.[69] These figures are incomplete, because they do not include all persons detained during protests or marches and released without charges.[70]

In our previous report, we documented the longstanding pattern of arbitrary arrests and unlawful detentions in the Chapare: arrests that took place even though the detainee was not caught in flagrante delicto, there was no warrant and the prosecutor was not present at the arrest; detentions for longer than forty-eight hours without charges and without the detainees being brought before a judge[71]; arrests followed by charges despite the absence of reasonable grounds for believing the detained had committed a criminal offense; and detentions for conduct which is not a criminal offense. This pattern continues. The only change we noted was the increased use of arbitrary arrests to detain individuals for legal conduct — for example, participating in peaceful demonstrations — or against whom there were no reasonable indicia of criminal conduct. These arrests reflected the willingness of the Ministry of Government and of the UMOPAR to disregard the strictures of national and international law to secure tactical advantage in the struggle against coca growers in the Chapare.

The pattern of arbitrary arrests also reflects the unwillingness or inability of the drug prosecutors to stand up for the rights of Chapare residents when to do so would place them in opposition to the UMOPAR or the Ministry of Government. All prosecutors, including those responsible for prosecuting drug offenses under Law 1008, are part of the Public Ministry, which by law is independent of all other government branches or agencies and one of whose overarching functions is defense of the rule of law and constitutional guarantees.[72] One of the prosecutors' specific obligations, for example, is to secure the release of all persons arbitrarily or unlawfully arrested.[73] The drug prosecutors are also responsible for directing and controlling arrests and searches by the narcotics police and are required to be present at all arrests except those that are in flagrante delicto.[74]

In practice, however, the prosecutors in the Chapare are present at only a fraction of the arrests, and they appear to play little role in determining whether sufficient grounds exist for the arrest of any given individual. They acquiesce to blanket sweeps designed by the UMOPAR or ordered directly by the Ministry of Government which trample individual rights. In an interview with our researchers, special drug prosecutor Eduardo Marañón specifically disavowed his ability to challenge unlawful arrest orders. Despite his clear legal mandate to protect individuals from arbitrary detention, the prosecutor claimed he was simply an "ant" who did not dare challenge the Ministry of Government. Human rights advocates in Bolivia believe the drug prosecutors' ability to defend human rights is

According to figures provided to us by National Secretary of Social Defense Víctor Hugo Canelas, the total number of people detained in 1995 for drug-related reasons was 2,424; only 914 of these had charges formally brought against them; 1,233 were released. The remainder were released to other institutions. "Resultados Obtenidos en la Lucha contra el Narcotráfico del 1ro de enero al 31 de diciembre de 1995," undated document.

compromised by the fact that their salaries are paid by the United States and are some three times higher than those of other prosecutors.[75]

Arrests of Peaceful Protesters

In December 1995, hundreds of women coca farmers (cocaleras) began an arduous 270-mile march from their homes in the Chapare to La Paz, where they intended to present their views about the government's coca policies and their needs. On two occasions the police stopped the march and detained a total of more than 200 participants. On December 20, police acting on telephoned orders from the Ministry of Government detained without warrant some 170 marchers, including 147 women, transferred them to the town of Oruro, and later brought them to the UMOPAR base at Chimoré. Ninety-six were released on December 21 through the intervention of the recently established Human Rights Office of the Justice Ministry, and the remainder, some forty-five women and thirty-one men, were released on the following day. One week later, at dawn on December 27, 150 armed police from the Special Security Group forcibly broke up the march near Micayani, 160 miles from La Paz, and detained forty-five women. Eight said to be suffering from exhaustion and exposure were taken to a clinic in Oruro while police roughly bundled thirty-five into a bus and transported them to Chimoré, where they and several children under the age of five remained in detention in crowded conditions and with little food until the last detainees were released on December 31.

The government offered various pretexts for the detentions. The most patently disingenuous was the claim that the police intervention had been intended to "safeguard the health and physical integrity of the campesinas." According to press reports, Minister of Government Carlos Sánchez Berzaín explained that "approximately fifty women who were marching were invited to board buses and were transported to Chimoré. Since they are from the Chapare, in that place they will be duly identified and each one taken back to her community." The minister stated, "these women have no right to jeopardize the security and health of the children they are carrying."[76]

Another explanation, more openly hostile to the march as well as frankly contrary to principles of free speech and association guaranteed by Bolivia's Constitution,[77] was that offered by the National Secretary for Social Defense Víctor Hugo Canelas. In a statement to the congressional Human Rights Commission, Canelas claimed the march was illegal because the marchers "sought to defend" planting new coca crops, which Law 1008 prohibits, and to defend existing crops of coca that were illegal, and "to defend indirectly" the production of drugs in the Chapare.[78] He repeated this argument in a meeting with our researchers, claiming that the march was illegal because the cocaleras were defending and advocating criminal conduct by trying to protect their ability to plant and produce coca contrary to the provisions of Law 1008.[79] He also attacked the march for being "politicized." When questioned by our researchers as to the consistency of his position with constitutional and international human rights guarantees of free speech, free association and the right to petition the government, Canelas insisted the march by the cocaleras was inappropriate in a democracy.

[79] Article 79 of Law 1008, "apología del delito," criminalizes "the tendentious, false or sensationalist public defense of a crime or of a person prosecuted or convicted of drug trafficking." (Human Rights Watch/Americas translation.) To our knowledge, no one has ever been prosecuted as an apologist for crime under this section which, on its face, violates free speech principles.

The government's handling of the marchers' peaceful demonstration of political opinion revealed deep divisions within the government. Minister of Justice René Blattmann, whose disagreement with Minister of Government Sánchez Berzaín over the march was widely reported in the press, stressed to our researchers, "The strength of a democracy lies in its willingness to allow the right of those with opposed ideas to protest."[80] The ministry sent observers to the march, and its Chapare-based Human Rights Office intervened directly to get detainees released.

Following its visit to the Chapare, we received further reports of arrests in circumstances which suggest, as in the case of the marchers, unlawful efforts by the government to quash political opposition. At 8:00 p.m. on January 21, forty-seven people — including Abelino Espinoza, a union leader whom our researchers had interviewed the previous day — were detained by three UMOPAR patrols in the coca market at Villa 14, while watching a video of the cocaleras' march. On January 29, eighty National Police agents, members of the GES and other police in civilian clothes forcibly entered the offices of the Coca Producers Federation of the Tropics in Cochabamba and detained fifty-eight adults and small children, some of whom were participating in a hunger strike in support of the cocalera marchers, who were themselves on hunger strike in La Paz. According to a report in the newspaper Presencia, published in La Paz, the National Police commander, Col. Vitaliano Pérez, said he had received "higher orders" for the arrests and that it was impermissible for people to damage their own health by refusing to eat.

Sweeps

In mid-January 1996, police swept through major towns in the Chapare (Shinahota, Villa Tunari, Chipiri, Eterazama and Villa 14) arresting 145 people without warrant on January 16 and scores of others two days later.[81] One target of the sweeps was people without identification documents, assumed to be foreigners or transients engaged in illegal activities in the Chapare. Many of those arrested, however, had identification documents or other proof of residence. Colonel Luis Caballero, commander of the UMOPAR in Chimoré, told us that the arrests were also connected to the Ministry of Government's closure of the Chapare's coca markets.[82] According to Caballero, UMOPAR patrols accompanied by DINACO went into the market towns and arrested those whom the DINACO agents pointed out as people who they believed illegally bought coca for sale to drug traffickers. The UMOPAR patrols carried no warrants nor even lists of individuals against whom there were reasonable grounds for suspecting participation in illegal coca transactions. A prosecutor at the Chimoré base signed off on the plan to conduct the sweeps but did not review any evidence to support the arrests of specific individuals.

The case of Guillermo López García, a farmer interviewed by our researchers in Eterezama on January 19, is illustrative. He was detained on January 16 while riding his bicycle home after watching the closure of the coca market. The UMOPAR police asked him for identification, and he took them to his house, where he showed them his military service docket and marriage certificate. After helping him find the padlock to lock his home, the UMOPAR took him to Chimoré base. Had UMOPAR or DINACO had intelligence reports that López had been engaged in criminal activity, it might be expected that they question him. But, after giving his name and address he was not questioned further; he was held, however, for two more days. Like the other detainees he had to make his own way home. According to human rights advocates, another man, Luis Espinosa, a resident of San Gabriel, was detained next to the hospital in Chipiriri where he had taken his sick six-year-old child; he stepped outside to buy something to drink and was forced into the UMOPAR truck without being able to speak to family members or even to alert hospital personnel of his forced departure.

[81] The week of these massive arrests was also the week that Director of Central Intelligence John Deutch and other high-ranking U.S. officials visited Bolivia.

[82] There is some question whether, strictly speaking, the local coca markets were ever legal. Whatever their legality, they operated freely and publicly for years under the control of DINACO. Farmers brought sacks of dried coca to the markets, then sold to middle-men who, in theory, would take the coca to the larger markets in Cochabamba for sale for licit purposes. The government claimed, however, that much of the coca sold at the small markets was diverted to the production of coca paste in the Chapare's thousands of maceration pits.

The detainees were held, some for over a week, in a crowded hall at the UMOPAR base without mattresses, adequate food, or sanitary facilities. On January 21, six days after their arrest, thirty-four people were still in custody in Chimoré without charges and without having been brought before a judge. According to the nongovernmental advocacy group Andean Information Network, twenty of the detainees had not been able to inform relatives of their detention.

Almost all of those picked up in these sweeps were ultimately released without charges. Women and children who had been detained were released promptly — bringing into question why they were detained in the first place. Others were released as soon as their places of residence were established or for humanitarian reasons unrelated to whatever ostensible reason for their arrest there may have been.[83]

These detentions were blatantly arbitrary and unjustifiable. They violated rights of personal liberty and elementary principles of due process, and were conducted in utter disregard for required arrest procedures. The minister of justice sent Dr. Sonia Zabala, the head of the regional Public Defender's Office in Cochabamba, to Chimoré to seek the release of the detainees. In a written complaint to Eduardo Marañón, the drug prosecutor in Chimoré, Dr. Zabala called for the detainees' immediate release on the grounds that the arrests had been carried out without any warrant or charge, and that the detainees had been held in breach of constitutional guarantees for more than seventy-two hours at that point. Marañón responded that his intervention had secured the release of "several dozen" detainees. Nonetheless, he asserted, he was powerless to protest or countermand an order from the "Supreme Government" or to insist on the release of all detainees because of the unlawful nature of their arrests. In a meeting with our researchers, he repeated this view. He insisted to us, moreover, that the Ministry of Government had the authority to order the arrests and that it was up to the minister to decide if the arrests were legal or not. We are not aware of any Bolivian law that grants the minister of government this power. But Bolivian law does grant to the prosecutors — who are independent of the Ministry of Government — the authority to order arrests by the antinarcotics police and to review the legality of detentions.[84]

Arrests for Negotiating Gain

In a clear-cut case of arbitrary arrest and abuse of government authority, on November 19, 1995, police detained Delfín Oliveira Borja, a twenty-two-year-old leader of the Central de Eterezama, a coca growers' union, allegedly on the express orders of Social Defense Secretary Canelas, but without, to Oliveira's knowledge, any arrest warrant. Oliveira told us that after he was arrested Canelas personally accused him of having a drink with two members of the Peruvian guerrilla organization Sendero Luminoso, and threatened to send him to a high-security prison in La Paz, or to the cell "where your compañero David Herrera is, because he is all alone."[85] Later, government officials, including the director of DINACO, Marcelino Quiroga, and Under-Secretary for Alternative Development Edgar Tapia, came to talk to Oliveira while he was being held at the UMOPAR base at Chimoré and tried to get him to promise that his union would eradicate one hundred hectares of coca in exchange for his freedom. Oliveira refused, on the grounds that only the union members could decide how much land they wanted to eradicate. The officials kept reducing the amount of coca eradication Oliveira would have to agree to, but despite heavy pressure he was [83] For example, our researchers witnessed Colonel Caballero order the release of one individual immediately after he was informed that the detainee had a sick relative.

intransigent. The officials also warned him not to continue with his political activities. After nine days, Oliveira was released. He was never questioned by the police or prosecutor; nor was he charged or brought before a judge.[86]

VI. ABUSES COMMITTED BY UMOPAR IN THE COURSE OF DRUG INTERDICTION

In our earlier report on the Chapare, we catalogued commonplace abuses by UMOPAR agents in the field, including arbitrary search and arrest, verbal harassment and aggression, physical assault, unlawful violence, and theft. Nine months later we encountered the same pattern. The UMOPAR still fails to conduct itself as a police force acting within the framework of the law.

Few victims or family members ever bring complaints directly to the UMOPAR. They believe doing so would be useless at best, subject them to reprisals at worst. For their part, UMOPAR officials are highly skeptical of complaints, believing they are fabricated to discredit the police. The new Human Rights Office inaugurated in December 1995 by the Ministry of Justice in the Chapare may provide an official bridge between the Chapare's residents and the police, facilitating the communication of complaints and monitoring their investigation. It is not clear as of this writing, however, the extent to which the Human Rights Office will exercise this function. The staff is severely handicapped by a lack of funding and basic communications resources, and a final plan for the office's responsibilities has not been delineated.[87]

Many residents claim that the UMOPAR steals money and goods from them. We brought one such complaint up with Major Meleán: that of Basilio Gálvez, who claims that an UMOPAR patrol took US$1,100 from him, asserting that it was the proceeds of drug trafficking. Gálvez showed our researchers documents supporting his claim that he had received the money for coca eradication. Major Meleán replied that the law permits the police to confiscate the illegal proceeds of trafficking as well as to impound evidence from the scene of a crime. He insisted the confiscated funds were still being held at the prosecutor's office and Basilio Gálvez was entitled to apply for their return since there was no charge against him. Misunderstandings like this could be avoided if police were to issue receipts and instructions for the reclaim or return of confiscated or impounded property.

VII. DUE PROCESS CONCERNS

In our July 1995 report, "Bolivia: Human Rights Violations and the War on Drugs," we identified two major areas in which the legal regime established under Law 1008 to try drug offenders was seriously as odds with international standards of due process. The first was the mandatory rule whereby persons charged with drug offenses were ineligible under any circumstances for provisional liberty pending the hearing of the charges. The second was the absence of provisional liberty during the lengthy mandatory appeals process. Defendants acquitted by the trial court nonetheless remained imprisoned until the Supreme Court reviewed their cases, a process that took years.[88] In addition, even a person who had served his or her time in full had to remain until the Supreme Court reviewed the sentence.

[86] Colonel Luis Caballero, commander of UMOPAR, in a meeting with our researchers on January 19, confirmed that orders for Oliveira's arrest had not originated with UMOPAR but with the Ministry of Government. He refused to discuss the legality of Oliveira's arrest, saying that was a matter to discuss with Secretary Canelas.

[87] Another initiative of the Ministry of Justice, described in our previous report, has been the development of a nationwide system of public defenders. The public defenders in the Cochabamba and Chimoré offices, which handle most of the low-income drug defendants from the Chapare, are playing an important role in protecting defendants from police abuse following their detention and in ensuring that they receive at least a basic defense in court. The impact of the public defenders, however, is limited by the small size of their staff and their lack of basic resources.

At the latest count, 575 of 899 prisoners in Cochabamba had been or were being tried for offenses under Law 1008. Of these about 20 percent, more than one hundred prisoners, had been acquitted by the court or had already served their sentences in full.[89]

On February 2, President Gonzalo Sánchez de Lozada signed into law legislation which removes some of the most glaring injustices of the legal regime for drug offenses.[90] Article 17 of the new Law of Judicial Bond (Ley de Fianza Juratoria) makes several important changes in Law 1008, including: 1) it allows provisional liberty to those acquitted or absolved by the trial court and to those who have already served their sentences in full, pending appellate review of the trial court's decision; 2) it makes appeals of trial court sentencing decisions discretionary rather than mandatory; 3) it concedes provisional liberty to all those held for longer than eighteen months without a sentence by the trial court, those held for longer than four years without a final sentence, and those held longer than the minimum penalty for the crime of which they are accused; 4) it enables judges to dismiss or reduce charges brought by the drug prosecutors;[91] and 5) it establishes territorial jurisdiction for the special drug courts, in place of the national jurisdiction they had previously enjoyed.[92]

Although the Law of Judicial Bond liberalizes the rules for provisional pre-trial release for most defendants, it does not extend the possibility of pre-trial release to defendants accused of drug offenses (except those who have been held for longer than eighteen months without judgment from the trial court). Law 1008 retains, therefore, a blanket prohibition on pre-trial release for all defendants accused of drug-related offenses. The courts may not consider granting pre-trial release to any drug defendant, regardless of the nature of the specific offense charged, the strength of the evidence, the likelihood the defendant would commit another crime during pre-trial release, or the likelihood that he or she would appear for trial. This provision of Law 1008 contravenes international human rights standards.

Consistent with the presumption of innocence that all defendants enjoy, Article 9(3) of the International Covenant on Civil and Political Rights (ICCPR), states in relevant part that: "It shall not be the general rule that persons awaiting trial shall be detained in custody, but release may be subject to guarantees to appear for trial,..." The Human Rights Committee of the United Nations has held that detention before trial should be used only to the extent it is lawful, reasonable, and necessary. Necessity is defined narrowly, e.g., "prevent flight, interference with evidence or the recurrence of crime," or "where the person concerned constitutes a clear and serious threat to society

[90] Under the administration of President Sánchez de Lozada, Bolivia has enacted a number of important legislative reforms that increase the protection of human rights throughout the country. Most of these reforms, however, such as the abolition of imprisonment for debt, do not directly address the kinds of abuses most prevalent during antinarcotics activities in the Chapare.

[91] Law 1008 had tipped the balance between the judge and the prosecutors in the early stages of trial decisively in favor of the prosecutor by restricting the judge's ability to refuse to open trials sought by the prosecutor or to reduce the charges. The Law of Judicial Bond thus restores some of the judicial autonomy and discretion that Law 1008 had restricted.

[92] The system of national jurisdiction had placed an onerous burden on the defendants, who could be tried far from the scene of the events in question and far from their communities. The new law, however, makes an exception to the local jurisdiction in cases in which the defendants are "exceptionally dangerous" and where the local courts cannot provide adequate security.

which cannot be contained in any other manner." [93]The Eighth United Nations Congress on the Prevention of Crime and the Treatment of Offenders established the following principles (para.2)[94]:

> (a) Persons suspected of having committed offences and deprived of their liberty should be brought promptly before a judge or other officer authorized by law to exercise judicial functions who should hear them and take a decision concerning pre-trial detention without delay;
> (b) Pre-trial detention may be ordered only if there are reasonable grounds to believe that the persons concerned have been involved in the commission of the alleged offenses and there is a danger of their absconding or committing further serious offences, or a danger that the courts of justice will be seriously interfered with if they are left free;
> (c) In considering whether pre-trial detention should be ordered, account should be taken of the circumstances of the individual case, in particular the nature and seriousness of the alleged offence, the strength of the evidence, the penalty likely to be incurred, and the conduct and personal and social circumstances of the person concerned, including his or her community ties;

Bolivian government officials insist the lack of pre-trial release for Law 1008 defendants is justified by the serious threat posed by drug-trafficking to Bolivia. They also argue that mandatory detention of all drug defendants is necessary to prevent the major drug traffickers from being able to buy provisional liberty and then to escape trial. We believe, however, that gravity of the category of crime does not extinguish a defendant's right to the presumption of innocence and to be able to seek pre-trial release. Moreover, the rights of one defendant should not be sacrificed to ensure justice in another case. The threat that major traffickers may buy pre-trial release and escape justice cannot justify denying release to an individual who does not pose a threat of flight or continued criminal conduct. In short, international human rights law requires the court to consider the individual defendant before it and the particular facts of his or her case.[95]

David Herrera

On September 18, 1995, UMOPAR arrested David Herrera Tenorio, a well-known leader of the Federation of Coca Producers of the Tropics of Cochabamba, on suspicion that he was involved in the dynamite attack on an UMOPAR truck on July 15, 1995.[96] The case was then turned over to a special drug prosecutor, who charged Herrera

[96] The incident, described above, was the most serious crime of violence during 1995. Near Armoa, in the Isiboro Securé National Park, someone threw a homemade grenade into an UMOPAR van transporting detainees. One detainee, Juan Carlos Ventura, died in the hospital on July 22; more than twenty other people were injured, including other detainees and police. Three individuals, Marcial Alavi Inca, Vicente Bigabriel and Cancio Nina Ramírez, all members of cocalero unions, have been detained in connection with the attack. Our researchers interviewed Bigabriel and Nina and studied the case file. We find their prosecution troubling in several respects: use has been made of statements and evidence allegedly obtained under coercion, including a staged "recognition" of the tins alleged by police to be similar to those used in the explosion, in which the defendants claim they were with having a maceration pit on the land of his neighbor, Estanislao Chile. The legal proceeding against Herrera also included Francisco Vallejos, a peasant with little education who had worked as a laborer for Herrera and who was charged with manufacturing cocaine base; and Chile, a miner's son suffering from tuberculosis who was charged with failing to denounce the use of his land by Herrera for a maceration pit. Bolivian human rights groups believe that Herrera's arrest and prosecution under Law 1008 was an act of political revenge because of his high-profile opposition to government antinarcotics policy.

Although the police did find a maceration pit on Chile's land, they produced no solid evidence that it had been owned or operated by or for Herrera. The prosecution did not present to the court any individuals who claimed to have seen Herrera involved in criminal activity or who alleged to have had dealings with Herrera connected to the pit. Three witnesses claimed that they knew about the pit and that "everybody knew" it belonged to Herrera.[97] They did not, however, claim any direct knowledge of, nor did they offer any specific information to show, Herrera's ownership or use of the pit. These individuals also made critical allegations about Herrera's conduct of union affairs, revealing that there had been antagonism between them. Neither of the two other prosecution witnesses, Vallejos and Chile, offered any testimony that directly linked Herrera to the maceration pit. Moreover, they both subsequently recanted their initial statements to the UMOPAR. Vallejos originally stated that he knew of the pit and that Herrera's wife had hired him to dismantle it and dispose of the rubber sheeting and remains of macerated coca, which he stored in a chicken hut he had built in advance. Chile originally testified that he knew of the maceration pit, that it had been installed before the ownership of the land had been determined by law, and that because of his illness he had been absent from his land while the pit was in operation. Neither Vallejos nor Chile testified to any conversations, dealings with or observations of Herrera that connected him to the operation of the pit.

The three-judge panel which heard the case in accordance with Law 1008 attempted to throw out the case, arguing that no material evidence of the crime had been produced. The Oruro Higher Court, however, ratified the charges brought by the prosecutor, and the trial was conducted. Both Estanislao Chile and Francisco Vallejos testified to the court that the UMOPAR had pressured them into making their original statements incriminating Herrera. Chile said he was threatened with thirty years in jail if he did not declare and offered freedom if he did. Vallejos said that after arresting him UMOPAR officials offered him money— no specific sum was mentioned— to testify against Herrera and told him he would be released if he did. Vallejos said that they had brought him to the site of the pit dressed as a "leopard" and had instructed him what to say and do.

On December 29, the court acquitted the three defendants. The ruling stated that the prosecutor had not been present during the arrests and searches as required by law, that Vallejos and Chile had been detained without a warrant, that no material evidence had been collected, that the witnesses' testimony was vague and unsubstantiated, and that two of the key witnesses had been threatened and bribed into testifying against Herrera.

VIII. UNITED STATES

The United States has not played a direct role in the human rights abuses described in this report. But it shares responsibility for them because of its ongoing role in funding, training, advising, and equipping the UMOPAR, instructed to pick up a particular can and were photographed doing so by the police. The only defendant to confess, Marcial Alavi, alleged that he was beaten beforehand. The three are currently free on bail.

[97] For example, Daniel Acosta Camacho testified that he knew that Herrera had a maceration pit on Chile's land. When the prosecutor asked him how he knew this, Acosta stated, "I knew because all the neighbors knew." In response to further questioning, he testified that he never saw the maceration pit in use. Dictaminación Informativa de Cargo en Estrada por Daniel Acosta Camacho, taken September 21, 1995 by Prosecutor Percy Camacho Flores.

the special drug prosecutors, and all other Bolivian antidrug entities.[98] The United States must also assume responsibility for pressing the Bolivian government to undertake eradication policies that would be strongly opposed by the coca growers without having ensured that the Bolivian police would be able to respond to that opposition without resorting to human rights abuses.

Our research, including interviews with U.S. officials, suggests the United States continues to approach allegations of abuse by antinarcotics police with a strong bias. In striking contrast to the skepticism with which they treat complaints by cocaleros, U.S. officials are quite willing to draw from uncertain facts conclusions that favor the police. Thus, for example, the annual State Department human rights report on Bolivia covering 1995 states that although government investigations are still open, the "evidence available to date...refutes allegations that [deaths of peasants in the Chapare] were extrajudicial killings or the results of unjustified police force."[99] We disagree. The evidence is inconclusive and contradictory in all five cases. While it does not suggest deliberate extrajudicial killings, it cannot be fairly read as exculpating the police from the charge that they misused their firearms or as proving — as the report claims— that certain deaths were caused by "protesting farm workers." For example, the State Department report describes as the result of justifiable use of force by the police the cases of Juan Ortiz Díaz and José Mejía Piso, described above in Section III. Our careful review of these cases shows there is insufficient evidence to exonerate the police in the two deaths.

The evidence in the case of Ramón Crespo does not establish that "protesting farm workers" killed him, as the State Department alleges. Eyewitnesses claim to have seen police fire directly towards the group in which Crespo was standing. Responsibility for the July 15 dynamite attack which killed one peasant has not been established; although three coca grower union members have been charged with the crime they have not been convicted and, based on the files we were able to review, the evidence against them is weak. Finally, we agree with the State Department that the circumstances of Janeth Veliz Vargas's death are uncertain. She may have been killed by a "warning shot" gone astray or by a bullet fired deliberately into the crowd.

The very uncertainty surrounding these cases exemplifies a crucial human rights problem in the Chapare: the lack of effective police investigations even in grave cases such as homicides. Unless there is a marked change in energy, determination and resources put into the investigations into these deaths, the likelihood is that those responsible — civilian or police — will never be held to account. The State Department's human rights report ignores this fundamental problem.

The State Department's human rights report also notes widespread allegations that police use undue force against farm workers during antinarcotics operations. It observed that the "similarity and volume of such allegations suggest that they had some basis in truth." The report then notes: "No incriminating evidence came to light, and no security personnel were charged or tried." The absence of evidence or prosecutions, however, says little about the patterns of abuse. It speaks instead to the paucity of serious investigations into those abuses and the lack of will on the part of government and law enforcement officials. The State Department's report also notes that there were "credible allegations" of illegal searches and thefts of property by the UMOPAR and an absence of prosecutions.

[98] See Human Rights Watch/Americas, "Bolivia: Human Rights Violations," pp. 110-14, for details regarding U.S. financial and other assistance to Bolivian counternarcotics institutions. The budget for fiscal year 1995 allocated $28.2 million for narcotics programs in Bolivia, including $3.2 million in Foreign Military Financing (FMF) and $13.9 million in Economic Support Funds (ESF). For fiscal 1996, the administration plans to spend $15 million in counternarcotics programs in Bolivia and for fiscal 1997, the administration has requested $50 million. (Bureau for International Narcotics and Law Enforcement Affairs, U.S. Department of State, International Narcotics Control Strategy Report, p. 32).

[99] U.S. Department of State Country Reports on Human Rights Practices for 1995 (electronic text found on URL: gopher://dosfan.lib.vic.edu:70); see also hard copy (Washington, D.C.: Government Printing Office, 1996).

The State Department's acknowledgment of abusive treatment of civilians by the UMOPAR, even if somewhat indirect, is nonetheless important. We hope it will encourage both U.S. and Bolivian officials to take direct action to address the problem. The United States has supported human rights training for the UMOPAR, but training alone does not suffice to protect human rights during police operations. U.S. officials must make a greater effort to use the United States' influence and resources to encourage the Bolivian government to establish effective complaint and internal disciplinary procedures and to ensure competent, thorough investigations of alleged abuses. If the United States continues to fund, advise, and equip the UMOPAR, it has an obligation to help the Bolivian government develop the resources necessary to secure those procedures and investigations.

The United States should help the Bolivian government review the training received by the UMOPAR to ensure that the police have sufficient expertise and experience to protect civilians from unnecessary, excessive, or careless use of firearms and chemical weapons. U.S. officials acknowledge that the UMOPAR's training has not equipped them adequately to handle the mass confrontations and civil unrest to which they have been recently been exposed. UMOPAR training was originally designed by U.S. Special Forces and stresses such skills as jungle survival, small unit tactics, and military-style operations. A reorientation in training is required for the UMOPAR to be able to undertake routine police functions in highly conflictive situations with appropriate regard for fundamental human rights.

In a welcome development since our prior report on Bolivia, the U.S. Embassy provided name tags for the UMOPAR. This small but significant step can help secure accountability for abuses as well as have a deterrent effect, as victims will now be in a position to identify those responsible.[100] But the contribution to human rights protection that name tags can make will be nullified if the Bolivian authorities do not follow up complaints with real investigations and disciplinary proceedings. U.S. officials also communicated to Bolivian officials their support for reforms to Law 1008, through the mechanism of the Law of Judicial Bond, that would eliminate certain provisions that flagrantly violated human rights standards.

IX. CONCLUSION

Human rights violations undermine the legitimacy of antinarcotic efforts, sabotaging public respect for law enforcement agencies and public willingness to abide by government policies. Ending those abuses in the Chapare requires a commitment by the Bolivian government to take the steps necessary to ensure adequate training, supervision, and control of the UMOPAR and effective institutions to ensure accountability for any abuses they commit. Those responsible for designing and implementing Bolivian antinarcotics programs must place human rights at the forefront of their concerns. However, as long as Bolivian officials believe the United States is more concerned with eradication quotas than human rights, they are unlikely to make respect for human rights a high priority. The Clinton administration must unequivocally signal its determination that human rights not be sacrificed for counternarcotic objectives. In the meantime, other Bolivian officials and entities, including the Ministry of Justice, have shown themselves to be energetic and courageous defenders of human rights. Their work offers promise for the effective protection of international human rights in Bolivia.

[100] In January we were able to observe that some, but not all, of the UMOPAR personnel we encountered were wearing name tags.

CANDIDATES' STATEMENTS
FOR N.D.O.A. BOARD OF DIRECTORS

FIRST VICE PRESIDENT:

As a former President of a State D.A.R.E. Officer's Association and current liaison between local law enforcement agencies and the local schools where D.A.R.E. is taught, I have first hand experience with the leadership of and cooperation with other people. My training and experience give me an insight that I feel would be a valuable asset to the N.D.O.A. Board. I understand what it means to make a commitment to others. We commit ourselves every day to the children we teach. I make the commitment to you that I will give you my very best effort in the office of First Vice President of the N.D.O.A. I will serve you with honesty and integrity and pledge to keep your interests in the forefront of my efforts. I would sincerely appreciate your support and vote.

Buddy Harlan
Maury County Tennessee Sheriff's Department

---

I have been a police officer for sixteen years. The past six years, I have been serving as a full time D.A.R.E. instructor. I have served on various boards and committees to assist in the growth and development of the D.A.R.E. program.

I realize I could not accomplish many of the things I have without a great support system. This includes my fellow D.A.R.E. officers and educators, over 6,000 D.A.R.E. graduates, and most importantly, my wife of 11 years as well as my two sons Jacob, 7 and Eric, 4.

My goal is to strengthen this board and build upon the accomplishments of previous national boards.

If elected to the NDOA board, I will bring with me my commitment and experience as a full time D.A.R.E. instructor. Thus I will be making decisions that directly affect me.

Please, take the time to vote. I thank you for your support.

David Landman
D.A.R.E. Instructor
San Diego Police Department

SECRETARY:

The office of secretary is a position that requires communication and organizational skills. It is vital that it be filled by someone willing to take responsibility and work diligently to help shape the future of our association. I am ready to do this because D.A.R.E. is a cause I believe in.

In addition to elementary training, I am trained in the parent and senior high programs and serve as a mentor on the Southeastern Regional Training Staff. I have served at the state level as president and executive committee member to the national association.

I believe that my work ethic, extensive involvement in D.A.R.E. and my firm belief in what D.A.R.E. stands for qualify me for the office of secretary. I don't however take your vote for granted and I ask for your support.

Kelly Rosser
D.A.R.E. Officer
Cumberland County Sheriffs Department
Fayetteville, North Carolina

My name is Lyndall Cole, and I am a Sergeant with the Tulsa County Sheriff's Office, Tulsa, Oklahoma. I am the current supervisor of our office's D.A.R.E. program.

I established the D.A.R.E. program in our department. I have supervised the expansion of our program from 300 students in 5 schools to the current 5,600 students in 32 schools.

I have worked in D.A.R.E. for five years. I am trained in the elementary, junior and senior high curriculums. I am also a trained mentor.

I have served on the Oklahoma D.A.R.E. Officer's Association Board for four years, three years as secretary and one year as president. I am the current state president.

I am a candidate for the N.D.O.A. secretary's position. I am qualified and capable to do the job of secretary for the N.D.O.A.

D.A.R.E. Instructor
Tulsa, Oklahoma

SERGEANT AT ARMS

"It is not the Critic who counts; not the man who points out how the strong man stumbles, or where the doer of deeds could have done them better.

The credit belongs to the man who is actually in the ARENA, whose face is marred by dust and sweat and blood; who strives valiantly; who errs, and comes short again and again; who at the best knows in the end the triumphs of high achievement and who at the worst if he fails, at least fails while DARE'ing greatly.

So that his place shall never be with those cold and timid souls who know neither victory nor defeat (the critics)" -Theodore Roosevelt

My pledge to you, if elected, is to Never get out of the ARENA. I promise you, I will work every day to support you, the local DARE officer, to continue changing the world -- one child at a time!

Fellow members of the N.D.O.A.:

Member/n.:1. one of a group 2. part of a whole. Each of us is one of a group. our state. As the N.D.O.A., we are part of a whole, across the U.S. and the world!

Our biggest challenge is maintaining strong communication, because the number of D.A.R.E. officers is growing rapidly! We each took our own unique path to D.A.R.E. Mine has included being President of F.O.P. Lodge #118, Conference Co-Chairman for the Ohio Crime Prevention Association, current President of the 450 member D.A.R.E. Association of Ohio and a five year member of the N.D.O.A. I was also named 1995 Ohio D.A.R.E. Officer of the year.

Yes, each of us is one of a group, but D.A.R.E.'s success will always be feeling like we're part of a whole! August 11th, my term as President of the D.A.O. expires and I welcome the privilege to serve our N.D.O.A. membership as your Sgt.-At-Arms!

N.D.O.A. Board of Directors and Utah D.A.R.E. Officers

We are proud to be called Kiddie Cop
Because we think we are on top
Just call us Kiddie Patrol
And watch us do the D.A.R.E. stroll
We are the proud and we care,
We have a great message to share
For we give hope for those out there
Who need love and a life to share.

We're not teachers as it seems
We are cops with a dream
A dream to help stop the misery
A very just dream, don't you agree?
For those who think we're not tough
Just remember, we have the right stuff!

Life... through a child's eyes
Is not like it used to be
All the things going on in the world
All the unpleasant things they see
Making decisions that make them
Feel sad and alone
Making a choice... a choice of their own
Not knowing the difference...
And how much they may lose
Let's help them along
And show them we care
Help them say no...
Help them through D.A.R.E.

Humpty Dumpty sat on the wall
He smokes so much crack he had a great fall
All the king's horses and all the king's men
We're so badly stoned, there was no one to send
And there out of nowhere
Came an officer who cared
Who taught the whole town
The concepts of D.A.R.E.
He taught them 8 ways on how to say no
So the people could tell the crack heads
Where to go
All the dealers and dirt-bags had to leave town
Because the kids no longer wanted
The drugs around
Now all the straight horses
And all the straight men
Went to help Humpty to start all over again
And the moral to this story is someone did care
And will help keep this town awake and aware.

D.A.R.E. Officers are a special breed
Daring to teach children who are truly in need
Sharing their lessons so kids can know
That drugs are just not the way to go
D.A.R.E. Officers help people understand
That they can't sit by and let drugs take command
They love their children and the kids know they care
And that's why they teach and are committed to D.A.R.E.
Officers are known as the best Quality, integrity... simply a cut above the rest
This week we've come from far and wide
To dedicate our minds to this cause with pride
D.A.R.E. is the topic we've come to learn
So we can share about drugs is our main concern
We are here to let everyone know
That kids with drugs need to learn to say NO.

Minute No. 295

September 19, 1996
Ciudad Juárez, Chihuahua

RECOMMENDATIONS TO INCORPORATE INTO COMMISSION MINUTE NO 273, THE PROJECT PROPOSED BY THE STATE OF SONORA FOR CONVEYANCE AND TREATMENT OF NACO, SONORA SEWAGE CERTIFIED BY THE BECC ON APRIL 30, 1996

The Commission met at 2:00 p.m. on September 19, 1996 in the headquarters offices of the Mexican Section in Ciudad Juárez, Chihuahua to consider incorporating into International Boundary and Water Commission (IBWC) Minute No. 273, signed on March 19, 1987, the plans proposed by the State of Sonora and the Municipality of Naco to improve the wastewater sewage collection and treatment system that was constructed in 1987 by the State of Sonora pursuant to Minute No. 273.

The Commissioners referred to the obligation incurred by the Governments of the United States and Mexico in Article 3 of the 1944 Water Treaty to provide preferential attention to the solution of border sanitation problems and the implementation of this obligation through the IBWC by virtue of IBWC Minute No. 261, signed September 24, 1979, and applied for the case of Naco, Sonora in IBWC Minute No. 273. The Commissioners also referred to the United States - Mexico Agreement Establishing the Border Environment Cooperation Commission (BECC) and the North American Development Bank (NADBank) signed in Washington on November 16, 1993 and in Mexico City on November 18, 1993. They observed that Part I, Article III, Section 6 of that agreement establishes that the IBWC and the BECC will support one another. Finally the Commissioners made note of the cooperation on border environmental matters carried by the United States Environmental Protection Agency (EPA) and the Mexican Secretariat of Environment Natural Resources and Fisheries (SEMARNAP) under the United States - Mexico Agreement for Protection of the Environment along the Border signed August 14, 1983.

The Commissioners then noted that the Board of Directors of the BECC on April 30, 1996 certified a project presented by the State of Sonora and the Municipality of Naco for the reconstruction and of the eastside wastewater conveyance and treatment system and improvements to the water supply system in Naco, Sonora. They observed that the project would result in abandonment of the westside wastewater conveyance and treatment system, along with the associated reuse operations, established in Minute 273, to be operated and maintained as a dual system along with the eastside conveyance and lagoon system. The systems were established to prevent the discharge of Naco, Sonora wastewaters into natural drains that cross the boundary to threaten the contamination of the Bisbee, Arizona wellfield.

The Commissioners reviewed the conceptual plans certified by the BECC. They observed that the operation and maintenance of the westside lagoon system in Naco, Sonora may be eliminated and yet continue to provide a solution the border sanitation problem with: a) the adequate reconstruction of the inflow collectors to the eastside lagoon system; b) the reconstruction of the eastside primary lagoons by dredging and reinforcing the embankments to provide treatment under standards in force in Mexico; c) the construction of a new pumping plant at that lagoon system to pump from those lagoons to storage lagoons; and d) the reconstruction and expansion of the existing eastside storage lagoons with the capacity and reuse arrangements necessary to ensure safe operating levels of these and the primary lagoons.

The Commissioners noted that under the leadership of the NADBank, a financial package has been developed to include a bank loan to the state of Sonora and the municipality of Naco and/or the operating agency to cover the total cost of the project. They also noted that the EPA is considering a grant contribution for the wastewater portion of the project up to an amount that would not be greater than the amount provided by Mexico of those required to complete the project.

Finally, both Commissioners established that in the context of a financial framework identified by the NADBank, the IBWC may provide to the NADBank, copies of reports as it may prepare for the two governments, in execution of Resolution 7 of Minute 273, to provide an opportunity for the NADBank to channel the grant funds, held in trust by the bank, through the IBWC so as to verify that the technical aspects of the project design and construction are such that the project continues to provide solution to this border sanitation problem.

Based on the above considerations, the Commission then adopted the following resolutions, subject to the approval of the two Governments:

1. Minute No. 273 is amended in Resolutions Nos. 1 and 2 with the following Resolution 1: The operation and maintenance of the westside lagoon system may be eliminated upon the following actions: a) the adequate reconstruction of the inflow collectors to the eastside lagoon system; b) the reconstruction of the eastside primary lagoons by dredging and reinforcing the embankments to provide treatment under standards in force in Mexico, c) the construction of a new pumping plant at that lagoon system to pump from those lagoons to storage lagoons; and d) the reconstruction and expansion of the existing eastside storage lagoons with the capacity and reuse arrangements necessary to ensure safe operating levels of these and the primary lagoons. Mexico will operate the system in a manner that will prevent the uncontrolled discharge of wastewaters across the international boundary in the Naco, Arizona - Naco, Sonora area, including those measured described above.

2. Recommendations Nos. 3- 9 of Minute No. 273 remain in force.

3. The IBWC, in execution of Resolution No. 7 of Minute 273 may provide to the NADBank, copies of reports as it may prepare for the two governments to provide an opportunity to the NADBank to channel the grant funds held in trust for execution of the project, through the IBWC so as to verify that the technical aspects of the project design and construction are such that the project continues to provide the solution to this border sanitation problem.

4. This Minute is subject to the specific approval of the two Governments.

The meeting adjourned.

VISIT TO THE UNITED STATES

VICE CHAIRMAN OF THE CENTRAL MILITARY COMMISSION, STATE COUNCILOR, AND MINISTER OF NATIONAL DEFENSE OF THE PEOPLE'S REPUBLIC OF CHINA, GENERAL CHI HAOTIAN DEPARTED THE UNITED STATES EARLIER TODAY, HAVING COMPLETED A 14-DAY VISIT THAT INCLUDED STOPS IN NEW YORK CITY AND WASHINGTON, D.C., AS WELL AS U.S. MILITARY FACILITIES IN NEW YORK, VIRGINIA, ALABAMA, TEXAS, NEW MEXICO, ARIZONA AND HAWAII. GENERAL CHI WAS ACCOMPANIED BY A DELEGATION CONSISTING OF SENIOR MILITARY LEADERS FROM THE PEOPLE'S LIBERATION ARMY GENERAL STAFF AND LOGISTICS DEPARTMENTS, NAVY, AIR FORCE, AND STRATEGIC ROCKET FORCES, AS WELL AS THE COMMANDER OF THE GUANGZHOU MILITARY REGION COMMAND, AND A REPRESENTATIVE OF THE MINISTRY OF FOREIGN AFFAIRS.

GENERAL CHI TRAVELED TO THE UNITED STATES AT THE INVITATION OF HIS COUNTERPART, SECRETARY OF DEFENSE WILLIAM J. PERRY, WHO VISITED THE PEOPLE'S REPUBLIC OF CHINA IN OCTOBER OF 1994.

GENERAL CHI'S VISIT WAS SUCCESSFUL IN FURTHERING U.S.-CHINA RELATIONS IN GENERAL AND MILITARY-TO-MILITARY RELATIONS IN PARTICULAR, BOTH OF WHICH ARE OF GREAT IMPORTANCE TO THE LONG-TERM POLITICAL, MILITARY, AND ECONOMIC INTERESTS OF THE UNITED STATES.

BUILDING ON THE RECENT DIALOG ESTABLISHED BY SECRETARY OF STATE WARREN M. CHRISTOPHER'S NOVEMBER TRIP TO BEIJING AND THE MEETING IN MANILA BETWEEN PRESIDENT CLINTON AND PRESIDENT JIANG ZEMIN, GENERAL CHI'S VISIT ALLOWED FOR FRANK DISCUSSION OF A WIDE RANGE OF ISSUES, INCLUDING

NONPROLIFERATION, MILITARY-TO-MILITARY RELATIONS, AND ASIA-PACIFIC REGIONAL SECURITY. THE UNITED STATES REITERATED ITS POSITION THAT FURTHER PROGRESS IN AREAS SUCH AS HUMAN RIGHTS AND FAIR TRADE PRACTICES ARE CRITICAL TO THE DEVELOPMENT OF A FULL BILATERAL RELATIONSHIP. AT THE SAME TIME, THE SIDES AGREED ON THE NEED FOR CONTINUED DIALOG AND EMPHASIZED THE IMPORTANCE OF DEVELOPING A RELATIONSHIP IN WHICH AREAS OF AGREEMENT AND DISAGREEMENT CAN BE DISCUSSED IN AN OPEN AND FRANK MANNER.

REGARDING EFFORTS TO CURB THE SPREAD OF WEAPONS OF MASS DESTRUCTION AND THEIR MEANS OF DELIVERY, AS WELL AS DESTABILIZING CONVENTIONAL ARMS, THE UNITED STATES NOTED IT PARTICULAR CONCERN OVER DEVELOPMENTS IN THE PERSIAN GULF. CHINA WAS URGED NOT ONLY TO MAINTAIN AND EXPAND ITS COMMITMENTS TO NONPROLIFERATION REGIMES, BUT ALSO TO REFRAIN FROM DESTABILIZING WEAPONS SALES TO ROGUE STATES, SUCH AS IRAN.

THE TWO SIDES AFFIRMED THEIR SHARED INTEREST IN A PEACEFUL RESOLUTION OF THE TAIWAN ISSUE. THE UNITED STATES EMPHASIZED THAT OUR INTEREST IS IN MAINTAINING

PEACE AND STABILITY IN THE ASIA-PACIFIC REGION. WITH THAT GOAL IN MIND, THE UNITED STATES REITERATED ITS COMMITMENT TO A ONE CHINA POLICY IN ACCORDANCE WITH THE THREE JOINT COMMUNIQUES AND, AT THE SAME TIME, A STEADFAST COMMITMENT TO ALL U.S. OBLIGATIONS TO TAIWAN.

BOTH SIDES ALSO EXPRESSED THEIR SUPPORT FOR FURTHER EFFORTS TO PROMOTE STABILITY ON THE KOREAN PENINSULA --
UNCLASSIFIED

AN ISSUE WHICH HAS SIGNIFICANT, DIRECT INFLUENCE ON U.S. SECURITY INTERESTS. GENERAL CHI INDICATED THAT CHINA WOULD CONTINUE TO PLAY A CONSTRUCTIVE ROLE, WORKING TO MAINTAIN A NUCLEAR-FREE KOREAN PENINSULA AND ENCOURAGING A CONSTRUCTIVE DIALOG BETWEEN THE REPUBLIC OF KOREA AND THE DEMOCRATIC PEOPLE'S REPUBLIC OF KOREA. THE UNITED STATES REITERATED ITS SUPPORT FOR THE FOUR-PARTY PROCESS AS A MEANS TO BRING ABOUT THIS DIALOG.

REGARDING THE U.S.-JAPAN SECURITY RELATIONSHIP, THE UNITED STATES EXPLAINED THAT IT SERVES AS ONE OF THE PILLARS OF A SECURITY STRATEGY WHICH BENEFITS ALL OF THE NATIONS WITHIN THE ASIA-PACIFIC REGION, INCLUDING CHINA.

THE UNITED STATES CURRENTLY HAS APPROXIMATELY 100,000 TROOPS DEPLOYED IN THE ASIA-PACIFIC REGION. CONTACT BETWEEN THESE TROOPS AND CHINESE MILITARY FORCES IS INCREASINGLY COMMON. IN ORDER TO ENHANCE MUTUAL UNDERSTANDING AND OPERATIONAL SAFETY, SECRETARY PERRY SUGGESTED THAT OUR TWO COUNTRIES CONSIDER A MILITARY MARITIME COOPERATIVE AGREEMENT, AND GENERAL CHI EXTENDED AN INVITATION FOR A U.S. BRIEFING TEAM TO VISIT CHINA IN EARLY 1997 TO EXPLAIN THE PROPOSED DRAFT.

DURING GENERAL CHI'S VISIT TO WASHINGTON, D.C., THE TWO SIDES ALSO CAME TO AGREEMENT ON A NUMBER OF SPECIFIC INITIATIVES DESIGNED TO ENHANCE THE U.S.-PRC BILATERAL MILITARY RELATIONSHIP AND ALSO, FROM THE U.S. PERSPECTIVE, TO STRENGTHEN THE U.S. ABILITY TO PROTECT OUR SECURITY INTERESTS IN THE ASIA-PACIFIC REGION.

FIRST, CHINA AGREED IN PRINCIPLE TO CONTINUED U.S. PORT CALLS TO HONG KONG AFTER JULY 1, 1997, WHEN HONG KONG REVERTS TO PRC SOVEREIGNTY. A U.S. BRIEFING TEAM WILL TRAVEL TO BEIJING IN EARLY 1997 TO DISCUSS RELEVANT PROCEDURES.

SECOND, BOTH SIDES AGREED THAT A CHINESE NAVY SHIP WILL VISIT HAWAII AND THE WEST COAST OF THE UNITED STATES IN SPRING 1997, TO BE FOLLOWED BY U.S. NAVY SHIP VISITS TO THE PEOPLE'S REPUBLIC OF CHINA.

THIRD, THE TWO SIDES AGREED TO INSTITUTIONALIZE BILATERAL DEFENSE CONSULTATIVE TALKS, THE FIRST OF WHICH IS EXPECTED TO TAKE PLACE IN WASHINGTON, D.C. IN FALL 1997, AND BE HOSTED BY THE UNDER SECRETARY OF DEFENSE FOR POLICY. THESE TALKS WILL INCLUDE AN EXCHANGE OF VIEWS ON GLOBAL AND REGIONAL SECURITY ISSUES; RECIPROCAL BRIEFINGS ON MILITARY TOPICS; AND A DISCUSSION OF FUTURE BILATERAL MILITARY ACTIVITIES. THE TALKS ARE INTENDED TO INCREASE MUTUAL UNDERSTANDING AND TRANSPARENCY -- BOTH OF WHICH ARE IMPORTANT FACTORS IN THE MAINTENANCE OF PEACE AND STABILITY IN THE ASIA-PACIFIC REGION.

FOURTH, THE TWO SIDES AGREED TO SEVERAL VISITS OF SENIOR-LEVEL U.S. AND CHINESE MILITARY LEADERS IN THE FIRST HALF OF 1997. SUCH HIGH-LEVEL CONTACTS, SCHEDULED AT APPROPRIATE INTERVALS, WILL ALLOW BOTH SIDES TO ADVANCE THE CONFIDENCE BUILDING MEASURES INITIATED DURING THIS VISIT AND WILL HELP TO REGULARIZE A HIGH-LEVEL DIALOG WHICH IS CRITICAL NOT ONLY FOR POSITIVE MILITARY

RELATIONS, BUT EQUALLY IMPORTANT DURING PERIODS OF TENSION.

DURING HIS MEETINGS WITH THE SECRETARY OF DEFENSE AT THE PENTAGON, GENERAL CHI GAVE SECRETARY PERRY DOG TAGS FROM THE CREW OF A WORLD WAR II B-24 BOMBER THAT CRASHED IN SOUTHERN CHINA. THE UNITED STATES EXPRESSED APPRECIATION FOR THIS GESTURE, A REMINDER OF THE COOPERATION BETWEEN OUR TWO COUNTRIES IN THE PAST, AND CALLED FOR CONTINUED COOPERATION IN RESOLVING THE CASES OF AMERICANS MISSING IN ACTION. THE TWO SIDES AGREED THAT A U.S. TEAM WILL TRAVEL TO BEIJING IN THE NEAR FUTURE TO ACCEPT REMAINS FOR REPATRIATION. A SECOND U.S. TEAM WILL TRAVEL WITH CHINESE COUNTERPARTS TO THE CRASH SITE IN EARLY 1997 TO STUDY THE SITE AND RECOVER ANY ADDITIONAL REMAINS.

DURING VISITS TO MILITARY BASES, THE CHINESE DELEGATION OBTAINED A FIRST-HAND VIEW OF AMERICAN MILITARY CAPABILITIES AND GAINED AN APPRECIATION FOR THE PHYSICAL, INTELLECTUAL AND MORAL STRENGTH OF OUR MEN AND WOMEN IN UNIFORM. GENERAL CHI AND HIS COLLEAGUES ALSO HAD AN OPPORTUNITY TO LEARN ABOUT THE AMERICAN PEOPLE AND OUR VALUES -- VALUES WHICH SERVE AS THE FOUNDATION FOR OUR NATION'S MILITARY STRENGTH AS WELL AS THAT WHICH OUR ARMED FORCES SERVE AND PROTECT.

THE VISIT OF GENERAL CHI LARGELY SUCCEEDED IN MEETING THE OBJECTIVES SET FORTH PRIOR TO THE TRIP. AS A RESULT OF THE VISIT, THE UNITED STATES AND THE PEOPLE'S REPUBLIC OF CHINA HAVE ENHANCED MILITARY-TO-MILITARY DIALOG AS WELL AS THE OVERALL BILATERAL RELATIONSHIP. WE HAVE TAKEN THE FIRST STEP TOWARDS DEVELOPING CONCRETE CONFIDENCE

BUILDING MEASURES BETWEEN OUR MILITARIES, A REGULAR DEFENSE DIALOG BETWEEN OUR LEADERS, AND EXPANDING OUR AREAS OF COOPERATION. IN DOING SO, THE UNITED STATES IS SERVING ITS OWN POLITICAL, ECONOMIC AND SECURITY INTERESTS. MOREOVER, THE UNITED STATES IS ALSO SERVING

THE BROAD INTERESTS OF OUR FRIENDS AND ALLIES IN THE ASIA-PACIFIC REGION WHO WIDELY SUPPORT A SINO-AMERICAN DEFENSE DIALOG AS CRITICAL TO ENSURING THEIR OWN SECURITY.

SOFTWARE?

A. AS THE PRESIDENT RECENTLY SAID, ENCRYPTION TECHNOLOGY WHEN USED OUTSIDE THE UNITED STATES HAS CRITICAL IMPLICATIONS FOR FOREIGN POLICY AND NATIONAL SECURITY INTERESTS, AND FOR THIS REASON ITS EXPORT HAS BEEN CONTROLLED.

-- WHEN USED BY INTERNATIONAL CRIMINAL ORGANIZATIONS SUCH PRODUCTS CAN ALSO THREATEN THE SAFETY OF U.S. CITIZENS HERE AND ABROAD AS WELL AS THE SAFETY OF CITIZENS OF OTHER COUNTRIES.

-- IT IS FOR THESE REASONS THAT THE U.S. GOVERNMENT HAS LONG MAINTAINED EXPORT CONTROLS ON ENCRYPTION TECHNOLOGY.

-- WITH RESPECT TO THE LITIGATION IN THE BERNSTEIN CASE NOW BEFORE THE COURTS, I WOULD DEFER TO THE JUSTICE DEPARTMENT REGARDING ANY COMMENT.

EMBASSY TEAM CONCLUDED THAT IT IS TOO EARLY TO ASSESS WITH CERTAINTY, BUT, IF THIS APPEARS TO BE THE CASE IN THE FUTURE, WE MAY NEED TO UNDERLINE TO SENIOR GOM OFFICIALS OUR VIEW THAT PURSUING THE MAJOR TARGETS IS THE MOST EFFECTIVE WAY TO COMBAT DRUG TRAFFICKING THROUGH MEXICO. END SUMMARY

4. (U) IN COMMENTS TO THE PRESS JANUARY 25, INCD COMMISSIONER GENERAL GUTIERREZ REBOLLO SAID THAT SMALLER DRUG TRAFFICKING GROUPS HAD MUSHROOMED WHILE AUTHORITIES HAVE CONCENTRATED ON CATCHING KINGPINS. GUTIERREZ SAID THAT THE NEW SMALLER CARTELS IN SOME CASES "SHIP TONS RATHER THAN KILOS" AND THEIR COMBINED TRAFFIC COULD BE ALMOST AS LARGE AS THAT OF THE JUAREZ CARTEL. HE ADDED THAT THE PGR HAD TO DISMEMBER THE BIG CARTELS AND STOP THE SMALL TRAFFICKING ORGANIZATIONS FROM GROWING.

5. (U) GUTIERREZ DECLINED TO DISCUSS SPECIFIC ORGANIZATIONS, BUT "REFORMA," A LEADING MEXICO CITY DAILY, PUBLISHED A TWO-PAGE ARTICLE THE FOLLOWING DAY REGARDING THE REYNOSO FAMILY AND ITS GROWING INFLUENCE. FAMILY HEAD JOSE REYNOSO IS IMPRISONED IN THE U.S. AND HIS THREE BROTHERS ARE HIDING IN MEXICO. U.S. WARRANTS ARE OUTSTANDING FOR ALL THREE, BUT THERE IS NO [redacted]

[redacted]

ACTIVE INVESTIGATION OF THE FAMILY IN MEXICO. ACCORDING TO "REFORMA," THE REYNOSO FAMILY LAUNDERS MONEY FOR BOTH THE JUAREZ AND TIJUANA CARTELS THROUGH THE EXTENSIVE NETWORK OF REYNOSO FAMILY BUSINESSES ON BOTH SIDES OF THE BORDER.

6. (C) SOME OF THE INFORMATION IN THE "REFORMA" ARTICLES WAS ATTRIBUTED TO PGR CONFIDENTIAL DOCUMENTS AND TO A JUSTICE DEPARTMENT CASE FILE. DEA AND A SPECIAL PGR UNIT CONDUCTED AN EXTENSIVE INVESTIGATION INTO THE REYNOSO FAMILY IN 1995.

THE RESULTS OF THE INVESTIGATION WERE TURNED OVER TO THE PGR IN SEPTEMBER 1995, BUT THE CASE WAS NOT FURTHER PURSUED. THE FILES WHICH ARE NOW IN "REFORMA'S" POSSESSION ARE PROBABLY FROM THAT INVESTIGATION.

WHO ARE THE SMALLER GROUPS?

7. (U) THESE SMALLER GROUPS HAVE BEEN ACTIVE FOR A LONG TIME AND BOTH USG AND GOM RESOURCES ARE

SUBJECT: THE EMERGENCE OF MINOR DRUG TRAFFICKING CARTELS

LREADY DEVOTED TO COMBATTING THEM. THEY ARE ROUTINELY USED BY THE MAJOR TRAFFICKING ORGANIZATIONS FOR TRANSPORTATION, STORAGE, PREPARATION OF CONCEALMENT VEHICLES, CROSS BORDER SMUGGLING, RECRUITMENT OF NEW ELEMENTS AND SECURITY.

8. (C) THE GROUPS OFTEN MOVE DRUGS NOT ONLY FOR THE MAJOR CARTELS BUT ALSO FOR THEMSELVES, A PRACTICE THAT BEGAN SEVERAL YEARS AGO WHEN THE COLOMBIAN CARTELS BEGAN TO PAY MEXICAN SMUGGLERS WITH COCAINE RATHER THAN CASH FOR THE COSTS OF TRANSPORTATION. HOWEVER, THE SMALLER GROUPS DO NOT HAVE THE NECESSARY INFRASTRUCTURE AND RESOURCES TO SAFELY GUARANTEE DELIVERY OF LARGE COCAINE SHIPMENTS. A SMALL ORGANIZATION MAY ROUTINELY SMUGGLE SEVERAL HUNDRED KILOS OF

COCAINE, BUT SELDOM ACCEPTS RESPONSIBILITY FOR MULTI-TON LOADS.

9. (C) AS THE MAJOR CARTELS EVOLVE AND SEEK TO ISOLATE THEIR CORE ELEMENT FROM DAY-TO-DAY OPERATIONS, MORE SMALLER GROUPS ARE EMPLOYED. THIS "FRANCHISING" PRACTICE INCREASES THE POWER OF THE CORE ELEMENT, PROVIDES A BASIS OF DENIAL, AND ALLOWS THE DEVELOPMENT OF LEGITIMATIZATION OF THE ILLEGAL PROCEEDS.

CONCLUSIONS

10. (C) THESE SMALL GROUPS DO EXIST, BUT THEY

ARE NOT A NEW PHENOMENON, AND USG AND GOM RESOURCES ARE ALREADY BEING DEVOTED TO THEIR PURSUIT. MANY OF THEM ARE CURRENTLY OBJECTS OF ACTIVE INVESTIGATION BY POST LAW ENFORCEMENT AGENCIES.

3. TRAVELING WITH THE SECRETARY ON THE INTERNET

THE STATE DEPARTMENT IS LAUNCHING AN UNPRECEDENTED INTERNET PROGRAM CALLED "TRAVELING WITH THE SECRETARY."

COINCIDING WITH SECRETARY ALBRIGHT'S FIRST INTERNATIONAL TRIP AS SECRETARY OF STATE, "TRAVELING WITH THE SECRETARY" IS AN EXCITING NEW FEATURE OF THE STATE DEPARTMENT WEB PAGE LOCATED AT HTTP://SECRETARY.STATE.GOV.

"TRAVELING WITH THE SECRETARY" WILL FEATURE UPDATES ON SECRETARY ALBRIGHT TRAVELS, INCLUDING HER MEETING SCHEDULE, HER PUBLIC REMARKS AND STATEMENTS, AND INFORMATION ON OTHER ACTIVITIES IN WHICH SHE IS PARTICIPATING.

THE MAIN ATTRACTION OF "TRAVELING WITH THE SECRETARY"

WILL BE AN INTERNATIONAL, INTERACTIVE, TOWN HALL MEETING LIVE ON THE INTERNET FROM MOSCOW, RUSSIA ON THURSDAY, FEBRUARY 20 (10:30PM LOCAL TIME; 2:30PM EST). THIS INTERACTIVE TOWN HALL, THE FIRST OF ITS KIND BY A SECRETARY OF STATE, WILL LINK SECRETARY ALBRIGHT WITH APPROXIMATELY 3,000 SCHOOLS IN 47 COUNTRIES AND ALL 50 STATES ON THE GLOBE EDUCATION NETWORK. THE SECRETARY WILL DISCUSS THE IMPORTANCE OF US FOREIGN POLICY AND RESPOND TO QUESTIONS FROM THE STUDENTS ABOUT HER TRIP.

GLOBE (GLOBAL LEARNING AND OBSERVATIONS TO BENEFIT THE ENVIRONMENT) IS AN INTERNATIONAL EDUCATION AND SCIENCE PARTNERHSIP THAT JOINS STUDENTS, EDUCATORS, AND SCIENTISTS FROM AROUND THE WORLD IN AN EFFORT TO INCREASE AWARENESS AND UNDERSTANDING. THE PROGRAM IS A US GOVERNMENT INITIATIVE BEGUN BY VICE PRESIDENT AL GORE IN 1994 AND ADMINISTERED BY NASA, NSF, EPA AND NOAA WITH ASSISTANCE FROM THE DEPARTMENTS OF EDUCATION AND STATE. SECRETARY ALBRIGHT'S TOWN HALL CAN BE VIEWED BY MEMBERS OF THE MEDIA AND THE GENERAL PUBLIC AT HTTP://GLOBE.FSL.NOAA.GOV OR VIA A LINK FROM THE "TRAVELING WITH THE SECRETARY" WEB PAGE AT HTTP://WWW.STATE.GOV.

"TRAVELING WITH THE SECRETARY," INCLUDING SECRETARY'S ALBRIGHT'S PARTICIPATION IN THE INTERNET TOWN HALL, IS THE LATEST EFFORT BY THE SECRETARY TO MAKE FOREIGN POLICY

MORE ACCESSIBLE TO THE AMERICAN PEOPLE AND TO MORE ACTIVELY COMMUNICATE THE PRIORITIES OF THE CLINTON ADMINISTRATION ON THE NEW MEDIUMS OF THE 21ST CENTURY. TOWARDS THIS END, THE SECRETARY HAS FOR THE FIRST TIME

Q: DOES THE STATE DEPARTMENT HAVE A COMMENT ON THE JUSTICE DEPARTMENT INVESTIGATION INTO THE ROLE OF THE CHINESE EMBASSY IN DIRECTING IMPROPER POLITICAL CONTRIBUTIONS TO THE DEMOCRATIC NATIONAL COMMITTEE?

A: I HAVE NO COMMENT ON THAT REPORT AND WOULD REFER YOU TO THE DEPARTMENT OF JUSTICE.

6. THE FOLLOWING GUIDANCE, PREPARED ON 2/13/97, WAS USED AS THE BASIS FOR COMMENTS BY SPOKESMAN NICHOLAS BURNS AT THAT DAY'S PRESS BRIEFING. POSTS MAY DRAW FROM THIS GUIDANCE ON AN IF ASKED BASIS.

7. VIETNAM -- JAMMING OF RADIO FREE ASIA

Q: WHAT IS YOUR REACTION TO VIETNAM'S ANNOUNCEMENT THAT THEY WILL JAM RADIO FREE ASIA BECAUSE IT INTERFERES IN VIETNAM'S INTERNAL AFFAIRS?

A: THIS IS AN UNFORTUNATE DECISION. THE USG OPPOSES JAMMING OF INTERNATIONAL RADIO BROADCASTS AS AN INFRINGEMENT ON FREEDOM OF THE PRESS AND FREE FLOW OF INFORMATION.

WE ALSO REJECT VIETNAM'S CRITICISM THAT RFA, OR ANY OTHER INTERNATIONAL MEDIA FOR THAT MATTER, INTERFERES IN VIETNAM'S INTERNAL AFFAIRS. IT IS OUR VIEW THAT THE FREE FLOW OF INFORMATION IS PART AND PARCEL OF THE INTERNATIONALLY RECOGNIZED HUMAN RIGHTS OF FREE SPEECH AND FREE EXPRESSION. WE BELIEVE THAT GOVERNMENTAL ATTEMPTS TO CENSOR OR BLOCK ACCESS TO THE MEDIA ARE

CONTRARY TO SUCH RIGHTS AND TO THE INTERESTS OF PEOPLE NEEDING ACCESS TO INFORMATION.

NOTE TO THE BRIEFER:

ARTICLE 19 OF THE UNIVERSAL DECLARATION OF HUMAN RIGHTS SAYS: "EVERYONE HAS THE RIGHT TO FREEDOM OF OPINION AND EXPRESSION; THIS RIGHT INCLUDES FREEDOM TO HOLD OPINIONS WITHOUT INTERFERENCE AND TO SEE, RECEIVE AND IMPART INFORMATION AND IDEAS THROUGH ANY MEDIA AND REGARDLESS OF FRONTIERS."

THE UNITED STATES BELIEVES THAT JAMMING OUTSIDE OF WARTIME GENERALLY IS ILLEGAL AND A VIOLATION OF INTERNATIONAL TELECOMMUNICATION LAW (SPECIFICALLY UNDER ARTICLE 35(1) (REGARDING HARMFUL INTERFERENCE) OF THE INTERNATIONAL TELECOMMUNICATION UNION'S 1982 NAIROBI CONVENTION (TO WHICH THE U.S. AND VIETNAM ARE PARTIES). WE HAVE TAKEN THIS POSITION AT VARIOUS UN AND INTERNATIONAL TELECOMMUNICATION UNION CONFERENCES.

ROK EMBASSY IN BEIJING? WHAT WERE HIS REASONS FOR DEFECTING?

A: HWANG JANG-YOP ("WHANG JAHNG-YOHP") ASKED FOR ASYLUM AT THE ROK EMBASSY IN BEIJING ON WEDNESDAY. HWANG IS CHAIRMAN OF THE DPRK'S FOREIGN AF FAIRS COMMITTEE OF THE SUPREME PEOPLE'S ASSEMBLY AND A PARTY SECRETARY OF THE CENTRAL COMMITTEE OF THE WORKERS' PARTY OF THE DPRK (KWP).

WE DO NOT WISH TO DISCUSS OR SPECULATE ON MR. HWANG'S REASONS FOR DEFECTING.

Q: HAVE WE HAD ANY CONTACT WITH MR. HWANG SINCE HIS DEFECTION? DO WE EXPECT TO HAVE CONTACT?

A: WE ARE NOT AWARE OF ANY CONTACT WITH MR. HWANG, OR OF PLANS FOR SUCH CONTACT.

Q: HAVE WE BEEN IN TOUCH WITH THE CHINESE GOVERNMENT TO REQUEST THAT THEY PERMIT MR. HWANG TO LEAVE THE PRC FOR THE ROK?

A: NO.

Q: WHAT EFFECT DO YOU THINK THIS DEFECTION WILL HAVE ON THE JOINT BRIEFING OR ON OTHER NEGOTIATIONS WITH NORTH KOREA?

A: I CANNOT SPECULATE ABOUT THE IMPACT OF ANY DEFECTIONS. OUR OFFER FOR A JOINT BRIEFING REMAINS ON THE TABLE.

WE ARE CONSULTING WITH OUR ROK ALLIES TO LEARN MORE.

IF PRESSED:

US FORCES HAVE NOT CHANGED THEIR LEVEL OF ALERT. (I HAVE NOTHING FOR YOU ON THE STATUS OF ROK OR DPRK FORCES.)

11. NORTH KOREA -- FOOD AID

Q: HAVE WE MADE A DECISION YET ON OUR RESPONSE TO THE WORLD FOOD PROGRAM APPEAL FOR MORE FOOD AID FOR NORTH KOREA?

A: WE ARE GIVING URGENT AND SYMPATHETIC CONSIDERATION TO THE APPEAL FROM THE WORLD FOOD PROGRAM FOR EMERGENCY FOOD AID FOR NORTH KOREA.

AS SECRETARY ALBRIGHT TOLD THE HOUSE APPROPRIATIONS FOREIGN OPERATIONS SUBCOMMITTEE IN HER TESTIMONY YESTERDAY, THE DEVELOPMENTS ON THE KOREAN PENINSULA ARE VERY IMPORTANT TO US.

WE WILL MAKE OUR DECISION ON A HUMANITARIAN BASIS, KEEPING IN MIND THAT THE U.S. HAS A TRADITION OF AIDING PEOPLE IN NEED, NO MATTER WHAT DIFFERENCES WE MIGHT HAVE WITH THEIR POLITICAL SYSTEM.

12. JAPAN -- DEPLETED URANIUM

Q: WHEN DID THE DEPARTMENT OF STATE LEARN THAT THE U.S. MILITARY HAD FIRED DEPLETED URANIUM ROUNDS ON TORISHIMA IN OKINAWA?

A: U.S. FORCES, JAPAN (USFJ) NOTIFIED THE U.S. EMBASSY, TOKYO IN MARCH, 1996. THE EMBASSY INFORMED THE DEPARTMENT OF STATE SOON AFTER IT WAS NOTIFIED BY USFJ.

ISSUES SUCH AS THIS ARE NORMALLY HANDLED IN TOKYO BY USFJ AND THE EMBASSY.

USFJ AND THE EMBASSY DETERMINED THAT THIS TRAINING INCIDENT TOOK PLACE IN AN OFF-LIMITS, UNINHABITED TRAINING AREA ACCESSIBLE ONLY BY BOAT OR HELICOPTER. IT CAUSED NO HARM TO PEOPLE OR THE ENVIRONMENT. AT THE TIME, USFJ AND THE EMBASSY DID NOT INITIATE HOST COUNTRY NOTIFICATION.

13. PERU -- TALKS WITH MRTA

Q: CAN YOU TELL US A LITTLE ABOUT THE TALKS BETWEEN MRTA AND THE GOP ON TUESDAY?

A: A REPRESENTATIVE OF THE MRTA HOSTAGE TAKERS AND A PERUVIAN GOVERNMENT OFFICIAL MET FOR APPROXIMATELY FOUR HOURS WITH THE FOUR MEMBERS OF THE COMMISSION OF GUARANTORS ON TUESDAY (FEB. 11).

AT THE CONCLUSION OF THE MEETING, A STATEMENT WAS MADE INDICATING THAT BOTH SIDES HAD AGREED TO ADDITIONAL TALKS AT A DATE TO BE DETERMINED AND THAT THE MEETING HAD PRODUCED AGREEMENT ON THE PROCEDURES FOR SUCH FUTURE

DISCUSSIONS.

THE GOVERNMENT OF PERU WAS REPRESENTED BY EDUCATION MINISTER DOMINGO PALERMO, MRTA WAS REPRESENTED BY HOSTAGE TAKER ROLI ROJAS. THE COMMISSION OF GUARANTORS IS COMPOSED OF MICHAEL MINNIG OF THE RED CROSS, ARCHBISHOP LUIS CIPRIANI, CANADIAN AMBASSADOR ANTHONY VINCENT, AND JAPAN'S AMBASSADOR TO MEXICO, TERUSUKE TERADA.

Q: WHAT IS OUR POSITION ON THIS DIALOGUE?

A: THE GOVERNMENT OF THE UNITED STATES STRONGLY SUPPORTS PRESIDENT FUJIMORI'S EFFORTS TO ACHIEVE A PEACEFUL RESOLUTION OF THE CRISIS AND THE SAFE RELEASE OF ALL HOSTAGES.

WE APPLAUD THE WORK OF THE COMMISSION OF GUARANTORS AND ARE PLEASED THAT THESE PRELIMINARY TALKS HAVE TAKEN PLACE AND THAT BOTH SIDES HAVE AGREED TO HOLD ADDITIONAL DISCUSSIONS.

WE BELIEVE THAT THE DIALOGUE BEGUN TUESDAY IS USEFUL AND MAY LEAD TO A PEACEFUL SOLUTION TO THIS DIFFICULT SITUATION. WE ENCOURAGE THE PARTIES TO BUILD ON THESE CONVERSATIONS.

SUBJECT: AMBASSADOR'S MEETING WITH JUSTICE MINISTER MEJIA, JULY 8, 1997

REF: SAN SALVADOR 2744

1. DURING A JULY 8 MEETING, THE AMBASSADOR AND SALVADORAN JUSTICE MINISTER RUBEN MEJIA PENA DISCUSSED THE UPCOMING LAW ENFORCEMENT MINISTERIAL, EXTRADITION, MONEY LAUNDERING, AND THE CASE OF THE 1980 MURDERS OF FOUR AMERICAN CHURCHWOMEN.

LAW ENFORCEMENT MINISTERIAL

2. MEJIA SAID HE WOULD PARTICIPATE IN THE AUGUST 14 LAW ENFORCEMENT SUMMIT FOLLOW-UP MINISTERIAL MEETING. (COMMENT: PUBLIC SECURITY MINISTER HUGO BARRERA HAS ALSO SAID HE WILL ATTEND; WE HAVE NOT YET RECEIVED WORD FROM ATTORNEY GENERAL MANUEL CORDOVA CASTELLANOS. END COMMENT.) MEJIA COMMENTED THAT THE MEETING WOULD REPRESENT A VALUABLE OPPORTUNITY TO FOLLOW UP ON A RANGE OF ISSUES. MEJIA SAID HE WOULD STUDY THE CONCEPT PAPER, WHICH THE AMBASSADOR PASSED TO HIM. HE FURTHER SAID THAT HE LOOKED FORWARD TO THE PREPARATORY MEETING, WHICH, AS THE AMBASSADOR NOTED, WE ANTICIPATED WOULD BE HELD IN EL SALVADOR. (NOTE: SUBSEQUENTLY, THIS MEETING WAS SET FOR JULY 18 TO COINCIDE WITH A PREVIOUSLY SCHEDULED MEETING OF CENAM PUBLIC SECURITY MINISTERS.)

MONEY LAUNDERING

3. MEJIA SAID THAT ONE KEY ISSUE FOR THE AUGUST 14 MEETING WAS MONEY LAUNDERING, A PROBLEM WHICH REQUIRED CONCERTED ACTION BY THE INTERNATIONAL COMMUNITY TO DEVELOP EFFECTIVE LAWS. THE AMBASSADOR NOTED THAT WE SOUGHT TO ARRANGE A VISIT BY A MONEY LAUNDERING EXPERT, WHO COULD HELP DEVELOP LEGISLATION. MEJIA WELCOMED SUCH A VISIT.

EXTRADITION

4. MEJIA SAID HE WAS HAPPY TO NOTE THAT THE CONSTITUTIONAL REFORM WHICH WOULD PERMIT EXTRADITION OF A SALVADORAN NATIONAL HAD PASSED THE FIRST OF TWO STAGES OF LEGISLATIVE APPROVAL, AT THE END OF THE LAST LEGISLATURE. HE SAID HE THOUGHT IT WAS IMPORTANT TO WAIT FOR POLITICAL PASSIONS TO SUBSIDE BEFORE HOLDING A VOTE ON THE SECOND STAGE. (COMMENT: WHILE THE FIRST STAGE REQUIRED THE APPROVAL ONLY OF A SIMPLE MAJORITY, THE SECOND STAGE REQUIRES A TWO-THIRDS MAJORITY; IN AN ASSEMBLY IN WHICH THE LARGEST PARTY HOLDS ONLY ONE THIRD OF THE LEGISLATIVE SEATS, THIS WILL ENTAIL A GOOD DEAL OF NEGOTIATION. END COMMENT.)

5. THE AMBASSADOR SAID THAT EXTRADITION WAS A HIGH PRIORITY FOR THE UNITED STATES THROUGHOUT THE HEMISPHERE. SHE RECOUNTED DISCUSSIONS ON THE ISSUE WITH MEXICO, IN WHICH THE CASE OF ONE PARTICULARLY HEINOUS CRIME DEMONSTRATED THE NEED FOR AN EFFECTIVE EXTRADITION PROVISION. WE WOULD BE PREPARED TO PROVIDE SIMILAR EXAMPLES IN THE CASE OF SALVADORAN FUGITIVES. MEJIA NOTED THAT PRESIDENT CALDERON SOL WAS CLEAR ON THE MATTER, AND WOULD LEAD THE EFFORT.

THE AMBASSADOR'S ASSISTANCE IN ASKING THE SALVADORAN GOVERNMENT WHETHER THE FAMILIES OF THE VICTIMS COULD SEND A REPRESENTATIVE TO MEET WITH THE CONVICTED GUARDSMEN, IN AN EFFORT TO LEARN MORE ABOUT WHO MAY HAVE DIRECTED THE KILLINGS. THE AMBASSADOR SAID THAT, IF THE GOES AGREED, THE EMBASSY WOULD FIRST SEND AN EMBASSY OFFICER TO ASK THE PRISONERS WHETHER THEY WOULD AGREE TO MEET WITH THE REPRESENTATIVE OF THE FAMILIES. THE EMBASSY WOULD NOT DISCUSS THE CASE WITH THE IMPRISONED GUARDSMEN: THE EMBASSY'S SOLE ROLE WOULD BE TO ASK WHETHER THE PRISONERS WOULD BE WILLING TO RECEIVE A REPRESENTATIVE FROM THE FAMILIES.

7. MEJIA SAID THAT HE WOULD CERTAINLY STUDY THE REQUEST. HE NOTED THAT THE PRISONERS HAD A HISTORY OF BEING DIFFICULT, OWING, PERHAPS TO WHAT MEJIA CALLED THEIR INCORRECT VIEW THAT THEY SHOULD HAVE BEEN INCLUDED IN THE POST-WAR AMNESTY. THEY HAD THEREFORE FOMENTED DISTURBANCES, AND WERE CONSIDERED PARTICULAR PROBLEMS FOR THE PRISON SYSTEM. THAT SAID, HE REPEATED, HE WOULD CONSULT ON THE ISSUE.

MEMORANDUM OF UNDERSTANDING BETWEEN THE UNITED STATES NATIONAL AERONAUTICS AND SPACE ADMINISTRATION
AND
THE DEUTSCHE AGENTUR FÜR RAUMFAHRTANGELEGENHEITEN
SUPPLEMENTING AND AMENDING THE MEMORANDUM OF UNDERSTANDING OF OCTOBER 6, 1987, FOR COOPERATIVE FLIGHTS OF THE SPACEBORNE IMAGING RADAR (SIR)
WITH THE X-BAND SYNTHETIC APERTURE RADAR (X-SAR)

04-707

The United States National Aeronautics and Space Administration (NASA) and the Deutsche Agentur für Raumfahrtangelegenheiten (DARA),

Having cooperated pursuant to the Memorandum of Understanding for Cooperative Flights of the Spaceborne Imaging Radar (SIR) with the X-Band Synthetic Aperture Radar (X-SAR), signed at Bonn October 6, 1987 (the 1987 MOU), as amended by the exchange of letters of February 18 and March 25, 1994;

Noting that the 1994 amendment, inter alia, established DARA as the successor to the Federal Minister of Research and Technology of the Federal Republic of Germany in the implementation of the 1987 MOU;

Having decided to fly the X-SAR instrument for a third time on the Space Shuttle as part of the Shuttle Radar Topography Mission (SRTM); and,

Recognizing the need to supplement and amend the 1987 MOU to reflect the integration of the cooperation within the framework of SRTM;

HAVE AGREED AS FOLLOWS:

Article 1 - Purpose

NASA and DARA desire to extend their fruitful cooperation in the first two SIR-C/X-SAR missions in 1994, and in accordance with Article 2(1) of the 1987 MOU will add an X-SAR instrument flight on the Space Shuttle as part of the SRTM. SRTM will consist of the modified SIR-C and X-SAR instruments. Its primary objective will be to measure the topographic surface of the Earth. All provisions of the 1987 MOU shall remain in effect mutatis mutandis for SRTM unless modified by this MOU.

Article 2 - SRTM Description

For SRTM, the SIR-C and X-SAR instruments will each be modified with an additional antenna to be attached to a boom, and electronics hardware, to operate as interferometers. The SIR-C instrument will be capable of collecting near-global, contiguous SAR and Interferometric SAR (IFSAR) data covering all land areas between approximately 60° north and 54° south latitude which will be processed to generate terrain height data with approximately 16 meter absolute vertical accuracy at 1 second of arc latitude and longitude. The X-SAR Interferometer will provide non-contiguous data with approximately 12 meter absolute vertical accuracy.

Article 3 - Scientific and Technical Objectives of SRTM

The prime objective of SRTM is to provide the following Interferometric Terrain Height Data (ITHD) for all land areas between approximately 60° north and 54° south latitude:

- near-global, contiguous ITHD with 3 seconds of arc latitude and longitude (ITHD-1)
- near-global, contiguous ITHD with 1 second of arc latitude and longitude (ITHD-2)
- non-contiguous ITHD in up to 50 km wide swathes with 1 second of arc latitude and longitude (ITHD-2), with higher vertical accuracy

The geoscientific investigations of the first two SIR-C/X-SAR missions shall continue to be another important objective, based mainly on the C- and X-band imagery obtained.

The technical objectives of SRTM are to develop and demonstrate the capability (1) of obtaining single-pass interferometric SAR-data in C- and X-Band and (2) to process these data into ITHD on a global scale.

ITHD shall be made available for improved interpretation of the data for the test sites from the first two SIR-C/X-SAR missions, consistent with data guidelines to be developed by and jointly agreed by NASA and the U.S. National Imagery and Mapping Agency (NIMA).

Article 4 - Participation

To implement SRTM, NASA will cooperate with other U.S. Government agencies and with DARA. On the German side, due to positive results obtained by the first two SIR-C/X-SAR missions, the successful cooperation between DARA, the Deutsche Forschungsanstalt für Luft und Raumfahrt (DLR) and the Agenzia Spaziale Italiana (ASI) will be continued. In order to guarantee a clear functional interface with NASA, DARA will act as the lead agency for the German-Italian cooperation and will represent the interests and the responsibilities of DLR and ASI to NASA for SRTM. NASA will coordinate with other U.S. Government agencies and ensure that their interests and responsibilities are properly represented for SRTM.

Article 5 - Responsibilities of NASA

For the SRTM mission NASA will use reasonable efforts to fulfill the following responsibilities:

1. Provide the existing SIR-C hardware in functional condition, as well as any infrastructure necessary for a reflight of such;

2. Coordinate the design of the SRTM system with DARA, secure or fabricate the necessary additional components, and modify the existing SIR-C hardware and software to operate as an interferometer;

ARTICLE IV—STATUS OF FAA PERSONNEL

The FAA will assign personnel to perform the services agreed upon in the annex or appendix. The personnel assigned may be the employees of the FAA or another U.S. Government agency. Personnel assigned to any activity shall retain their status as U.S. Government employees. The supervision and administration of the personnel will be in accordance with the policies and procedures of the FAA as an agency of the U.S. Government. The assigned personnel will perform at the high level of conduct and technical execution required by the FAA.

ARTICLE V—HOST PARTY SUPPORT

A. The support by the SCT necessary for accomplishing the FAA technical assistance shall be in accordance with pertinent FAA or other U.S. regulations, tules, or procedures. The SCT also shall provide such additional support as may be set forth in each annex or appendix.

Any such termination will allow FAA one hundred and twenty (120) days to close out its activities. Termination of this Agreement shall also terminate all Annexes and Appendices subsequently concluded by the parties pursuant to this Agreement.

ARTICLE II
PURPOSE AND SCOPE

2.1. This Agreement establishes the terms and conditions by which the Army of the United States of America and the Army of the Kingdom of Belgium (hereafter referred to as "the Parties"), agree to provide on-site working assignments to selected career military personnel (hereafter referred to as "Military Exchange Personnel") from the other Party. The work assignments shall provide Military Exchange Personnel work experience and knowledge of the organization and management of Host Organization activities by performing duties under the direction of a host supervisor. Exchanges of military personnel under this Agreement shall be conducted on a reciprocal basis (one-for-one in similar duties) so that the overall benefit to each Party shall be essentially equal. This Exchange Program shall not include training, except for programs conducted to familiarize, orient, or certify exchange personnel regarding unique aspects of their assignments and as provided in paragraph 5.4. Additionally, it is not to be used as a mechanism for the exchange of information between the Parties.

2.2. Military Exchange Personnel shall not be assigned to positions under this Exchange Program that would involve the release of Restricted Data or Formerly Restricted Data as defined in the U.S. Atomic Energy Act of 1954 as amended; communications security information for which foreign dissemination has been prohibited in whole or in part; information for which a special access authorization is required; information originated by another organization, department, agency or government; or controlled unclassified information, unless the specific information has been authorized in writing for release to the government of the Parent Party under an existing program, or with the prior written consent of the appropriate disclosure authority, whichever is applicable.

2.3. Military Exchange Personnel shall not act in a liaison capacity or otherwise act as representatives of the Parent Party or the Parent Organization while assigned to exchange positions, nor shall they act as representatives of the Host Party or the Host Organization to which they are assigned. Military Exchange Personnel shall perform duties as defined in the position descriptions (PDs) for their respective positions.

ARTICLE III
EXECUTIVE AGENTS

3.1. The Army of the United States of America and the Army of the Kingdom of Belgium shall be the Executive Agents for this Agreement. The Executive Agents shall be responsible for:

3.1.1. periodically reviewing this Agreement to ensure conformity with applicable current law and regulations;

3.1.2. recommending amendments to this Agreement;

3.1.3. entering into specific exchanges;

3.1.4. maintaining a record of the exchange positions listed at Annex B and their associated position descriptions; and

3.1.5. ensuring that exchanges are conducted in accordance with the approved position descriptions, applicable laws and regulations, and this Agreement.

ARTICLE IV
SELECTION AND ASSIGNMENT OF PERSONNEL

4.1. Participation in this Exchange Program shall be on a highly selective basis from among career military personnel of the Army of the United States of America and the Army of the Kingdom of Belgium. The Parent Organization shall be solely responsible in the selection of its Military Exchange Personnel based on the following criteria:

4.1.1. They must have demonstrated capabilities for future positions of greater responsibility.

4.1.2. They must be well-versed in the current practices, technical training and doctrine of their organization, and be particularly qualified through experience for the exchange positions to be occupied.

4.1.3. They must possess the grade, skill, training, and academic qualifications which are described in the applicable position descriptions.

4.1.4. They must be sufficiently proficient in the language of the Host Party to satisfy the requirements of the positions.

4.2. Consistent with the nomination process, the Host Party shall be authorized to discharge exchange personnel from this Exchange Program who do not meet the above criteria. This decision is within the sole discretion of the Host Party.

4.3. The normal tour of duty for Military Exchange Personnel, exclusive of travel time between countries, shall be for a period of two years. Any time required for qualification and familiarization shall be in addition to the normal tour. Exceptions and/or adjustments to the normal length of exchange tours shall be based on mutual agreement of the Parties.

Accordingly, it shall be necessary for the Parent Party to make arrangements to defray such costs directly through its personnel, rather than by reimbursement to the Host Party.

5.6. The obligations of each Party under this Agreement shall be subject to the authorization and availability of funds.

ARTICLE VI

6.2. Each Party shall cause security assurances to be filed, through the Belgium Embassy in Washington, DC, in the case of the Belgian Army personnel, and through the U.S. Embassy in Brussels, Belgium in the case of the United States personnel, stating the security clearances for all Military Exchange Personnel selected. 6.3. The Host Organization and the Parent Organization shall ensure that assigned Military Exchange Personnel are fully cognizant of applicable laws and regulations concerning the protection of proprietary information (such as patents, copyrights, know-how, and trade secrets), classified information and controlled unclassified information to which access might be gained under this Exchange Program, both during and after termination of an assignment; and shall be required to sign the certification at Annex A.

6.4. Military Exchange Personnel shall at all times be required to comply with the security laws, regulations and procedures of the government of the Host Party. Any violation of security procedures by Military Exchange Personnel during their assignments shall be reported to the Parent Party for appropriate action. Military Exchange Personnel committing violations of security procedures during their assignments shall be withdrawn from this Exchange Program with a view toward administrative or disciplinary action by the Parent Party.

6.5. All classified information made available to Military Exchange Personnel shall be considered as Classified Information furnished to the Parent Party, and shall be subject to all provisions and safeguards provided for under the General Security of Military Information Agreement (GSOMIA) in force between the United States of America and Belgium, dated 9 August 1960.

ARTICLE VII

To the extent authorized by the laws and regulations of the government of the Host Party, the Host Organization shall arrange for the provision of administrative support as is deemed necessary for Military Exchange Personnel to perform assigned tasks efficiently. The Host Organization shall familiarize Military Exchange Personnel with any unique procedures necessary for the proper performance of their assigned tasks.

7.2. Consistent with the laws and regulations of the government of the Host Party, Military Exchange Personnel assigned under this Agreement shall be subject to the same restrictions, conditions, and privileges as Host Party personnel of comparable rank in their areas of assignment. Further, to the extent authorized by the laws and regulations of the government of the Host Party, Military Exchange Personnel and their authorized dependents shall be accorded on a reciprocal basis:

7.2.1. Exemption from any tax by the government of the Host Party upon income received from the government of the Parent Party.

7.2.2. Exemption from any customs and import duties or similar charges levied on items entering the country of the Host Party for their official or personal use, including their baggage, household effects, and private motor vehicles. The foregoing shall not in any way limit privileges set forth elsewhere in this Agreement, or other privileges granted by the laws and of the government of the Host Party.

7.3. Military Exchange Personnel and their dependents shall be informed by the Host Organization about applicable laws, orders, regulations and customs and they shall be required to comply with them. Military Exchange Personnel and their dependents also shall be briefed by Host Organization personnel regarding their specific entitlements, privileges, and obligations upon their arrival in the country of the Host Organization.

7.4. Military Exchange Personnel may observe the holiday schedule of either the Parent Party or the Host Party, as mutually agreed.

7.5. Military Exchange Personnel shall be assigned work under the guidance and supervision of a host supervisor. The host supervisor shall establish performance standards and observe the performance of Military Exchange Personnel to provide a basis for counseling and performance evaluations. Military Exchange Personnel shall have performance evaluations rendered by their Host Organization's supervisor. Such reports shall be forwarded by the Host Organization to the Parent Organization, in accordance with Parent Organization requirements.

7.6. Reports which Military Exchange Personnel may be required to make by the Parent Party, or which they wish to make concerning their exchange duties, shall be submitted as follows:

The Parties shall cooperate in carrying out administrative or disciplinary action by the Parent Party against its Military Exchange Personnel.

7.8. Any medical and dental care that may be provided to Military Exchange Personnel and their dependents at the Host Party medical facilities, shall be subject to the requirements of the laws and regulations of the government of the Host Party, including reimbursement, when required by such laws and regulations.

7.9. In no case shall Military Exchange Personnel be assigned to positions which would require exercise of command or be assigned to other positions that would require them to exercise responsibilities that are reserved by law or regulation to an officer or employee of the U.S. Government.

7.10. Military Exchange Personnel shall not be placed on duty or in positions in areas of political sensitivity where their presence would jeopardize the interests of the Parent Party, or where, in the normal course of their duty, they may become involved in activities which may embarrass the Parent Party.

7.11. The Host Party shall not deploy Military Exchange Personnel in non-direct hostility situations, such as UN peacekeeping or multi-national operations, without Parent Party approval. Additionally, Military Exchange Personnel shall not be deployed to a third country as a member of an exercise contingent, or to participate in an exercise without Parent Party approval.

7.12. The Host Party shall not place Military Exchange Personnel in duty assignments in which direct hostilities with forces of third states are likely. Should a unit in which Military Exchange Personnel are assigned become involved in hostilities unexpectedly, Military Exchange Personnel assigned to the unit shall not be involved in the hostilities without authorization from the Parent Party. Military Exchange personnel approved by both the Parent Party and the Host Party for involvement in hostilities shall be given clear guidance on the Host Party's interpretation of laws of Law of War, to include Rules of Engagement (ROE).

7.13. Purchasing and patronage privileges at military commissaries, exchanges, theaters and clubs shall be extended to Military Exchange Personnel and their dependents on the same basis as equivalent personnel of the Host Party. This provision shall not, however, limit privileges set forth elsewhere in this Agreement or other privileges granted by the Host Party, at its discretion, with the consent of the Parent Party.

7.14. Military Exchange Personnel shall be granted leave and passes/liberty according to their entitlements under the regulations of the Parent Organization, subject to the approval of the appropriate authorities of the Host Organization.

7.15. Military Exchange Personnel shall be required to comply with the dress regulations of the Parent Organization. The order of dress for any occasion shall be that which most nearly conforms to the order for the particular unit of the Host Organization with which they are serving. Customs of the Host Organization shall be observed with respect to wearing of civilian clothes.

7.16. Consistent with the laws and regulations of the government of the Host Party, and upon conditions of reciprocity, the Host Organization shall provide, if available, housing and messing facilities for Military Exchange Personnel and their dependents on the same basis and priority as for its own personnel. Military Exchange Personnel shall pay messing and housing charges to the same extent as personnel of the Host Organization. At locations where facilities are not provided by the Host Organization for its own personnel, the Parent Organization shall make suitable arrangements for Military Exchange Personnel.

7.17. Rights and privileges of military personnel contained in existing agreements dealing with the status of personnel of one Party present in the territory of the other Party shall apply to Military Exchange Personnel and their dependents, and in the event of conflict, shall take precedence over this Agreement.

7.18. The United States Army Attach will serve as the U.S. Army Personnel Exchange Program Administrator. The U.S. Army Military Exchange Personnel on exchange with the Belgian Army will be under the administrative control of the U.S. Army Attaché, Belgium.

7.19. Belgium Army Military Exchange Personnel on exchange with the U.S. Army will be under the administrative control of the Belgium Military Attaché in Washington, DC.

8.2. Military Exchange Personnel and those dependents accompanying them, must obtain motor vehicle liability insurance coverage in accordance with applicable laws and regulations of the government of the Host Party, or its political subdivision, where they are located. In case of claims involving the use of private motor vehicles, the first recourse shall be against such insurance.

ARTICLE IX
SETTLEMENT OF DISPUTES

Disputes arising under or relating to this Agreement shall be resolved only by consultation between the Parties and shall not be referred to an individual, a national or international tribunal, or to any other forum for settlement.

ARTICLE X

10.3. Except as otherwise provided, this Agreement may be amended by the mutual written consent of the Parties.

10.4. This Agreement may be terminated at any time upon the written consent of the Parties. In the event both Parties consent to terminate this Agreement, the Parties shall consult prior to the date of termination to ensure termination on economical and equitable terms.

10.5. Either party may terminate this Agreement upon 180 days' written notification to the other Party. Such notice shall be the subject of immediate consultation by the Parties to decide upon the appropriate course of action. In the event of such termination, the following rules apply:

DANISH CIVIL AVIATION ADMINISTRATION
MINISTRY OF TRANSPORT
KINGDOM OF DENMARK

WHEREAS, the Federal Aviation Administration (FAA) of the Department of Transportation of the United States of America is directed to encourage the development of civil aeronautics and the safety of air commerce, and is authorized to furnish on a reimbursable basis to foreign governments certain technical assistance to that end; and

WHEREAS, the Danish Civil Aviation Administration (CAA-DK) of the Ministry of Transport of the Kingdom of Denmark has requested that such technical assistance be provided;

NOW THEREFORE, the FAA and the CAA-DK, collectively referred to herein as the parties, mutually agree as follows:

ARTICLE I—OBJECTIVE

A. This Memorandum of Agreement (the Agreement) establishes the terms and conditions under which the FAA may provide assistance to the CAA-DK in developing and modernizing the civil aviation infrastructure in the managerial, operational and technical areas. For this purpose, the FAA shall, subject to the availability of appropriated funds and necessary resources, provide personnel, resources, and related services to assist the CAA-DK to the extent called for in the annexes and appendices to this Agreement.

B. The FAA's ability to furnish the full scope of technical assistance provided for under this Agreement depends on the use of the systems and equipment in Denmark that are similar to those used by the FAA in the U.S. National Airspace System. To the extent that other systems and equipment are used in Denmark, the FAA may not be able to support those other systems and equipment under this Agreement.

ARTICLE II—IMPLEMENTATION

A. Specific technical assistance in areas of personnel, training, equipment, or services to be provided by the FAA for the CAA-DK shall be delineated in annexes and appendices to this Agreement. When signed by the parties, such annexes and appendices shall become part of this Agreement. Such annexes and appendices shall contain a description of the technical assistance to be performed by the FAA, the personnel and other resources required to accomplish the tasks, the estimated costs, implementation plans, and duration.

B. The designated office at the FAA for the coordination and management of this Agreement, and where all requests for services under this Agreement should be made, is:

A. The technical assistance provided by the FAA at the request of the CAA-DK may include, but is not necessarily limited to, the following:

1. Providing technical and managerial expertise to assist the CAA-DK in developing, improving, and operating its civil aviation infrastructure, standards, procedures, policies, training, and equipment;

2. Providing training for CAA-DK personnel in the United States or in Denmark;

3. Inspecting and calibrating CAA-DK-owned or -operated equipment and air navigation facilities; and

4. Providing resources, logistical support, and equipment for air navigation facilities.

B. Technical assistance in these and other areas, as mutually agreed to, may be accomplished by appropriate short- and long-term in-country assignments or by other assistance offered by the FAA.

ARTICLE IV—STATUS OF FAA PERSONNEL

A. The FAA shall assign personnel to perform the services agreed upon in the annex or appendix. The personnel assigned may be the employees of the FAA or another U.S. Government agency. Personnel assigned to any activity shall retain their status as U.S. Government employees. The supervision and administration of the personnel shall be in accordance with the policies and procedures of the FAA as an agency of the U.S. Government. The assigned personnel shall perform at the high level of conduct and technical execution required by the FAA.

B. U.S. Government personnel assigned to perform work under an annex or appendix to this Agreement shall be accorded the same privileges and immunities as are accorded to the administrative and technical personnel of the U.S. Embassy under the Vienna Convention on Diplomatic Relations of 1961. Such personnel shall not, however, be considered members of the Embassy staff by virtue of their enjoyment of such privileges and immunities.

ARTICLE V—HOST PARTY SUPPORT

A. The support by the CAA-DK necessary for accomplishing the FAA technical assistance shall be in accordance with pertinent FAA or other U.S. regulations, rules, or procedures. The CAA-DK also shall provide such additional support as may be set forth in each annex or appendix.

B. If for any reason the CAA-DK is unable to provide fully the support specified in each annex or appendix, or if the support provided is not equivalent to that prescribed in pertinent FAA or other U.S. regulations, rules, or procedures, the FAA shall arrange for the support and charge the costs for such support to the CAA-DK.

ARTICLE VI—FINANCIAL PROVISIONS

A. The CAA-DK shall reimburse the FAA, in accordance with the provisions set forth in this Agreement and its annexes and appendices, for all costs (including administrative overhead charges) associated with the technical assistance provided by the FAA. In the event of a termination by either party under Article X.B of this Agreement, the CAA-DK shall pay all costs incurred by the FAA:

1. Prior to the date of such termination; and
2. During the 120-day close-out period.

B. Each annex or appendix shall describe the specific financial arrangements for the technical assistance to be provided. However, all financial arrangements shall be subject to the following:

1. Payment of bills shall be due within sixty (60) days from date of billing. Payments shall be made in U.S. dollars and may be made either by check or electronic funds transfer. Checks shall be drawn on a U.S. bank and forwarded to the FAA at the address specified. Electronic funds transfers shall be credited to the FAA's account as follows: Federal Reserve Bank of New York, 021030004 Account Treas NYC (69001104) FAA. All payments shall include a reference to the assigned agreement number and billing number.

6. Serve points behind any point in its territory with or without change of aircraft or flight number and may hold out and advertise such services to the public as through services; without directional or geographic limitation and without loss of any right to carry traffic otherwise permissible under this Agreement; provided that, with the exception of all-cargo services, the service serves a point in the territory of the Party designating the airline.

Section 3

Change of Gauge

On any segment or segments of the routes above, any designated airline may perform international air transportation without any limitation as to change, at any point on the route, in type or number of aircraft operated; provided that, with the exception of all-cargo services, in the outbound direction, the transportation beyond such point is a continuation of the transportation from the territory of the Party that has designated the airline and, in the inbound direction, the transportation to the territory of the Party that has designated the airline is a continuation of the transportation from beyond such point.

ANNEX II

Charter Air Transportation

Section 1

Airlines of each Party designated under this Annex shall, in accordance with the terms of their designation, have the right to carry international charter traffic of passengers (and their accompanying baggage) and/or cargo separately or in combination, regardless of whether the traffic originates in one or more places or comes from one or more sources, and regardless of in which Party's territory the charter originates:

Between any point or points in the territory of the Party that has designated the airline and any point or points in the territory of the other Party; and

Between any point or points in the territory of the other Party and any point or points in a third country or countries, provided that, except with respect to cargo charters, such service constitutes part of a continuous operation, with or without a change of aircraft, that includes service to the homeland for the purpose of carrying local traffic between the homeland and the territory of the other Party.

In the performance of services covered by this Annex, airlines of each Party designated under this Annex shall also have the right: (1) to make stopovers at any points whether within or outside of the territory of either Party; (2) to carry transit traffic through the other Party's territory; (3) to combine on the same aircraft traffic originating in one Party's territory, traffic originating in the other Party's territory, and traffic originating in third countries; and (4) to perform international air transportation without any limitation as to change, at any point on the route, in type or number of aircraft operated; provided that, except with respect to cargo charters, in the outbound direction, the transportation beyond such point is a continuation of the transportation from the territory of the Party that has designated the airline and in the inbound direction, the transportation to the territory of the Party that has designated the airline is a continuation of the transportation from beyond such point.

Each Party shall extend favorable consideration to applications by airlines of the other Party to carry traffic not covered by this Annex on the basis of comity and reciprocity.

Section 2

Any airline designated by either Party performing international charter air transportation originating in the territory of either Party, whether on a one-way or round-trip basis, could be required to comply with the administrative procedures applicable to charter operations in the country of origin of the operation, provided that such procedures do not limit the rights provided for in Section 1 of this Annex.

However, nothing contained in the above paragraph shall limit the rights of either Party to require airlines designated under this Annex by either Party to adhere to requirements relating to the protection of passenger funds and passenger cancellation and refund rights.

Section 3

Except with respect to the consumer protection rules referred to in the preceding paragraph above, neither Party shall require an airline designated under this Annex by the other Party, in respect of the carriage of traffic from the territory of that other Party or of a third country on a one-way or round-trip basis, to submit more than a declaration of conformity with the applicable laws, regulations and rules referred to under Section 2 of this Annex or of a waiver of these laws, regulations, or rules granted by the applicable aeronautical authorities.

ANNEX III

Principles of Non-Discrimination Within and Competition among Computer Reservations Systems

Recognizing that Article 11 (Fair Competition) of this Agreement guarantees the airlines of both Parties "a fair and equal opportunity to compete,"

Considering that one of the most important aspects of the ability of an airline to compete is its ability to inform the public of its services in a fair and impartial manner, and that, therefore, the quality of information about airline services available to travel agents who directly distribute such information to the traveling public and the ability of an airline to offer those agents competitive computer reservations systems (CRSs) represent the foundation for an airline's competitive opportunities, and

Considering that it is equally necessary to ensure that the interests of the consumers of air transport products are protected from any misuse of such information and its misleading presentation and that airlines and travel agents have access to effectively competitive computer reservations systems:

1. The Parties agree that CRSs will have integrated primary displays for which:

   A. Information regarding international air services, including the construction of connections on those services, shall be edited and displayed based on non-discriminatory and objective criteria that are not influenced, directly or indirectly, by airline or market identity. Such criteria shall apply uniformly to all participating airlines.

   B. CRS data bases shall be as comprehensive as possible.

   C. CRS vendors shall not delete information submitted by participating airlines; such information shall be accurate and transparent; for example, code-shared and change-of-equipment flights and flights with stops should be clearly identified as having those characteristics.

   D. All CRSs that are available to travel agents who directly distribute information about airline services to the traveling public in either Party's territory shall not only be obligated to, but shall also be entitled to, operate in conformance with the CRS rules that apply in the territory where the CRS is being operated.

   E. Travel agents shall be allowed to use any of the secondary displays available through the CRS so long as the travel agent makes a specific request for that display.

2. A Party shall require that each CRS vendor operating in its territory allow all airlines willing to pay any applicable non-discriminatory fee to participate in its CRS. A Party shall require that all distribution facilities that a system vendor provides shall be offered on a non-discriminatory basis to participating airlines. A Party shall require that CRS vendors display, on a non-discriminatory, objective, carrier-neutral and market-neutral basis, the international air services of participating airlines in all markets in which they wish to sell those services. Upon request of a Party, a CRS vendor shall disclose details of its data base update and storage procedures, its criteria for editing and ranking information, the weight given to such criteria, and the criteria used for selection of connect points and inclusion of connecting flights.

3. CRS vendors operating in the territory of one Party shall be entitled to bring in, maintain, and make freely available their CRSs to travel agencies or travel companies whose principal business is the distribution of travel-related products in the territory of the other Party if the CRS complies with these principles.

4. Neither Party shall, in its territory, impose or permit to be imposed on the CRS vendors of the other Party more stringent requirements with respect to access to and use of communication facilities, selection and use of technical CRS hardware and software, and the technical installation of CRS hardware, than those imposed on its own CRS vendors.

5. Neither Party shall, in its territory, impose or permit to be imposed on the CRS vendors of the other Party more restrictive requirements with respect to CRS displays (including edit and display parameters), operation, or sale than those imposed on its own CRS vendors.

6. CRSs in use in the territory of one Party that comply with these principles and other relevant non-discriminatory regulatory, technical, and security standards shall be entitled to effective and unimpaired access in the territory of the other Party. One aspect of this is that a designated airline shall participate in such a system as fully in its homeland territory as it does in any system offered to travel agents in the territory of the other Party. Owners/operators of CRSs of one Party shall have the same opportunity to own/operate CRSs that conform to these principles within the territory of the other Party as do owners/operators of that Party. Each Party shall ensure that its airlines and its CRS vendors do not discriminate against travel agents in their homeland territory because of their use or possession of a CRS also operated in the territory of the other Party.

ANNEX IV

Transitional Provisions

Notwithstanding the provisions of Article 8(7), Article 11(2), and Annexes I and II, airlines of the Parties shall be subject to the limitations in this Annex, which shall expire on the dates indicated herein, or if no date is indicated, on June 11, 2002.

ARTICLE I

DEFINITION OF TERMS

The Parties have agreed upon the following definitions for terms used in this Agreement:

| Classified Information | Official information that requires protection in the interests of national security and is so designated by the application of security classification markings. |
| Controlled Unclassified Information | Unclassified information to which access or distribution limitations have been applied in accordance with applicable national laws or regulations. Whether the information is provided or generated under an Agreement, the information shall be marked to identify its "in confidence" nature. It could include information which has been declassified, but remains controlled. |
| Exchange Program | The exchange of personnel under this Agreement. |
| Host Organization | The agency or staff, or equivalent organization, of each Defense Department/Ministry to which exchange personnel are assigned for duty pursuant to this Exchange Program. |

| Information | Any knowledge, regardless of form, provided to, generated in, or used in this Exchange Program. |
| Parent Organization | The agency or staff, or equivalent organization, of each Defense Department/Ministry, to which exchange personnel belong. |
| Parent Party | The Defense Department or Ministry of Defense (DOD/MOD) to which the Parent Organization belongs. |

ARTICLE II

PURPOSE AND SCOPE

2.1. This Agreement establishes the terms and conditions by which the US DOD and the Danish MOD agree to provide on-site working assignments in agreed policy positions to selected career administrative and professional personnel from the other Party. The work assignments shall provide the personnel with work experience and knowledge of the organization, management, and operation of Host Party functions by performing duties under the direction of a host supervisor. Exchanges of personnel under this Agreement shall be conducted on a reciprocal basis so that the overall benefit to each Party shall be essentially equal. This Exchange Program shall not include training, except as provided in paragraph 5.4, and it is not to be used as a mechanism for the exchange of information between the Parties.

2.2. For the purpose of this Agreement, the Host Organization for the US DOD shall be within the Office of the Secretary of Defense. The Host Organization for the Danish MOD shall be within The Department of Defense.

2.3. Exchange personnel shall not be assigned to positions under this Exchange Program that would involve the release of: Restricted Data or Formerly Restricted Data as defined in the US Atomic Energy Act of 1954 as amended; communications security information; information for which foreign dissemination has been prohibited in whole or in part; information for which a special access authorization is required; information originated by another organization, department, agency or government; or controlled unclassified information, unless the specific information in these categories has been authorized in writing for release to the government of the Parent Party under an existing program, or with the prior written consent of the appropriate disclosure authority, whichever is applicable.

2.4. Exchange personnel shall not act in a liaison capacity or otherwise act as representatives of the Parent Party or the Parent Organization while assigned to exchange positions, nor shall they act as representatives of the Host Party or the Host Organization to which they are assigned. They shall perform duties as defined in the position descriptions (PDs) for their respective positions. A description of procedures to be used to establish exchange positions is included in Annex A to this agreement. The Host Organization shall be identified in each position description.

2.5. The Parties may designate Executive Agents to oversee the Exchange Program established by this Agreement. The Executive Agents shall have the responsibilities described in Article III, below.

ARTICLE III

EXECUTIVE AGENTS

For the US DOD, the Executive Agent (EA) for this Agreement shall be the Office of the Deputy to the Under Secretary of Defense (Policy) for Policy Support. For the Danish MOD, the Executive Agent shall be the Head of the 10th Division (Personnel Administration and Secretariat). The Executive Agents shall be responsible for:

3.1.1. periodically reviewing this Agreement to ensure conformity with current law and regulations;

3.1.2. recommending amendments to this Agreement;

3.1.3. approving annexes to this Agreement; and,

3.1.4. maintaining a record of exchange positions and a historical record of participants in the program.

ARTICLE IV

SELECTION AND ASSIGNMENT OF PERSONNEL

4.1. Participation in this Exchange Program shall be on a highly selective basis from among career military and civilian personnel of the US DOD and the Danish MOD. The Parent Organization shall be solely responsible in the selection of its exchange personnel based on the following criteria:

4.1.1. They must have demonstrated capabilities for future positions of greater responsibility.

4.1.2. They must be well-versed in the current practices, technical training and doctrine of their organization, and be particularly qualified through experience for the exchange positions to be occupied.

4.1.3. They must possess the grade, skill, training, and academic qualifications which are described in the applicable position descriptions.

4.1.4. They must be sufficiently proficient in the language of the Host Party to satisfy the requirements of the positions.

4.1.5. They should hold, preferably, a graduate degree or equivalent professional qualifications in the professional area related to the positions to which they shall be assigned.

4.2. Consistent with the nomination process, the Host Party shall be authorized to discharge personnel from this Exchange Program who do not meet the above criteria. This decision is within the sole discretion of the Host Party.

4.3. The normal tour of duty for personnel, exclusive of travel time between countries, shall be for a period of two years. By mutual agreement, this period may be extended to not more than three years in individual cases. Any time required for qualification and familiarization shall be in addition to the normal tour. The tour of duty for personnel may be modified upon written agreement between the Host Organizations.

4.4. The placement of personnel nominated under this Exchange Program shall be conditional upon the ability of the Host Organization to provide work assignments commensurate with the purpose and scope of this Exchange Program for a mutually agreed period of time.

4.5 The Parent Party shall submit to the Host Party an extended visit request for its exchange personnel, using the form and instructions at Annex C.

ARTICLE V

FINANCIAL ARRANGEMENTS

5.1. The Parent Party's responsibilities shall include, but shall not be limited to, the following costs for its exchange personnel:

5.1.1. All pay and allowances.

5.1.2. Travel to and from the country of the Host Party.

5.1.3. All temporary duty costs, including travel costs, when such duty is carried out at the request of the Parent Party.

5.1.6. All expenses in connection with the return of personnel who have been discharged from this Exchange Program and their accompanying dependents.

5.1.7 Adequate medical insurance or coverage for program participants and their dependents.

5.2. The Host Party shall be responsible for the following:

5.2.1. Travel and subsistence costs in connection with the performance of any duty carried out pursuant to a requirement of the Host Party.

5.2.2. Costs incurred as a result of a change in location of work ordered by the Host Party during the period of the exchange.

5.3. The Host Party shall not charge for the use of facilities or equipment necessary for the performance of tasks that it assigns to exchange personnel.

5.4. The Parent Party shall pay the costs of formal and informal training and professional military education (PME).

5.5. The Host Party shall not provide any supplies or services related to those costs that, by virtue of paragraph 5.1 above, are the obligation of the Parent Party. Accordingly, it shall be necessary for the Parent Party to make arrangements to defray such costs directly through its personnel, rather than by reimbursement to the Host Party.

5.6. The obligations of each Party under this Agreement shall be subject to the authorization and availability of funds.

5.7 Appropriate accounting information shall be exchanged, as desired, between the Parties.

ARTICLE VI

SECURITY

6.1. During the selection process, each Party shall inform the other of the level of security clearance required, if any, to permit exchange personnel to have access to classified information and work areas. Access to classified information shall be consistent with Article II, paragraph 2.3. of this Agreement and shall be kept to the minimum required to accomplish the work assignment, as determined by the Host Party based on the applicable position description.

6.2. Each Party shall cause security assurances to be filed, through the Danish Embassy in Washington, DC, in the case of the Government of Denmark personnel, and through the US Embassy in Denmark, in the case of the United States personnel, stating the security clearances for all exchange personnel selected. The security assurances shall be included in the Request for Extended Visit (Annex C).

6.3. The Host Organization and the Parent Organization shall ensure that assigned exchange personnel are fully cognizant of applicable laws and regulations concerning the protection of proprietary information (such as patents, copyrights, know-how, and trade secrets), classified information and controlled unclassified information to which access might be gained under this program, both during and after termination of an assignment; and shall be required to sign the certification at Annex B.

6.4. Exchange personnel shall at all times be required to comply with the security laws, regulations and procedures of the government of the Host Party. Any violation of security procedures by exchange personnel during their assignments shall be reported to the Parent Party for appropriate action. Exchange personnel committing willful violations of security procedures during their assignments shall be withdrawn from this Exchange Program with a view toward appropriate administrative or disciplinary action by the Parent Party.

6.5. All classified information made available to exchange personnel shall be considered as Classified Information furnished to the Parent Party, and shall be subject to all provisions and safeguards provided for under the General Security of Military Information Agreement (GSOMIA) in force between the Government of the United States of America and the Government of Denmark, dated 27 February 1981.

ARTICLE VII

TECHNICAL AND ADMINISTRATIVE MATTERS

7.1. To the extent authorized by the laws and regulations of the government of the Host Party, the Host Organization shall arrange for the provision of administrative support as is deemed necessary for exchange personnel to perform assigned tasks efficiently. The Host Organization shall familiarize exchange personnel with any unique procedures necessary for the proper performance of their assigned tasks.

7.2. Consistent with the laws and regulations of the government of the Host Party, exchange personnel assigned under this Agreement shall be subject to the same restrictions, conditions, and privileges as Host Party personnel of comparable rank in their areas of assignment.

7.3. Exchange personnel and their dependents shall be informed by the Host Organization about applicable laws, orders, regulations, and customs and they shall be required to comply with them. Exchange personnel and their dependents also shall be briefed by Host Organization personnel regarding their specific entitlements, privileges, and obligations upon their arrival in the country of the Host Organization.

7.4. Exchange personnel may observe the holiday schedule of either the Parent Party or the Host Party as mutually agreed. The Parent Organization shall adopt a liberal leave policy with regard to national holidays.

Host supervisors shall counsel exchange personnel on a regularly scheduled basis. Exchange personnel shall have performance evaluations rendered in accordance with the applicable Parent Party regulations.

7.6. Exchange personnel committing an offense under the laws of the government of either the Parent Party or the Host Party may be withdrawn from this Exchange Program with a view toward further administrative or disciplinary action by the Parent Party. Disciplinary action, however, shall not be taken by the Host Party against exchange personnel and exchange personnel shall not exercise disciplinary powers over personnel of the Host Party. The Parties shall cooperate when legally possible in carrying out administrative or disciplinary action by the Parent Party against its exchange personnel.

7.7. Any medical and dental care that may be provided to exchange personnel and their dependents at the Host Party medical facilities shall be subject to the requirements of the laws and regulations of the government of the Host Party, including reimbursement when required by such laws and regulations.

7.8. In no case shall exchange personnel be assigned to positions which would require the exercise of command, or be assigned to other positions that would require them to exercise responsibilities that are reserved by law or regulation to an officer or employee of the Host Party.

7.9. Exchange personnel shall not be placed on duty or in positions in areas of political sensitivity where their presence would jeopardize the interests of the Parent Party, or where, in the normal course of their duty, they may become involved in activities which may embarrass the Parent Party.

7.11. The Host Party shall not place exchange personnel in duty assignments in which direct hostilities with forces of third states are likely. Should a unit in which exchange personnel are assigned become involved in hostilities unexpectedly, the exchange personnel assigned to the unit shall not be involved in the hostilities without authorization from the Parent Party. Exchange personnel approved by both the Parent Party and the Host Party for involvement in hostilities shall be given clear guidance on the Host Party's interpretation of the laws of war, to include the rules of engagement.

7.12. Purchasing and patronage privileges at military commissaries, exchanges, theaters and clubs shall be extended to exchange personnel and their dependents on the same basis as equivalent personnel of the Host Party. This provision shall not, however, limit privileges set forth elsewhere in this Agreement or other privileges granted by the Host Party, at its discretion, with the consent of the Parent Party.

7.13. Exchange personnel shall be granted leave according to their entitlements under the regulations of the Parent Organization, subject to the approval of the appropriate authorities of the Host Organization.

7.14. Military exchange personnel shall be required to comply with the dress regulations of the Parent Organization. The order of dress for any occasion shall be that which most nearly conforms to the order for the Host Organization with which they are serving. Customs of the Host Organization shall be observed with respect to wearing of civilian clothes.

7.15. Consistent with the laws and regulations of the government of the Host Party, and upon conditions of reciprocity, the Host Organization shall provide, if available, housing and messing facilities for exchange personnel and their dependents on the same basis and priority as for its own personnel. Exchange personnel shall pay messing and housing charges to the same extent as personnel of the Host Organization. At locations where facilities are not provided by the Host Organization for its own personnel, the Parent Organization shall make suitable arrangements for the exchange personnel.

7.16. Exchange personnel and those dependents accompanying them, must obtain motor vehicle liability insurance coverage in accordance with applicable laws and regulations of the government of the Host Party, or its political subdivision, where the personnel are located. In case of claims involving the use of private motor vehicles, the first recourse shall be against such insurance.

ARTICLE VI—FINANCIAL PROVISIONS

A. The NICA shall reimburse the FAA, in accordance with the provisions set forth in this Agreement and its annexes and appendices, for all costs (including administrative overhead charges) associated with the technical assistance provided by the FAA. In the event of a termination by either party under Article X.B of this Agreement, the NICA shall pay all costs incurred by the FAA:

1. Prior to the date of such termination; and
2. During the 120-day close-out period.

B. Each annex or appendix shall describe the specific financial arrangements for the technical assistance to be provided. However, all financial arrangements shall be subject to the following:

1. Payment of bills shall be due within sixty (60) days from date of billing. Payments shall be made in U.S. dollars and may be made either by check or electronic funds transfer. Checks shall be drawn on a U.S. bank and forwarded to the FAA at the address specified. Electronic funds transfers shall be credited to the FAA's account as follows: Federal Reserve Bank of New York, 021030004 Account Treas NYC (69001104) FAA. All payments shall include a reference to the assigned agreement number and billing number.

2. In the event that payment is not made within sixty (60) days from the date of billing, U.S. Treasury Department regulations prescribe and require the FAA to assess late payment charges—i.e., interest, penalties, and administrative handling charges—in subsequent billings. These late charges shall be assessed for each additional thirty (30) day period, or portion thereof, that payment is not received. The NICA shall pay any such late charges.

C. Agreement number NAT-I-0826 has been assigned by the FAA to identify this technical assistance project and shall be referenced in all correspondence and bills related to this Agreement.

ARTICLE VII—LIABILITY

The NICA, on behalf of the Government of Portugal, agrees to defend any suit brought against the Government of the United States, the FAA, or any instrumentality or officer of the United States arising out of work performed under this Agreement or its annexes and appendices. The NICA, on behalf of the Government of Portugal, further agrees to hold the United States, the FAA, or any instrumentality or officer of the United States harmless against any claim by the Government of the Portugal, or by any agency thereof, or by third persons for personal injury, death, or property damage arising out of work performed under this Agreement or its annexes and appendices.

ARTICLE VIII—AMENDMENTS

This Agreement or its annexes or appendices may be amended by mutual consent of the parties. The details of any such amendment shall be memorialized by written agreement signed by both parties.

ARTICLE IX—RESOLUTION OF DISAGREEMENTS

Any disagreement regarding the interpretation or application of this Agreement or its annexes and appendices shall be resolved by consultations between the parties and shall not be referred to any international tribunal or third party for settlement.

ARTICLE X—ENTRY INTO FORCE AND TERMINATION

A. This Agreement shall enter into force on the date of the last signature and shall remain in force until terminated.

B. This Agreement or its annexes or appendices may be terminated at any time by either party by providing sixty (60) days notice in writing to the other party. Termination of this Agreement shall not affect existing obligations of the NICA under Articles IV, VI, VII, and IX. The FAA shall have one hundred and twenty (120) days to close out its activities following termination of this Agreement or its annexes or appendices. Termination of this Agreement also shall terminate all annexes and appendices subsequently concluded by the parties pursuant to this Agreement.

ARTICLE XI—SIGNATURE IN COUNTERPARTS

To facilitate execution, this Agreement or its annexes or appendices may be executed in as many counterparts as may be required. It shall not be necessary that the signature of or on behalf of each party appear on each counterpart, but it shall be sufficient that the signature of or on behalf of each party appear on one or more of the counterparts. The Government of the United States of America and the Government of the Solomon Islands, recognizing the importance of developing mutually advantageous relationships and cooperation between their Countries, have agreed as follows:

1. The Government of the United States of America will furnish such Peace Corps Volunteers as may be requested by the Government of the Solomon Islands and approved by the Government of the United States of America to perform mutually agreed tasks in the Solomon Islands. The Volunteers will work under the immediate supervision of Governmental and Private Organisations in the Solomon Islands designated by our two Governments. The Government of the United States of America will provide training to enable the volunteers to perform their tasks in the most effective manner. The Government of the Solomon islands will bear such share of the costs of the Peace Corps program incurred in the Solomon Islands as our two Governments may agree.

2. The Government of the Solomon Islands will accord equitable treatment to the Volunteers and their property, accord them full aid and protection, including treatment no less favourable than that accorded generally to nationals of the United States of America residing in the Solomon Islands; and fully inform, consult, and cooperate with representatives of the United States of America with respect to all matters concerning them. The Government of the Solomon Islands will exempt the Volunteers and non-resident persons or any person who is resident solely for the purpose of performing functions under contract with the Peace Corps on emoluments payable out of the fund provided by the Government of United States of America to defray their living costs, on income derived from their Peace Corps work, and on income from other sources outside the Solomon Islands, from all customs duties or other charges on their personal property introduced into the Solomon Islands within a period of not less than six months before or after arrival for their own use, and from all other taxes or other charges [including exemption from Immigration permit requirements and fees], except license fees. The Government of the Solomon Islands will issue residence permits and visas, including multiple-entry visas, where appropriate, without fee, to Volunteers and persons performing functions under contract with the Peace Corps.

3. The Government of the United States of America will provide the Volunteers with such limited quantities of equipment and supplies as our two Governments may consider necessary to enable the Volunteers to perform their tasks effectively. The Government of the Solomon Islands will exempt from all taxes, custom duties, and other charges all equipment and supplies introduced into or acquired in the Solomon Islands by the Government of the United States of America, or any contractor financed by it, for use hereunder.

4. To enable the Government of the United States of America to discharge its responsibilities under this Agreement. The Government of the Solomon Island will receive a Peace Corps representative and such staff of the representative [including employees and contractor personnel as designated by the Peace Corps representative], and members of their families forming part of their households, as are acceptable to the Government of the Solomon Islands. Notwithstanding the provisions of any other Agreement, the Government of the Solomon Island will exempt such persons who are non-resident persons or any person who is resident solely for the purpose of performing functions under contract with the Peace Corps, from all taxes on income derived from their Peace Corps work or other sources outside the Solomon Islands, from all customs duties and other charges on their personal property introduced into the Solomon Islands within a period of not less than six months before or after arrival for their own use, and from all other taxes or other charges [including exemption from Immigration Permit requirements and fees], except license fees. In addition, such persons, and members of their families forming part of their household, shall be accorded status equivalent to that accorded administrative and technical staff personnel of the diplomatic mission of the United States of America, except they will not be accorded immunities.

5. Any disputes arising under this Agreement will be resolved amicably by the two Governments.

8. This Agreement may be amended from time to time by mutual consent of our two Governments. In the event of a conflict between this Agreement and a future Agreement regarding cooperation to facilitate assistance, this Agreement shall prevail concerning the Peace Corps program.

9. This Agreement shall enter into force on the date of signature and shall remain in force until ninety days after the date of the written notification from either Government to the other of its intention to terminate the Agreement. B. That said, articles, services or related training shall be returned to the Government of the United States of America when they are no longer needed for the purposes for which they were furnished, unless the Government of the United States of America consents to another disposition;

C. That the net proceeds of sale received by the Government of Barbados in disposing of, with prior written consent of the Government of the United States of America, any article, service, or related training, furnished by the Government of the United States of America on a grant basis, including scrap from any such article, service or related training, shall be paid to the Government of the United States of America;

D. That the Government of Barbados shall maintain the security of such articles, services or related training; that it shall provide substantially the same degree of security protection afforded to such articles, services or related training by the Government of the United States of America; that it shall, as the United States may require, permit continuous observation and review by, and furnish necessary information to, representatives of the Government of the United States of America with regard to the use thereof by the Government of Barbados; and

E. That the Government of the United States of America may also from time to time make the provision of other articles, services or related training furnished under other authority (except the United States Arms Export Control Act) subject to the terms and conditions of this agreement. (Transfers under the United States Arms Export Control Act shall continue to be governed by the requirements of that act and United States regulations applicable to such transfers.)

If the Government of Barbados agrees with the conditions set forth above, the Government of the United States proposes that this note, together with a Diplomatic Note in reply stating that the foregoing is acceptable, shall constitute an agreement between our two governments on this subject, effective from the date of your reply. Suggested language for the Diplomatic Note in reply is attached.

The Government of the United States of America avails itself of this opportunity to renew to the Ministry of Foreign Affairs of Barbados the assurances of its highest consideration.

RECORD OF UNDERSTANDING BETWEEN THE GOVERNMENTS OF THE UNITED STATES OF AMERICA AND CANADA REGARDING AREAS OF AGRICULTURAL TRADE

In the spirit of friendship and frankness that characterizes relations between our countries, the Governments of Canada and the United States of America have undertaken to discuss and resolve key issues in bilateral agricultural trade.

Recognizing that agricultural and agri-food products comprise an important component of our vibrant and mutually beneficial bilateral trading relationship, the Governments of Canada and the United States jointly reaffirm their commitment to maintaining an open and dynamic trading relationship in these products.

Canada and the United States affirm their commitment to market-oriented agricultural policies and ongoing efforts to promote more open and fairer trade in agricultural products. Canada and the United States further agree that actions that disrupt trade should be avoided and commit to address issues before they become problems as the preferred way of resolving bilateral trade differences.

Canada and the United States have agreed to work together to increase the broad dissemination of basic facts about our bilateral agricultural trade and its impact on our agricultural and agri-food industries, particularly in the grains and livestock/red meats sectors.

Canada and the United States also note the importance which our respective states and provinces attach to trade in agricultural products, and strongly support an increased dialogue on these issues at the state-province level.

Canada and the United States emphasize the importance of Chapter 7 of the North American Free Trade Agreement (NAFTA) on Agriculture and Sanitary and Phytosanitary Measures, and the World Trade Organization (WTO) Agreement on the Application of Sanitary and Phytosanitary Measures, which require the application of objective, science-based criteria as the basis for sanitary and phytosanitary measures. Chapter 9 of the NAFTA on Standards-Related Measures and its associated annexes and the WTO Agreement on Technical Barriers to Trade govern the development and application of technical requirements by Canada and the United States .

We agree that inspections will be based on scientific and technical principles. We reject the unjustified use of these or other technical measures as barriers to legitimate trade.

The Canadian Minister of Agriculture and Agri-Food and the U.S. Secretary of Agriculture will meet at least annually to review the state of our bilateral agricultural trade, to address any problems that might arise, and to foster greater cooperation between the two countries on issues of common interest in other international fora. Sub-Cabinet level officials will meet at least twice per year to ensure that progress continues to be made on issues affecting access to each other's markets. Officials will meet within 30 days to continue discussions of the resolution of outstanding agricultural issues and review progress of implementation of the agreement.

Canada and the United States agree to improve the management of bilateral agricultural trade relations by establishing a comprehensive early-warning and consultation process to resolve problems at an early stage in their development.

Canada and the United States encourage the private sector, through industry associations, to engage in a similar cross-border dialogue to increase our mutual understanding and our determination to resolve differences through consultation and discussion. For this purpose, Canada and the United States agree to urge industry to establish bilateral industry consultative mechanisms for grains, livestock and meats, and horticultural products.

Canada and the United States reiterate their strong commitment to resolving expeditiously any issues that might be brought to the attention of the respective governments in a way that is consistent with rights and obligations under the applicable international trade agreements. More specifically, Canada and the United States reaffirm their commitment as contained in international trade agreements to ensure that all necessary measures are taken to meet the obligations as contained in those agreements, including their observance by state and provincial governments.

The Governments of Canada and the United States have agreed to the attached comprehensive action plan, set forth in Annexes 1 to 17, aimed at facilitating and expanding Canada-U.S. bilateral trade in agriculture and agri-food products. The Annexes are an integral part of this Record of Understanding.

UNITED STATES - CANADA ACTION PLAN REGARDING AREAS OF AGRICULTURAL TRADE

This action plan is designed to strengthen and expand Canada-U.S. agricultural trade relations. It consists of 17 annexes as follows:

1. Import of U.S. Slaughter Swine
2. Expansion of Northwest Cattle Project for Restricted Feeder Cattle
3. Animal Health Regionalization
4. Other Animal Health Issues
5. Exchange of Cattle Data
6. In-Transit Movement of Grain by Rail
7. Wheat Access Facilitation Program
8. Phytosanitary Requirements for the Importation of U.S. Wheat
9. Other Grain Related Issues
10. Seed Trade
11. Export Subsidies (Oats)
12. Veterinary Drugs
13. Pest Control Products
14. Horticulture
15. Joint Cooperation on Biotechnology
16. Labeling
17. Sugar-Containing Products

1. Import of U.S. Swine for Immediate Slaughter

On December 3, 1998, Canada passed regulations that will allow U.S. slaughter swine to enter Canada from eligible states without the testing and quarantine restrictions that are applied to breeding animals. The regulations governing the import of U.S. slaughter swine are comprehensive. Importation under permit will be allowed to a previously approved plant. The animals must originate from states that have reached Stages IV or V under the U.S. Pseudorabies Eradication Program and travel to the Canadian plant along defined routes and within defined time frames.

2. Expansion of the Northwest Cattle Project for Restricted Feeder Cattle

The Canadian "restricted feeder" regulations (Northwest Cattle Project) were amended on August 7, 1998. "Restricted feeders" that originate from approved states may be exported to Canada during the fall and winter months without test. The imported animals are treated for anaplasmosis following their arrival and are then permitted to move without restriction. To qualify to export under the new regulations, states must be officially free of bovine brucellosis and tuberculosis and be classified by Canada as low risk for bluetongue. Feeder cattle have been entering Canada from Montana and Washington State under the provisions of the new regulations. States that meet the same criteria and whose cattle producers wish to export to Canada under the regulatory provisions for restricted feeders are encouraged to contact the Canadian Food Inspection Agency (CFIA). Under normal circumstances, CFIA will evaluate and approve states within 2 weeks of request, dependent on the adequacy of information provided.

Importation under permit is allowed only to previously approved premises. In the United States, the health certification of the animals and validation of their identification is completed by a U.S. Department of Agriculture, Animal and Plant Health Inspection Service (USDA-APHIS) accredited veterinarian; there is no USDA endorsement of the export certificate required.

If a country imposes new duties on cattle trade, the other country may rebalance commitments made under this section for the duration of the duty increase.

3. Animal Health Regionalization - Recognition of the Health Status of States/Zones

Canada has initiated a review of regulations governing the import of animals and their products, with a focus on the principles of zoning and regionalization. The process is scheduled for discussion at the Canadian Animal Health Consultative Committee meeting in December 1998. Both parties expect that Canada will publish a final regulation during the first quarter of 2001.

4. Other Animal Health Issues

Brucellosis and Tuberculosis (TB) Requirements

As part of the cooperative brucellosis program, some states have mandatory brucellosis vaccination requirements for cattle within the state or imported from other states or countries. Some states also have additional testing and/or certification requirements for a number of diseases beyond the U.S. federal import requirements. The following steps will be taken to address this issue:

- The U.S. Department of Agriculture will obtain an updated list of U.S. state vaccination and test requirements for brucellosis and TB for Canadian cattle by January 1999 and provide the list to the Canadian Food Inspection Agency.

- The United States will notify state veterinarians of Canada's animal health status no later than January 1999 and will work with states and industry to address inconsistencies between U.S. state and federal requirements. Discussion between the USDA, state authorities, and industry will be scheduled during the October 1999 U.S. Animal Health Association Meetings at which time states will be given the opportunity to provide reports on actions to be taken to address these inconsistencies.

Equine Semen Imports

The United States requires an import permit and health certification for imports of equine semen from Canada. The United States agrees to initiate the regulatory process to change these regulations to eliminate the permit and certification requirements for equine semen imports from Canada and endeavor to implement a final rule eliminating these permit and certification requirements not later than January 2000.

Inspection of Live Horses

The United States currently has regulations requiring inspection at the border of all Canadian horses presented for permanent entry. Horses presented for temporary entry are not required to be inspected. The United States will initiate the regulatory process to eliminate the inspection requirement for all horses and implement a final rule eliminating this requirement by August 2000.

5. Exchange of Cattle Data

Canada and the United States will cooperate in the exchange of data on cattle trade and make publicly available a joint report within 30 days that will identify data currently available from each side; requests for additional data; and a proposal to address the needs for additional data. It is intended that the additional data will include the number of cattle on feed, cattle inventory and cattle slaughter.

6. In-Transit Movement of Grain by Rail

The Canadian Food Inspection Agency (CFIA) has developed an alternative certification program that will permit shipments of wheat, oats, barley, rye and/or triticale, excluding seed, to transit through Canada based on a certificate of origin in lieu of a phytosanitary certificate with mandatory sampling and testing. This will allow U.S. grain to be shipped on the Canadian rail system to final destinations in the United States. A certificate of origin from a state authorized under the program will be acceptable for grain if it meets all of the following conditions:

* the grain originates in U.S. approved states;
* the grain will transit through Canada only by rail (in sealed hopper cars);
* the grain will return to the United States; and
* the grain will not be unloaded in Canada.

The areas identified to participate in this program include the areas of Minnesota, Montana and North Dakota that are recognized free of Karnal bunt, wheat flag smut, and dwarf bunt. This program will become effective as soon as possible but no later than January 1, 1999 for the states of Minnesota, Montana, and North Dakota. The program will be reviewed, in cooperation with the United States, six months after implementation with a view toward expanding the program to other interested states meeting the same program and science-based criteria as soon as possible.

7. Wheat Access Facilitation Program for Canadian Licensed Primary Elevators

Handling U.S. Wheat

The program will improve access for U.S. farmers to primary elevators in Western Canada, while preserving the integrity of the Canadian grain quality control system. The program codifies the rules for handling of U.S. wheat by licensed Canadian primary elevators. It will enter into force on January 1, 1999.

The Canadian Grain Commission (CGC) is giving advanced authorization to handle imported wheat from the United States for those primary elevators that have indicated a desire to participate in the Wheat Access Facilitation Program. Currently, 4 grain companies have proposed a total of 27 facilities for the program, most of which are located within 60 miles of the Canada-U.S. border.

The program facilitates U.S. wheat being trucked and sold by or on behalf of U.S. producers to participating Canadian primary elevators for storage and forwarding to domestic markets or export locations. This program complements existing arrangements that facilitate the direct movement of U.S. wheat and barley to Canadian feedlots, feed mills and flour mills.

Canada and the United States will jointly publish a fact sheet by January 1, 1999, explaining the program and how producers can participate in the program.

Within six months of implementation, Canada, in cooperation with the United States, will examine how the program has functioned with a view toward ensuring that it is working effectively and identifying potential ways to streamline procedures including inspections. Within the twelve month initial phase of implementation, Canada, in cooperation with the United States, will review the program. The review will include the clarity of the information provided to U.S. and Canadian producers, the volume of shipments under the program, the effect of Canadian Customs procedures and CGC inspections , and comments from U.S. and Canadian producers and Canadian elevators. The twelve month review will also consider procedures under the program with a view to streamlining and reducing costs of the program within 30 days of conclusion of the twelve month review.

This program will not be extended to any state that fails to exempt Canadian grain from state research and promotion check-off programs in a manner equivalent to that granted to grain from other sources.

8. Phytosanitary requirements for the importation of U.S. wheat and other cereals into Canada

Wheat Access Facilitation Program - Phytosanitary Requirements:

A procedure has been developed with the cooperation of the Canadian Food Inspection Agency (CFIA) and the U.S. Department of Agriculture, Animal and Plant Health Inspection Service (USDA-APHIS) that will reduce the amount of sampling and testing required for U.S. growers participating in the Wheat Access Facilitation Program.

Individual participants (growers) may ship wheat under a "Master Phytosanitary Certificate" without the requirement to have each individual shipment tested. Wheat must originate from an approved grower in states eligible under the program, and at least one sample per grower, per crop, must be officially tested and found free of Karnal bunt spores. The Master Phytosanitary Certificate must additionally satisfy requirements for dwarf bunt and flag smut based on area freedom or official testing as appropriate.

This program will be implemented for North Dakota and Montana by January 1, 1999. The program will be reviewed, in cooperation with the United States, six months after implementation with a view toward expanding the program to other interested states meeting the same program and science-based criteria as soon as possible.

Karnal Bunt

Following the recent review of U.S. National Karnal Bunt Survey data and the confirmation that no spores of Karnal bunt were found in the non-infested states, CFIA has worked with USDA-APHIS to develop a certification program that permits wheat to be imported into Canada without the current requirement for testing. Under this program, wheat from approved states will be accompanied by a phytosanitary certificate that certifies that the grain is produced in and shipped from a state that has been officially surveyed and found free from Karnal bunt.

Following discussion with USDA-APHIS to address concerns with the domestic movement of grain from the infested areas, Canada will be prepared to implement the above-mentioned program in a progressive, risk based approach, as follows:

- after 3 years of national surveys, the states of MT, ND, MN, WI, MI, ME, VT, NH, NY, MA, PA, NJ, RI and CT;
- after 4 years of national surveys, all of the United States except the infested states;
- after 5 years of national surveys, all of the United States except infested areas of the infested states.

Canada will initiate the process to implement the above mentioned program immediately with a view to operationalize the above program for the first tier of states by March 31, 1999.

Cereals (Wheat, barley, rye, oats)

As confidence is built through the Wheat Access Facilitation Program, the In-Transit Rail Program, and the above-mentioned phytosanitary certification program, the CFIA will consider further steps toward recognition of area freedom for Karnal bunt, dwarf bunt, and wheat flag smut. CFIA and APHIS will initiate discussions on the use of alternative certification to the issuance of phytosanitary certificates for all cereals to recognize area freedom for Karnal bunt, wheat flag smut and dwarf bunt. As a first step, the Canadian Food Inspection Agency will review the Pest Risk Assessments (PRA) for each of the 3 diseases.

9. Other Grain Related Issues

Grain Trade Consultations

In order to strengthen cooperation and trust on issues of mutual interest, Canada and the United States agree to meet quarterly, or more frequently on request, to consult on global grain production and marketing. Such consultations shall include the following:

- A projection of each country's respective production, utilization and ending stocks of grain (including wheat, barley, corn and oats) for the current marketing year;
- A projection of the quantity, by commodity (including in the case of wheat, separate projections for durum), of grain likely to be exported by each country to the other in the current marketing year;
- A projection of each country's use of subsidies, credit, or other means to facilitate grain exports; as well as the use of aid programs (involving grain); in the current marketing year;
- A review of actions by third countries that may have an impact on global grain trade; and,

- Such other grain production and marketing issues as may be raised by either country.

The first such consultations shall occur not later than February 1, 1999.

10. Seed Trade

The Canadian Food Inspection Agency (CFIA) and the Agricultural Marketing Service, U.S. Department of Agriculture agree to meet with interested state, provincial and industry representatives in the first quarter of calendar year 1999 to develop initiatives to streamline requirements and facilitate seed trade.

11. Export Subsidies (Oats)

Canada and the United States note that in the last crop year more than 700,000 tons of heavily-subsidized European Union (EU) oats were imported into North America. So far this crop year, more than 290,000 tons have been imported. Noting that the EU has eliminated barley export subsidies to North America, Canada and the United States have agreed to consider what steps might be warranted to achieve a similar result for oats.

12. Veterinary Drugs

Both the United States and Canada have stringent, scientifically based programs for the pre-market approval of veterinary drugs. While there are some differences in the regulatory approaches adopted, the outcomes are essentially equivalent in the protection of public health in the two countries.

A comparison made by the U.S. Food and Drug Administration and Health Canada has also indicated that both countries have prohibited most of the same veterinary drugs for food producing animals.

To avoid future disruption in bilateral trade, Canada and the United States have agreed to the following initiatives with respect to veterinary drugs:

- Prepare by April 30, 1999, a side-by-side comparison of veterinary drugs approved for use in both countries, the food-producing animals to which these drugs can be administered, and the maximum residue limits (MRLs) established for any foods resulting from such use.

- Bilaterally, work toward joint evaluation of drug submissions, and the harmonization of MRLs for veterinary drugs which apply to domestic and imported foods.

- Trilaterally with Mexico, implement an effective work plan for the Technical Working Group on Veterinary Drugs under the North America Free Trade Agreement Sanitary and Phytosanitary Committee.

- Multilaterally, work with Mexico to cooperate closely on matters related to the Codex Committee on Residues of Veterinary Drugs in Foods.

13. Pest Control Products

To avoid future disruption in bilateral trade, Canada and the United States agree to the following initiatives with respect to pest control products:

- The U.S. Environmental Protection Agency (EPA) and the Canadian Pesticide Management Regulatory Agency (PMRA) will work with growers and registrants in both countries to accelerate bilateral harmonization using the five year North American Initiative developed by the NAFTA Technical Working Group on Pesticides as the framework. As a result of these efforts, there will be great potential for faster and simultaneous access to a wider range of pest control products for both major and minor crops in both countries. However, the success of this initiative hinges on the full and active participation of growers and registrants in both countries.

- EPA and PMRA will continue to cooperate with respect to U.S. implementation of the Food Quality Protection Act.

- EPA and PMRA are committed to work together to develop a harmonized policy for movement of treated seeds by December 1999.

- EPA and PMRA will investigate mechanisms to improve links with state/provincial/territorial officials as a way of providing improved information sharing and a heads up mechanism for potential pesticide/trade issues.

- Canadian canola growers have requested Canadian registrants to agree voluntarily to remove canola/rapeseed claims from labels of registered canola seed treatments containing lindane by December 31, 1999. All commercial stocks containing lindane for use on canola and lindane treated canola seed would not be used after July 1, 2001. This is contingent on registrants requesting voluntary removal. EPA, PMRA, growers and registrants will continue to work together to facilitate access to replacement products.

- For those specific canola registration reviews undertaken by the EPA on an accelerated basis, EPA and the PMRA will share work on evaluation of pesticide products to the furthest extent possible.

- EPA and PMRA will request U.S. and Canadian canola associations to prioritize pesticide registration needs from a list of pesticides now available in either country which are pending approval in the other country. The associations, in consultation with pesticide registrants, would also be asked to identify alternatives to pesticides such as organophosphates (OPs) or others with risk concerns. The resulting list will then be a basis for a longer term strategy to assure adequate, reduced risk pest control tools for canola growers and will fit with current NAFTA efforts to promote a coordinated approach to Integrated Pest Management for canola.

- For dry beans (pulses), lentils, and flax (crops grown in rotation with canola), EPA and PMRA will request that growers, in consultation with pesticide registrants in the United States and Canada, identify and prioritize pest control tools and needs for purposes of identifying grower priorities for the agencies. EPA and PMRA will jointly explore efforts to share work on evaluation of pesticide products.

- The U.S. Department of Agriculture (USDA) and Agriculture and Agri-Food Canada, in conjunction with EPA and PMRA, will convene, preferably by March 1999, a high level meeting with Chief Executive Officers of North American pesticide companies to encourage companies to take advantage of the pesticide joint review process and to encourage industry's role in harmonization goals.

- USDA and Agriculture and Agri-Food Canada will jointly conduct a study of pesticide price differentials within the United States and Canada to be completed within 6 months.

14. Horticulture

Produce Pesticide Testing

Canada and the United States have stringent, scientifically-based programs for the evaluation and monitoring of pesticide residues. While there are some differences in the regulatory approaches adopted, the outcomes provide essentially equivalent protection of public health.

The Food and Drug Administration and Canadian Food Inspection Agency agree to work toward reducing the sampling of fresh produce through the exchange of scientific data, sampling plans and results, and taking such information into consideration in the development of annual national sampling plans. Both agencies agree to review the operation of import procedures with a view toward taking steps to streamline programs.

Bacterial Ring Rot Testing

In December 1998, the U.S. Department of Agriculture (USDA) and CFIA agree to work with appropriate industry, state, provincial and scientific representatives to explore the benefits and possible implementation of harmonizing testing procedures for bacterial ring rot of potatoes.

Potatoes

Canada and the United States agree to work aggressively and quickly to resolve outstanding potato industry issues. Canada and the United States agree to ask the U.S.-Canada Ad Hoc Potato Committee to review the issue of regulatory differences and restrictions affecting bilateral trade in potatoes and provide a report to Ministers by September 1, 1999, on how these issues might be addressed with a view to facilitating bilateral trade.

Nursery Stock Phytosanitary Requirements

The United States currently restricts certain nursery stock from Canada that has originated in other countries, and then is grown for a time in Canada, to be exported to the United States. USDA and CFIA agree to form a joint working group charged with moving this toward a resolution by prioritizing the regulatory changes in order to harmonize import requirements for nursery stock from offshore sources. The working group will meet initially the first quarter of 1999 with a view to identify and prioritize species where differences exist and identify time lines for implementation of harmonization measures.

15. Joint Cooperation on Biotechnology

Canada and the United States have enjoyed continued cooperation in the area of agricultural biotechnology. Both countries use a science based approach to regulating products of biotechnology, including, but not limited to genetically enhanced products. This approach means that regulatory decisions are predicated on a critical assessment of the best available scientific information about the product and not on the process used to develop it.

In September 1998, Canadian and U.S. regulatory officials signed a technical agreement on the regulatory requirements for the assessment of specific aspects of transgenic plants. Canadian and U.S. regulatory officials will continue to meet to compare and harmonize where possible, the regulatory review process for transgenic plants and to discuss and prioritize future areas of cooperation and information exchange that will facilitate the safe incorporation of transgenic plants into agricultural production and commerce.

Canada and U.S. policy officials will continue to meet to discuss cooperation on multilateral biotechnology issues. Canada and the United States will continue to work closely in areas relating to biosafety including the U.N. Biosafety Protocol. Canada and the United States share common views on the subject of biotechnology in both the Sanitary and Phytosanitary and Technical Barriers to Trade Committees of the World Trade Organization. In addition, both countries are exploring the issue of how to deal with biotechnology within the WTO and its subsidiary agreements as well as other fora such as the Organization for Economic Cooperation and Development, CODEX Alimentarius Commission and Asia-Pacific Economic Cooperation. Canada and the United States will also work together to promote the science-based approach to regulating biotechnology, including capacity-building.

16. Labeling

Canada and the United States recognize the integrated nature of the North American agriculture and food economies and agree that country of origin labeling requirements on agricultural and food products will be consistent with obligations under the North American Free Trade Agreement and the World Trade Organization Agreement

17. Sugar Containing Products

No later than June 1, 1999, the United States will require an export permit issued by the Government of Canada as a condition of entry into the United States for sugar-containing products of Canadian origin for which the exporter or importer is claiming preferential tariff treatment. The products for which export permits will be required as a condition of entry will be sugar-containing products provided for in additional U.S. Note 6 to Chapter 17 of Schedule XX of the United States annexed to the Marrakesh Protocol to the GATT 1994, as currently reflected in note 8 of Chapter 17 of the Harmonized Tariff Schedule of the United States.

MEMORANDUM OF UNDERSTANDING BETWEEN THE DEPARTMENT OF AGRICULTURE FOREST SERVICE AND THE FEDERAL COMMUNICATIONS COMMISSION OF THE UNITED STATES OF AMERICA AND THE SECRETARÍA DE COMUNICACIONES Y TRANSPORTES OF THE UNITED MEXICAN STATES FOR THE USE OF RADIO-FREQUENCIES, COORDINATION AND COOPERATION FOR EMERGENCY PURPOSES

The Department of Agriculture (USDA) Forest Service and the Federal Communications Commission (FCC) of the United States of America and the Secretaría de Comunicaciones y Transportes (SCT) of the United Mexican States, hereinafter referred to as the Parties;

CONSIDERING the provisions of Article 7 of the Radio Regulations considered annexed to the International Telecommunications Constitution (Geneva, 1992);

RECOGNIZING the need to establish shared radio frequencies and radio equipment for firefighting, and certain other emergency, and disaster relief operations,

Have agreed as follows:

ARTICLE I

Purposes

The purposes of this Memorandum of Understanding (hereinafter MOU) are:

1. To establish procedures for coordinating and cooperating on firefighting, and certain other emergency and disaster relief operations.
2. To identify the Departments and/or agencies that shall cooperate in the sharing of radio equipment to support firefighting, and certain other emergency and disaster relief operations.

3. To establish, and to protect from harmful interference, the radio frequencies to be used by the Parties on a shared basis (hereinafter, emergency frequencies) to support firefighting, and certain other emergency and disaster relief operations.

4. To establish that each Party may use the emergency frequencies in the areas of the common border for the purposes established in this MOU. Within the United States, in the area defined in Annex I, Section II, paragraph 1, the emergency frequencies will be used to support firefighting, and certain other emergency and disaster relief operations that require radio equipment from the National Interagency Fire Center (NIFC). Within Mexico, in the area defined in Annex I, Section II, paragraph 1, the emergency frequencies will be used to support firefighting, and certain other emergency and disaster relief operations.

ARTICLE II

Other Participating Departments and/or Agencies

1. On behalf of the United States, the other participating Department and/or agency in this MOU is the Department of the Interior, acting through the Bureau of Land Management. The National Interagency Fire Center (NIFC), a joint operation of several United States government agencies, including the USDA Forest Service and the Bureau of Land Management, will administer the program of cooperation involving the shared use of radio equipment detailed in Article III of this MOU.

2. On behalf of Mexico, the other participating Departments and/or agencies in this MOU are: the Comisión Federal de Telecomunicaciones (CFT), the Secretaría del Medio Ambiente, Recursos Naturales y Pesca(SEMARNAP), acting through the Dirección General Forestal, and the Secretaría de Gobernación (SEGOB), acting through the Dirección General de Protección Civil.

ARTICLE III

Shared Use of Radio Equipment

1. The participating Departments and/or agencies in Mexico may request and receive radio equipment provided by the NIFC.

2. Requests for radio equipment may be made by written communications or through rapid communication methods between the participating Departments and/or agencies. If the request is not made in writing, it shall be confirmed in writing as soon as possible after the request. Written requests shall provide an itemization of equipment needed, together with a commitment to make reimbursement in accordance with Annex III of this MOU. Each such request shall be signed by an authorized official as designated in Annex III, Section II.

3. The receiving Departments and/or agencies in Mexico shall reimburse the NIFC in accordance with Annex III, Section II, Letter (D) for any loss, damage, or expense incurred in the operation of the equipment subject to this MOU. Receiving Departments and/or agencies in Mexico shall also reimburse the NIFC for the cost of all expendable materials and transportation. The reimbursement shall be made within one hundred and twenty days after the receipt by the requesting/receiving Department and/or agency of an itemized statement of such costs.

4. Upon signature of this MOU and during the first trimester of each year, the participating Departments and/or agencies shall exchange the names of officials designated to request or provide services under this MOU as part of the establishment of annual operational guidelines (see Annex III for the Operational Guidelines for 1998) for implementation of this MOU. In accordance with the cooperative nature of this MOU, it is permissible and desirable for the participating Departments and/or agencies to exchange recommendations and suggestions designed to render more effective the operational procedures to be followed in requesting assistance and reimbursing expenses.

5. The technical parameters of the radio equipment available for use pursuant to this MOU are set forth in Annex IV. This Annex may be modified or otherwise updated when the operational guidelines are established each year.

ARTICLE IV

Frequency Use and Protection

In accordance with Annex I, the Parties shall protect from harmful interference the emergency frequencies programmed in the radio equipment used by both Parties on a shared basis to support firefighting, and certain other emergency and disaster relief operations.

ARTICLE V

Settlement of Disputes

1. Nothing in this MOU shall be construed as affecting any existing cooperative arrangements for firefighting or other emergency or disaster relief operations.

2. Any disagreement regarding the application and interpretation of this MOU shall be resolved by agreement between the two Parties.

Article VI

General Provisions

1. Nothing in this MOU shall be construed as obligating the Parties to make expenditures or enter into obligations, contractual or otherwise, for the payment of money in excess of appropriations authorized by law and allocated for firefighting or certain other emergency or disaster relief operations.

2. Except for costs set forth in Article III, paragraph 3 of this MOU, neither Party, nor its officials or employees shall be liable on account of any act or omission in consequence of performance of or intended performance of this MOU.

ARTICLE VII

Entry Into Force and Amendments

This MOU shall enter into force upon signature by both Parties and may be amended by mutual agreement of the Parties. Amendments shall enter into force on a date specified by the Parties through an exchange of written notification.

ARTICLE VIII

Termination of the Memorandum

This MOU may be terminated by mutual agreement of the Parties; by its replacement by another bilateral instrument; or by a written notice of termination from either Party. Such notice of termination shall enter into force six months after it is received.

   170.450 170.975 173.8125 139.150

2. The following additional emergency frequencies (in MHZ) are used for firefighting operations and shall be protected from harmful interference, in accordance with Section III of this Annex, within the border area described in Section II west of 114 degrees West:

   151.190 151.280 151.295 151.310

II. Areas Within Which the Frequencies Are To Be Protected

1. The border areas within which both Parties shall protect the emergency frequencies referred to in Section I lie between the following two lines and the common border between the United States and Mexico:

The United States' line begins at Point Estero on the coast of California at 35° 30′ N, 121° 00′ W, running by great circle arc to the intersection of 34° N, 114° W, thence by great circle arc to the intersection of 33° N, 112° W, thence along parallel 33° N to the intersection of 106° W, thence by great circle arc to the intersection of 31° 30′ N, 104°W, thence by great circle arc to the intersection of 31° N, 100° W, thence by great circle arc to the intersection of 29° N, 99° W, thence by great circle arc to the intersection of 27° 30′ N, 98° W, and thence by great circle arc to the intersection of 27° 10′ N, and the Padre Island - Gulf of Mexico shore at 97° 23′ W, at which point it terminates.

The Mexican line begins at the Pacific Coast of Baja California, running along parallel 31° 20′ N to the Gulf of California, thence by great circle arc to the intersection of 30° 10′ N, 111° W, thence along parallel 30° 10′ N to the intersection of 107° W, thence by great circle arc to the intersection of 27° 30′ N, 104° W, thence by great circle arc to the intersection of 28° N, 102° W, thence by great circle arc to the intersection of 24° 40′ N, 100° W, thence along parallel 24° 40′ N to the Gulf of Mexico, at which point it terminates.

2. Recognizing the fact that radios may be used outside these areas for emergency purposes, both Parties are encouraged to minimize use of the frequencies for other than these purposes.

III. Protection to be provided.

1. The use of emergency frequencies listed in Section I, shall be protected from harmful interference by both Parties as follows:

1.1. In recognition of the fact that there are already a considerable number of assignments on the frequencies designated herein as emergency frequencies, each Party shall provide the other with a listing of all existing assignments on the frequencies to be protected by this MOU until they can be moved to other frequencies. Upon entry into force of this MOU, the Parties agree not to authorize use of these frequencies for any purpose inconsistent with this MOU. Furthermore, if, in the course of firefighting or certain other emergency or disaster relief operations, a Party finds that there is harmful interference on an emergency frequency, it may ask the other Party to turn off the transmitter responsible for that interference or modify its operational parameters in order to resolve the interference problem for the duration of the emergency. The Party receiving such a request shall comply with it as quickly as possible.

1.2 In the United States, within the border area described in Section II, paragraph 1 of this Annex, use of emergency frequencies listed in Section I, paragraph 1 shall be coordinated with the U.S. National Interagency Fire Center prior to each use, and use of emergency frequencies listed in Section I, paragraph 2 shall be coordinated with the FCC, San Diego Office. Use of emergency frequencies in Mexico shall be coordinated with the Secretaría de Comunicaciones y Transportes acting through the Comisión Federal de Telecomunicaciones, prior to each use within the border area described in Section II, paragraph 1 of this Annex.

1.3. Each year, during the first trimester, the United States-Mexico Mixed Commission Charged with Resolving Cases of Radio Interference shall undertake monitoring and coordination activities in order to ensure that, in accordance with paragraph 1.1 above, any unauthorized stations using emergency frequencies are closed down before the peak firefighting season begins.

B. CCC agrees to provide the Cooperating Sponsor the agricultural commodities and quantities thereof, specified in Part II, Item I (hereafter referred to as "the commodities") for assistance in Mongolia and, to the extent specifically included in Part II, Item II, pay ocean transportation and other costs associated with providing the commodities.

C. The Cooperating Sponsor agrees to use the commodities only in accordance with this agreement and the approved Plan of Operation, Attachment A, attached hereto and made a part of this agreement, and shall not sell or barter the commodities except as specified in Attachment A or otherwise specifically agreed in writing by CCC.

D. Except as may be authorized by CCC, all deliveries of the commodities provided under this agreement will be made within the supply period(s) specified in the commodity table in Part II, Item I.

E. WORLD TRADE:

The two governments shall take maximum precautions to ensure that the donation of agricultural commodities pursuant to this agreement will not displace usual marketing of the exporting country in these commodities or disrupt world prices of agricultural commodities or normal patterns of commercial trade with other countries. In implementing this provision the Cooperating Sponsor shall:

1. Ensure that total commercial imports from the exporting country and other countries into the importing country paid for with the resources of the importing country will equal at least the quantities of agricultural commodities specified in the Usual Marketing Table set forth in Part II, Item III below, during each import period specified in the table and during each subsequent comparable period in which commodities provided under this agreement are being delivered; and

2. Take all measures to prevent the resale, diversion in transit, or transshipment to other countries, or the use for other than domestic purposes, of the agricultural commodities donated pursuant to this agreement (except where such resale, diversion in transit, transshipment or use is specifically approved by CCC); and

3. Take all possible measures to prevent the export of any commodity of either domestic or foreign origin, as defined in Part II, Item IV, Para B, during the export limitation period specified in Part II, Item IV, Para A (except as may be specified in Part II or where such export is otherwise specifically approved by CCC).

   Mongolia

3. Kind and Quantity of Commodities Requested

| Program | Commodity | Package size | Quantity (MT) |
|---|---|---|---|
| Monetization | Soft Red Winter Wheat | Bulk | 15,000 |

4. Delivery Schedule

   Commodities are requested to reach U.S. port by February 1999/ March 1999

5. Program Description

   (A) Activity Objectives

   The GOM will assist in improving the livelihood of herders and farmers by enhancing their ability to market products to urban centers. The project will be output-oriented with clearly stipulated performance benchmarks.

   (B) Method For Choosing Beneficiaries

   The beneficiaries will be rural farmers and herdsmen, mostly very small operators, who need improved means of marketing their produce, whether grain, vegetables, other kinds of crops, hides, cashmere and other kinds of animal hair, milk and milk products, etc. Almost all people in rural Mongolia (basically outside the main cities/towns of Ulaanbaatar, Erdenet and Darkhan) are below the United Nations poverty line and their annual cash income is $400 per person or less. Thus, the real beneficiaries are the rural poor who need better means of marketing their products.

   The GOM will consult with U.S. Embassy and target assistance to those areas recommended by USAID's Rural Civil Society Program (RCSP). RCSP will begin operation in January 1999.

(C) Program Administration

The authorized representative of the GOM for this agreement will be The Minister of External Relations. The Minister has overall responsibility for coordination of donor programs in Mongolia. Commodities will enter free of customs, duties or taxes.

(D) Activity Budgets

All costs for this program not covered by resources provided by the USDA will be borne by the GOM.

(E) Recipient Agencies

The most likely candidate to undertake USAID's Rural Civil Society Program will be Mercy Corps International. They will assist in identifying regions most in need of assistance.

(F) Other Entities Involved in Program

Other entities involved in the program may include, but are not limited to: GOM, Ministry of Agriculture and Industry and the Ministry of Infrastructure Development.

(G) Method of Educating Consumers

Recipients will be provided with information on the source of the commodities. GOM will promote the program through newspapers and television coverage and will privately and publicly recognize the United States for providing humanitarian assistance.

(H) Criteria for Measuring Progress

Assuming the wheat reaches Mongolia by the end of March 1999, monetization will take place in April- May and disbursement to projects will occur in May-September 1999.

6. Use of Funds

(A) Quantity and Type of Commodities Sold or Distributed

15,000 MT of wheat

(B) Displacement or Interference with Sales

Mongolia's wheat shortage for 1999 will be in the range of 90,000 to 100,000 MT. The donated commodity under this agreement will not displace or interfere with local production.

(C) Estimated Amount of Sales Proceeds

| Commodity | Tonnage | Cost/MT | Total Estimated |
|---|---|---|---|
| Wheat | 15,000 MT | $100 | $1,500,000 |

(D) Private Sector

Private millers will submit proposals to the Ministry of Agriculture and Industry for the wheat. Actual sales will be determined by the ministry based on criteria such as local availability, storage, transport, capacity and price.

(E) Use of Sales Proceeds

The local currency proceeds will be used to co-finance a program of improvements to rural farm-to-market roads in key areas identified under USAID's Rural Civil Society Project (RCSP) that will begin operation in January, 1999. One of the major factors causing rural poverty is the poor condition of province-level (aimag) and district (soum) roads in rural areas. Transporting agricultural products to the market during the rainy season is unreliable because of the condition of the roads. Simple methods and new, much less costly techniques (for example, road surface sealants) can be used to stabilize road beds for light-to-moderate traffic use to transport livestock products, vegetables and root crops to marketing centers in a more reliable and timely fashion, thus improving rural incomes. Simple culverts and bridging techniques would also be used. The funds would be allocated and monitored by a working group with members from the Embassy/USAID, the Infrastructure Development Ministry, the External Relations Ministry and the World Bank, which is implementing a road rehabilitation program in Mongolia. The co-financing of road improvements with province and district governments would help support infrastructure improvements not now possible because of central government budget stringency. With few exceptions, the GOM cannot afford road improvement programs for other than main trunk roads, which is now being financed by external donors.

This farm-to-market program, properly targeted on important economic roads, would be instrumental in facilitating the marketing of agricultural and value-added animal products and opening up new areas for the commercialization of agriculture. The contractor teams will work in a number of fields: agricultural processing and marketing, development of new agro-based enterprises, technology for value added processing of crop and livestock products, veterinary and agricultural extension services (and the privatization thereof), strengthening local government capacities to support private agro-based enterprises, public information, and other kinds of advisory services.

(F) Receipt and Deposit of Sales Proceeds

Proceeds generated from the sale of commodities (up to the equivalent of approximately $1,500,000 of local currency) will deposited into local currency accounts established for receipt of sales proceeds in coordination with the GOM. Recommendations for projects to finance will be submitted to the Embassy. A working group composed of Embassy, Agriculture Ministry, and External Relations Ministry representatives will make the final project selections.

7. Distribution Methods

(A) Transportation and Storage

10,000 MT of wheat should be received by the Altan Taria company in Ulaanbaatar (capacity 64,000 MT). Altan Taria is served by railroads and has appropriate unloading and loading capacity for rail cars. There were excellent results previously in forwarding the wheat through the port of Vladivostock. The GOM would prefer to use Vladivostock rather than Tianjin because the Russian and Mongolian railways are the same gauge, eliminating the lengthy and costly change of carriages at the Chinese border.
The remaining 5,000 MT of wheat will go to Dornod. Dornod is also on a rail line, therefore logistics will be fairly simple.

(B) Reprocessing and/or Repackaging

N/A

(C) Logistics Plan

Ministry of Agriculture officials will be responsible for the transportation of commodities from the point of initial discharge in Mongolia to grain elevators and other storage sites.

8. Duty Free Entry

The GOM confirms that all commodities provided under this agreement will be imported into Mongolia free of all customs, duties and taxes.

9. Economic Impact

Mongolia is a net importer of wheat. Official statistics show that the country consumes about 400,000 tons a year, of which about half is supplied by domestic production, e.g., in a good year, Mongolia must import to meet domestic consumption requirements.

Imports are in the form of flour, not wheat. Preliminary estimates predicted a harvest of 265,000 tons of wheat in 1998. The actual harvest was 190,000 tons, leaving a shortfall of 75,000 tons in the expected harvest (which would only have supplied just over half of Mongolia's needs). Taking into account imports of 48,000 tons in food aid shipments, including 24,000 tons from the U.S., there remains a shortfall of 27,000 tons. This additional 15,000 tons in food aid will help the GOM by reducing funds expended to import wheat and will therefore have a favorable impact on the country's terms of trade. The program will have no impact on the production of domestic farmers and will serve to keep flour mills in operation.

A) Conduct of testing: The U.S. will plan, conduct and provide data and assessments of LW155 EMD testing as described in the attached program schedule. The U.K. and Italy will be provided the opportunity to attend LW155 EMD testing. The U.K. and Italy will provide data and assessments from nationally generated tests throughout the Project.

B) Provisioning of engineers: The U.K. and Italy will furnish engineers to the US LW155 program office who will be integrated into the program office staff. These engineers will represent their respective nations during EMD.

C) Participation in technical and program reviews: The U.S. will conduct Logistic Product Development, Weapon, System Integration, and Cannon Integrated Product Team (IPT) meetings, as well as quarterly management and design review meetings. The U.K. and Italy will have their co-located engineer, as well as additional technical staff they deem necessary, attend IPT meetings and quarterly reviews for the purpose of ensuring U.K. and Italian requirements are fully considered in the U.S. LW155 EMD program.

D) Provision of information from program efforts: The U.S. will provide program reports from the LW155 EMD program, to include status reports for the P3I efforts and long range barrel. The U.K. and Italy will provide reports from their national, non-financial, contributing efforts. For the U.K., this will include LIMAWS program testing at Yuma Proving Ground in the U.S. – to include fire control, stability and firing table testing. The U.S. will manage this testing while the UK will furnish on-site test personnel and equipment. For Italy, non-financial contribution will include testing regarding the possible development of a national barrel. This testing will be conducted in Italy, or in the U.S. if necessary. The Italian Participant will procure through the Italian prime contractor two LW155 carriages in the final configuration (end of EMD phase) to be used for testing the Italian ordnance and subsequent deliver to the Italian Army. Cost for a carriage and testing will be an Italian expense. The U.S. will assist the U.K. and Italy in the provision of interface drawings necessary for the conduct of national testing and assessments.

ADMINISTRATIVE ARRANGEMENT

In order to provide for the effective implementation of the Agreement between the Government of the United States of America and the Government of the Russian Federation with respect to the transfer of source material, effected by an exchange of diplomatic notes on this date (hereinafter "the Assurances Agreement"), the United States Department of Energy ("the U.S. Party") and the Ministry of Atomic Energy of the Russian Federation ("the Russian Party") (hereinafter "the Parties") hereby establish the following Administrative Arrangement.

Channels of Communication

Pursuant to this Administrative Arrangement the Parties will communicate directly using appropriately secure channels.

Accounting for and Control of Subject Nuclear Material

The Russian Party shall provide nuclear material accounting and control covering all source material transferred pursuant to the Agreement between the United States Department of Energy and the Ministry of the Russian Federation for Atomic Energy Concerning the Transfer of Source Material to the Russian Federation ("the Transfer Agreement"), signed today, or any nuclear material that is substituted for such material pursuant to this Administrative Arrangement.

The Russian Party shall provide to the U.S. Party annually by May 1, through diplomatic channels, an official report on source material transferred pursuant to the Transfer Agreement, or any nuclear material that is substituted for such material pursuant to this Administrative Arrangement, which is within the jurisdiction of the Russian Federation as of December 31 of the preceding year, including a list of permitted withdrawals or sales.

The report shall include beginning and ending inventories, to include quantities, categories (natural uranium or LEU), cylinder number, gross weight, tare weight, shipper, receiver, date received, date removed from storage for shipment from Russia (if applicable), chemical and physical form, and location.

The U.S. Party shall provide prior notification to the Russian Party of each shipment of source material to include cylinder number, gross weight, tare weight, shipper, intended receiver, date shipped (if known), chemical and physical form, and location.

The Russian Party shall provide the U.S. Party notification of receipt of each shipment of source material indicating cylinder number, gross weight, tare weight, shipper, intended receiver, date shipped (if known), chemical and physical form, and location.

Nuclear material included on the inventory shall remain listed until (a) it has, consistent with the Assurances Agreement, been transferred beyond the jurisdiction of the Russian Federation or (b) the Parties agree that it is no longer usable for any nuclear activity relevant from the point of view of international safeguards or has become practically irrecoverable.

The inventory of nuclear material, and the annual report thereon, need not identify physically the particular nuclear material initially subject to the Assurances Agreement, but shall at all times identify an equivalent quantity, provided, that the principle of equivalence shall not be used to reduce the quality of the nuclear material subject to the Assurances Agreement. In particular, the Russian Party may substitute low enriched uranium of equivalent U-235 content for source material subject to the Assurances Agreement. It is understood that such substituted low enriched uranium may be delivered to the United States of America in accordance with the HEU-LEU Agreement or may be delivered to eligible countries or groups of countries in accordance with the provisions of paragraph 5 of the Assurances Agreement. Such substituted low enriched uranium, upon delivery to the United States of America or a third country, will be removed from the inventory of nuclear material subject to the Assurances Agreement.

Monitoring

In order to provide confidence that the terms of the Assurances Agreement are being implemented, the United States of America shall have the right to conduct one annual inventory of cylinders containing uranium subject to the Assurances Agreement in storage in Russia. During this inventory, U.S. monitors shall have the right to visually check serial numbers on cylinders in storage and compare them with numbers declared by the Russian Party in the annual report. Additional procedures, as necessary, may be agreed upon by the Parties and will be the subject of an annex to this Administrative Arrangement.

Reporting

Each party may, at its discretion, provide access to reports prepared under this Administrative Arrangement.

Amendment

This Administrative Arrangement may be amended by written agreement of the Parties.

Effective Date

This Administrative Arrangement shall enter into force upon signature.

Done at Washington this twenty-fourth day of March, 1999, in duplicate, each in the English and Russian languages, both texts being equally authentic.

1. The agreement proposed hereinafter shall constitute the Agreement Between the Government of the United States of America and the Government of the Russian Federation ("the Parties") regarding assurances concerning the source material transferred from the United States to the Russian Federation ("the Assurances Agreement"), in implementation of the Agreement Between the Government of the United States of America and the Government of the Russian Federation Concerning the Disposition of Highly Enriched Uranium Extracted from Nuclear Weapons, signed on February 18, 1993 ("the HEU-LEU Agreement").

2. The Government of the Russian Federation agrees that no special nuclear material shall be produced by the Russian Federation or under the jurisdiction or control of the Russian Federation through the use of source material transferred pursuant to the Transfer Agreement.

3. The Department of Energy of the United States of America ("DOE") and the Ministry of the Russian Federation for Atomic Energy ("MINATOM") are establishing an Administrative Arrangement in order to provide for the effective implementation of the provisions of the Assurances Agreement. This Administrative Arrangement may be amended by written agreement between DOE and MINATOM. The principles of fungibility, equivalence and proportionality shall apply to nuclear material subject to the Assurances Agreement and the Transfer Agreement and the detailed provisions thereof shall be set out in the Administrative Arrangement.

4. The Government of the Russian Federation agrees that:

(a) Source material transferred pursuant to the Transfer Agreement, or any nuclear material that is substituted for such material pursuant to the Administrative Arrangement, shall be subject to agreed bilateral tracking and monitoring arrangements.

(b) Source material transferred pursuant to the Transfer Agreement, or any nuclear material that is substituted for such material pursuant to the Administrative Arrangement, shall not be used for any nuclear explosive device or for research on, or development of, any nuclear explosive device, or for any other military purpose.

(c) Adequate physical protection measures shall be maintained with respect to source material transferred pursuant to the Transfer Agreement or any nuclear material that is substituted for such material pursuant to the Administrative Arrangement. To fulfill this requirement, such measures shall be applied in accordance with levels of physical protection at least equivalent to the recommendations published in the IAEA document INFCIRC/225/Rev.4 entitled "The Physical Protection of Nuclear Material," or a subsequent revision accepted by the Parties.

(d) Source material transferred pursuant to the Transfer Agreement, or any nuclear material that is substituted for such material pursuant to the Administrative Arrangement, shall not be transferred to unauthorized persons or beyond the jurisdiction or control of the Russian Federation without the prior consent of the Government of the United States of America.

(e) Source material transferred pursuant to the Transfer Agreement, or any nuclear material that is substituted for such material pursuant to the Administrative Arrangement, shall not be reprocessed or altered in form or content without the prior consent of the Government of the United States of America.

(f) Source material transferred pursuant to the Transfer Agreement, or any nuclear material that is substituted for such material pursuant to the Administrative Arrangement, shall not be enriched without the prior consent of the Government of the United States of America.

5. The Government of the United States of America agrees that source material transferred pursuant to the Transfer Agreement and low enriched uranium substituted for source material transferred pursuant to the Transfer Agreement may, pursuant to contracts existing on the date of entry into force of the Transfer Agreement, be retransferred by the Russian Federation to countries or groups of countries with which the United States of America has in force an agreement for peaceful nuclear cooperation and that are otherwise acceptable to the United States. The list of acceptable countries or groups of countries is set forth in the Annex to the Assurances Agreement. The Government of the United States of America may add eligible countries or groups of countries to the list at any time, and may delete countries or groups of countries from the list following consultations with the Government of the Russian Federation. MINATOM shall keep records of such retransfers and shall promptly notify an agency designated by the Government of the United States of America of each retransfer. Prior to each retransfer, MINATOM shall confirm in writing to the aforesaid agency of the Government of the United States of America that the nuclear material to be retransferred will be subject to an agreement for peaceful nuclear co-operation between the United States of America and the countries or groups of countries receiving the nuclear material.

6. The Parties agree that if the Transfer Agreement is terminated, any source material transferred pursuant to the Transfer Agreement, or any nuclear material that is substituted for such material pursuant to the Administrative Arrangement, will continue to be subject to the conditions set forth in the Assurances Agreement.

7. Subject to the above, source material transferred pursuant to the Transfer Agreement may be used, as specified in Article 7 of the Transfer Agreement, for diluting HEU for delivery as LEU to the United States of America under the HEU-LEU Agreement or for sale in accordance with the Commercial Agreement and paragraph 5 of the Assurances Agreement.

3. Port Branches of SAIQ
4. Florida Department of Agriculture
5. Shippers and related associations

II. Responsibilities

A. SAIQ

1. To inspect a representative sampling of counties, participating groves, shippers/packers, and storage facilities in the United States prior to initiation of this program.
2. To assess and agree with the management and supervision of the program provided by APHIS.
3. To assess APHIS' or designated cooperator's ability to ensure that the inspections are appropriately conducted and the labeling requirements are met.
4. To notify APHIS immediately upon detection of serious quarantine problems.

B. APHIS

1. To maintain the work plan for citrus fruit produced in Florida in cooperation with SAIQ and other participants, and ensure that the procedures and programs are implemented.
2. To notify SAIQ immediately when there is any positive establishment of exotic fruit flies.

3. To ensure citrus fruit destined for China is not mixed with other citrus fruit and the cartons are properly labeled.
4. During the first year, to inspect 1% of the fruit being certified for export to China. The inspection level may be reduced to as low as 0.5% if the first year's inspection results justify the reduction. Every effort shall be made to select citrus fruit from a representative sample of each of the participating growers.
5. To issue phytosanitary certificates for all shipments to China: in the remarks section, include the additional declaration: "All fruit in the shipment complies with relevant regulations of the PRC and complies with the Florida Citrus Protocol."

7. APHIS will direct that effective actions shall be taken to control those pests of concern to China in order to avoid pest occurrences. APHIS will provide SAIQ with information on pest management practices according to SAIQ requests.

C. State Officials and Other APHIS Authorized Personnel

1. To work closely with the APHIS program coordinator.
2. To comply with requirements set forth in this work plan.
3. To verify that shippers/packers and storage facilities maintain a list of their growers and are able to supply information on a grower's name and grove location.
4. The groves, packing houses, and storage facilities which export to China must be registered with APHIS, and designated by both SAIQ and APHIS
5. To inspect the citrus fruit for any evidence of pest presence or damage, and remove any suspect citrus fruit or culls from the shipment.

III. Regulatory Activity

A. The monitoring for Ceratitis capitata (Mediterranean fruit fly) with Jackson traps shall be set up in the designated groves at a density of one trap per square kilometer year-round. The monitoring for Anastrepha suspensa with McPhail traps in the designated groves will be done consistent with the Caribbean fruit fly protocol. Upon SAIQ request, APHIS will provide SAIQ with the monitoring reports for Ceratitis capitata and Anastrepha suspensa annually.

B. During the first two years of the program (i.e., the 1999-2000 and 2000-2001 export seasons) if any outbreak of Ceratitis capitata is detected, APHIS will immediately notify SAIQ and establish regulated quarantine areas based on U.S. National Program Guidelines. APHIS shall also suspend the export of citrus fruit from an area with a radius of 17 miles (27.2 kilometers) from the center of the pest outbreak. This restriction will be maintained until eradication is certified under the terms and conditions of the U.S. National Program Guidelines. During this two year period, scientists from the United States and China will jointly study the appropriate size of the quarantine zone. If the scientists can come to agreement on a new standard, then that standard shall apply from the beginning of the third year. If an agreement cannot be reached, the following standard will apply from the beginning of the third year:

If any outbreak of Ceratitis capitata is detected, APHIS will immediately notify SAIQ and establish regulated quarantine areas based on U.S. National Program Guidelines. That quarantine shall be maintained until eradication is certified under the terms and conditions of the U.S. National Program Guidelines. During the period that the quarantine is in effect, APHIS shall suspend export of citrus fruit to China from an area with a radius of 4.5 miles (7.2 kilometers) from the center of the pest outbreak.

C. If any outbreak of Anastrepha suspensa is detected in a designated grove APHIS will immediately notify China and begin procedures consistent with the Caribbean fruit fly protocol. No citrus fruit from the designated grove will exported to China until the grove is recertified.

D. If any other fruit fly of quarantine concern to China is detected, APHIS will immediately notify SAIQ and establish regulated quarantine areas based on U.S. National Program Guidelines. That quarantine shall be maintained until eradication is certified under the terms and conditions of the U.S. National Program Guidelines.

IV. Shipping Requirements

A. Export inspection at the shipper/packer or storage facility will include the inspection for plant pests or diseases, and include measures taken to prevent re-infestation by pests or diseases exotic to China.

1. Inspection of the citrus fruit shall be conducted and completed at the shipper/packer or storage facility before loading of any cartons into the transportation vehicles.
2. The packing and storage of citrus fruit for export to China shall be subject to strict quarantine inspection by APHIS. In a storage facility, this packed citrus fruit shall be stored separately from packed citrus fruit from non-designated groves.
3. Each carton or pallet shall have markings to indicate place of production (county), grower or grove, or shipper/packer, or storage facility. If SAIQ cannot identify either the grower or grove, or shipper/packer, storage facility on the cartons or pallets, the citrus fruit in the cartons or pallets will be rejected.
4. Exported citrus fruit shall be transported in closed conveyance. APHIS shall perform a strict inspection of export shipments and ensure that exported citrus fruit is free of quarantine pests of concern to China. After passing inspection, a phytosanitary certificate shall be issued by APHIS. The phytosanitary certificate will be sent to the the port branch of SAIQ before the shipment arrives in China.
5. The citrus fruit shall not transit any area that is under quarantine for Ceratitis capitata unless it is in a sealed container.

V. Port of Entry Inspection

A. Upon arrival at the port, in accordance with the relevant articles of the Law of the People's Republic of China on the Entry and Exit Animal and Plant Quarantine and other relevant regulations, the port branch of SAIQ will conduct a quarantine inspection and examine relevant certificates and markings. If citrus fruit from unapproved growers or groves, shippers/packers, or storage facilities is found, the shipment will not be allowed entry.

B. If Ceratitis capitata or Anastrepha suspensa is found on arrival, SAIQ will immediately notify APHIS about suspending the importation of citrus fruit from that grower or grove, shipper/packer, or storage facility, and the citrus fruit will be returned, re-exported or destroyed.

C. If any other living pest or disease of quarantine concern to China, as listed in Article 13 of the Florida Citrus Protocol, is found, the citrus fruit will be treated and SAIQ will request APHIS to take relevant measures. If the same pest or disease is found again on arrival, the relevant groves will be suspended from the export program until the relevant cause is identified and appropriate measures are taken.

D. If other pests of quarantine concern to China are found, the citrus fruit will be treated in accordance with relevant articles of the Law of the People's Republic of China on the Entry and Exit Animal and Plant Quarantine.

VI. Program Initiation

A. Upon SAIQ request, APHIS will send SAIQ relevant information on the groves, shippers/packers, and storage facilities annually for SAIQ review. The groves, pest management, trapping procedures, shippers/packers, and storage facilities will be reviewed and approved by SAIQ in cooperation with APHIS at an on-site visit prior to program initiation.

B. During the first two years of the agreement (i.e., the 1999-2000 and 2000-2001 export seasons) SAIQ will send two quarantine inspectors to the United States for a total of 15 days each year to conduct pre-inspection surveys in Arizona, California, Florida and Texas.

C. If SAIQ determines that pre-inspection trips are still necessary after the first two years of the agreement, China will cover all travel expenses for those trips. APHIS will facilitate the trips and provide invitation letters.

D. Implementation Schedule. For the 1999-2000 export season, China will accept imports of citrus fruit from the following areas: Indian River, St. Lucie, Martin, Palm Beach, Collier, Hendry, and Lee counties.

After the 1999-2000 export season, each of the following counties - Brevard, DeSoto, Glades, Hardee, Highland, Lake, Manatee, Osceola, Okeechobee, Sarasota, Volusia - that China and the U.S. agree meet the following three (3) conditions will be added to the program:

-- no fruit flies of quarantine concern are intercepted during importation of Florida citrus fruit into China during the 1999-2000 export season;
-- there are no fruit fly infestations at the time of consideration in the particular counties to be added to the program;
-- USDA can provide evidence that all fruit flies of concern in the state have been eradicated from the counties under consideration based on National Program criteria.

ADDENDUM C

To assure clarity and consistency as to the basis for U.S. certification regarding TCK, the following sampling and testing procedures, as referenced in the Agreement on U.S.-China Agricultural Cooperation, will be used on shipments of U.S. wheat sold to the PRC.

Sampling

Each wheat lot will be sampled in accordance with existing procedures prescribed for all export lots of grain as specified in the United States Grain Standards Act (7 USC 71 et seq.), regulations thereunder, and Grain Inspection, Packers and Stockyards Administration's (GIPSA) Federal Grain Inspection Service (FGIS) Grain Inspection Handbook.

A representative sample will be obtained from the running grain stream on a specified interval (every 15-20 seconds) with a diverter-type (D/T) mechanical sampler approved by FGIS after the final elevation of the wheat prior to loading at the export elevator.

For the purposes of determining lot quality and uniformity, FGIS inspects "sublot" samples, normally representing up to 1,640 metric tons (depending on the average hourly loading rate of the elevator). A portion of each sublot sample will be combined to make a composite sample representing each lot loaded aboard the vessel. The composite sample will be reduced to 1,000 grams using approved equipment. The 1,000-gram composite sample will be divided in half: one for the TCK analysis, and one to be held on file for 90 days. FGIS will apply a USDA-FGIS seal to the sample for analysis and send it by overnight delivery to the designated FGIS or FGIS-approved laboratory for analysis.

Sample Assay

From each 500-g composite a sample 50-g sample will be drawn using an official divider and analyzed for TCK. Spores will be isolated from the 50-g sample using minor modifications of standard ISTA seed-wash protocols that involve washing, sieving, centrifuging, resuspending and examining pelleted spores and extraneous material under a microscope. The 50-g sample will be swirled with 100 ml of Tween-20 water in a 500 ml flask for 5 minutes, then poured through a 53 µm nylon screen. The entire filtrate containing any teliospores will be centrifuged for 5 minutes at 600 X g and the supernatant removed. The pellet will be resuspended in 250-500 µl Shear's mounting medium, depending upon the amount of debris. The number of teliospores observed in some samples may make visual counting of all spores impractical, therefore, a statistical method for estimation of teliospore concentration was developed.

a. Teliospore Count and Identification

The number of drops (D) in a sample suspension must be determined. While some variation may exist, the number of drops must be accurately measured. There must also be at least 6 drops in the sample suspension. If not, the sample must be prepared again to meet this requirement.

The first slide will be prepared with one drop of the sample suspension and a second slide with two drops, using separate covers so that they can be completely isolated. Up to 3 additional slides will be prepared with three isolated drops each, or until the sample suspension is totally exhausted. Debris on the slide should be in a single thin layer for ease of observation. The slides will be scanned with a microscope at 100X- 400X. Obviously broken spores, i.e., less than 75 percent of a spore, will not be counted.

The number of spores on the first slide of one drop (Cl) will be counted and the number of spores for the sample computed as:

$$Tl = Cl * D$$

If T1 >70, T1 will be reported as the total number of spores for the sample. If Tl < or =70, the number of spores in the two drops on the second slide will be counted and added to the total number of spores on the first slide (C2). The number of spores for the sample will then be computed as:

$$T2 = (C2 * D)/3$$

If T2>50, T2 (rounded to integer value) will be reported as the total number of spores for the sample.

If T2< or =50, then the number of spores on the third slide will be counted, the total number of spores on all three slides (C3) will be summed, and the number of spores for the sample will be calculated as:

$$T3 = (C3 * D)/6$$

If T3>30, T3 (rounded to integer value) will be reported as the total number of spores for the sample.

If T3< or =30, then the number of spores on the fourth and fifth slides will be counted, the total number of spores on all 5 slides (C4) will be summed, and the number of spores for the sample will be calculated as:

$$T4 = (C4 * D)/ 12$$

T4 (rounded to integer value) is reported as the total of spores for the sample.

If there are less than 12 drops in the suspension, the total count of spores on all slides will be recorded as the total. If no teliospores are found in the first 12 drops, the remainder of the sample will be examined and the number of teliospores will be recorded.

Between sample extractions, all extraction glassware and sieves should be washed and soaked in 33% bleach solution for 15 minutes, then thoroughly rinsed again and stored covered and away from airborne contamination. (Note: The purpose of the bleach is to bleach out all of the pigment from any spores that may be trapped on the filter. If a colorless spore is observed in a sample, it will not be counted.)

b. Spore Identification

TH 11/22/99

The method jointly developed by USDA's Agricultural Research Service (ARS) and the PRC will be utilized. Identification of T. controversa teliospores will be based on confirmation of reticulum depth where reticulations greater than 0.95 µ will be considered TCK and those equal to or less than 0.95 µ are T. tritici (PRC/ARS, unpublished).

A microscope equipped with video camera and monitor will be used to scan the slides at 100X. When a spore is encountered, the scope is to be switched to oil immersion at 1000X to observe the teliospore. Broken spores will not be measured. The spore will be centered and the image redirected to the monitor.

The focus is adjusted on the periphery of the spore so that the endospore wall becomes a sharp black line. Using a 15-cm plastic rule, the depth of the reticulum is measured from the center of this dark line to the top of the clearest reticulum "spike". Four measurements will be taken from each spore, with points chosen that closely correspond to points on a compass.

c. Logistics Index

a = -10.6914 b= 11.6214

R= reticulum e= 2.71828

The mean of the four measurements will be calculated and converted to micrometers using the optical conversion factor determined by the microscope/monitor system being used. The Logistics Index value can be determined using the Logistics Index equation above or Table 1 to determine the corresponding index for the reticulum depth. The index can be interpreted as the probability that a teliospore is TCK. In general, an index value over 0.5 ( reticulum depth =0.95 µm ) would indicate that the spore is TCK.

Table-1. Logistics Indices for the identification of Tilletia controversa (TCK)

| Reticulum (µm) | Logistics Index | Reticulum(µm) | Logistics Index |
|---|---|---|---|
| 0.05 | 0.000 | 1.00 | 0.717 |

| 0.90 | 0.442 | 1.85 | 1.000 |
| 0.95 | 0.586 | 1.90 | 1.000 |

Logistic indices values of 0.586 or above are considered TCK

d. Absolute and Relative Indices

When evaluating an entire sample, a maximum of 30 spores will be measured. The Absolute Index will be calculated by summing the Logistics Index values and can be interpreted as the expected number of TCK spores in a fixed sample size. The Relative Index is the average of the Logistics Indices and is interpreted as the proportion of TCK spores in a fixed sample size.

Certification

Each shipment will be certified by FGIS. The testing laboratory will notify the FGIS field office that performed the original sampling of the analysis results. This field office will issue an official export inspection certificate with the following statement.

"Tilletia controversa Kuhn spores (exceed/do not exceed) ~~43,000~~ 30,000 per 50 grams of sample."

Protocol for Phytosanitary Requirements for the Export of Citrus from the State of California, United States of America to the People's Republic of China

In order to safely export fresh citrus fruit from the State of California, United States of America to the People's Republic of China (China), the Chinese Delegation, with representatives from the Ministry of Foreign Trade & Economic Cooperation and the State Administration for Entry-Exit Inspection and Quarantine (SAIQ) of the People's Republic of China, and the United States, Delegation with representatives from the Office of the United States Trade Representative and the U.S. Department of Agriculture, exchanged views and reached consensus as follows:

Article 1: The citrus fruit exported to China must come from the areas in California free of Medfly (Ceratitis capitata) and Mexican fruit fly (Anastrepha ludens). The citrus fruit shall be free from Citrus crinkly leaf virus, Citrus infectious variegation virus, Citrus psorosis virus, Citrus xyloporsis viroid and Xanthomonas campestris pv. citri. The groves, packing houses, and storage facilities which export to China must be registered with the Animal and Plant Health Inspection Service (APHIS), and designated by both SAIQ and APHIS.

Article 2: APHIS will direct that effective actions shall be taken to control those pests of concern to China in approved counties in order to avoid pest occurrences. APHIS will provide SAIQ with information on pest management practices according to SAIQ requests.

Article 3: The monitoring for Ceratitis capitata with Jackson traps shall be set up in the designated groves at a density of one trap per square kilometer using the following schedule:

|---|---|---|
| Navel Oranges | San Joaquin Valley | November through May |
| | Southern California | November through May |
| Valencia Oranges | San Joaquin Valley | March through November |
| | Southern California | March through November |
| Grapefruit | San Joaquin Valley | March through July |
| | Southern California | June through September |
| Lemons | San Joaquin Valley | September through March |
| | Southern California | November through September |

The monitoring for Anastrepha ludens with McPhail traps in the designated groves will be consistent with the National trapping guidelines. Upon SAIQ request, APHIS will provide SAIQ with monitoring reports for Ceratitis capitata and Anastrepha ludens annually.

Article 4: During the first two years of the program (i.e., the 1999-2000 and 2000-2001 export seasons) if any outbreak of Anastrepha ludens or Ceratitis capitata is detected, APHIS will immediately notify SAIQ and establish regulated quarantine areas based on U.S. National Program Guidelines. APHIS shall also suspend the export of citrus fruit from an area with a radius of 17 miles (27.2 kilometers) from the center of the pest outbreak. This restriction shall be maintained until eradication is certified under the terms and conditions of the U.S. National Program Guidelines. During this two year period, scientists from the United States and China will jointly study the appropriate size of the quarantine zone. If the scientists can come to agreement on a new standard, then that standard shall apply from the beginning of the third year. If an agreement cannot be reached, the following standard will apply from the beginning of the third year:

If any outbreak of Anastrepha ludens or Ceratitis capitata is detected, APHIS will immediately notify SAIQ and establish regulated quarantine areas based on U.S. National Program Guidelines. That quarantine shall be maintained until eradication is certified under the terms and conditions of the U.S. National Program Guidelines. During the period that the quarantine is in effect, APHIS shall suspend the export of citrus fruit to China from an area with a radius of 4.5 miles (7.2 kilometers) from the center of the pest outbreak.

If any other fruit fly of quarantine concern to China is detected, APHIS will immediately notify SAIQ and establish regulated quarantine areas based on U.S. National Program Guidelines. That quarantine shall be maintained until eradication is certified under the terms and conditions of the U.S. National Program Guidelines.

APHIS will immediately notify SAIQ when each quarantine ban is lifted.

Article 5: The citrus fruit exported to China shall be inspected by APHIS authorized personnel and found free of live insects and mites of quarantine concern, as listed in Article 13, and essentially free of leaves, twigs and soil. Inspectors will ensure that the citrus fruit certified for export is essentially free of rotting citrus fruit.

Article 6: The packing and storage of citrus fruit for export to China shall be subject to strict quarantine inspection by APHIS. In a storage facility, this packed citrus fruit shall be stored separately from packed citrus fruit from non-designated groves.

Article 7: Each carton or pallet shall have markings to indicate place of production (county), grower or grove, or shipper/packer, or storage facility. If the port branch of SAIQ cannot identify either the grower or grove, or shipper/packer, storage facility on the cartons or pallets, the citrus fruit in the cartons or pallets will be rejected.

Article 8: Exported citrus fruit shall be transported under closed conveyance. APHIS shall perform a strict inspection of export shipments and ensure that exported citrus fruit is free of quarantine pests of concern to China. After passing inspection, a phytosanitary certificate shall be issued by APHIS. The phytosanitary certificate will be sent to the port branch of SAIQ before the shipment arrives in China.

Article 9: The citrus fruit shall not transit any area that is under quarantine for Ceratitis capitata unless it is in a sealed container.

Article 10: The port branch of SAIQ will conduct quarantine inspection and examine relevant certificates and markings as the citrus fruit arrives at the designated ports. If citrus fruit from unapproved growers or groves, shippers/packers, or storage facilities is found, the shipment will not be allowed entry.

If Ceratitis capitata or Anastrepha ludens is found on arrival, SAIQ will immediately notify APHIS about suspending the importation of citrus fruit from that grower or grove, shipper/packer, and storage facility and the citrus fruit will be returned, re-exported or destroyed. If any other living pest or disease of quarantine concern to China, as listed in Article 13, is found, the citrus fruit will be treated and SAIQ will request that APHIS take relevant measures. If the same pest or disease is found again on arrival, the relevant grove will be suspended from the export program until the relevant cause is identified and appropriate measures are taken. If other pests of quarantine concern to China are found, the citrus fruit will be treated in accordance with relevant articles of the Law of the People's Republic of China on the Entry and Exit Animal and Plant Quarantine.

Article 11: Upon SAIQ request, APHIS will send SAIQ relevant information on the groves, shippers/packers, and storage facilities annually for SAIQ review. The groves, pest management, trapping procedures, shippers/packers, and storage facilities will be reviewed and approved by SAIQ in cooperation with APHIS at an onsite visit prior to program initiation.

If major quarantine problems are detected during the importation of citrus fruit into China, APHIS and SAIQ will consult about SAIQ conducting a review of the particular quarantine problem in the United States.

During the first two years of the agreement (i.e., the 1999-2000 and 2000-2001 export seasons) SAIQ will send two quarantine inspectors to the United States for a total of 15 days each year to conduct pre-inspections in Arizona, California, Florida and Texas.

Travel expenses (i.e., transportation, lodging, and a per diem allowance) for all of the trips described above in Article 11 will be funded by the United States.

If SAIQ determines that pre-inspection trips are still necessary after the first two years of the agreement, China will cover all travel expenses for those trips. APHIS will facilitate the trips and provide invitation letters.

Article 12: Ports of entry: Haikou, Guangzhou, Shanghai, Dalian, Qingdao, Nanjing and Tianjin.

Article 13: The pests and diseases of quarantine concern to China are:

Ceratitis capitata (Wiedemann)
Anastrepha ludens (Leow)
Frankliniella occidentalis (Pergande)
Pantomorus cervinus (Boheman)
Citrus crinkly leaf virus
Citrus infectious variegation virus
Citrus psorosis virus
Citrus xyloporsis viroid

Xanthomonas campestris pv. citri

Article 14: Implementation Schedule. For the 1999-2000 export season China will accept imports of citrus fruit from the following areas: Fresno, Tulare, Kern, Madera, Ventura, Monterey. Once the quarantine bans are lifted in Riverside, Orange and San Diego counties, SAIQ will immediately assess the data provided by APHIS to allow for exports from these counties. These counties will be added only when SAIQ is satisfied that the evidence is sufficient.

After the 1999-2000 export season, each of the counties listed in VI.D., paragraph 2 of the California Work Plan that China and the U.S. agree meet the following three (3) conditions will be added to the program:

- no fruit flies of quarantine concern are intercepted during importation of California citrus fruit into China during the 1999-2000 export season;
- there are no fruit fly infestations at the time of consideration in the particular counties to be added to the program;
- USDA can provide evidence that all fruit flies of concern in the state have been eradicated from the counties under consideration based on U.S. National Program criteria.

Article 15: This agreement is valid for one year from the date of signature. If neither party requests revision or termination of the agreement within two months before its expiration date, the agreement shall be extended automatically for additional 12 month periods.

This document, written in both English and Chinese, was signed on April 7, 1999 in Washington, D.C. Both the English and Chinese documents have equal force.

APHIS shall also suspend the export of citrus fruit from an area with a radius of 17 miles (27.2 kilometers) from the center of the pest outbreak. This restriction shall be maintained until eradication is certified under the terms and conditions of the U.S. National Program Guidelines. During this two year period, scientists from the United States and China will jointly study the appropriate size of the quarantine zone. If the scientists can come to agreement on a new standard, then that standard shall apply from the beginning of the third year. If an agreement cannot be reached, the following standard will apply from the beginning of the third year:

   If any outbreak of Anastrepha ludens or Ceratitis capitata is detected, APHIS will immediately notify SAIQ and establish regulated quarantine areas based on U.S. National Program Guidelines. If citrus fruit from unapproved growers or groves, shippers/packers, or storage facilities is found, the shipment will not be allowed entry.

B. If Ceratitis capitata or Anastrepha ludens is found on arrival, SAIQ will immediately notify APHIS about suspending the importation of citrus from that grower or grove, shipper/packer, or storage facility, and the citrus fruit will be returned, re-exported or destroyed.

C. If any other living pest or disease of quarantine concern to China, as listed in Article 13 of the California Citrus Protocol, is found, the citrus fruit will be treated and SAIQ will request that APHIS take relevant measures. D. Implementation Schedule. For the 1999-2000 export season China will accept imports of citrus fruit from the following areas: Fresno, Tulare, Kern, Madera, Ventura, Monterey. Once the quarantine bans are lifted in Riverside, Orange and San Diego counties, SAIQ will immediately assess the data provided by APHIS to allow for exports from these counties. These counties will be added only when SAIQ is satisfied that the evidence is sufficient.

After the 1999-2000 export season, each of the following counties - Butte, Imperial, Los Angeles, San Luis Obispo, Santa Barbara, San Bernardino, Glenn, Placer, Kings, Santa Clara, Stanislaus, Merced and Mariposa - that China and the U.S. agree meet the following three (3) conditions will be added to the program:

Protocol for Phytosanitary Requirements for the Export of Citrus from the State of Florida, United States of America to the People's Republic of China

In order to safely export fresh citrus fruit from the State of Florida, United States of America to the People's Republic of China (China), the Chinese Delegation, with representatives from the Ministry of Foreign Trade & Economic Cooperation and the State Administration for Entry-Exit Inspection and Quarantine (SAIQ) of the People's Republic of China, and the United States Delegation, with representatives from the Office of the United States Trade Representative and the U.S. Department of Agriculture, exchanged views and reached consensus as follows:

Article 1: The citrus fruit exported to China must come from the areas in Florida free of Medfly (Ceratitis capitata). The citrus fruit shall be free from Citrus crinkly leaf virus, Citrus infectious variegation virus, Citrus psorosis virus, Xanthomonas campestris pv. citrumelo, and Xanthomonas campestris pv. citri. Article 3: The monitoring for Ceratitis capitata with Jackson traps shall be set up in the designated groves at a density of one trap per square kilometer year-round. The monitoring for Anastrepha suspensa with McPhail traps in the designated groves will be done consistent with the Caribbean Fruit Fly Protocol. Upon SAIQ request, APHIS will provide SAIQ with the monitoring reports for Ceratitis capitata and Anastrepha suspensa annually.

Article 4: During the first two years of the program (i.e., the 1999-2000 and 2000-2001 export seasons) if any outbreak of Ceratitis capitata is detected, APHIS will immediately notify SAIQ and establish regulated quarantine areas based on U.S. National Program Guidelines. APHIS shall also suspend the export of citrus fruit from an area with a radius of 17 miles (27.2 kilometers) from the center of the pest outbreak. This restriction shall be maintained until eradication is certified under the terms and conditions of the U.S. National Program Guidelines. During the period that the quarantine is in effect, APHIS shall suspend export of citrus fruit to China from an area with a radius of 4.5 miles (7.2 kilometers) from the center of the pest outbreak.

If any outbreak of Anastrepha suspensa is detected in a designated grove, APHIS will immediately notify SAIQ and begin procedures consistent with the Caribbean Fruit Fly Protocol. No citrus fruit from the affected grove will be exported to China until the grove is recertified.

If any other fruit fly of quarantine concern to China is detected, APHIS will immediately notify SAIQ and establish regulated quarantine areas based on U.S. National Program Guidelines. That quarantine shall be maintained until eradication is certified under the terms and conditions of the U.S. National Program Guidelines.

APHIS will immediately notify SAIQ when each quarantine ban is lifted.

Article 5: The citrus fruit exported to China shall be inspected by APHIS authorized personnel and found free of live insects and mites of quarantine concern, as listed in Article 13, and essentially free of leaves, twigs and soil. Inspectors will ensure that the citrus fruit certified for export is essentially free of rotting citrus fruit.

Article 6: The packing and storage of citrus fruit for export to China shall be subject to strict quarantine inspection by APHIS. In a storage facility, this packed citrus fruit shall be stored separately from packed citrus fruit from non-designated groves.

Article 7: Each carton or pallet shall have markings to indicate such as place of production (county), grower or grove, or shipper/packer, or storage facility. If the port branch of SAIQ cannot identify either the grower or grove, or shipper/packer or storage facility on the cartons or pallets, the citrus fruit in the cartons or pallets will be rejected.

Article 8: Exported citrus fruit shall be transported under closed conveyance. APHIS shall perform a strict inspection of export shipments and ensure that exported citrus fruit is free of quarantine pests of concern to China. After passing inspection, a phytosanitary certificate shall be issued by APHIS. The phytosanitary certificate will be sent to the port branch of SAIQ before the shipment arrives in China.

Article 9: The citrus fruit shall not transit any area that is under quarantine for Ceratitis capitata unless it is in a sealed container.

Article 10: SAIQ will conduct quarantine inspection and examine relevant certificates and markings, as the citrus fruit arrives at the designated ports. If citrus fruit from unapproved growers or groves, shippers/packers, or storage facilities is found, the shipment will not be allowed entry.

If Ceratitis captitata or Anastrepha suspensa is found on arrival, SAIQ will immediately notify APHIS about suspending the importation of citrus fruit from that grower or grove, shipper/packer, storage facilities and the citrus fruit will be returned, re-exported or destroyed. If any other living pest or disease of quarantine concern to China, as listed in Article 13, is found, the citrus fruit will be treated and SAIQ will request that APHIS take relevant measures. If the same pest or disease is found again on arrival, the relevant grove will be suspended from the export program until the relevant cause is identified and appropriate measures are taken. If other pests of quarantine concern to China are found, the citrus fruit will be treated in accordance with relevant articles of the Law of the People's Republic of China on the Entry and Exit Animal and Plant Quarantine.

Article 11: Upon SAIQ request, APHIS will send SAIQ relevant information on the groves, shippers/packers, and storage facilities annually for SAIQ review. The groves, pest management, and trapping procedures, shippers/packers, and storage facilities will be reviewed and approved by SAIQ in cooperation with APHIS at an on-site visit prior to program initiation.

If major quarantine problems are detected during the importation of citrus fruit into China, APHIS and SAIQ will consult about SAIQ conducting a review of the particular quarantine problem in the United States.

During the first two years of the agreement (i.e., the 1999-2000 and 2000-2001 export seasons) SAIQ will send two quarantine inspectors to the United States for a total of 15 days each year to conduct pre-inspection surveys in Arizona, California, Florida and Texas.

Travel expenses (i.e., transportation, lodging, and a per diem allowance) for all of the trips described above in Article 11 will be funded by the United States.

If SAIQ determines that pre-inspection trips are still necessary after the first two years of the agreement, China will cover all travel expenses for those trips. APHIS will facilitate the trips and provide invitation letters.

Article 12: Ports of entry: Haikou, Guangzhou, Shanghai, Dalian, Qingdao, Nanjing and Tianjin.

Article 13: The pests and diseases of quarantine concern to China are:

Ceratitis capitata (Wiedemann)
Anastrepha suspensa (Loew)
Pantomorus cervinus (Boheman)
Xanthomonas campestris pv. citri
Xanthomonas campestris pv. citrumelo
Citrus crinkly leaf virus
Citrus infectious variegation virus
Citrus psorosis virus
Pseudococcus maritimus

Article 14: Implementation Schedule. For the 1999-2000 export season, China will accept imports of citrus fruit from the following areas: Indian River, St. Lucie, Martin, Palm Beach, Collier, Hendry, and Lee counties.

After the 1999-2000 export season, each of the counties listed in VI.D., paragraph 2 of the Florida Work Plan that China and the U.S. agree meet the following three (3) conditions will be added to the program:

- no fruit flies of quarantine concern are intercepted during importation of Florida citrus fruit into China during the 1999-2000 export season;
- there are no fruit fly infestations at the time of consideration in the particular counties to be added to the program;
- USDA can provide evidence that all fruit flies of concern in the state have been eradicated from the counties under consideration based on National Program criteria.

Article 15: This agreement is valid for one year from the date of signature. If neither party requests revision or termination of the agreement within two months before its expiration date, the agreement shall be extended automatically for additional 12 month periods.

This document, written in both English and Chinese, was signed on April 7, 1999 in Washington, D.C. Both the English and Chinese documents have equal force.

AGREEMENT ON U.S. - CHINA AGRICULTURAL COOPERATION

China and the United States are the world's two largest agricultural producers. Over the next several years, all nations will face important challenges as they work to ensure sufficient affordable food and fiber are made available to the world's people in an environmentally sustainable manner. It will be important that China and the United States work cooperatively to ensure these challenges are met successfully.

In that spirit, China and the United States are determined to build on our long history of cooperation in agriculture on the basis of equal and mutual benefit. Agriculture should be one of the bright points in our bilateral relationship - China and the United States must work together to make it a pillar of strength in the 21st century. With this agreement, China and the United States launch a partnership in agriculture for the 21st century with three objectives: increased technical cooperation and scientific exchange, specific technological exchanges to develop the agricultural sectors of both countries, and the resolution of trade disputes.

I. Technical Cooperation and Exchange

China and the United States agree to actively promote comprehensive cooperation in agriculture in the field of high-technology and encourage research institutes and agricultural enterprises to collaborate in high-tech research and development. China and the United States agree that enterprises should be urged to make investment in each country to produce and do business in high-tech agricultural products.

The United States will review its technical assistance programs in China to consider ways to increase the efficacy of these programs. China will examine existing restrictions on investment and business development in China with a view toward facilitating investment and development in China's agricultural economy by enterprises and non-governmental organizations.

The United States will create special educational symposiums specific to China's needs in cooperation with U.S. land grant universities for Chinese officials and producers. The United States will provide opportunities for young Chinese leaders to visit U.S. farms, ranches and universities to study management systems and production technologies. The United States will arrange opportunities for Chinese officials and business leaders to study U.S. marketing and distribution of agricultural products in China and the United States.

II. Specific Technical Cooperation and Assistance Initiatives

As a means to implement the principle of technological cooperation and exchange, China and the United States will implement specific projects from the list below:

Field and Horticultural Products

- Provision of U.S. technical expertise in plant protection, production and distribution of farm products to assist China in its efforts to improve efficiency in agricultural systems.
- Joint research on and the exchange of crop varieties and genetic resources, such as:
    - exchanging genetic resources of farm crops (for example, appropriate high quality, cold-tolerant, salinity tolerant, and disease- and pest-resistant varieties of wheat, corn, cotton and fruits),
    - conducting joint research, development and utilization of genetic resources of farm crops, and
    - conducting joint research on conventional seed breeding.
- Joint research projects on plant protection, such as:
    - biotechnology applications for disease and pest control,
    - research on disease and pest forecasting,
    - research on integrated control approaches for diseases and pests,
    - research on pesticide application technologies, and
    - research on chemical herbicides.
- Technical collaboration on post-harvest storage and transportation techniques.
- Technological exchanges and cooperation on precision agriculture.

Biotechnology

- The United States will arrange visits by Chinese regulators and scientists to U.S. biotech regulatory agencies in Washington, followed by visits with private companies
- The United States will arrange study tours of the U.S. seed industry that include meetings with U.S. government and international agencies involved with biotech seed.
- China and the United States will undertake a joint project, staffed by both Chinese and U.S. scientists, on drought-resistant, salinity-tolerant, and cold-resistant crops.
- China and the United States will hold a joint seminar on the commercialization of biotech projects.
- Cooperative research on transgenic plant technology, including research on target genes of major crops, genetic engineering, genetic breeding, and development and utilization of transgenic crops.
- Development and scientific utilization of feed resources and use of biotechnology to improve feed quality, feed conversion rates, and development of new feed resources.

Meat, Poultry, and Livestock

- The U.S. livestock industry will provide free registration and enrollment for select Chinese officials and producers in Cattlemen's College classes during NCBA Conventions or Summer Conferences.
- The U.S. livestock industry will provide free registration and enrollment for select Chinese officials and producers at the World Pork Symposium to study the latest technology in the pork industry.
- Strengthening cooperation in conservation of genetic resources for livestock, poultry, and forage grass.
- Strengthening cooperation in selection and utilization of new breeds and varieties.
- Technical assistance on quick testing, monitoring, and management of major animal diseases.
- Collaborative research on testing technology for safety and quality of animal feed.
- Technical assistance on environmentally sound production practices and waste disposal techniques.

Aquaculture

- Collaborative research and technological exchange in aquaculture to improve efficiency and minimize adverse environmental impacts.
- Exchange of genetic resources for aquatic products.

Natural Resource and Environment

- The United States will provide technical assistance in water conservation and management for China to further its work in identifying and conserving key water resources.
- China and the United States will consider undertaking joint research projects on natural disaster and environmental issues. Research projects may include the following:
    - development of measures to reduce the negative impacts of natural disasters on agriculture;
    - technological improvements to monitor and evaluate natural disasters;
    - studies on the impacts of climatic changes on the agricultural eco-system; and
    - development of measures to control greenhouse gas emissions in agriculture.

III. Resolution of Trade Disputes

China and the United States agree to accelerate the removal of all non-tariff measures restricting trade in agricultural products that cannot be justified under WTO rules. In particular, China and the United States agree that sanitary and phytosanitary disputes should be settled scientifically so as to promote the rational two-way trade of farm products.

Citrus

China and the United States have agreed to protocols and work plans (Addendum A), in accordance with the standards and principles of internationally accepted pest risk assessment (PRA), and will permit the import of U.S. citrus to China. The United States shall ensure that U.S. citrus exported to China shall not cause harm to China's agricultural production and agrees to undertake additional science-based trapping to satisfy China's concerns.

The U.S. will continue to expedite import approval of Chinese horticultural products such as pears, longans, and penjing upon receipt of required data and documentation. In order to facilitate such a process, both sides will hold regular consultations and provide requested information as quickly as possible.

Meat

China and the United States have agreed that both sides should ensure the health and safety of U.S. exports of meat to China. In recognition of the situation that the U.S. possesses a sound system of epidemiological disease control and a program for chemical residue control, China will accept meat from all USDA Food Safety Inspection Service (FSIS) approved plants. China maintains the right to audit the U.S. inspection system through random inspection of establishments and random inspection of U.S. product at the Chinese point of entry.

Should China determine, based on scientific inspection, that a particular shipment is not wholesome, then China can refuse to accept shipments from the originating plant until the underlying problem is resolved. China shall promptly notify FSIS of such action.

China accepts the USDA/FSIS "Meat and Poultry Export Certificate of Wholesomeness" (Addendum B) as proof that FSIS certified meat and poultry complies with the U.S. inspection standards, and therefore any meat accompanied by the certificate is eligible for import into China.

Wheat

China and the United States have agreed that both sides should ensure that the U.S. wheat exported to China shall pose no risk to Chinese wheat production. Based on this understanding, China has agreed to permit import of all types of wheat from all regions of the United States.

Taking note of the conclusions of the report entitled "Risk Assessment for the Importation of U.S. Milling Wheat Containing Teliospores of Tilletia controversa Kuhn (TCK) into the People's Republic of China," China and the United States have agreed to initiate immediately a joint project to reach a bilateral agreement on the tolerance level of TCK in wheat exports to China, and to study the sampling and testing procedures proposed by the United States in Addendum C. In the absence of reaching a bilateral agreement on the tolerance level one year after the initiation of the project, the tolerance level and other provisions applied during the interim period shall continue to be applied. In this regard, the United States agrees to provide necessary support, including training of personnel, to facilitate reaching such an agreement.

In the interim period, which commences upon signature of this Agreement on U.S.-China Agricultural Cooperation, the United States agrees that an accredited U.S. laboratory will certify according to the procedures in Addendum C, and China agrees to accept, shipments of U.S. wheat that do not exceed a tolerance level of 30,000 TCK spores per 50 gram sample.

Both China and the United States agree that no special measures, including those affecting expeditious discharge and changes in destination, will be taken with regard to U.S. wheat at or below this tolerance level. All ports in China will be eligible to import U.S. wheat that is at or below the tolerance for TCK. They also agree that currently there are no other outstanding phytosanitary issues that would inhibit China's imports of U.S. wheat. Equivalent tolerance levels will also be applied to other U.S. grains in case of possible TCK contamination.

Both sides recognize that, as a standard part of commercial contracts for Chinese purchases of U.S. wheat, certification of contract terms are final at loading and U.S. officials and/or the seller's representative may sample and test shipments upon arrival if problems arise. Parties to the contract shall mutually settle any claims.

This agreement, written in both English and Chinese, was signed on April 10, 1999 in Washington, D.C. Both the English and Chinese versions have equal force.

ADDENDUM A

Protocol for Phytosanitary Requirements for the Export of Citrus from the State of Arizona, United States of America to the People's Republic of China

In order to safely export fresh citrus fruit from the State of Arizona, United States of America to the People's Republic of China (China), the Chinese Delegation, with representatives of the Ministry of Foreign Trade & Economic Cooperation and the State Administration for Entry-Exit Inspection and Quarantine (SAIQ) of the People's Republic of China and the United States Delegation, with representatives from the Office of the United States Trade Representative and the U.S. Department of Agriculture, exchanged views and reached consensus as follows:

Article 1: The citrus fruit exported to China must come from the areas in Arizona free of Mexican fruit fly (Anastrepha ludens). The groves, packing houses, and storage facilities which export to China must be registered with the Animal and Plant Health Inspection Service (APHIS), and designated by both SAIQ and APHIS.

Article 2: APHIS will direct that effective actions shall be taken to control those pests of concern to China in order to avoid pest occurrences. APHIS will provide SAIQ with information on pest management practices according to SAIQ requests.

Article 3: The monitoring for Anastrepha ludens with McPhail traps in the designated groves will be consistent with the National trapping guidelines. Upon SAIQ request, APHIS will provide SAIQ with monitoring reports for Anastrepha ludens annually.

Article 4: During the first two years of the program (i.e., the 1999-2000 and 2000-2001 export seasons) if any outbreak of Anastrepha ludens is detected, APHIS will immediately notify SAIQ and establish regulated quarantine areas based on U.S. National Program Guidelines. APHIS shall also suspend the export of citrus fruit from an area with a radius of 17 miles (27.2 kilometers) from the center of the pest outbreak. This restriction shall be maintained until eradication is certified under the terms and conditions of the U.S. National Program Guidelines. During this two year period, scientists from the United States and China will jointly study the appropriate size of the quarantine zone. If the scientists can come to agreement on a new standard, then that standard shall apply from the beginning of the third year. If an agreement cannot be reached, the following standard will apply from the beginning of the third year:

If any outbreak of Anastrepha ludens is detected, APHIS will immediately notify SAIQ and establish regulated quarantine areas based on U.S. National Program Guidelines. That quarantine shall be maintained until eradication is certified under the terms and conditions of the U.S. National Program Guidelines. During the period that the quarantine is in effect, APHIS shall suspend the export of citrus fruit to China from an area with a radius of 4.5 miles (7.2 kilometers) from the center of the pest outbreak.

If any other fruit fly of quarantine concern to China is detected, APHIS will immediately notify SAIQ and establish regulated quarantine areas based on U.S. National Program Guidelines. That quarantine shall be maintained until eradication is certified under the terms and conditions of the U.S. National Program Guidelines.

APHIS will immediately notify SAIQ when each quarantine ban is lifted.

Article 5: The citrus fruit exported to China shall be inspected by APHIS authorized personnel and found free of live insects and mites of quarantine concern, as listed in Article 13, and essentially free of leaves, twigs and soil. Inspectors will ensure that the citrus fruit certified for export is essentially free of rotting citrus fruit.

Article 6: The packing and storage of citrus fruit for export to China shall be subject to strict quarantine inspection by APHIS. In a storage facility, this packed citrus fruit shall be stored separately from packed citrus from non-designated groves.

Article 7: Each carton or pallet shall have markings to indicate place of production (county), grower or grove, shipper/packer, or storage facility. If the port branch of SAIQ cannot identify either the grower or grove, or shipper/packer, or storage facility on the cartons or pallets, the citrus fruit in the cartons or pallets will be rejected.

Article 8: Exported citrus fruit shall be transported under closed conveyance. APHIS shall perform a strict inspection of export shipments and ensure that exported citrus fruit is free of quarantine pests of concern to China. After passing inspection, a phytosanitary certificate shall be issued by APHIS. The phytosanitary certificate will be sent to the port branch of SAIQ before the shipment arrives in China.

Article 9: The citrus shall not transit any area that is under quarantine for Ceratitis capitata unless it is in a sealed container.

Article 10: The port branch of SAIQ will conduct quarantine inspection and examine relevant certificates and markings as the citrus fruit arrives at the designated ports. If citrus fruit from unapproved growers or groves, shippers/packers, or storage facilities is found, the shipment will not be allowed entry.

If Anastrepha ludens is found on arrival, SAIQ will immediately notify APHIS about suspending the importation of citrus fruit from that grower or grove, shipper/packer, and storage facility and the citrus fruit will be returned, re-exported or destroyed. If any other living pest or disease of quarantine concern to China, as listed in Article 13, is found, the citrus fruit will be treated and SAIQ will request that APHIS take relevant measures. If the same pest or disease is found again on arrival, the relevant grove will be suspended from the export program until the relevant cause is identified and appropriate measures are taken. If other pests of quarantine concern to China are found, the citrus fruit will be treated in accordance with the relevant articles of the Law of the People's Republic of China on the Entry and Exit Animal and Plant Quarantine.

Article 11: Upon SAIQ request, APHIS will send SAIQ relevant information on the groves, shippers/packers, and storage facilities annually for SAIQ review. The groves, pest management, trapping procedures, shippers/packers, and storage facilities will be reviewed and approved by SAIQ in cooperation with APHIS at an on-site visit prior to program initiation.

If major quarantine problems are detected during the importation of citrus fruit into China, APHIS and SAIQ will consult about SAIQ conducting a review of the particular quarantine problem in the United States.

During the first two years of the agreement (i.e., the 1999-2000 and 2000-2001 export seasons) SAIQ will send two quarantine inspectors to the United States for a total of 15 days each year to conduct pre-inspections in Arizona, California, Florida and Texas.

Travel expenses (i.e., transportation, lodging, and a per diem allowance) for all of the trips described above in Article 11 will be funded by the United States.

If SAIQ determines that pre-inspection trips are still necessary after the first two years of the agreement, China will cover all travel expenses for those trips. APHIS will facilitate the trips and provide invitation letters.

Article 12: Ports of entry: Haikou, Guangzhou, Shanghai, Dalian, Qingdao, Nanjing and Tianjin.

Article 13: The pests and diseases of quarantine concern to China are:

Anastrepha ludens (Loew)
Frankliniella occidentalis (Pergande)
Pantomorus cervinus (Boheman)
Pseudococcus maritimus (Ehrhorn)

Article 14: This agreement is valid for one year from the date of signature. If neither party requests revision or termination of the agreement within two months before its expiration date, the agreement shall be extended automatically for additional 12 month periods.

B. Pests and Diseases of Quarantine Concern: According to the People's Republic of China (China), the following plant pests are of quarantine significance on citrus fruit produced in Arizona: Anastrepha ludens, Frankliniella occidentalis, Pantomorus cervinus, Pseudococcus maritimus.

C. Participants

1. The U.S. Department of Agriculture, Animal and Plant Health Inspection Service (APHIS)
2. State Administration for Entry - Exit Inspection and Quarantine (SAIQ) of the People's Republic of China
3. Port Branches of SAIQ
4. Arizona Department of Agriculture
5. Shippers and related associations

II. Responsibilities

A. SAIQ

1. To inspect a representative sampling of participating groves, shippers/packers, and storage facilities in the United States prior to initiation of this program.
2. To assess and agree with the management and supervision of the program provided by APHIS.
3. To assess APHIS' or designated cooperator's ability to ensure that the inspections are appropriately conducted and the labeling requirements are met.
4. To notify APHIS immediately upon detection of serious quarantine problems.

B. APHIS

1. To maintain the work plan for citrus fruit produced in Arizona in cooperation with SAIQ and other participants, and ensure that the procedures and programs are implemented.
2. To notify SAIQ immediately when there is any positive establishment of exotic fruit flies.
3. To ensure that citrus fruit destined for China is not mixed with other fruit and the cartons are properly labeled.
4. During the first year, to inspect 1% of the citrus fruit being certified for export to China. In subsequent years, the inspection level may be reduced to as low as 0.5%, if the first year's inspection results justify the reduction. Every effort shall be made to select citrus fruit from a representative sample of each of the participating growers.

5. To issue phytosanitary certificates for all shipments to China: in the remarks section, include the additional declaration: "All fruit in the shipment complies with relevant regulations of the PRC and complies with the Arizona Citrus Protocol."
6. To assign a program coordinator who will be responsible for all coordination between APHIS, SAIQ, industry, the Arizona Department of Agriculture, packing house operators, transportation providers, etc. This person will be available to SAIQ officials to assist in resolving problems related to the export of citrus fruit.
7. APHIS will direct that effective actions shall be taken to control those pests of concern to China in order to avoid pest occurrences. APHIS will provide SAIQ with information on pest management practices according to SAIQ requests.

C. State Officials and Other APHIS Authorized Personnel

1. To work closely with the APHIS program coordinator.
2. To comply with requirements set forth in this work plan.
3. To verify that shippers/packers and storage facilities maintain a list of their growers and are able to supply information on a grower's name and grove location.
4. The groves, packing houses, and storage facilities which export to China must be registered with APHIS, and designated by both SAIQ and APHIS
5. To inspect citrus fruit for any evidence of pest presence or damage, and remove any suspect citrus fruit or culls from the shipment.

III. Regulatory Activity

A. The monitoring for Anastrepha ludens (Mexican fruit fly) with McPhail traps in designated groves shall be consistent with the National trapping guidelines. Upon SAIQ request, APHIS will provide SAIQ with monitoring reports for Anastrepha ludens annually.

Arizona will not trap in lemon groves for any species of Anastrepha spp fruit flies unless China provides evidence that lemons are a host for Anastrepha spp fruit flies.

B. During the first two years of the program (i.e., the 1999-2000 and 2000-2001 export seasons) if any outbreak of Anastrepha ludens is detected, APHIS will immediately notify SAIQ and establish regulated quarantine areas based on U.S. National Program Guidelines. APHIS shall also suspend the export of citrus fruit from an area with a radius of 17 miles (27.2 kilometers) from the center of the pest outbreak. This restriction shall be maintained until eradication is certified under the terms and conditions of the U.S. National Program Guidelines. During this two year period, scientists from the United States and China will jointly study the appropriate size of the quarantine zone. If the scientists can come to agreement on a new standard, then that standard shall apply from the beginning of the third year. If an agreement cannot be reached, the following standard will apply from the beginning of the third year.

If any outbreak of Anastrepha ludens is detected, APHIS will immediately notify SAIQ and establish regulated quarantine areas based on U.S. National Program Guidelines. That quarantine shall be maintained until eradication is certified under the terms and conditions of the U.S. National Program Guidelines. During the period that the quarantine is in effect, APHIS shall suspend the export of citrus fruit from the area with a radius of 4.5 miles (7.2 kilometers) from the center of the pest outbreak.

C. If any other fruit fly of quarantine concern to China is detected, APHIS will immediately notify SAIQ and establish regulated quarantine areas based on U.S. National Program Guidelines. That quarantine shall be maintained until eradication is certified under the terms and conditions of the U.S. National Program Guidelines.

IV. Shipping Requirements

A Export inspection at the shipper/packer or storage facility will include the inspection for plant pests or diseases, and include measures taken to prevent re-infestation by pests or diseases exotic to China.

1. Inspection of the citrus fruit shall be conducted and completed at the shipper/packer or storage facility before loading of any cartons into the transportation vehicles.
2. The packing and storage of citrus fruit for export to China shall be subject to strict quarantine inspection by APHIS. In a storage facility, this packed citrus fruit shall be stored separately from packed citrus fruit from non-designated groves.
3. Each carton or pallet shall have markings to indicate place of production (county), grower or grove, or shipper/packer, or storage facility. If SAIQ cannot identify either the grower or grove, or shipper/packer, storage facility on the cartons or pallets, the citrus fruit in the cartons or pallets will be rejected.
4. Exported citrus fruit shall be transported in closed conveyance. APHIS shall perform a strict inspection of export shipments and ensure that exported citrus fruit is free of quarantine pests of concern to China. After passing inspection, a phytosanitary certificate shall be issued by APHIS. The phytosanitary certificate will be sent to the port branch of SAIQ before the shipment arrives in China.
5. The citrus fruit shall not transit any area that is under quarantine for Ceratitis capitata unless it is in a sealed container.

V. Port of Entry Inspection

A. Upon arrival at the port, in accordance with the relevant articles of the Law of the People's Republic of China on the Entry and Exit Animal and Plant Quarantine and other relevant regulations, the port branch of SAIQ will conduct a quarantine inspection and examine relevant certificates and markings. If citrus fruit from unapproved growers or groves, shippers/packers, or storage facilities is found, the shipment will not be allowed entry.

B. If Anastrepha ludens is found on arrival, SAIQ will immediately notify APHIS about suspending the importation of citrus fruit from that grower or grove, shipper/packer, or storage facility, and the citrus fruit will be returned, re-exported or destroyed.

C. If any other living pest or disease of quarantine concern to China, as listed in Article 13 of the Arizona Citrus Protocol, is found, the citrus fruit will be treated and SAIQ will request that APHIS take relevant measures. If the same pest or disease is found again on arrival, the relevant groves will be suspended from the export program until the relevant cause is identified and appropriate measures are taken.

D. If other pests of quarantine concern to China are found, the fruit will be treated in accordance with relevant articles of the Law of the People's Republic of China on the Entry and Exit Animal and Plant Quarantine.

VI. Program Initiation

A. Upon SAIQ request, APHIS will send SAIQ relevant information on the groves, shippers/packers, and storage facilities annually for SAIQ review. The groves, pest management, trapping procedures, shippers/packers, and storage facilities will be reviewed and approved by SAIQ in cooperation with APHIS at an on-site visit prior to program initiation.

B. During the first two years of the agreement (i.e., the 1999-2000 and 2000-2001 export seasons) SAIQ will send two quarantine inspectors to the United States for a total of 15 days of each year to conduct pre-inspections in Arizona, California, Florida, and Texas.

C. If SAIQ determines that pre-inspection trips are still necessary after the first two years of the agreement, China will cover all travel expenses for those trips. APHIS will facilitate the trips and provide invitation letters.

adopted on 1st May 1999

The representatives on the Committee of Ministers of Belgium, Bulgaria, Cyprus, Estonia, Finland, France, Germany, Greece, Iceland, Ireland, Lithuania, Luxembourg, Romania, Slovakia, Slovenia, Spain, Sweden,

Convinced that corruption represents a major threat to the rule of law, democracy, human rights, fairness and social justice, hinders economic development, and endangers the stability of democratic institutions and the moral foundations of society;

Conscious of the need to promote co-operation between States in the fight against corruption, including its links with organised crime and money laundering;

Emphasising that a successful strategy to combat corruption requires a firm commitment by States to join their efforts, share experience and take common actions;

Recognising that raising public awareness and promoting ethical values are effective means of preventing corruption;

Having regard to the recommendations of the 19th Conference of the European Ministers of Justice (Malta, 1994);

Taking into account the Programme of Action against Corruption, adopted by the Committee of Ministers of the Council of Europe in 1996 and the work undertaken by the Multidisciplinary Group on Corruption (GMC) in pursuance thereof;

Taking into account the results of the Joint project between the European Commission (Phare Programme) and the Council of Europe on the fight against corruption and organised crime in States in transition ("Octopus Project");

Having regard to Resolution No. 1 on the links between corruption and organised crime, adopted at the 21st Conference of the European Ministers of Justice (Prague, 1997);

Having regard to the Final Declaration adopted at the Second Summit of Heads of State and Government of the Member States of the Council of Europe (Strasbourg, 10-11 October 1997) by which the Heads of State and Government decided to seek common responses to the challenges posed by the growth of corruption and organised crime;

In accordance with the Action Plan adopted at the Second Summit of Heads of State and Government of the Member States of the Council of Europe (Strasbourg, 10-11 October 1997) in which the Heads of State and Government, with a view to promoting co-operation in the fight against corruption, including its links with organised crime and money laundering, instructed the Committee of Ministers, inter alia, to adopt guiding principles to be applied in the development of domestic legislation and practice and to establish without delay an appropriate and efficient mechanism for monitoring observance of the guiding principles and the implementation of the other international instruments which will be adopted in pursuance of the Programme of Action against Corruption;

Having regard to the 20 Guiding Principles for the Fight against Corruption, adopted by the Committee of Ministers at its 101st meeting on 6 November 1997 (hereinafter referred to as the "Guiding Principles");

Convinced that the establishment of the GRECO, where Member States and non-Member States of the Council of Europe participate on an equal footing, would make a significant contribution to the promotion of a dynamic process towards effectively preventing and combating corruption;

Persuaded that by means of mutual evaluation and peer pressure, the GRECO shall be able to monitor in a flexible and efficient manner the observance of the Guiding Principles and the implementation of the international instruments adopted by the Council of Europe to fight against corruption;

Convinced that full membership of the GRECO should therefore be reserved to those which participate without restrictions in mutual evaluation procedures and accept to be evaluated through them;

Having regard to Resolution (98) 7 adopted by the Committee of Ministers on 5 May 1998, on the occasion of its 102nd session at ministerial level, authorising the adoption of the present agreement;

RELEASED

MEMORANDUM

TO: ARA/FO
ARA/FO

FROM: ARA/CEN

SUBJECT: El Salvador Negotiations: Outstanding Issues

The two main areas for further negotiation are completion of a political accord on armed forces issues and on a cease-fire.

Other issues such as economic and social matters that were included on the Caracas Agenda have not received much attention, and may be shunted aside to the electoral political process. Exceptions may arise to this arrangement, such as the FMLN's insistence that landholding limits be reduced.

The most important outstanding issues for a political accord on armed forces issues are the composition and selection of the Ad Hoc Commission to review the human rights performance of Armed Forces personnel. The GOES' official position remains that the Commission should be made up of five people, two of whom should be military officers with the right to vote. This position continues extant despite the GOES' having indicated to us that they would be willing to accept one non-voting military member on the Commission. The GOES wants the UNSYG to propose candidates for the President to appoint. The FMLN remains opposed to any military representation on the Commission or appointment of its members by the GOES.

Although the Mexico Accords lay out most of the details of the Truth Commission on key human rights cases, the choice of what cases are to be reviewed will likely be divisive. The FMLN only wants review of cases that they think can be blamed on the ESAF, whereas the GOES/ESAF will likely insist that the murder of the mayors, Rodriguez Porth, or other cases attributable to the FMLN be included. We may wish to seek inclusion of the Jesuit Case and/or the Pickett/Dawson murders on the Commission's agenda.

The most important issue in the cease-fire accords may prove to be the location, size and other attributes of the "specified locations" and "designated areas" for the FMLN during the cease-fire period. A related question will be the relationship between these areas and concentrations of civilian population, particularly the resettlement camps. U/SYG Goulding says that the GOES has proposed four "small, malarial, and landmined" areas whereas the FMLN has produced a huge map showing numerous "zones of predominance", "zones in dispute", and military bases.

The length of the cease-fire period has not been defined, and the FMLN does not want it defined. Despite our expressions of concern on this topic, U/SYG Goulding has apparently bought onto the FMLN view and not sought to limit the duration of the cease-fire. The GOES/ESAF are thinking in terms of 60-90 days, Goulding is thinking in terms of 6-9 months, and at least some in the FMLN intend for the cease-fire to last until the 1994 presidential elections.

The FMLN insists that any discussion of their own demobilization will only take place during Phase II of the peace process, i.e. between the cease-fire and peace. U/SYG Goulding said that those in the GOES who think that FMLN demobilization will follow automatically from a cease-fire (as in Nicaragua) are badly mistaken. Demobilization is not even on the table now.

When signing the Mexico Accords, the FMLN gave notice that the drafting of Article 211, in particular the point that defines the armed forces as a "permanent" institution, is not in accord with its position on the matter. The FMLN also gave notice that it considers that constitutional reforms are still in need of negotiation regarding demilitarization, article 105 regarding limits on rural land ownership, and the need to open a mechanism for reforming the constitution, either by reform of article 248 or by other mechanisms for popular consultation. The FMLN maintains its position on all these matters.

The FMLN continues to talk about the eventual dissolution of the armed forces, although at other times they talk about the reduction of the armed forces to pre-war levels (about 12,000). They are not clear about timing, but it appears that they mean that the ESAF should be reduced to pre-war levels before the FMLN disarms and demobilizes. The ESAF, on the other hand, is internally discussing reducing by fifty percent over four years. (There are currently about 45,000 in the ESAF and 13,000 in the security services under ESAF control.)

The timing of the disbanding of the Immediate Reaction Infantry Batalions (BIRI's) is also an outstanding issue. The FMLN has talked about having BIRI Atlacatl disbanded immediately upon a cease-fire, whereas the ESAF does not want to differentiate among the BIRI's and says that they will be disbanded when peace is achieved. Achievement of peace is a vague term, but appears to mean the disarmament and demobilization of the FMLN.

The ESAF has wanted to get rid of the Civil Defense forces for several years, but is holding the date of their disbanding as a bargaining chip.

DECL:OADR

The new National Civil Police is supposed to be created in time to patrol during the cease-fire with ONUSAL. The GOES/ESAF does not appear to have any detailed plan for creation of such a force, however. The FMLN has indicated that it does not want any current policemen to be part of the new Civil force and that National Civil Police serving in areas now under FMLN control should be residents of those areas or drawn from the FMLN. These are probably non-starters with the ESAF.

The FMLN also wants political rights during the cease-fire period. U/SYG Goulding gave the GOES Dialogue Commission (CODIAL) a list from the FMLN which included: the presence of FMLN political leaders in San Salvador, permission to open offices and print shops, repeal of laws proscribing FMLN activities and the release of prisoners held under those laws, and the expansion of broadcast media so that popular organizations can purchase channels or frequencies. The list clearly signals FMLN intentions to form its own political party, and highlights FMLN concerns that it return to San Salvador not as a defeated guerrilla movement, but as a political force to be reckoned with. The GOES is not likely to accept the majority of these provisions as written since the GOES resists giving the FMLN any direct political access until after complete demobilization -- in order to encourage demobilization.

It is not known at what point amnesty for crimes committed during the war will come into play. The ESAF will, however, probably insist on some sort of blanket amnesty for their own war crimes in exchange for pardoning the FMLN. The choice of cases to be reviewed by the Ad Hoc Commission and the Truth Commission will therefore be extremely politicized. The amnesty issue could also prove controversial on the Hill, particularly if it covers the murders of U.S. citizens, committed by either the right or the left.

ONUSAL's projected size is unknown at this point because it would depend on factors still under negotiation, such as the location and size of the specified locations. Goulding has said that if ONUCA forces stripped from elsewhere in Central America could be used as the nucleus for the military component of ONUSAL, the ONUSAL could be geared up very quickly. The FMLN may, however, oppose any such effort because of deep grudges against ONUCA.

3. The United Nations does not accept any liability for claims for compensation in respect of illness, injury or death of the U.S. Personnel, arising out of or related to the provision of services under this Agreement, except where such illness, injury or death results directly from the gross negligence of the officials or staff of the United Nations. Any amounts payable by the United Nations shall be reduced by amounts of any coverage under the insurance referred to in Article I, section 3, of this Agreement.

PROCES-VERBAL

This document refers to the procès-verbal initialed on 15 July 1997 in Geneva by delegations representing the United States and the European Community and which concerned modifications to U.S. origin rules on certain textile products, applicable from 1 July 1996.

The United States and the European Community take note that the 1997 procès-verbal has not led to a rapid solution in this case and therefore agree to amend the 1997 procès-verbal with a view to achieving a mutually satisfactory resolution toward facilitating and developing trade in fabrics imported into the European Community at loom state to be dyed, printed, and further finished in the EC, and certain flat products resulting therefrom.

The agreed amendments are as follows:

1. The U.S. Administration will propose to Congress that it adopt the Bill in Annex 1 to this procès-verbal, which contains an amendment to the U.S. origin rules, set forth in 19 U.S.C. 3592. The U.S. Administration will make its best efforts to convince Congress of the desirability to adopt this Bill expeditiously, and the European Commission will make every effort to support this process.

2. The United States agrees that a single import visaed invoice/license can be used on multiple shipments of goods (provided that the original visaed invoice/licence is valid and its quantity is not exceeded) classified in the HTS headings and subheadings set forth in Annex 1, paragraph 2(C) as of cotton or consisting of fiber blends containing 16 percent or more by weight of cotton, or products of cotton classified in HTS headings 6302.21, 6302.51, 6302.91, 6303.91, 6304.92, or 9404.90.80. For the purpose of this paragraph, such goods must be made up in an EC Member State from fabric which is dyed and printed in a Member State and has undergone in a Member State two or more of the following finishing operations: bleaching, shrinking, fulling, napping, decating, permanent stiffening, weighting, permanent embossing, or moireing.

Both sides agree to consult on implementation of the terms set out in this procès-verbal.

The United States and the European Community agree that this amendment to the 1997 procès-verbal will be notified as a mutually agreed solution to the WTO. The European Community reserves the right to put the matter on the agenda of the Textiles Monitoring Body in the WTO in the event that the United States does not implement its commitments as contained in the procès-verbal within a reasonable amount of time.

Agreed, as of 16 August 1999.

2.2 The revision shall be carried out on the terms specified in the Letter Post Regulations.

3 Bulk mail

3.1 Administrations which do not authorize access on the conditions offered in the domestic service may request for bulk mail received a payment of 0.14 SDR per item and 1 SDR per kilogramme.

2 These same regulations shall be applicable to items exempted from land and sea transit charges, under the terms of article 52, if they are conveyed by air.

3 Each administration of destination which provides air conveyance of international mail within its country shall be entitled to reimbursement of the additional costs incurred for such conveyance provided that the weighted average distance of the sectors flown exceeds 300 kilometres. Unless agreement has been reached that no charge should be made, the dues shall be uniform for all priority mails and airmails originating abroad whether or not this mail is reforwarded by air.

4 However, where the terminal dues levied by the administration of destination are based specifically on costs or on domestic rates, no additional reimbursement for internal air conveyance shall be made.

5 The administration of destination shall exclude, for the purpose of calculating the weighted average distance, the weight of all mails for which the terminal dues calculation has been based specifically on costs or on the domestic rates of the administration of destination.

[1] See Fin Prot art XXV.

6 In the absence of special agreement between the administrations concerned, the transit charge scales in the Regulations shall apply to airmail correspondence for any transit by land or by sea. Nevertheless, no land transit charges shall be payable for:

Representatives of the Importing Country and the Exporting Country met in Skopje on September 6 and 7, 1999, to discuss textile trade issues. The Parties expressed their mutual interest to continue cooperation on those trade issues in order to promote orderly growth and certainty of access for such trade. The parties also expressed their interest to establish an outward processing program for certain textile products. As a result of their discussions, the two Parties agreed as follows:

1. The Exporting Country and the Importing Country agree to amend the Bilateral Textile Agreement of November 7, 1997, ("1997 BTA") as follows:

These specified products will be either assembled in the Exporting Country of fabrics formed and cut in the Importing Country or manufactured in the Exporting Country of fabric formed in the Importing Country. The term "manufactured" refers to specified products that have been both cut and sewn in the Exporting Country. Nothing in this Agreement precludes carrying out operations in the Importing Country.

   C. A new paragraph 4C shall be added to the 1997 BTA, providing as follows:

   4C. In order to qualify for treatment under the Outward Processing Program for Textiles and Apparel, the specified product must meet the following requirements:

   (ii) The specified products must be entirely manufactured or assembled from fabric formed in the Importing Country; i.e., all fabric components of the specified products must be formed in the Importing Country. This requirement applies to all textile components of the specified products, including linings and pocketing, except as provided in paragraph (iv) below (greige goods that are imported into, and finished in, the Importing Country shall not be considered to be fabric formed in the Importing Country. Fabric that is woven or knitted in the Importing Country from yarn shall be considered to be formed in the Importing Country.

(iii) The importer of the specified products and the exporter of the Importing Country-formed fabric or its component parts must be the same entity or person;

(iv) Findings and trimmings of non-Importing Country origin may be incorporated into the specified products provided they do not exceed 25 percent of the cost of the fabric in the product. Findings and trimmings include sewing thread, hooks and eyes, snaps, buttons, "bow buds," decorative lace trim, elastic strips, zippers (including zipper tapes), and labels. Elastic strips are considered findings or trimmings only if less than one inch in width and used in the production of brassieres; and

3.- Reports on Carlos's Imprisonment :

Several detainees have seen Carlos at different prisons and Torture Camps such as "Cuatro Alamos", "Villa Grimaldi", "Colonia Dignidad" in the South of Chile .
He was also seen walking alone in one of the slum areas of Santiago, closely followed by DINA agents. This information was reported to the Catholic Church .
On July 17 1975 the Italian Lawyer Guido Calvi telephoned Colonel Espinoza at the office of the Secretary of Defense and the Colonels reply which was taped stated that he could not supply any more information as this man is under arrest and he will be tried by the Courts.

Chile's principal Newspaper " El Mercurio" has on several ocassions published acts of protest and solidarity with this young Congressman, and has even recommended that his arrest be admitted to stop what they call marxist propaganda .

Last August Lorca's parents received information that Carlos had been shown to a newly imprisoned young socialist. He was according to this report with mental damage, two broken limbs and in a very critical condition . The young man was warned that unless he made a full confession he would suffer the same punishment. The young man made a complete confession and gave the addresses of wanted persons, so for his good behaviour he was sent to "Tres Alamos", where his family could visit him . He sent word to the Lorca family that they should try to get Carlos out as soon as possible due to his critical condition.

Carlos Lorca's father spoke to Harry Schlaudeman, Asst. Secretary of State for Latin America in September 1976, and Under-Secretary Schlaudeman instructed the officer at the Chile Desk Robert Driscoll to make enquiries and to inform the Chilean Government that Carlos would be received in the U.S.A. Of cours Carlos Lorca Sr. was advised that if the Junta insisted on the: denial there was not much he could do .

Through a young Attorney, Robert Kissel, of Culpsville Pa., whc stated that he had a very good contact in the White House, Mr. Lorca received a letter which stated that a Mr. Foster Chanock, who was one of President Ford's political aides had received i: formation through their channels that Dr. Lorca was alive, that he would eventually be tried and sentenced to prison or expelle from the country .

Lorca's father made a special trip to Buenos Aires, and from t: he gave all this information to Robert Driscoll, who stated af: several days that he could not contact Mr. Chanock as he was a: away from Washington campaigning for Mr. Ford. Later Mr. Lorca told that Mr. Chanock had been ordered by someone to keep out c the Lorca case , as this might embarrass the Junta .

Mr. Lorca in November 1976 received a letter from the President of the Committee for Human Rights of the Organization of American States where they notified the Chilean Government that this Committe was satisfied with the evidence they had seen that the Chilean Gover ment was holding Dr. Lorca. They requested that he be immediately released, and that those responsible for his arrest be duly punished The deadline for this action was February 1st, 1977, and as far as we know nothing has happened .

4.- Solidarity from all the World :

The following Institutions and Governments have contacted the Chilean Authorities demanding that Dr. Lorca's imprisonment be made public :

Amnesty International Federation of World Youth
Latin American Students Federation
Red Cross International
Social Democratic Parties of Europe.
Argentine College of Psychiatrists .
Chilean Vicary of Solidaity ( Catholic Church )
U.S. Committee to save Chilean Health Workers .

SUBJECT: ECHEVERRIA ON DIRECT EGYPTIAN-ISRAELI TALKS

REF: CAIRO 7841

1. FOLLOWING MEXICAN PRESIDENT ECHEVERRIA'S RECENT VISIT TO EGYPT AND SUBSEQUENT TRIP TO ISRAEL, ISRAELI PRESS ALLEGEDLY REPORTED THAT ECHEVERRIA WAS ARRANGING A MEETING BETWEEN SADAT AND RABIN. THESE REPORTS WERE SUFFICIENTLY WORRISOME THAT GOE PRESS SPOKESMAN FORMALLY ANNOUNCED AUGUST 11 ALL SUCH ALLEGATIONS WERE A "BASELESS CREATION OF THE IMAGINATION."

2. SADAT TOLD THE AMBASSADOR YESTERDAY THAT, IN THE COURSE OF ECHEVERRIA'S VISIT TO ISRAEL, RABIN APPARENTLY TOLD THE THE MEXICAN PRESIDENT THAT PEACE COULD EASILY BE ARRANGED IF THERE WERE DIRECT ARAB-ISRAELI TALKS. THIS HAD SO IMPRESSED ECHEVERRIA, WHOSE KNOWLEDGE OF THE ARAB-ISRAELI PROBLEM IS LIMITED, THAT HE HAD IMMEDIATELY SENT HIS FONMIN BACK TO EGYPT TO INFORM SADAT OF THIS "DISCOVERY" AND TO SUGGEST SUCH DIRECT TALKS BE ARRANGED. SADAT RECEIVED THE MEXICAN FONMIN, "SINCE ECHEVERRIA HAD BEEN THOUGHFUL ENOUGH TO SEND HIM ON THIS SPECIAL TRIP," BUT PATIENTLY EXPLAINED THE SITUATION TO HIS VISITOR.

3. SO LONG AS ARAB TERRITOR IS OCCUPIED, THE PRESIDENT POINTED OUT, THERE CAN BE NO DIRECT ARAB-ISRAELI TALKS. IF RABIN FIRST ANNOUNCES ISRAELI WILLINGNESS TO WITHDRAW FROM ALL OF THE TERRITORIES OCCUPIED IN THE 1967 WAR, THEN SUCH DIRECT TALKS MAY BE POSSIBLE. WITHOUT THIS, THEY ARE NOT. SINCE THE ISRAELIS ARE OBVIOUSLY NOT WILLING TO MAKE SUCH AN ANNOUNCEMENT, SADAT EXPLAINED TO THE MEXICAN THAT HE MUST DEPEND UPON THE USG AS A NECESSARY GO-BETWEEN. HE HAD PRAISED SECRETARY KISSINGER'S EFFORTS AND HAD THANKED ECHEVERRIA FOR HIS INTEREST. EILTS

AGREEMENT BETWEEN THE GOVERNMENT OF THE UNITED STATES OF AMERICA AND THE GOVERNMENT OF THE UNITED MEXICAN STATES REGARDING THE APPLICATION OF THEIR COMPETITION LAWS

The Government of the United States of America and the Government of the United Mexican States (hereinafter referred to as "Parties");

Having regard to their close economic relations and cooperation within the framework of the North American Free Trade Agreement ("NAFTA");

Noting that the sound and effective enforcement of their competition laws is a matter of importance to the efficient operation of markets within the free trade area and to the economic welfare of the Parties' citizens;

Having regard to their commitment in Chapter 15 of NAFTA to the importance of cooperation and coordination among their competition authorities to further effective competition law enforcement in the free trade area;

Recognizing that coordination of enforcement activities under the Parties' competition laws may, in appropriate cases, result in a more effective resolution of the Parties' respective concerns than would be attained through independent action;

Further recognizing that technical cooperation between the Parties' competition authorities will contribute to improving and strengthening their relationship;

Noting that from time to time differences may arise between the Parties concerning the application of their competition laws to conduct or transactions that implicate the important interests of both Parties;

Noting further their commitment to give careful consideration to each other's important interests in the application of their competition laws; and

Having regard to the growing cooperation between the Parties in matters relating to competition law, including the 1995 Recommendation of the Council of the OECD Concerning Cooperation Between Member Countries on Anticompetitive Practices Affecting International Trade, the 1998 Recommendation of the Council of the OECD Concerning Effective Action Against Hard Core Cartels, and the Communiqué issued at the Panama Antitrust Summit Meeting in October 1998;

Have agreed as follows:

Article I

PURPOSE AND DEFINITIONS

1. The purposes of this Agreement are to promote cooperation, including both enforcement and technical cooperation, and coordination between the competition authorities of the Parties, to avoid conflicts arising from the application of the Parties' competition laws, and to minimize the impact on their respective important interests of any differences that may arise.

2. For the purposes of this Agreement, the following terms shall have the following definitions:

(a) "Anticompetitive activity(ies)" means any conduct or transaction that may be subject to penalties or relief under the competition laws of a Party;

(b) "Competition authority(ies)" means

(i) for the United Mexican States, the Federal Competition Commission;

(ii) for the United States of America, the United States Department of Justice and the Federal Trade Commission;

(c) "Competition law(s)" means

(i) for the United Mexican States, the Federal Law of Economic Competition of December 24, 1992, except for Articles 14 and 15, and the Regulations of the Federal Law of Economic Competition of March 4, 1998, except for article 8;

(ii) for the United States of America, the Sherman Act (15 U.S.C. §§ 1-7), the Clayton Act (15 U.S.C. §§ 12-27), the Wilson Tariff Act (15 U.S.C. §§ 8-11) and the Federal Trade Commission Act (15 U.S.C. §§ 41-58), to the extent that it applies to unfair methods of competition, as well as any amendments thereto, and such other laws or regulations as the Parties may from time to time agree in writing to be a "competition law" for the purposes of this Agreement; and

(d) "Enforcement activity(ies)" means any investigation or proceeding conducted by a Party in relation to its competition laws.

3. Any reference in this Agreement to a specific provision in either Party's competition law shall be interpreted as referring to that provision as amended from time to time and to any successor provision thereof. Each Party shall promptly notify the other of any amendments to its competition laws.

Article II

NOTIFICATION

1. Each Party shall, subject to Article X(1), notify the other Party in the manner provided by this Article and Article XII with respect to its enforcement activities that may affect important interests of the other Party.

2. Enforcement activities that may affect the important interests of the other Party and therefore ordinarily require notification include those that:

(a) are relevant to enforcement activities of the other Party;

(b) involve anticompetitive activities, other than mergers or acquisitions, carried out in whole or in substantial part in the territory of the other Party;

(c) involve mergers or acquisitions in which

- one or more of the parties to the transaction, or

- a company controlling one or more of the parties to the transaction, is a company incorporated or organized under the laws of the other Party or of one of its States;

(d) involve conduct believed to have been required, encouraged or approved by the other Party;

(e) involve remedies that expressly require or prohibit conduct in the territory of the other Party or are otherwise directed at conduct in the territory of the other Party; or

(f) involve the seeking of information located in the territory of the other Party.

3. Notification pursuant to this Article shall ordinarily be given as soon as a Party's competition authorities become aware that notifiable circumstances are present, and in any event in sufficient time to permit the views of the other Party to be taken into account.

4. When the competition authorities of a Party request that a person provide information, documents or other records located in the territory of the notified Party, or request oral testimony in a proceeding or participation in a personal interview by a person located in the territory of the notified Party, notification shall be given:

(a) if compliance with a request for written information, documents or other records is voluntary, at or before the time that the request is made;

(b) if compliance with a request for written information, documents or other records is compulsory, at least seven (7) days prior to the request, (or, when seven (7) days' notice cannot be given, as promptly as circumstances permit); and

(c) in the case of oral testimony or personal interviews, at or before the time arrangements for the interview or testimony are made.

5. Notification that would otherwise be required by this Article is not required with respect to telephone contacts with a person where:

(a) that person is not the subject of an investigation,

(b) the contact seeks only an oral response on a voluntary basis (although the availability and possible voluntary provision of documents may be discussed), and

(c) the other Party's important interests do not appear to be otherwise implicated, unless the other Party requests such notification in relation to a particular matter.

6. Notification is not required for each subsequent request for information in relation to the same matter unless the Party seeking information becomes aware of new issues bearing on the important interests of the other Party, or the other Party requests otherwise in relation to a particular matter.

7. The Parties acknowledge that officials of either Party may visit the territory of the other Party in the course of conducting investigations pursuant to their respective competition laws. Such visits shall be subject to notification pursuant to this Article and the consent of the notified Party.

8. Notifications shall be sufficiently detailed to enable the notified Party to make an initial evaluation of the effect of the enforcement activity on its own important interests, and shall include the nature of the activities under investigation and the legal provisions concerned. Where possible, notifications shall include the names and locations of the persons involved. Notifications concerning a proposed conditioned approval, consent order or decree shall either include or, as soon as practicable be followed by, copies of the proposed conditioned approval, order or decree and any competitive impact statement relating to the matter.

9. Each Party shall also notify the other whenever its competition authorities intervene or otherwise publicly participate in a regulatory or judicial proceeding that is not an enforcement activity if the issue addressed in the intervention or participation may affect the other Party's important interests. Such notification shall be made at the time of the intervention or participation or as soon thereafter as possible.

Article III

ENFORCEMENT COOPERATION

1. (a) The Parties acknowledge that it is in their common interest to cooperate in the detection of anticompetitive activities and the enforcement of their competition laws to the extent compatible with their respective laws and important interests, and within their reasonably available resources.

(b) The Parties further acknowledge that it is in their common interest to share information which will facilitate the effective application of their competition laws and promote better understanding of each other's enforcement policies and activities.

2. The Parties will consider adopting such further arrangements as may be feasible and desirable to enhance cooperation in the enforcement of their competition laws.

3. Each Party's competition authorities will, to the extent compatible with that Party's laws, enforcement policies and other important interests:

(a) assist the other Party's competition authorities, upon request, in locating and obtaining evidence and witnesses, and in obtaining voluntary compliance with requests for information, in the requested Party's territory;

(b) inform the other Party's competition authorities with respect to enforcement activities involving conduct that may also have an adverse effect on competition within the territory of the other Party;

(c) provide to the other Party's competition authorities, upon request, such information within its possession as the requesting Party's competition authorities may specify that is relevant to the requesting Party's enforcement activities; and

(d) provide the other Party's competition authorities with any significant information that comes to their attention about anticompetitive activities that may be relevant to, or may warrant, enforcement activity by the other Party's competition authorities.

4. Nothing in this Agreement shall prevent the Parties from seeking or providing assistance to one another pursuant to other agreements, treaties, arrangements or practices between them.

Article IV

COORDINATION WITH REGARD TO RELATED MATTERS

1. Where both Parties' competition authorities are pursuing enforcement activities with regard to related matters, they will consider coordination of their enforcement activities. In such matters, the Parties may invoke such mutual assistance arrangements as may be in force from time to time.

2. In considering whether particular enforcement activities should be coordinated, either in whole or in part, the Parties' competition authorities shall take into account the following factors, among others:

(a) the effect of such coordination on the ability of both Parties to achieve their respective enforcement objectives;

(b) the relative abilities of the Parties' competition authorities to obtain information necessary to conduct the enforcement activities;

(c) the extent to which either Party's competition authorities can secure effective relief against the anticompetitive activities involved;

(d) the possible reduction of cost to the Parties and to the persons subject to enforcement activities; and

(e) the potential advantages of coordinated remedies to the Parties and to the persons subject to the enforcement activities.

3. In any coordination arrangement, each Party's competition authorities shall seek to conduct their enforcement activities consistently with the enforcement objectives of the other Party's competition authorities.

4. In the case of concurrent or coordinated enforcement activities, the competition authorities of each Party shall consider, upon request by the competition authorities of the other Party and where consistent with the requested Party's enforcement interests, ascertaining whether persons that have provided confidential information in connection with those enforcement activities will consent to the sharing of such information between the Parties' competition authorities.

5. Either Party's competition authorities may at any time notify the other Party's competition authorities that they intend to limit or terminate coordinated enforcement and pursue their enforcement activities independently and subject to the other provisions of this Agreement.

Article V

COOPERATION REGARDING ANTICOMPETITIVE ACTIVITIES IN THE TERRITORY OF ONE PARTY THAT ADVERSELY AFFECT THE INTERESTS OF THE OTHER PARTY

1. The Parties note that anticompetitive activities may occur within the territory of one Party that, in addition to violating that Party's competition laws, adversely affect important interests of the other Party. The Parties agree that it is in their common interest to seek relief against anticompetitive activities of this nature.

2. If a Party believes that anticompetitive activities carried out in the territory of the other Party adversely affect its important interests, the first Party may request that the other Party's competition authorities initiate appropriate enforcement activities. The request shall be as specific as possible about the nature of the anticompetitive activities and their effects on the interests of the Party, and shall include an offer of such further information and other cooperation as the requesting Party's competition authorities are able to provide.

3. The requested Party's competition authorities shall carefully consider whether to initiate enforcement activities, or to expand ongoing enforcement activities, with respect to the anticompetitive activities identified in the request. The requested Party's competition authorities shall promptly inform the requesting Party of its decision. If enforcement activities are initiated, the requested Party's competition authorities shall advise the requesting Party of their outcome and, to the extent possible, of significant interim developments.

4. Nothing in this Article limits the discretion of the requested Party's competition authorities under its competition laws and enforcement policies as to whether to undertake enforcement activities with respect to the anticompetitive activities identified in a request, or precludes the requesting Party's competition authorities from undertaking enforcement activities with respect to such anticompetitive activities.

Article VI

AVOIDANCE OF CONFLICTS

1. Within the framework of its own laws and to the extent compatible with its important interests, each Party shall, having regard to the purpose of this Agreement as set out in Article I, give careful consideration to the other Party's important interests throughout all phases of its enforcement activities, including decisions regarding the initiation of an investigation or proceeding, the scope of an investigation or proceeding and the nature of the remedies or penalties sought in each case.

2. When a Party informs the other that a specific enforcement activity may affect the first Party's important interests, the second Party shall provide timely notice of developments of significance to those interests.

3. While an important interest of a Party may exist in the absence of official involvement by the Party with the activity in question, it is recognized that such interest would normally be reflected in antecedent laws, decisions or statements of policy by its competent authorities.

4. A Party's important interests may be affected at any stage of enforcement activity by the other Party. The Parties recognize the desirability of minimizing any adverse effects of their enforcement activities on each other's important interests, particularly in the choice of remedies. Typically, the potential for adverse impact on one Party's important interests arising from enforcement activity by the other Party is less at the investigative stage and greater at the stage at which conduct is prohibited or penalized, or at which other forms of remedial orders are imposed.

5. Where it appears that one Party's enforcement activities may adversely affect the important interests of the other Party, each Party shall, in assessing what measures it will take, consider all appropriate factors, which may include but are not limited to:

(a) the relative significance to the anticompetitive activities involved of conduct occurring within one Party's territory as compared to conduct occurring within that of the other;

(b) the relative significance and foreseeability of the effects of the anticompetitive activities on one Party's important interests as compared to the effects on the other Party's important interests;

(c) the presence or absence of a purpose on the part of those engaged in the anticompetitive activities to affect consumers, suppliers or competitors within the enforcing Party's territory;

(d) the degree of conflict or consistency between the first Party's enforcement activities (including remedies) and the other Party's laws or other important interests;

(e) whether private persons, either natural or legal, will be placed under conflicting requirements by both Parties;

(f) the existence or absence of reasonable expectations that would be furthered or defeated by the enforcement activities;

(g) the location of relevant assets;

(h) the degree to which a remedy, in order to be effective, must be carried out within the other Party's territory; and

(i) the extent to which enforcement activities of the other Party with respect to the same persons, including judgments or conditioned approvals resulting from such activities, would be affected.

Article VII

TECHNICAL COOPERATION

The Parties agree that it is in their common interest for their competition authorities to work together in technical cooperation activities related to competition law enforcement and policy. These activities may include, within their competition agencies' reasonably available resources and to the extent authorized by their respective laws: exchanges of information pursuant to Article III of this Agreement; exchanges of competition agency personnel for training purposes at each other's competition agencies; participation of competition agency personnel as lecturers or consultants at training courses on competition law and policy organized or sponsored by each other's competition authorities; and such other forms of technical cooperation as the Parties' competition authorities agree are appropriate for purposes of this Agreement.

Article VIII

CONSULTATIONS

1. Either Party may request consultations regarding any matter relating to this Agreement. The request for consultations shall indicate the reasons for the request and whether any procedural time limits or other constraints require that consultations be expedited. Each Party shall consult promptly when so requested with the view to reaching a conclusion that is consistent with the principles set forth in this Agreement.

2. Consultations under this Article shall take place at the appropriate level as determined by each Party.

3. During consultations under this Article, each Party shall provide to the other as much information as it is able in order to facilitate the broadest possible discussion regarding the relevant aspects of the matter that is the subject of consultations. Each Party shall carefully consider the representations of the other Party in light of the principles set out in this Agreement and shall be prepared to explain the specific results of its application of those principles to the matter that is the subject of consultations.

Article IX

PERIODIC MEETINGS

Officials of the Parties' competition authorities shall meet periodically to:

(a) exchange information on their current enforcement efforts and priorities in relation to their competition laws;

(b) exchange information on economic sectors of common interest;

(c) discuss policy changes that they are considering; and

(d) discuss other matters of mutual interest relating to the application of their competition laws and the operation of this Agreement.

Article X

CONFIDENTIALITY OF INFORMATION

1. Notwithstanding any other provision of this Agreement, neither Party is required to communicate information to the other Party if such communication is prohibited by the laws of the Party possessing the information or would be incompatible with that Party's important interests.

2. Unless otherwise agreed by the Parties, each Party shall, to the fullest extent possible consistent with that Party's laws, (i) maintain the confidentiality of any information communicated to it in confidence by the other Party under this Agreement, and (ii) oppose any application by a third party for disclosure of such confidential information.

Article XI

EXISTING LAWS

Nothing in this Agreement shall require a Party to take any action, or to refrain from acting, in a manner that is inconsistent with its existing laws, or require any change in the laws of the Parties or of their respective States.

Article XII

COMMUNICATIONS UNDER THIS AGREEMENT

Communications under this Agreement may be carried out directly between the competition authorities of the Parties. Requests under Articles V(2) and VIII(1) shall, however, be confirmed in writing through customary diplomatic channels.

Article XIII

ENTRY INTO FORCE AND TERMINATION

1. This Agreement shall enter into force upon signature.

2. This Agreement shall remain in force until 60 days after the date on which either Party notifies the other Party in writing that it wishes to terminate the Agreement.

IN WITNESS WHEREOF, the undersigned, being duly authorized by their respective Governments, have signed this Agreement.

DONE at Mexico City, in duplicate, this eleventh day of July, 2000, in the English and Spanish languages, each text being equally authentic.

AMENDMENT No. 6

The Republic of Bolivia ("Bolivia") and the United States of America, acting through the Agency for International Development ("USAID"), entered into a Strategic Objective Grant Agreement entitled "Reducing Environmental Degradation and Protecting Biodiversity," on May 13, 1997, ("the Agreement"). The Agreement was amended on July 27, 1998 ("Amendment No. 1"), on July 26, 1999 ("Amendment No. 2"), on September 23, 1999 ("Amendment No. 3"), on August 18, 2000 ("Amendment No. 4"), and on September 29, 2000 ("Amendment No. 5"), respectively.

The Strategic Objective sought by this Agreement (hereinafter "Strategic Objective" or "Objective") is reduced degradation of forest and water resources and biodiversity conserved.

2. Section 2.2 Results and Intermediate

Resultados y Resultados Intermedios y se sustituye con el siguiente texto:

Para poder lograr este Objetivo, las Partes acuerdan trabajar en forma conjunta para lograr los siguientes Resultados Intermedios y Sub-Intermedios.

Resultado Intermedio 1 (RI1). Manejo Sostenible de los Bosques Naturales de las Tierras Bajas. El Resultado Intermedio 1 fue diseñado para fortalecer la capacidad de los sectores privado y público de Bolivia para manejar bosques naturales de una manera sostenible. Bien administrada, la actividad forestal comercial puede promocionar el desarrollo y a la vez, crear incentivos para la protección de los bosques. El presente RI concentrará esfuerzos en cinco áreas: Asistencia técnica para manejo forestal a Agrupaciones Sociales del Lugar; Manejo forestal por grupos indígenas; Fortalecimiento al sector público forestal; Investigación aplicada; y Desarrollo de mercados y promoción de inversiones. El RI1 incluye cuatro Resultados Sub-Intermedios (RSI): a) Establecimiento de políticas, leyes y un marco regulador para promover el manejo sostenible de recursos forestales; b) Capacidades institucionales y técnicas para manejar bosques en forma sostenible; c) A través de mercados certificados, proporcionar incentivos para manejo sostenible; y d) La necesaria información ecológica, social y económica desarrollada para guiar el manejo forestal.

Resultado Intermedio 2 (RI2). Manejo Adecuado de Areas Protegidas. El RI2 está dirigido a fortalecer el sistema de áreas protegidas de Bolivia, mediante apoyo al Servicio Nacional de Areas Protegidas y ONGs con acuerdos de co-administración, con énfasis en los Andes tropicales. Para

Results is deleted in its entirety and is replaced with the following:

In order to achieve the Objective, the Parties agree to work together to achieve the following Intermediate and Sub-Intermediate results:

Intermediate Result 1 (IR1). Sustainable Management of Natural Forests in the Bolivian Lowlands. IR1 was designed to build Bolivia's private and public sector capacity to manage natural forests sustainably. Well-managed commercial forestry can foster development while creating economic incentives for forest conservation. This IR shall focus on five major areas of activity: Technical assistance for forest management by municipal producer groups; Forest management by Indigenous groups; Strengthening of relevant public agencies; Applied research; and Market development and investment promotion. IR1 includes four Sub-Intermediate Results (Sub-IRs): a) Policies, laws and regulatory framework in place to promote sustainable management of forest resources; b) Institutional and technical capacity developed to sustainably manage forests; c) Access to certified markets provides economic incentives for sustainable forestry: and d) Necessary ecological, social, and economic information developed to guide forest management.

Intermediate Result 2 (IR2). Adequate Management of Protected Areas. IR2 is aimed at strengthening protected area management in Bolivia through support to National Park Service (SERNAP) and NGOs with co-administration agreements, emphasizing the tropical Andes. To cumplir con el RI2, se ha diseñado los siguientes cinco Resultados Sub-Intermedios (RSI): a) Amenazas detectadas a la conservación frenadas; b) Planes desarrollados de manejo a largo plazo; c) Capacidad institucional desarrollada para el manejo de áreas protegidas; d) Financiamiento de largo plazo asegurado; y e) Participación activa de la ciudadanía en la conservación de áreas protegidas.

accomplish IR2, the following five Sub-Intermediate Results (Sub-IRs) have been designed: a) Immediate conservation threats detected: b) Long-term development plans developed; c) Institutional capacity developed to manage protected areas; d) Long-term funding ensured; and e) Local constituency actively participating in protected areas conservation.

Resultado Intermedio 3 (RI3). Manejo Ambiental Mejorado de la Contaminación Urbana e Industrial. Este RI representa una reafirmación del RI2 anterior, "Contaminación Industrial Reducida en Zonas Meta", fortificándolo para expandir la aplicación de producción más limpia como herramienta para reducir la contaminación proveniente de industrias y otras fuentes urbanas como ser hospitales, hoteles y otras empresas, y mejorar la eficiencia de los mismos. El RI3 tiene dos Resultados Sub-Intermedios (RSI): a) Capacidad institucional creada para apoyar la producción más limpia; y b) Capacidad financiera creada para inversiones en producción más limpia.

Intermediate Result 3 (IR3) Improved Environmental Management of Urban and Industrial Pollution. This IR3 represents a restatement of the previous IR2 "Industrial Pollution Reduced in Target Areas" and builds upon the latter to expand the use of cleaner production as a tool to achieve reduced pollution from industry and other urban sources, such as hospitals, hotels and other enterprises, while improving the efficiency of these operations. IR3 has two Sub-Intermediate Results (Sub-IRs): a) Institutional capacity created to sustain cleaner production; b) Financial capacity created by investments in cleaner production.

Este anexo describe las actividades que serán llevadas a cabo y los resultados a ser logrados con los fondos comprometidos bajo el presente Acuerdo. El contenido de este Anexo 1 no será interpretado como una enmienda a las definiciones ni términos del Acuerdo.

II. Resumen Ejecutivo

Los recursos naturales de Bolivia tienen un significado a nivel global y su manejo está mejorando a un ritmo digno de mencionarse. El país tiene 53.000.000 hectáreas de bosques, Centro América y Méjico poseen una cantidad similar en forma conjunta. Los bosques bolivianos conservan una biodiversidad de importancia mundial y son importantes sumideros de dióxido de carbono. Casi seis millones de estos bosques se encuentran en calidad de concesiones forestales y se espera que para fines del año 2000, por lo menos 15% de esta cantidad de hectáreas estén certificadas en forma independiente. Vale recalcar que en el resto, se han mejorado las prácticas de manejo significativamente, como consecuencia de la nueva legislación y de instituciones más sólidas. Además, se espera que grupos locales y originarios aumenten sus demandas para concesiones y territorios para dedicarlos a la producción

II. Executive Summary

Bolivia's natural resources are globally significant and their management is improving at a remarkable pace. The country has 53,000,000 hectares of forests; the same amount as occur in all of Central America and Mexico combined. Bolivian forests sequester billions of tons of carbon and conserve world-class biodiversity. Almost 6 million ha of these forests are under private concessions for timber management – 15% of which is expected to be independently certified by third parties by the end of 2000. The remainder will have improved their practices significantly, in part due to new legislation and stronger institutions. In addition, local and indigenous groups are expected to increase their demands for concessions and territories for forestry production; and they will require the necessary technical and administrative support to ensure their endeavors are successful.

forestal. Estos requerirán apoyo técnico y administrativo para asegurar que tengan éxito en su cometido.

Recientemente, una ONG internacional completó un diagnóstico en el que se identificó a los Andes tropicales de Bolivia como el epicentro de la diversidad biológica del planeta. El sistema boliviano de áreas protegidas cubre el 13,5% del territorio y está diseñado para conservar su espectacular diversidad. Solo el Parque Nacional Madidi contiene el 11% del total de especies de aves del mundo, mientras que el Parque Nacional Kaa Iya del Gran Chaco alberga el bosque tropical seco protegido más grande del mundo. Kaa Iya es el parque más grande de las Américas co-administrado por un grupo indígena.

Pese al progreso mencionado, los recursos de Bolivia aún están en riesgo. Cada año, unas 168.000 hectáreas (0,3%) de los bosques del país son convertidos para usos agrícolas, muchas de los cuales no son sostenibles. Los logros en el sector forestal son aún precarios: los desperdicios del aprovechamiento y transformación se mantienen en niveles altos, las exportaciones de productos forestales han disminuido y Bolivia ha perdido su lugar en los mercados mundiales y en los de maderas tropicales, además muchas de las concesiones están amenazadas por la inseguridad jurídica. La mayoría de las áreas protegidas carece de manejo y financiamiento adecuados, mientras otras fueron diseñadas arbitrariamente y han internalizado problemas incluyendo usos incompatibles de la tierra. La contaminación urbana e industrial constituyen un problema creciente y muchos de los desechos generados en estas áreas fluyen a través de zonas urbanas y peri-urbanas donde se cultivan alimentos, que ponen en riesgo la salud de sus habitantes. Además, llegan a ecosistemas

A recent assessment by a leading international environmental NGO identified Bolivia's tropical Andes as part of the planet's most important hotspot, the "epicenter" of global biodiversity. Bolivia's protected area system covers 13.5% of the country and is designed to conserve this spectacular diversity. A single national park – Madidi – contains 11% of the world's bird species, while the Kaa Iya del Gran Chaco Park harbors the largest protected dry tropical forest in the world. Kaa Iya is also the largest national park in the Americas co-managed by an indigenous group.

Despite these advances, Bolivia's resources are still at risk. Each year approximately 168,000 ha (0.3%) of its forests are converted mostly to agricultural uses - many of which are unsustainable. Achievements in the forestry sector remain precarious, harvesting and milling waste remains high, Bolivia's forest exports are down, it has lost its share of world and tropical timber markets, and many concessions are threatened by poor tenure arrangements. Most protected areas lack adequate management and financing, while others were delineated arbitrarily and have grandfathered in a host of problems including competing and incompatible land uses. Urban and industrial pollution are a growing problem and much of the waste generated in these areas flows through urban, peri-urban and food-growing areas threatening human health and into fragile ecosystems such as the Amazon and Titicaca-Poopó basins. Significant water pollution arises from the leachates of solid wastes that are not properly disposed of. Although a strong environmental and natural resources legal framework has been in place for several years, a more rational regulatory system is needed, including positive economic incentives to generate compliance, reduce use and waste, and to improve water and air quality.

frágiles como los de las cuencas del Amazonas y Titicaca-Poopó, que se encuentran bajo constante amenaza. La contaminación significativa del agua surge de la lixiviación de los desechos tóxicos que no son manejados apropiadamente y contaminan las aguas. Pese a que desde hacen varios años existe un marco legal adecuado, se requiere un sistema regulatorio más racional que incluya incentivos económicos positivos para el acatamiento general y para reducir el uso y desecho, a fin de mejorar la calidad del agua y del aire.

Para apoyar a Bolivia a afrontar estos retos, USAID/Bolivia, el Gobierno de Bolivia (GOB), a través del Ministerio de Desarrollo Sostenible y Planificación y varias otras organizaciones, han trabajado en forma conjunta para actualizar el Objetivo Estratégico "Degradación Reducida de los Recursos Forestales e Hídricos y la Biodiversidad Conservada", incluyendo un Marco de Resultados que servirá para guiar y medir el impacto para lograr los resultados esperados dentro del Objetivo Estratégico, el cual en última instancia será logrado mediante las actividades contenidas en los siguientes tres Resultados Intermedios: 1) Manejo sostenible de bosques naturales de las tierras bajas; 2) Manejo adecuado de áreas protegidas; y 3) Manejo mejorado de la contaminación urbana e industrial.

In order to help Bolivia address these challenges, USAID/Bolivia, the Government of Bolivia's Ministry of Sustainable Development and Planning (GOB) and several partner organizations, worked together in updating the Strategic Objective entitled "Reduced Degradation of Forest and Water Resources and Biodiversity Conserved". A Results Framework was revised to guide and measure the impact of achieving the expected results under this strategic objective, which contains the following three Intermediate Results: 1) Sustainable management of natural forests in the Bolivian lowlands; 2) Adequate management of protected areas, and 3) Improved environmental management of urban and industrial pollution.

Resultado Intermedio 1 (RI 1): Manejo Sostenible de Bosques Naturales de las Tierras Bajas.

Intermediate Result 1 (IR1): Management of Natural Forests in the Bolivian Lowlands.

La actividad conocida como BOLFOR (Proyecto de Manejo Forestal Sostenible) RI1, comenzó en 1994 y ha sido ejecutado por la consultora estadounidense Chemonics International. En este lapso, la consultora enfocó cuatro áreas: (a) Políticas Forestales/Fortalecimiento Institucional; (b) Manejo Forestal; (c) Investigación; y (d)

IR1 started in 1994 with an activity known as BOLFOR (Bolivia Sustainable Forestry Project) and has been implemented by the US consulting firm Chemonics International. It focussed on four areas: (a) Forest Policy/Institutional Strengthening; (b) Forest Management; (c) Research; and (d) Product Development and Marketing. The Desarrollo y Mercadeo de Productos. Estas cuatro actividades fueron exitosas, tal como se demuestra en los resultados obtenidos. Se deberá cambiar el enfoque en estas áreas para reflejar las necesidades cambiantes del sector forestal y el estado actual del nuevo régimen forestal, establecido mediante la nueva Ley Forestal. Además, la necesidad de buscar y desarrollar nuevos mercados será complementado por el trabajo del Centro Amazónico de Desarrollo Forestal Sostenible (CADEFOR), una ONG boliviana dedicada a promover mercados para productos certificados. Durante el diseño del RI1 actualizado, se pudo apreciar que los dos nuevos actores más importantes son los municipios y los grupos indígenas. Consecuentemente, estos dos grupos se convertirán en el elemento primordial del programa de extensión propuesto, que será ejecutado a fin de lograr el RI1 y los siguientes cuatro Resultados Sub-Intermedios (RSI): (a) Resultado Sub-Intermedio 1: Políticas, leyes y marco regulatorio en vigencia para promover el desarrollo sostenible de los recursos forestales; (b) Resultado Sub-Intermedio 2: Capacidad técnica e institucional desarrollada para el manejo sostenible de bosques; (c) Resultado Sub-Intermedio 3: Acceso a mercados certificados para proveer incentivos de carácter económico para el manejo forestal sostenible; y (d) Resultado Sub-Intermedio 4: Información ecológica, social y económica desarrollada para guiar el manejo forestal.

above four activities have been very successful, as demonstrated by the results obtained. The above areas will need to be changed to reflect the evolving needs of the forest sector, and the current status of implementation of the new forestry regime mandated by the new Forestry Law. In addition, the need to seek and develop new markets will be complemented by the efforts of CADEFOR (Amazonian Center for Sustainable Forest Enterprise), a Bolivian NGO established to promote markets for certified forest products. During the design of the updated IR1, it became apparent that the two most important actors in the new scenario are municipalities and indigenous groups. Consequently, these two groups will be the centerpiece of the proposed extended program, that will be carried out to achieve IR1 and the following four Sub-Intermediate Results (Sub-IRs): (a) Sub-Intermediate Result 1: Policies, laws and regulatory framework in place to promote sustainable management of forest resources; (b) Sub-Intermediate Result 2: Institutional and technical capability developed to sustainably manage forests; (c) Sub-Intermediate Results 3: Access to certified markets provide economic incentives for sustainable forestry; and (d) Sub-Intermediate Result 4: Necessary ecological, social and economic information developed to guide forest management.

Resultado Intermedio 2 (RI2): Manejo Adecuado de Areas Protegidas

En 1995, USAID/Bolivia proporcionó recursos para permitir que CABI/FII (Capitanía del Alto y Bajo Izozog/ Fundación Ivi-Iyambae) empezara a concentrarse en los varios desafíos como resultado de la reciente responsabilidad

Intermediate Result 2 (RI2): Adequate Management of Protected Areas

In 1995, USAID/Bolivia began to provide resources to permit CABI/FII (Capitanía del Alto y Bajo Izozog/Fundación Ivi-Iyambae) to address the diverse challenges that came with its new responsibilities as co-administrator of the Kaa Iya National Park como co-administradora del Parque Nacional Kaa-Iya (PNKI). Esta fase es conocida como Fase I del Proyecto Kaa-Iya. La Fase II comenzó en enero de 1996 con el otorgamiento de una donación por parte de USAID/Bolivia a WCS (Sociedad para la Conservación de la Vida Silvestre) y una donación del proyecto de Apoyo a la Biodiversidad a través de Tierras Nativas. Estas donaciones permitieron que el proceso de consultas y planificación continuara haciendo hincapié en un trabajo de mapeo de comunidades. La Fase III empezó el 29 de mayo de 1997, mediante una enmienda a la donación de USAID/Bolivia a WCS. Esta extensión de tres años proporcionó apoyo a CABI/FII en las áreas de: 1) fortalecimiento institucional; 2) manejo de recursos naturales a nivel comunitario; 3) manejo de áreas protegidas; y 4) educación ambiental. La siguiente fase de esta actividad abarcará el periodo 2000-2003 y será ejecutada en forma conjunta por WCS y CABI/FII. Para ayudar a alcanzar las metas trazadas dentro del Objetivo Estratégico, se ejecutarán los siguientes Resultados Sub-Intermedios (RSI): (a) Resultado Sub-Intermedio 1: Amenazas inmediatas a la conservación frenadas; (b) Resultado Sub-Intermedio 2: Planes de manejo de largo plazo desarrollados; (c) Resultado Sub-Intermedio 3: Capacidad institucional desarrollada para el manejo de áreas protegidas; (d) Resultado Sub-Intermedio 4: Financiamiento asegurado para largo plazo; y (e) Resultado Sub-Intermedio 5: Participación activa de la ciudadanía en la conservación de áreas protegidas.

(KINP), in what came to be known as Phase I of the Kaa-Iya Project. Phase II of Kaa-Iya began in January 1996, with a grant from USAID/Bolivia to WCS (Wildlife Conservation Society), and another to CABI/FII from the Biodiversity Support Project through Native Lands. These grants permitted the consultation and planning process to continue, with particular emphasis on a community mapping exercise. Phase III of Kaa-Iya began on 29 May 1997, with an amendment to the USAID grant to WCS. This three-year effort has provided support to CABI/FII in the areas of: 1) institutional strengthening; 2) community-based natural resource management; 3) protected area management; and 4) environmental education. The next phase of the activity will cover the period 2000-2003, to be jointly implemented by WCS and CABI/FII. The following five Sub-Intermediate Results (Sub-IRs) will be carried out to help achieve the overall objectives of the Strategic Objective. (a) Sub-Intermediate Result 1: Immediate conservation threats deterred; (b) Sub-Intermediate Result 2: Long-term management plans developed; (c) Sub-Intermediate Result 3: Institutional capacity developed to manage protected areas; (d) Sub-Intermediate Result 4: Long-term funding ensured; and (e) Sub-Intermediate Result 5: Local constituency actively participating in protected area conservation.

Además de las actividades llevadas a cabo por WCS en el Chaco, otras instituciones asociadas enfocarán el mejoramiento del manejo de áreas protegidas, poniendo énfasis en los Andes tropicales. Estas instituciones incluyen al Fondo Mundial para la Naturaleza, The Nature Conservancy

In addition to activities carried out by WCS in the Chaco, other USAID partners will focus on improving protected area management, with a focus on the eastern slopes of the Andes. These will include the World Wildlife Fund, The Nature Conservancy, and Conservation

y Conservación Internacional.

Resultado Intermedio 3 (RI3): Manejo Ambiental Mejorado de la Contaminación Urbana e Industrial En los últimos seis años, USAID/Bolivia ha financiado actividades de producción más limpia bajo el Proyecto de Prevención de la Contaminación (EP3) y actualmente a través del Centro de Promoción de Tecnologías Sostenibles (CPTS). Esta actividad ha conseguido varios y diversos logros que beneficiaron al sector público y privado, los logros de este último han sido los más notorios. Con el propósito de mantener y continuar esta exitosa actividad, USAID/Bolivia ha tomado la decisión de seguir financiándola por los próximos cinco años. Para lograr el objetivo del RI3, se llevarán a cabo los siguientes dos Resultados Sub-Intermedios (RSI): (a) Resultado Sub-Intermedio 1: Capacidad institucional creada para promover la producción más limpia; y (b) Resultado Sub-Intermedio 2: Capacidad financiera creada para inversiones en producción más limpia.

III. Descripción Ampliada

Resultado Intermedio 1: Manejo Sostenible de los Bosques Naturales de las Tierras Bajas de Bolivia

En el pasado reciente, los obstáculos técnicos para el manejo adecuado de los bosques incluían la falta de conocimiento ecológico, silvicultural y biológico para diseñar prácticas sostenibles. Además, la inadecuada institucionalidad y la falta de un número adecuado de profesionales en los sectores público y privado, fueron otros obstáculos para el manejo efectivo de bosques. Pese a que los éxitos en estos campos han sido significativos, la situación es aún precaria.

Intermediate Result 3 (IR3): Improved Environmental Management of Urban and Industrial Pollution

Over the last six years USAID/Bolivia has been funding cleaner production activities in the country as part of the Pollution Prevention Project (EP3) and then through the Centro de Promoción de Tecnologías Sostenibles (CPTS). The activity has numerous and diverse accomplishments that benefited the public and private sectors and the success among private companies has been remarkable. In order to maintain this successful activity and to ensure its continuity, USAID/Bolivia has decided to continue funding this activity over the next five years. In order to help achieve IR3, the following two Sub-Intermediate Results (Sub-IRs) will be carried out: (a) Sub-Intermediate Result 1: Institutional capacity created to sustain cleaner production; and (b) Sub-Intermediate Result 2: Financial capacity created for investments in cleaner production.

III. Amplified Description

Intermediate Result 1: Sustainable Management of Natural Forests in the Bolivian Lowlands

In the recent past, technical constraints to improved forest management included the lack of adequate ecological, silvicultural, and biological knowledge to design sustainable practices. Furthermore, institutional inadequacies and the lack of a critical mass of professionals in the private and public sector to effectively manage forests needed to be addressed. Although gains in these realms have been significant, the situation remains problematic.

Durante los últimos seis años se ha generado una cantidad considerable de conocimiento básico sobre los ecosistemas de Bolivia, a través de BOLFOR. Un grupo cada vez más grande de profesionales en el área forestal ha sido capacitado en distintas ramas de manejo forestal para tratar las necesidades del sector forestal adecuadamente. La Superintendencia Forestal ha ganado credibilidad dentro del sector y está llevando a cabo sus funciones adecuadamente, pese a tener algunas dificultades financieras. El Ministerio de Desarrollo Sostenible y Planificación ha desarrollado una serie de normas técnicas que sirven de guías al sector forestal.

A considerable amount of basic knowledge of Bolivia's ecosystems has been generated over the past six years through BOLFOR. An increasing pool of forestry professionals has been trained in various aspects of forest management and is addressing the needs of the forest sector more adequately. The forest sector regulatory office, the Superintendencia Forestal, has gained credibility within the sector and is performing its duties adequately, although with certain financial difficulties. The Ministry of Sustainable Development and Planning has developed a series of technical norms that are guiding the forest sector.

El proyecto BOLFOR concentrará sus esfuerzos en la consolidación de los logros obtenidos en el sector, y en priorizar la ayuda al GOB para incorporar nuevos actores al régimen forestal que anteriormente estuvieron marginados y que se les negó acceso a los recursos forestales. Estas actividades irán acompañadas de la permanente retroalimentación por parte de las actividades de investigación para asegurar que los estándares técnicos que están siendo aplicados constituyan un verdadero modelo sostenible de producción. Además, CADEFOR ayudará a proporcionar los vínculos necesarios a los mercados certificados e inversores interesados en el sector forestal de Bolivia.

The BOLFOR project will now focus on consolidating the gains to date, and most importantly, help the GOB incorporate into the new forestry regime new actors that had previously been marginalised and denied access to forest resources. These activities will be accompanied by constant feedback from research activities to ensure the technical standards currently in place are protecting a truly sustainable model of production. In addition, CADEFOR will help provide the necessary links to certified markets and investors interested in Bolivian forestry.

Varios resultados intermedios serán logrados mediante esta asistencia a través del proyecto BOLFOR y CADEFOR. Estos resultados sub-intermedios están dirigidos a lograr el Resultado Intermedio 1 e incluyen:

- Establecimiento de políticas, leyes y un marco regulatorio para promover el manejo sostenible de recursos forestales;
- Capacidad institucional y técnica para

A number of sub-intermediate results will be achieved with this assistance, through BOLFOR and CADEFOR. These activities will be aimed at meeting Intermediate Result 1 and include:

- Policies, laws and regulatory framework in place to promote sustainable management of forest resources;
- Institutional and technical capacity manejar bosques en forma sostenible;

- A través del acceso a mercados certificados, proporcionar incentivos para el manejo sostenible; y
- La necesaria información ecológica, social y económica desarrollada para guiar el manejo forestal.

El avance hacia el logro de estos objetivos intermedios se medirá a través de indicadores que incluyan el número de hectáreas de bosques manejados y certificados por terceros, exportaciones de productos certificados y el número de TCOs (Tierras Comunitarias de Origen) y ASLs (Agrupaciones Sociales del Lugar) que mantienen bosques que están certificados, así como su capacidad institucional a futuro. Estos indicadores serán obtenidos de terceras personas y el contratista, después de consultas con USAID/Bolivia.

Para lograr estos resultados, se ejecutarán las siguientes actividades:

A. Asistencia Técnica para Manejo Forestal a Agrupaciones Sociales de Lugar o ASLs

La Ley Forestal de Bolivia estipula que hasta un 20% de las tierras fiscales en cada municipio pueden ser otorgadas a ASLs para que administren áreas forestales de reserva municipal (AFRM). Actualmente, las ASLs no tienen (a) normas y regulaciones propias de organización interna; (b) la capacidad técnica para manejar bosques; (c) capital; y (d) la capacidad de administración y vínculos para que sus operaciones prosperen. BOLFOR está trabajando con 13 ASLs en cinco municipios. Durante la extensión del proyecto, este trabajo será profundizado y ampliado. Un elemento importante en el apoyo de USAID/Bolivia developed to sustainably manage forests;

- Access to certified markets provides economic incentives for sustainable forestry; and
- Necessary ecological, social, and economic information developed to guide forest management.

Progress towards the achievement of these intermediate results will be measured through indicators including the number of third-party certified hectares of managed forests, exports of certified products, and the number of TCO (Tierras Comunitarias de Origen) and ASL (Agrupaciones Sociales del Lugar) held forests that are certified as well as their institutional capacity in the future. These indicators will be sought from third parties and the contractor after consultation with USAID/Bolivia.

In order to achieve these results, the above mentioned activities will be implemented as follows:

A. Technical Assistance for Forest Management by Municipal Producer Groups (Agrupaciones Sociales del Lugar, or ASLs)

Bolivia's Forestry Law stipulates that up to 20% of the public land in each municipality can be given to ASLs to manage as a municipal forest reserve (Area Forestal de Reserva Municipal). Currently ASLs generally lack (a) proper rules and arrangements for internal organization; (b) the technical capacity to manage forests; (c) capital; and (d) the business skills and connections to make their operations successful. BOLFOR is already working with some 13 ASLs in 5 municipalities. During the extension period this work will be both deepened and expanded. An important element of USAID's support for

Agreement Between the Government of the United States of America
and the Government of the Republic of Palau
Regarding the Surrender of Persons to the International Criminal Court

The Government of the United States of America and the Government of Palau, hereinafter "the Parties,"

Reaffirming the importance of bringing to justice those who commit genocide, crimes against humanity and war crimes,

Recalling that the Rome Statute of the International Criminal Court done at Rome on July 17, 1998 by the United Nations Diplomatic Conference of Plenipotentiaries on the Establishment of an International Criminal Court is intended to complement and not supplant national criminal jurisdiction,

Considering that the Parties have each expressed their intention to investigate and to prosecute where appropriate acts within the jurisdiction of the International Criminal Court alleged to have been committed by its officials, employees, military personnel or other nationals,

Bearing in mind Article 98 of the Rome Statute,

Hereby agree as follows:

1. For purposes of this agreement, "persons" are current or former Government officials, employees (including contractors), or military personnel or nationals of one Party.

2. Persons of one Party present in the territory of the other shall not, absent the expressed consent of the first Party,

(a) be surrendered or transferred by any means to the International Criminal Court for any purpose, or

(b) be surrendered or transferred by any means to any other entity or third country, or expelled to a third country, for the purpose of surrender to or transfer to the International Criminal Court.

3. When the United States extradites, surrenders, or otherwise transfers a person of the Republic of Palau to a third country, the United States will not agree to the surrender or transfer of that person to the International Criminal Court by such third country, absent the expressed consent of the Government of Palau.

4. When the Government of Palau extradites, surrenders, or otherwise transfers a person of the United States of America to a third country, the Government of Palau will not agree to the surrender or transfer of that person to the International Criminal Court by such third country, absent the expressed consent of the Government of the United States.

5. Each Party agrees, subject to its international legal obligations, not to knowingly facilitate, consent to, or cooperate with efforts by any third party or country to effect the extradition, surrender, or transfer of a person of the other Party to the International Criminal Court.

6. This Agreement shall enter into force upon an exchange of notes confirming that each Party has completed the necessary domestic legal requirements to bring the Agreement into force. It will remain in force until one year after the date on which one Party notifies the other of its intent to terminate this Agreement. The provisions of this Agreement shall continue to apply with respect to any act occurring, or any allegation arising, before the effective date of termination.

PURPOSE AND SCOPE

2.1. This Agreement establishes the terms and conditions by which the Parties, agree to provide on-site working assignments to selected career military personnel (hereafter referred to as "Military Exchange Personnel") from the other Party. The work assignments shall provide Military Exchange Personnel work experience and knowledge of the organization and management of Host Organization activities by performing duties under the direction of a host supervisor. Exchanges of military personnel under this Agreement shall be conducted on a reciprocal basis (one-for-one, in similar duties) so that the overall benefit to each Party shall be essentially equal. 5.6. The obligations of each Party under this Agreement shall be subject to the authorization and availability of funds for such purposes.

ARTICLE VI
SECURITY

6.1. During the selection process, each Party shall inform the other of the level of security clearance required, if any, to permit Military Exchange Personnel to have access to classified information and work areas. There shall be no access to Classified Information pursuant to this Agreement.

6.2. Each Party shall cause security assurances to be filed, through the Military Attaché, Embassy of Mexico in Washington, DC, in the case of Mexican personnel, and through the Army Attaché, U.S. Embassy in Mexico City, in the case of the United States personnel, stating the security clearances for all Military Exchange Personnel selected. 6.3. The Host Organization and the Parent Organization shall ensure that assigned Military Exchange Personnel are fully cognizant of applicable laws and regulations concerning the protection of proprietary information (such as patents, copyrights, know-how, and trade secrets), and controlled unclassified information to which access might be gained under this Exchange Program, both during and after termination of an assignment. Military Exchange Personnel shall be required to sign the certification at Annex A.

6.4. Military Exchange Personnel shall at all times be required to comply with the security laws, regulations and procedures of the government of the Host Party. Any violation of security procedures by Military Exchange Personnel during their assignments shall be reported to the Parent Party for appropriate action. ## ARTICLE VII
TECHNICAL AND ADMINISTRATIVE MATTERS

7.1. To the extent authorized by the laws and regulations of the government of the Host Party, the Host Organization shall arrange for the provision of administrative support as is deemed necessary for Military Exchange Personnel to perform assigned tasks efficiently. The Host Organization shall familiarize Military Exchange Personnel with any unique procedures necessary for the proper performance of their assigned tasks.

7.2. Consistent with the laws and regulations of the government of the Host Party, Military Exchange Personnel assigned under this Agreement shall be subject to the same restrictions, conditions, and privileges as Host Party personnel of comparable rank in their areas of assignment. Further, to the extent authorized by the laws and regulations of the government of the Host Party, Military Exchange Personnel and their authorized dependents shall be accorded on a reciprocal basis:

7.2.1. Exemption from any tax by the government of the Host Party upon income received from the government of the Parent Party. The Convention between the Government of the United States of America and the Government of the United Mexican States for the Avoidance of Double Taxation and the Prevention of Fiscal Evasion with Respect to Taxes on Income, with Related Protocol, signed 18 September 1992, and the Additional Protocol that Modifies the Convention, signed 8 September 1994, shall apply to this Agreement. This Agreement does not affect Parent Party Tax Laws regarding income of Parent Party Personnel.

7.2.2. Exemption from any customs and import duties or similar charges levied on items entering the country of the Host Party for their official or personal use, including their baggage, household effects, and private motor vehicles. The foregoing shall not in any way limit privileges set forth elsewhere in this Agreement, or other privileges granted by the laws of the government of the Host Party.

7.3. Military Exchange Personnel and their accompanying dependents shall be informed by the Host Organization about applicable laws, orders, regulations and customs and they shall be required to comply with them. Military Exchange Personnel and their dependents also shall be briefed by Host Organization personnel regarding their specific entitlements, privileges, and obligations upon their arrival in the country of the Host Organization.

7.4. Military Exchange Personnel may observe the holiday schedule of either the Parent Party or the Host Party as mutually agreed.

7.5. Military Exchange Personnel shall be assigned work under the guidance and supervision of a host supervisor, a person from the Host Party. The host supervisor shall establish performance standards and observe the performance of Military Exchange Personnel to provide a basis for counseling and performance evaluations. Military Exchange Personnel shall have performance evaluations rendered by their Host Organization's supervisor. The Host Organization shall forward such evaluations to the Parent Organization in accordance with Parent Organization requirements.

Military Exchange Personnel shall not exercise disciplinary authority over personnel of the Host Party. The Parties shall cooperate in carrying out administrative or disciplinary action by the Parent Party against its Military Exchange Personnel.

7.8. Any medical and dental care that may be provided to Military Exchange Personnel and their dependents at the Host Party medical facilities, shall be subject to the requirements of the laws and regulations of the government of the Host Party and applicable agreements, including reimbursement when required by such laws and regulations.

7.9. In no case shall Military Exchange Personnel be assigned to positions, which would require exercise of command or be assigned to other positions that would require them to exercise responsibilities that are reserved by law or regulation to an officer or employee of the United States Government or the Government of the United States of Mexico.

7.10. Military Exchange Personnel shall not be placed on duty or in positions in areas of political sensitivity where their presence would jeopardize the interests of the Parent

Party, or where, in the normal course of their duty, they may become involved in activities, which may embarrass the Parent Party.

7.11. The Host Party shall not deploy Military Exchange Personnel to a third country.

7.12. The Host Party shall not place Military Exchange Personnel in duty assignments in which direct hostilities with forces of a third country are likely. Should a unit in which Military Exchange Personnel are assigned become involved in hostilities unexpectedly, Military Exchange Personnel assigned to the unit shall not be involved in the hostilities.

7.13. Purchasing and patronage privileges at military commissaries, exchanges, theaters and clubs shall be extended to Military Exchange Personnel and their dependents on the same basis as equivalent personnel of the Host Party. This provision shall not, however, limit privileges set forth elsewhere in this Agreement or other privileges granted by the Host Party, at its discretion, with the consent of the Parent Party.

7.14. Military Exchange Personnel shall be granted leave and passes/liberty according to their entitlements under the regulations of the Parent Organization, subject to the approval of the appropriate authorities of the Host Organization.

Military Exchange Personnel shall pay messing and housing charges to the same extent as personnel of the Host Organization. At locations where facilities are not provided by the Host Organization for its own personnel, the Parent Organization shall make suitable arrangements for Military Exchange Personnel.

7.17. The United States Army Attaché will serve as the U.S. Army Military Personnel Exchange Program Administrator. The U.S. Army Military Exchange Personnel on exchange with the Secretariat of the National Defense of the United States of Mexico units will be under the administrative control of the United States Army Attaché, Mexico City, Mexico.

7.18. Mexican Military Exchange Personnel on exchange with the U.S. Army will be under the administrative control of the Mexican Military Attaché in Washington, DC.

7.19. United States Military Exchange Personnel shall have the same status accorded members of the administrative and technical staff in the United States Embassy, Mexico City, Mexico. Mexican Military Exchange Personnel shall have status according to their visas.

ARTICLE VIII
CLAIMS

8.1. Claims arising from the operation of this Agreement shall be governed by any bilateral agreement between the Parties pertaining to the status of their Forces in the country of the Host Party. 8.3. Claims, other than contractual claims, for damage, loss, injury, or death, not covered by the waivers contained in paragraphs 8.1 and 8.2 of this Article, arising out of an act or omission by the military members or civilian employees of its Department or Ministry of Defense, or out of an act or omission for which the Parent Party is legally responsible, shall be presented to the Parent Party for consideration under its applicable laws and regulations.

8.4. Military Exchange Personnel and those dependents accompanying them, must obtain motor vehicle liability insurance coverage in accordance with applicable laws and regulations of the government of the Host Party, or its political subdivision, where they are located. In case of claims involving the use of private motor vehicles, the first recourse shall be against such insurance.

8.5. Nothing herein shall be construed as waiving the claims or suits of individual military members or civilian employees of the respective Department or Ministry of Defense, other civilian employees, or third parties that might exist under applicable law.

The Government of the United States of America and the Government of India, hereinafter "the Parties,"

Reaffirming the importance of bringing to justice those who commit genocide, crimes against humanity and war crimes,

Considering that the Parties have each expressed their intention, where appropriate, to investigate and prosecute war crimes, crimes against humanity, and genocide alleged to have been committed by their respective officials, employees, military personnel, and nationals,

Hereby agree as follows:

1. For purposes of this agreement, "persons" are current or former Government officials, employees (including contractors), or military personnel or nationals of one Party.

2. Persons of one Party present in the territory of the other shall not, absent the express consent of the first Party,

(a) be surrendered or transferred by any means to any international tribunal for any purpose, unless otherwise obligated to do so by an international agreement to which both the United States and India are parties, or

4. When the Government of India extradites, surrenders, or otherwise transfers a person of the United States of America to a third country, the Government of India will not agree to the surrender or transfer of that person by the third country to any international tribunal, unless otherwise obligated to do so by an international agreement to which both the United States and India are parties, absent the express consent of the Government of the United States.

5. Each Party agrees not to knowingly facilitate, consent to, or cooperate with efforts by any third party or country to effect the extradition, surrender, or transfer of a person of the other Party to any international tribunal, unless otherwise obligated to do so by an international agreement to which both the United States and India are parties.

This Agreement shall enter into force upon an exchange of notes confirming that each Party has completed the necessary domestic legal requirements to bring the Agreement into force. It will remain in force until one year after the date on which one Party notifies the other of its intent to terminate this Agreement. The provisions of this Agreement shall continue to apply with respect to any act occurring, or any allegation arising, before the effective date of termination.

INTRODUCTION

United States Joint Forces Command (USJFCOM) and the Department of National Defence of Canada (DND) as represented by the Canadian Forces (CF) (each referred to herein individually as a "Party" and together as the "Parties"), desiring to establish formal liaisons between the Parties, hereby consent to the following provisions regarding the assignment of individuals at government facilities to serve as Liaison Officers between them.

This Memorandum of Understanding (MOU) is prepared under the auspices of the Agreement between the Government of the United States of America and the Government of Canada concerning Certain Mutual Defence Commitments (CHAPEAU) dated 19 August 1994, and the Agreement between the Parties to the North Atlantic Treaty regarding the Status of their Forces (NATO SOFA) dated 19 June 1951.

SECTION I
DEFINITIONS

In addition to any terms defined in other provisions of this MOU, the following terms will have the following meanings when used herein:

1.1 "Classified Information" will mean official information of a Party that requires protection in the interests of national security of such Party and is so designated by the application of security classification markings.

1.2 "Contact Officer" will mean a Host Party official designated in writing to oversee and control all contacts, requests for information, consultations, access, and other activities of foreign Liaison Officers who are assigned to, or are visiting, a Host Party component or subordinate organization.

1.3 "Controlled Unclassified Information" will mean unclassified information of a Party to which access or distribution limitations have been applied in accordance with national laws, policies, and regulations of such Party. It includes United States information that is exempt from public disclosure or subject to export controls.

1.4 "Host Government" will mean the national government of the Host Party.

1.5 "Host Party" will mean the Party to which the Liaison Officer acts as a liaison pursuant to an assignment by a Parent Party under Section III.

1.6 "International Visits Program (IVP)" will mean the program established to process visits by, and assignments of, foreign representatives to United States Department of Defense Components and Department of Defense contractor facilities. It is designed to ensure that Classified and Controlled Unclassified Information to be disclosed to foreign nationals has been properly authorized for disclosure to their governments; that the requesting foreign government provides a security assurance on such foreign nationals and their sponsoring organization or firm, when Classified Information is involved in the visit or assignment, and that administrative arrangements (e.g., date, time and place) for the visit or assignment are provided.

1.7 "Foreign Visits System" will mean the program established to process visits by and assignments of foreign representatives to Canada's Department of National Defence.

1.8 "Liaison Officer" will mean a military member or civilian employee of a Parent Party who, upon approval or certification of the Host Party or Government, is authorized by the Parent Party to act as its official representative in connection with programs, projects, or agreements of interest to the Parties.

1.9 "Parent Government" will mean the national government of the Parent Party.

1.10 "Parent Party" will mean the Party that assigns a Liaison Officer pursuant to Section III.

SECTION II
SCOPE

2.1 During the term of this MOU, subject to the concurrence of the Parties, each Party may assign military members or civilian employees of its armed forces to serve as a Liaison Officer(s) to the other Party in accordance with the provisions of this MOU.

2.2 The establishment of each Liaison Officer position under this MOU will be based upon the demonstrated need for, and the mutual benefit of, this position to the Parties. Once established, each Liaison Officer position will be subject to periodic review by either Party to ensure that the position continues to be required by, and is of mutual benefit to, the Parties. The Parties concur that a Liaison Officer position no longer required by, or of mutual benefit to, either Party will be subject to elimination.

2.3 Commencement of such an assignment by the Parent Party will be subject to any requirements that may be imposed by the Host Party or its government regarding formal certification or approval of Liaison Officers. Liaison Officers to be assigned by their Parent Party to locations in the United States will be requested pursuant to the International Visits Program (IVP), as defined in Paragraph 1.6 of this MOU.

2.4 Unless otherwise consented to, the normal tour of duty for a Liaison Officer will be thirty-six (36) months.

2.5 As a general rule, an individual may serve as a Liaison Officer to only one major military command of the Host Party at any point in time.

SECTION III
DUTIES AND ACTIVITIES

3.1 The Liaison Officer will represent the Parent Party to the Host Party. The Liaison Officer will not perform duties reserved by the laws or regulations of the Host Government to officers or employees of the Host Government, nor will the Liaison Officer provide any labor or services to the Host Government or any of its agencies, including the Host Party.

3.2 The Liaison Officer will be required to comply with all applicable Host Government policies, procedures, laws and regulations. The Host Party will assign a Contact Officer to provide guidance to the Liaison Officer concerning policies, procedures, laws and regulations of the Host Party, and to arrange for activities consistent with such requirements and the purposes of this MOU.

3.3 The Liaison Officer may request access to Host Party facilities by submitting a request to the Contact Officer. Access to Host Party facilities may be granted if such access promotes the purposes of this MOU, is consistent with the terms of any applicable certification or approval issued by the Host Government, and is permitted under the applicable policies, procedures, laws and regulations of the Host Government. Approval of such requests will be at the discretion of the Host Party. Any request for access that exceeds the terms of an applicable certification or approval will be submitted through the International Visits Program (IVP).

3.4 The Liaison Officer will not be granted access to technical data or other information of the Host Party, whether or not classified, except as authorized by the Host Party, and only to the extent necessary to fulfill the Liaison Officer's functions hereunder.

3.5 All information to which the Liaison Officer is granted access while serving as a liaison to the Host Party will be treated as information provided to the Parent Government, in confidence, and will not be further released or disclosed by the Liaison Officer to any other person, firm, organization, or government without the prior written authorization of the Host Government. Disclosure of information to the Liaison Officer will not be deemed to be a license or authorization to use such information for any purpose other than the purposes described in Section II.

3.6 The Liaison Officer will not be permitted to participate in exercises, deployments, or civil-military actions, unless expressly authorized to do so by both the Host and Parent Parties.

3.7 The Parent Party will not place or keep a Liaison Officer in duty assignments in which direct hostilities with forces of third states are likely to occur or have commenced, unless approved by the Parent Party and Host Party, in writing.

3.8 The Liaison Officer will be required to comply with the dress regulations of the Parent Party but, if requested by the Host Party, will also wear such identification necessary to identify the Liaison Officer's nationality, rank and status as a Liaison Officer. The order of dress for any occasion will be that which most closely conforms to the order of dress for the particular organization of the Host Party where the Liaison Officer is located. The Liaison Officer will be required to comply with the practices of the Host Party with respect to the wearing of civilian clothing.

3.9 Prior to the commencement of a Liaison Officer's tour, the Parent Party will notify the Host Party of the specific Parent Party organization which will exercise operational control over the Liaison Officer and, if different, the Parent Party organization that will provide administrative support to the Liaison Officer and the Liaison Officer's dependents.

3.10 At the end of a Liaison Officer's tour, or as otherwise agreed by the Parties, the Parent Party may, subject to the provisions of Paragraph 3.3, replace the Liaison Officer with another individual who meets the requirements of this MOU.

SECTION IV
FINANCIAL ARRANGEMENTS

4.1 The Parent Party will bear all costs and expenses of the Liaison Officer, including, but not limited to:

4.1.1 All pay and allowances of the Liaison Officer;

4.1.2 All travel by the Liaison Officer and the Liaison Officer's dependents, including, but not limited to, travel to and from the country of the Host Party;

4.1.3 All costs and expenses associated with the assignment or placement of the Liaison Officer and the Liaison Officer's dependents within the Host Party's country, including travel, office space, clerical support, quarters, rations, medical and dental services, unless specifically stated otherwise in an applicable international agreement or arrangement;

4.1.4 Compensation for loss of, or damage to, the personal property of the Liaison Officer, or the personal property of the Liaison Officer's dependents;

4.1.5 The movement of the household effects of the Liaison Officer and the Liaison Officer's dependents;

4.1.6 Preparation and shipment of remains and funeral expenses associated with the death of the Liaison Officer or his/her dependent(s);

4.1.7 Formal and informal training of the Liaison Officer, other than briefings on Host Party requirements provided by the Contact Officer; and

4.1.8 All expenses in connection with the return of a Liaison Officer whose assignment has ended or been terminated, along with his or her dependents.

4.2 The Host Party may provide such office facilities, equipment, supplies and services as may be necessary for the Liaison Officer to fulfill the purposes of this MOU, subject to reimbursement by the Parent Party for the cost of the Liaison Officer's use of such facilities at rates determined by the Host Party but not to exceed five thousand US dollars per year. Where the United States is the Host Party, reimbursement for such facilities, equipment, supplies, and services will be made through Foreign Military Sales (FMS).

SECTION V
SECURITY

5.1 The Host Party will establish the maximum substantive scope and classification levels within which the disclosure of any Classified Information or Controlled Unclassified Information to the Liaison Officer will be permitted. The Host Party will inform the Parent Party of the level of security clearance required to permit the Liaison Officer access to such information. The Liaison Officer's access to such information and facilities will be consistent with, and limited by the terms of his/her assignment, the provisions of this Section and any other agreement between the Parties or their governments concerning access to such information and facilities. Further, access will at all times be limited to the minimum required to accomplish the purposes of this MOU, and, at its discretion, the Host Party may prohibit the Liaison Officer's right of access to any Host Party facility or require that such access be supervised by Host Party personnel.

5.2 Each Party will cause security assurances to be filed stating the security clearances for the Liaison Officer being assigned by such Party. The security assurances will be prepared and forwarded through prescribed channels in compliance with established Host Party procedures. In the case of CF Liaison Officers at USJFCOM, the prescribed channel will be the International Visits Program (IVP), as defined in paragraph 1.6 of this MOU. In the case of US Liaison Officers at DND, the prescribed channel will be the Foreign Visits System (FVS), as defined in paragraph 1.7 of this MOU.

5.3 The Parent Party will ensure that each assigned Liaison Officer is fully cognizant of, and complies with, applicable laws and regulations concerning the protection of proprietary information (such as patents, copyrights, know-how, and trade secrets), Classified Information and Controlled Unclassified Information disclosed to the Liaison Officer. This obligation will apply both during and after termination of an assignment as a Liaison Officer. Prior to taking up duties as a Liaison Officer, the Liaison Officer of Canada will be required to sign the certification at Annex A. Only individuals who execute the certification will be permitted to serve as Liaison Officers with the United States Joint Forces Command.

5.4 The Parent Party will ensure that the Liaison Officer, at all times, complies with the security laws, regulations and procedures of the Host Government. Any violation of security procedures by a Liaison Officer during his or her assignment will be reported to the Parent Party for appropriate action. Upon request by the Host Party, the Parent Party will remove any Liaison Officer who violates security laws, regulations, or procedures during his or her assignment.

5.5 All Classified Information made available to the Liaison Officer will be considered to be Classified Information furnished to the Parent Party, and will be subject to all provisions and safeguards provided for under the General Security of Military Information Agreement (GSOMIA) in force between the United States of America and Canada.

5.6 The Liaison Officer will not take custody of Classified Information or Controlled Unclassified Information in tangible form (for example, documents or electronic files), except as expressly permitted by the terms of the Host Party certification of the Liaison Officer (and requested in writing by the Parent Government) for the following situations:

In addition, at the request of the Host Party, the Parent Government will remove the Liaison Officer or a dependent of the Liaison Officer from the territory of the Host Government. The Host Party will provide an explanation for its removal request, but a disagreement between the Parties concerning the sufficiency of the Host Party's reasons will not be grounds to delay the removal of the Liaison Officer.

7.3 A Liaison Officer will not exercise any supervisory or disciplinary authority over military or civilian personnel of the Host Party.

NOTE VERBAL

The Ministry of Foreign Affairs of the Republic of Hungary presents its compliments to the Embassy of the United States of America and refers to the Embassy's note No. 60, dated 28 February, 2003 which reads as follows:

"The Embassy of the United States of America presents its compliments to the Ministry of Foreign Affairs of the Republic of Hungary and has the honor to refer to recent discussions between representatives of the respective governments regarding issues related to a proposed United States Training Task Force assigned to provide support for the training of personnel recruited under the terms of the Iraq Liberation Act of 1998 (hereinafter "the Trainees"), who will accompany United States forces at the Kapos Air Base at Taszar, Hungary. The Embassy notes that the presence and activities of the United States Training Task Force is authorized as a matter of Hungarian law by the provisions of the Resolution of the Government of the Republic of Hungary No.: 2390 of 2002 issued on the 20th of December 2002.

As a result of the above-mentioned discussions, the Embassy proposes:

A. That the status of the United States Training Task Force be governed by the Agreement between the two governments "Concerning the Activities of the United States Forces in the Territory of the Republic of Hungary" signed at Budapest on 14 May 1997;

B. That the United States contractors and their United States citizen employees present in the territory of the Republic of Hungary in connection with the activities of the Training Task Force be accorded the status and privileges specified in Article 11 of the Agreement

"Concerning the Activities of the United States Forces in the Territory of the Republic of Hungary" and, in addition, be permitted to carry and use weapons incident to giving instruction and training inside the precinct of the Kapos Air Base at Taszar;

C. That the Trainees, as persons accompanying the United States forces, be considered "United States personnel" as this term is defined in the Agreement "Concerning the Activities of U.S. Forces in the Territory of the Republic of Hungary," and be accorded the status and privileges accorded to members of the United States forces in that agreement and in the North Atlantic Treaty Organization Status Of Forces Agreement, and that the Trainees be identified and documented by the United States prior to their arrival and that their entry into Hungary is at the discretion of the Hungarian authorities.

D. That the United States will be primarily responsible for the good order and discipline of the Trainees, and, to that end, the United States may take such action and exercise such authority as is appropriate or necessary to impose and maintain good order and discipline among the Trainees;

E. That the United States will keep the training activities confined to Kapos Air Base at Taszar and will take all necessary measures to keep the Trainees away from the general Hungarian population;

F. That the maximum number of trainees to be trained in the Republic of Hungary will be limited to 3000 personnel;

G. Notwithstanding paragraph C, that the United States takes responsibility for all its costs associated directly with the training program, and will endeavor to use local contractors and suppliers to the extent feasible, and that adjudication of the claims by third parties arising out of the acts or omissions of any U.S. personnel under the Agreement proposed herein will be dealt with and settled by the United States in accordance with U.S. law, including the Foreign Claims Act. Claims will be submitted in Hungarian through the Information and Claims Office of the U.S. Army in Kaposvar, where information will be available in Hungarian on the Foreign Claims Act, and on the procedures for submitting claims;

H. That the trainees, upon completion of their training, will not be dispatched directly into combat;

I. That the Government of Hungary retains the right to request the suspension of this program at any time by so informing the United States by diplomatic note. Upon receipt of such a note, the United States will stop receipt of all additional trainees and remove all trainees located in Hungary as expeditiously as possible, preferably within 30 days, and

J. That this Agreement shall terminate on December 31, 2003, unless terminated earlier by either Party upon 15 days written notice to the other Party through the diplomatic channels.

If the foregoing is acceptable to the Government of the Republic of Hungary, the Embassy proposes that this note, together with the Ministry's reply to that effect, shall constitute an agreement between the two governments which shall enter into force on the date of the Ministry's reply."

The Ministry of Foreign Affairs of the Republic of Hungary has the further honor to inform the Embassy of the United States of America that the proposals set forth in Embassy's note are acceptable to the Government of the Republic of Hungary and to confirm that the Embassy's note and this reply shall constitute an Agreement between our governments, which shall enter into force on this date.

The Ministry of Foreign Affairs of the Republic of Hungary avails itself of this opportunity to renew to the Embassy of the United States of America the assurances of its highest consideration.

Agreement between the Government of the United States of America and the Government of the Republic of Seychelles regarding the surrender of persons to the International Criminal Court.

The Government of the United States of America and the Government of the Republic of Seychelles, hereinafter "the Parties,"

Reaffirming the importance of bringing to justice those who commit genocide, crimes against humanity and war crimes,

Recalling that the Rome Statute of the International Criminal Court done at Rome on July 17, 1998 by the United Nations Diplomatic Conference of Plenipotentiaries on the Establishment of an International Criminal Court is intended to complement and not supplant national criminal jurisdiction,

Considering that the Government of the United States of America has expressed its intention to investigate and to prosecute where appropriate acts within the jurisdiction of the International Criminal Court alleged to have been committed by its officials, employees, military personnel or other nationals,

Bearing in mind Article 98 of the Rome Statute,

Hereby agree as follows:

(1) For purposes of this agreement, "persons" are current or former government officials, employees (including contractors), or military personnel or nationals of one Party.

(2) Persons of one Party present in the territory of the other shall not, absent the express consent of the first Party,

(a) be surrendered or transferred by any means to the International Criminal Court for any purpose, or

(b) be surrendered or transferred by any means to any other entity or third country, or expelled to a third country, for the purpose of surrender to or transfer to the International Criminal Court.

(3) When the United States extradites, surrenders, or otherwise transfers a person of the Republic of Seychelles to a third country, the United States will not agree to the surrender or transfer of that person to the International Criminal Court by the third country, absent the express consent of the Government of the Republic of Seychelles.

(4) When the Government of the Republic of Seychelles extradites, surrenders, or otherwise transfers a person of the United States of America to a third country, the Government of the Republic of Seychelles will not agree to the surrender or transfer of that person to the International Criminal Court by a third country, absent the express consent of the Government of the United States.

(5) This Agreement shall enter into force upon an exchange of notes confirming that each Party has completed the necessary domestic legal requirements to bring the Agreement into force. It will remain in force until one year after the date on which one Party notifies the other of its intent to terminate this Agreement. The provisions of this Agreement shall continue to apply with respect to any act occurring, or any allegation arising, before the effective date of termination.

INVESTMENT INCENTIVE AGREEMENT 04-146

BETWEEN

THE GOVERNMENT OF THE UNITED STATES OF AMERICA

AND

THE GOVERNMENT OF THE UNITED MEXICAN STATES

THE GOVERNMENT OF THE UNITED STATES OF AMERICA and THE GOVERNMENT OF THE UNITED MEXICAN STATES;

AFFIRMING their common desire to encourage economic activities in the United Mexican States that promote the development of the economic resources and productive capacities of the United Mexican States; and

RECOGNIZING that this objective can be promoted through investment support provided by the Overseas Private Investment Corporation ("OPIC"), a development institution and an agency of the United States of America, in the form of investment insurance, coinsurance and reinsurance, debt and equity investments and investment guaranties;

HAVE AGREED as follows:

ARTICLE 1

(a) As used in this Agreement, the following terms have the meanings herein provided. The term "Issuer" refers to OPIC and any successor agency of the United States of America, and any agent of either, but does not refer to the Government of the United States of America. The term "Investment Support" refers to any debt or equity investment, any investment guaranty and any investment insurance, reinsurance or coinsurance provided by the Issuer (or, in the case of coinsurance, provided by the Issuer and commercial insurance companies ("Coinsurers") under coinsurance arrangements under which the Issuer acts both for itself and for such Coinsurers), or other investment activities of the Issuer which are permitted by U.S. law in connection with projects or activities in the territory of the United Mexican States. The term "Taxes" means all present and future federal taxes, levies, imposts, stamps, duties and charges, whether direct or indirect, imposed in the United Mexican States and all liabilities with respect thereto.

(b) The Issuer may provide to eligible investors (as defined by applicable United States laws and regulations), including such eligible investors in the territory of the United Mexican States, Investment Support in connection with projects or activities in the territory of the United Mexican States. Eligible investors in the territory of the United Mexican States may entered into agreements for Investment Support with the Issuer.

(c) The Issuer will undertake Investment Support only in respect of projects and activities permitted by the North American Free Trade Agreement ("NAFTA") or the laws of the United Mexican States existing at the time the Investment Support is undertaken.

ARTICLE 2

(a) With regard to Investment Support conducted in accordance with the laws and regulations of the United States of America, the Issuer shall not be subject to regulation under the laws of the United Mexican States that govern the organization, operation or activities of insurance or financial institutions.

(b) The Issuer, all operations and activities undertaken by the Issuer in connection with any Investment Support, and all payments, whether of interest, principal, fees, dividends, premiums or the proceeds from the liquidation of assets or of any other nature, that are made, received or guaranteed by the Issuer in connection with any Investment Support shall be exempt from Taxes, whether imposed directly on the Issuer or payable in the first instance by others. The two Governments confirm their understanding that such exemption shall apply only to the Issuer and not to Coinsurers. Neither projects receiving Investment Support nor investors in such projects shall be exempt from Taxes by operation of this Article, provided, however, that any Investment Support shall be accorded tax treatment no less favorable than that accorded to the investment support of any other national or multilateral development institution which operates in the United Mexican States. The Issuer shall not be subject to Taxes in connection with any transfer, succession or other acquisition which occurs pursuant to paragraph (c) of this Article or Article 3 hereof, but obligations for Taxes previously accrued and unpaid with respect to interests received by the Issuer shall not be extinguished as a result of such transfer, succession or other acquisition.

(c) If the Issuer, alone or with a Coinsurer, makes a payment to any person or entity, or exercises its rights as a creditor or subrogee, in connection with any Investment Support, the Government of the United Mexican States shall recognize the transfer to, or acquisition by, the Issuer and any Coinsurer of any cash, accounts, credits, instruments or other assets in connection with such payment or the exercise of such rights, as well as the succession of the Issuer and any Coinsurer to any right, title, claim, privilege or cause of action, existing, or which may arise, in connection therewith.

(d) With respect to any interests transferred to the Issuer or a Coinsurer or any interests to which the Issuer or a Coinsurer succeeds under this Article, in its own right or otherwise by contract or operation of law, the Issuer shall assert no greater rights than those of the person or entity from whom such interests were received. No Coinsurer shall be entitled to the benefits of this Agreement unless it is acting through, or its interests have been assigned to, the Issuer. However, as provided in paragraph (b) of this Article, Coinsurers are not entitled in any case to the fiscal privileges granted to the Issuer.

(e) To the extent that the laws of the United Mexican States partially or wholly restrict ownership or acquisition by, or transfer or succession to, the Issuer of any assets or rights as described in paragraph (c) of this Article, the Government of the United Mexican States shall permit the Issuer to make appropriate arrangements to transfer such assets or rights to a person or entity permitted to own them under the laws of the United Mexican States.

ARTICLE 3

Amounts in the currency of the United Mexican States, including cash, accounts, credits, instruments or otherwise, acquired by the Issuer (or by the Issuer and any Coinsurer) upon making a payment, or upon the exercise of its rights as a creditor, in connection with any Investment Support for a project in the United Mexican States, shall be accorded treatment in the territory of the United Mexican States no less favorable as to use, conversion and transfer than the treatment to which such funds would have been entitled in the hands of the person or entity from which such amounts were acquired.

ARTICLE 4

(a) Any dispute between the Government of the United States of America and the Government of the United Mexican States regarding the interpretation or application of this Agreement, or concerning issues of international law in relation to projects or activities for which Investment Support has been provided, shall be resolved, insofar as possible, through negotiations between the two Governments. If, six months following a request for negotiations hereunder, the two Governments have not resolved the dispute, the dispute may be submitted, at the initiative of either Government, to a tribunal for resolution in accordance with paragraph (b) of this Article. A Government may not bring a claim under this Article concerning issues of international law in relation to projects or activities for which Investment Support has been provided if it has the right to bring that claim under the dispute settlement provisions of Chapter 20 of the NAFTA.

(b) The tribunal referred to in paragraph (a) of this Article shall be established and shall function as follows:

(i) Each Government shall appoint one arbitrator. Unless the parties otherwise agree, these two arbitrators shall by agreement designate a president of the tribunal who shall be a citizen of a third state and whose appointment shall be subject to acceptance by the two Governments. The arbitrators shall be appointed within three months, and the president within six months, of the date of receipt of either Government's request for arbitration. If the appointments are not made within the foregoing time limits, either Government may, in the absence of any other agreement, request the Secretary-General of the International Centre for the Settlement of Investment Disputes to make the necessary appointment or appointments. Both Governments hereby agree to accept such appointment or appointments.

(ii) Decisions of the tribunal shall be made by majority vote and shall be based on the applicable principles and rules of international law. Its decisions shall be final and binding.

(iii) Each Government shall bear its own expenses incurred in connection with the proceedings before the tribunal. The expenses of the tribunal itself shall be borne equally by the two Governments.

(iv) In all other matters, the tribunal shall regulate its own procedures.

ARTICLE 5

(a) This Agreement shall enter into force on the date on which the Government of the United Mexican States notifies the Government of the United States of America that all legal requirements for entry into force of this Agreement have been fulfilled.

(b) This Agreement shall continue in force until six months from the date of a receipt of a note by which one Government informs the other of an intent to terminate this Agreement. In such event, the provisions of this Agreement shall, with respect to Investment Support provided while this Agreement was in force, remain in force so long as such Investment Support remains outstanding, but in no case longer than twenty years after the termination of this Agreement.

IN WITNESS WHEREOF, the undersigned, duly authorized by their respective Governments, have signed this Agreement.

VOLUMES OF WATER SAVED WITH THE MODERNIZATION AND IMPROVED TECHNOLOGY PROJECTS FOR THE IRRIGATION DISTRICTS IN THE RIO CONCHOS BASIN AND MEASURES FOR THEIR CONVEYANCE TO THE RIO GRANDE

The Commission met at the offices of the United States Section in El Paso, Texas at 3:00 p.m. on July 3, 2003, to address the stipulations in recommendation No. 2 of Commission Minute No. 308, entitled "United States Allocation of Rio Grande Water During the Last Year of The Current Cycle", dated June 28, 2002, relative to the fact that the Commission will provide its observations to the two governments and to the North American Development Bank (NADBank), with respect to the estimated volumes of water saved by the projects undertaken by the Government of Mexico to modernize and improve the technology of the Irrigation Districts and Units in the Rio Grande Basin making them sustainable and taking the necessary measures to ensure the conveyance of the saved waters to the Rio Grande.

Part I. - Volumes of Water Conserved

The Commissioners noted the information provided by the Government of Mexico relative to the modernization and improved technology projects proposed for the three Irrigation Districts in the Rio Conchos basin: District 005 Delicias, supplied by La Boquilla Dam located on the Rio Conchos and the Francisco I. Madero Dam located on the Rio San Pedro; Irrigation District 090 Lower Rio Conchos, supplied by the Luis L. Leon Dam located on the Rio Conchos; and District 103 Rio Florido, supplied by the San Gabriel and Pico de Aguila Dams located on the Rio Florido.. The Commissioners also noted that the modernization and technology works referenced in Minute No. 308 will be initiated in the three irrigation districts on the Rio Conchos, and the $40 million that corresponds to Mexico from the Water Conservation Investment Fund, created by the NADBank from its retained earnings, following completion of required NADBank approvals and procedures, will be applied totally toward the works in Irrigation District-005 Delicias, which were certified by the Border Environment Cooperation Commission (BECC) on October 17, 2002. The Commissioners observed that the construction projects started at the end of 2002 and ending in 2006, yielding, as a result, water savings that will increase annually until reaching, upon completion of the works, a savings estimated to be 321,043 acre-feet - <af> (396 Million Cubic Meters-<$Mm^3$>) annually, considering a base volume of water of 846,385 af (1,044 $Mm^3$), which was the average releases from the dams for the years 1996, 1997 and 1998, measured upon release from the storage dams that supply each district as shown below:

| Irrigation District | Base Volume | | Savings | |
|---|---|---|---|---|
| | af | $Mm^3$ | af | $Mm^3$ |
| 005 Delicias and Labores Viejas | 694,782 | 857 | 278,075 | 343 |
| 090 Lower Rio Conchos | 77,828 | 96 | 20,268 | 25 |
| 103 Rio Florido | 73,775 | 91 | 22,700 | 28 |
| Total | 846,385 | 1,044 | 321,043 | 396 |

The Commissioners also observed the information from Mexico in the sense that in order to attain the estimated total water savings, a capital investment will be required in the amount of $1,535,000,000 pesos, and that the program of water savings will be subject to the timely availability of resources for its implementation. If this level of investment is not allocated the amount of savings may be reduced.

The Commissioners also observed from the information provided by Mexico that of the total water savings estimated at 321,043 af (396 $Mm^3$), 21,484 af (26.5 $Mm^3$) would be reached in the first year, another 86,748 af (107.0 $Mm^3$) in the second year, another 137,418 af (169.5 $Mm^3$) in the third year, and another 75,398 af (93.0 $Mm^3$) in the fourth year.

In the following table the investments required in million pesos and the estimate volumes of savings in thousand acre-feet and millions of cubic meters appear.

| | Year 1 | | Year 2 | | Year 3 | | Year 4 | | Total | |
|---|---|---|---|---|---|---|---|---|---|---|
| Irrigation District | Investment | Savings ($Mm^3$) | Investment | Savings ($Mm^3$) | Investment | Savings ($Mm^3$) | Investment | Savings ($Mm^3$) | Investment | Savings ($Mm^3$) |
| 005 Delicias and Labores Viejas | 78.5 | 16.2 (20.0) | 357.0 | 73.0 (90.0) | 594.0 | 121.6 (150.0) | 330.5 | 67.3 (83.0) | 1,360.0 | 278.1 (343.0) |
| 090 Lower Rio Conchos | 15.0 | 2.8 (3.5) | 38.0 | 7.3 (9.0) | 42.0 | 7.7 (9.5) | 15.0 | 2.4 (3.0) | 110.0 | 20.2 (25.0) |
| 103 Rio Florido | 5.5 | 2.4 (3.0) | 18.0 | 6.5 (8.0) | 23.0 | 8.1 (10.0) | 18.5 | 5.7 (7.0) | 65.0 | 22.7 (28.0) |
| TOTAL | 99.0 | 21.4 (26.5) | 413.0 | 86.8 (107.0) | 659.0 | 137.4 (169.5) | 364.0 | 75.4 (93.0) | 1,535.0 | 321.0 (396.0) |

The Commissioners observed that the Government of Mexico considered that the estimated volumes of water conserved by the proposed modernization and technology activities are similar to water savings from projects carried out in other irrigation districts in Mexico and the estimated volumes of water saved were determined utilizing two methodologies, which were provided to the Commission and discussed in the meeting of November 7, 2002, in the main offices of the Mexican Section.

In both methodologies, the volume of water saved is a function of the increase in the global efficiency of an irrigation district in a given year with regard to the baseline year of reference. The conveyance and application efficiencies are established on the two dates being compared.

One methodology calculates the conveyance efficiency based on inflow and outflow balances in the system; the application efficiency is a function of the water being applied and crop requirements.

The other methodology determines the conveyance efficiency by considering the total canal length, including those to be lined, as well as the efficiencies of existing lined and unlined canals, so that application efficiency considers the irrigated surface areas and efficiencies for each type of improved irrigation technology works against the current irrigated surface areas and efficiencies in the district.

- The Commissioners observed that the principal modernization and improved technology activities are the following: The lining of canals to reduce losses in: 7.5 miles - (mi) <12 kilometers - (km)> of main canals, 321.9 mi (518 km) of lateral canals, and 130.5 mi (250km) in smaller systems. The control structures will be improved and measurement structures will be installed to improve the operation of the distribution network and the delivery of water to the irrigation users.
- The installation of low pressure supply systems for water distribution and the application of water with multi-gate pipes on 56,216 acres - (ac) (22,750 hectares - ha), to take advantage of the existing hydraulic head and reduce losses and maintenance.
- Land leveling of 80,309 ac (32,500 ha) to reduce water losses in gravity flow irrigation. The rehabilitation of stilling wells and pumping equipment, water distribution in high pressure lines and the implementation of drip irrigation or sprinkler systems in 49,421 ac (20,000 ha), of fruits, vegetables and alfalfa.
- The construction of pumping stations, supplied by open channels, low pressure water distribution networks and the application of water with multi-gated piping on 34,595 ac (14,000 ha). The rehabilitation of stilling wells and pumping equipment, the distribution of the water by low pressure lines tubing and the irrigation with multi-gated piping on 17,298 ac (7,000 ha). In both cases crops such as cereals, bean, cotton, peanuts and olive trees will be irrigated.

Upon completion of construction of the infrastructure modernization and irrigation technology works, the global efficiency in the irrigation districts is estimated to increase: from 33 to 55 percent in Irrigation District 005, Delicias; from 35 to 47 percent in Irrigation District 090, Lower Rio Conchos; and from 33 to 48 percent in Irrigation District 103, Rio Florido.

The Commissioners observed that Mexico's National Water Commission (CNA), will prepare an annual report on: a) The volume of water released from the storage dams in the three irrigation districts on the Rio Conchos, b) The types and areas of crops irrigated with waters from the storage dams, c) The efficiency reached by each district, d) The volume of water saved through the modernization and improved technology activities, e) The progress made during the past year regarding works constructed and amounts expended, f) The volumes saved transferred to the Rio Grande and, g) The program of activities proposed for the following year. This report will be sent to Mexico's Secretariat of Foreign Relations during the last week of November of each year, which will provide it to the International Boundary and Water Commission.

Part II. - Measures necessary to ensure conveyance to the Rio Grande

The Commissioners noted the information of the Government of Mexico in the sense that the volume estimated at 321,043 af (396 $Mm^3$) would be saved considering the use of an annual volume of 846,385 af (1,044 $Mm^3$) in conditions prior to the improved modernization and technology works. The volume saved is measured at the release points from the storage dams that supply each irrigation district. They observed that in the years in which the volumes of water released to the irrigation districts from the storage dams and registered at the same release points are less than 846,385 af (1,044 $Mm^3$), the volumes saved will be proportionally reduced. In these cases, the saved volumes will be determined by CNA, using the methodology described in Part I of this Minute. This information will be sent to Mexico's Secretariat of Foreign Relations to be reviewed by the International Boundary and Water Commission.

The Government of Mexico will transfer to the Rio Grande the saved volumes of water taking into account the attainment of the annual average deliveries in accordance with the "Treaty between the United States of America and Mexico for the Utilization of Waters of the Colorado and Tijuana Rivers and of the Rio Grande", signed on February 3, 1944, as well as any volume that could be applied to cover shortages in a previous cycle.

The Commission took note of the legal and regulatory framework, as well as of the operation of the hydraulic system that will be established by the Mexican government to transfer the volume of water saved in the three Rio Conchos irrigation districts to the Rio Grande in the following way:

- The volumes of water saved by the modernization and technology projects in any given agricultural year will be transferred from the San Gabriel-Pico de Aguila and La Boquilla-Francisco I. Madero dam systems and Luis L. Leon Dam during December and January of each year. The transfer to the Rio Grande of the volumes saved that arrive at Luis L. Leon Dam plus the volumes saved pertaining to the Irrigation District 090 Lower Rio Conchos will begin in January of each year.

- The Government of Mexico, through the CNA, will install, operate and maintain automatic gauging stations at strategic points on the Florido, Conchos and San Pedro Rivers, downstream of Pico de Aguila, La Boquilla, Francisco I. Madero and Luis L. Leon dams, to provide monitoring of releases of the saved volumes from the said dams.
- The Government of Mexico, through the CNA, will have legal authority over the volume of water saved and will ensure its conveyance to the Rio Grande, after joint technical analysis by CNA and the Commission as previously described.

The Commissioners observed that, because the modernization and technology projects in the three Rio Conchos irrigation districts will occur over several years, it is important that the Commission be informed of the advances reached annually, regarding works, investments and volumes of water saved, as well as the program of activities proposed for the following year. Also, they noted that the Government of Mexico, through CNA, will provide the required technical information and allow physical access to project sites, at a frequency the Commission considers appropriate, so it can conduct joint field observations to view the construction and progress of works.

The Commissioners took note of the exchange of letters by the Department of Treasury of the United States, and the Secretaría de Hacienda y Crédito Público de México on June 28, 2002, regarding the potential financial support for water conservation projects in Mexico.

Based on the above, the Commissioners recommend the following for the approval of the two governments:

1. That this Minute constitutes the report that Minute No. 308 stipulated that the Commission present to the two Governments and to the NADBank regarding the modernization and technology projects proposed for the three Rio Conchos irrigation districts, to be executed between the end of 2002 and the end of 2006, which will generate savings that will increase annually until they reach, at their completion, an annual volume estimated at 321,043 af (396 $Mm^3$). The volume is estimated on an average of 846,385 af (1,044 $Mm^3$), measured at the release points from the storage reservoirs that supply each irrigation district, as described in Part I of this Minute. The modernization and technology works stated in Minute No. 308 will be initiated by the three irrigation districts of the Rio Conchos and the $40 million that corresponds to Mexico from the Water Conservation Investment Fund, created from the NADBank's retained earnings, following completion of required NADBank approvals and procedures, will be applied totally to the works in the Delicias Irrigation District No. 005, which were certified by BECC on October 17, 2002.
2. In order to attain the estimated total water savings, a capital investment will be required in the amount of $1,535,000,000 pesos, and the program of water savings will be subject to the timely availability of resources for its implementation. If this level of investment is not allocated, the amount of savings may be reduced.

3. When the volumes of water released to the irrigation districts from the storage dams and registered at the same release points are less than 846,385 af (1,044 $Mm^3$), the volumes saved will be proportionally reduced.

4. The Government of Mexico through the CNA, will prepare an annual report on: a) The volume of water released from the storage dams in the three irrigation districts on the Rio Conchos, b) The types and areas of crops irrigated with waters from the storage dams, c) The efficiency reached by each district, d) The volume of water saved through the modernization and improved technology activities, e) The progress made during the past year regarding works constructed and amounts expended, f) The volumes saved transferred to the Rio Grande and, g) The program of activities proposed after the following year. This report will be sent to Mexico's Secretariat of Foreign Relations during the last week of November of each year and discussed within the Commission, as outlined in Part II of this Minute.

5. The Government of Mexico, through CNA, will have legal authority over the volume of water saved as a result of the modernization and technology works that are mentioned in Part I of this Minute.

6. The Government of Mexico will transfer to the Rio Grande the saved volumes of water taking into account the attainment of the annual average deliveries in accordance with the 1944 Water Treaty, as well as any volume that could be applied to cover shortages in a previous cycle.

7. The Government of Mexico through CNA, will install, operate and maintain automatic gauging stations at strategic points on the Florido, Conchos and San Pedro Rivers, downstream of Pico de Aguila, La Boquilla, Francisco I. Madero and Luis L. Leon dam systems, to provide monitoring of the volumes saved from the said dams.

8. The volumes of water saved by the modernization and technology projects in any given agricultural year will be transferred from the San Gabriel-Pico de Aguila and La Boquilla-Francisco I. Madero dam systems and Luis L. Leon Dam during December and January of each year. The transfer to the Rio Grande of the volumes saved that arrive at Luis L. Leon Dam plus the volumes saved pertaining to the Irrigation District 090 Lower Rio Conchos will begin in January of each year. Transfers will be accomplished as described in Part II of this Minute.

9. The Government of Mexico, through CNA, will provide the required technical information and allow physical access to facilities so that the International Boundary and Water Commission can conduct joint field observations to view the construction and advancement of works, at a frequency it considers appropriate.

10. That both Governments continue giving priority to the development of water conservation projects consistent with the terms, objectives and spirit of cooperation of Minute No. 308 and the present Minute.

11. That this Minute will enter into force upon notification of approval by the Governments of he United States of America and Mexico through the respective Sections of the Commission.

The meeting was adjourned.

EMBASSY OF THE
UNITED STATES OF AMERICA

No. 436

The Embassy of the United States of America presents its compliments to the Ministry of Foreign Affairs of Ukraine and has the honor to provide the following response to the Ministry's diplomatic note 414/23-196/51-1179 dated June 20, 2002.

The Embassy acknowledges receipt of the Ministry's Notes Nos. 324/20-196/51-618 dated April 20, 2001 and 414/23-196/51-1179 dated June 20, 2002, informing the Embassy of the delegation of responsibilities pursuant to Article II, Paragraph 1 of the Agreement Between the Department of Defense of the United States of America and the Ministry of Defense of Ukraine Concerning the Provision of Material, Services, and Related Training to Ukraine in Connection with the Elimination of Strategic Nuclear Arms, dated 5 December 1993, as Amended 18 December 1993, 21 March 1994, 1 April 1995, 27 June 1995, 4 June 1996, 1 May 1997, 12 June 1998, 10 July 1999, 28 July 2000, 4 December 2000 and 9 September 2002, and Extended 31 January 2001 (SNAE Agreement), and informing the Embassy of the change of Executive Agents in Ukraine under Article II of the Agreement

Between the United States of America and Ukraine Concerning Assistance to Ukraine in the Elimination of Strategic Nuclear Arms, and the Prevention of Proliferation of Weapons of Mass Destruction, dated 25 October 1993, as Amended and Extended (Umbrella Agreement), and proposing that Article II of the Umbrella Agreement be amended to reflect that change.

In order to permit the establishment of more than one Executive Agent under the Umbrella Agreement the Embassy proposes instead that the first sentence of Article II be amended by replacing the words "an Executive Agent" with the words "one or more Executive Agents". The first sentence of Article II would therefore read as follows: "Each party shall designate one or more Executive Agents to implement this agreement."

The Embassy further proposes that the applicable sentences of Article II be amended accordingly to read: "For Ukraine, unless Ukraine notifies the United States of America otherwise, the Executive Agent shall be the National Space Agency of Ukraine in the areas of the administration of disassembly of ICBMs at Conversion or Elimination facilities, solid propellant disposition from missile stages, and elimination of ICBM components, production facilities and equipment, and the Ministry of Defense for all other matters. For the United States of America, unless the United States of America notifies Ukraine otherwise, the Executive Agent shall be the Department of Defense."

If this proposal is acceptable to Ukraine, the Embassy proposes that this note together with the Ministry's note in reply shall constitute an agreement between the United States of America and Ukraine, which shall enter into force on the date of the Ministry's note.

The Embassy of the United States of America avails itself of this opportunity to renew to the Ministry of Foreign Affairs of Ukraine the assurances of its highest consideration.

Mexico City, July 24 2003

THE HONORABLE ROBERT B. ZOELLICK
United States Trade Representative
600 17th Street, N.W.
Washington, DC 20508

The Mexican Ministry of Economy has determined that, as a result of the elimination of duties pursuant to the North American Free Trade Agreement ("NAFTA"), chicken leg quarters, or parts thereof, originating in the United States of America ("United States") classified under subheadings 0207.13.03 (chicken legs, thighs, or legs attached to thighs, fresh or chilled) and 0207.14.04 (chicken legs, thighs, or legs attached to thighs, frozen) of the Mexican tariff schedule ("U.S. chicken leg quarters") are being imported into the United Mexican States ("Mexico") in such increased quantities, in absolute terms, and under such conditions that those imports alone constitute a substantial cause of threat of serious injury to the Mexican poultry industry. In light of this determination, Mexico has determined to apply a safeguard measure on imports of such U.S. chicken leg quarters.

Safeguard Measure

1. Mexico will apply the safeguard measure on imports of U.S. chicken leg quarters beginning July 22, 2003. The safeguard measure, which will expire no later than December 31, 2007, will take the form of a tariff-rate quota, administered through the use of import licenses allocated in the same manner as described in Acuerdo por el que se da a conocer el cupo para importar en el año 2003, dentro del arancel-cupo establecido piernas, muslos o piernas unidas al muslo, de pollo, originarias de los Estados Unidos de América, published in the Diario Oficial de la Federación ("Diario Oficial") on January 31, 2003, with the following terms:

(a) For the period July 22, 2003, to December 31, 2003, Mexico shall issue import licenses no later than nine business days after the date of this letter providing duty free access for at least 46,950 metric tons of U.S. chicken leg quarters to be imported into the northern border zone (Franja Fronteriza Norte y Región Fronteriza), as defined under the Decreto por el que se establece el impuesto general de importación para la Región Fronteriza y la Franja Fronteriza Norte published in the Diario Oficial on December 31, 2002. Mexico shall not impose or apply any licensing requirements or quantitative or other restriction on any imports of U.S. chicken leg quarters in excess of the duty free quantity established in this subparagraph; Mexico may apply a maximum tariff of 98.8 percent ad valorem on such imports.

(b) For calendar year 2004, Mexico shall issue import licenses no later than January 1, 2004, providing duty free access for at least 101,000 metric tons of U.S. chicken leg quarters to be imported into the northern border zone. Mexico will not impose or apply any licensing requirements or quantitative or other restriction on any imports of U.S. chicken leg quarters in excess of the duty free quantity established in this subparagraph; Mexico may apply a maximum tariff of 79.0 percent ad valorem on such imports.

(c) For calendar year 2005, Mexico shall issue import licenses no later than January 1, 2005, providing duty free access for at least 102,010 metric tons of U.S. chicken leg quarters to be imported into the northern border zone. Mexico will not impose or apply any licensing requirements or quantitative or other restriction on any imports of U.S. chicken leg quarters in excess of the duty free quantity established in this subparagraph; Mexico may apply a maximum tariff of 59.3 percent ad valorem on such imports.

(d) For calendar year 2006, Mexico shall issue import licenses no later than January 1, 2006, providing duty free access for at least 103,030 metric tons of U.S. chicken leg quarters to be imported into the northern border zone. Mexico will not impose or apply any licensing requirements or quantitative or other restriction on any imports of U.S. chicken leg quarters in excess of the duty free quantity established in this subparagraph; Mexico may apply a maximum tariff of 39.5 percent ad valorem on such imports.

(e) For calendar year 2007, Mexico shall issue import licenses no later than January 1, 2007, providing duty free access for at least 104,060 metric tons of U.S. chicken leg quarters to be imported into the northern border zone. Mexico will not impose or apply any licensing requirements or quantitative or other restriction on any imports of U.S. chicken leg quarters in excess of the duty free quantity established in this subparagraph; Mexico may apply a maximum tariff of 19.8 percent ad valorem on such imports.

2. Mexico shall allow any imports of U.S. chicken leg quarters in excess of the duty free quantities established in the preceding subparagraphs to be sold throughout Mexico.

3. Effective no later than January 1, 2008, Mexico shall provide full duty free access and eliminate import license requirements for U.S. chicken leg quarters.

..3

Compensation

4. Pursuant to Article 801 of the NAFTA, we would like to confirm the following understanding reached between the Government of Mexico and the Government of the United States concerning Mexico's imposition of the safeguard measure.

5. Beginning July 22, 2003, Mexico shall provide to the United States mutually agreed trade liberalizing compensation as set forth below:

(a) Except as provided in subparagraph (b) below, Mexico shall not impose any import restriction on U.S. poultry meat, poultry products (except eggs and egg products), or live birds, including, but not limited to, quantitative import restrictions or technical barriers to trade, bilateral or global safeguard measures, antidumping duties, or countervailing duties.

(b) Mexico shall notify and consult with the Office of the United States Trade Representative ("USTR") and the United States Department of Agriculture ("USDA") at least 60 days before imposing any food safety or sanitary measure on U.S. poultry meat, poultry products, or live birds, except that Mexico may notify and consult with USTR and USDA within seven calendar days after imposing a measure necessary to address a sanitary emergency. To the extent possible, consultations under this paragraph shall take place under the auspices of the U.S.-Mexico Consultative Committee on Agriculture. Mexico shall ensure that any such measure that it imposes is consistent with Chapter Seven of the NAFTA and the World Trade Organization ("WTO") Agreement on the Application of Sanitary and Phytosanitary Measures ("SPS Agreement").

(c) Mexico confirms that with the elimination of NOM 16-ZOO-2002, effective May 23, 2003, imports of U.S. poultry meat, poultry products, and live birds into Mexico will not be subject to any Hemagglutination Inhibition testing requirement. Further, through publication of a notice in the Diario Oficial, Mexico shall remove its prohibition due to Low Pathenogenic Avian Influenza ("LPAI") on imports of U.S. poultry meat, poultry products, and live birds originating in Maine, North Carolina, Pennsylvania, Texas, Virginia, and West Virginia. Mexico shall expeditiously review and publish a decision in the Diario Oficial regarding the status of LPAI in California and Connecticut after it receives a response to its LPAI questionnaire from USDA's Animal and Plant Health Inspection Service ("APHIS"). APHIS shall notify Mexico of any official U.S. regulatory action to restrict the spread of LPAI.

(d) Through publication of a notice in the Diario Oficial, Mexico shall eliminate all testing requirements on imports of U.S. poultry meat, poultry products, and live birds for Exotic Newcastle Disease ("END") and shall remove its prohibition on imports of U.S. poultry meat, poultry products, and live birds originating in Oregon, Idaho, Utah, Colorado, and New Mexico. Upon review of documentation from APHIS that U.S. Federal quarantines for END applicable to the quarantined areas of Arizona, California, Nevada and Texas were removed no later than July 1, 2003, Mexico, through publication of a notice in the Diario Oficial, shall remove its END prohibition on imports of poultry meat, poultry products, and live birds originating in the quarantined areas of those states. APHIS shall notify Mexico of the status of any other END quarantine in the United States.

(e) Mexico shall work with the United States toward establishing a framework for recognizing the equivalence of their respective sanitary measures in accordance with Article 714 of the NAFTA and Article 4 of the SPS Agreement.

(f) Mexico shall notify and consult with USTR before imposing any other bilateral or global safeguard measure on a U.S. agricultural product.

Consent

6. Mexico acknowledges that Article 801(2)(c)(ii) of the NAFTA provides that no bilateral safeguard measure may be maintained beyond the expiration of the transition period, except with the consent of the Party against whose good the measure is taken. The transition period for U.S. chicken leg quarters ends on December 31, 2003. The United States consents to the application of the safeguard measure on U.S. chicken leg quarters beyond the expiration of the transition period on the basis of the terms specified in paragraphs one through five of this letter. Mexico acknowledges that the United States may withdraw its consent if the United States determines that Mexico is not fulfilling any of these terms. The United States shall notify Mexico at least ten days before the United States withdraws its consent.

We propose that this letter and your letter of confirmation in reply shall constitute an agreement between our two governments.

Minute No. 310

EMERGENCY DELIVERY OF COLORADO RIVER WATER FOR USE IN TIJUANA, BAJA CALIFORNIA

The Commission met in the offices of the Mexican Section in Cd. Juarez, Chihuahua at 1:00 p.m. on July 28, 2003, to consider a standby emergency arrangement to deliver to Tijuana, Baja California, a portion of Colorado River waters allotted to Mexico under the "United States - Mexico Treaty for Utilization of Waters of the Colorado and Tijuana Rivers and of the Rio Grande," signed February 3, 1944, based on the principles established in International Boundary and Water Commission Minute No. 240, entitled, "EMERGENCY DELIVERIES OF COLORADO RIVER WATERS FOR USE IN TIJUANA" dated June 13, 1972, as subsequently amended and extended.

The Commissioners considered the information provided by Mexico's National Water Commission and the State of Baja California that a low level in the Tijuana water supply reserves and problems in that city's water distribution infrastructure portend partial supply shortage periods in the next five years, while the State of Baja California, through the Tijuana State Public Services Commission (CESPT), completes improvements to that infrastructure and undertakes longer term water supply works to meet the needs of its growing population. The Commissioners observed that the connection constructed to enable emergency water deliveries to Mexico at the international land boundary at Otay Mesa - Mesa de Otay, under Minute No. 240, as subsequently amended and extended, was rehabilitated at a cost to Mexico for the emergency deliveries to resume and continue, also at a cost to Mexico.

The U.S. Commissioner informed that the United States Bureau of Reclamation (USBR), and the San Diego County Water Authority (SDCWA), the Metropolitan Water District of Southern California (MWD), and the Otay Water District (the latter three together hereinafter called the California agencies), which own and operate the conveyance system from Parker Dam on the Colorado River to the Otay Water District, are able and willing, in principle, to make the emergency water deliveries to Tijuana, B.C. in the volumes and periods as estimated by the CESPT, to avoid the water supply shortages. The deliveries would be for five years commencing in 2003. The U.S. Commissioner informed that the amount of deliveries would be subject to review each year and that the cost to Mexico would be equivalent to that charged to United States customers in that area. He further informed that the deliveries would be made to the extent that those deliveries do not affect the delivery or discharge of water to the United States customers. The Commissioners discussed the fact that pursuant to Article 15 of the 1944 Water Treaty the volume of water delivered and the system conveyance losses will be charged against the total volume of the Colorado River water allotted to Mexico under that Treaty. The Mexican Commissioner indicated that the Government of Mexico would assure that the CESPT pays any and all financial costs incurred in making the water deliveries.

The Commissioners reviewed the enclosed "Joint Report of the Principal Engineers to Facilitate Emergency Delivery of Colorado River Water for Use in Tijuana, Baja California" of United States Section Principal Engineer Debra J. Little and Mexican Section Principal Engineer Luis Antonio Rascón Mendoza, signed on July 11, 2003, developed in furtherance of the above considerations. The Commissioners found the recommended procedures for making the emergency deliveries, initially in 2003, to be satisfactory. They also concluded that for subsequent years, the request for deliveries will be made by September 15 of each preceding year so that the United States Section can consult with the USBR and the California Agencies to determine whether the United States is able to make the requested deliveries and, if so, at what cost to Mexico. Finally, they concluded that in the event that the U.S. is able to make such deliveries, the Principal Engineers would develop a delivery plan for the following year, using the procedures in the referenced Joint Report.

Based on the foregoing, the Commissioners adopted the following resolutions, subject to the approval of the two Governments:

1. That the Government of the United States and the Government of Mexico adopt a standby emergency arrangement for a five year period, subject to review each year and in a manner that does not affect the delivery or discharge of water to the United States customers, for the delivery at the international land boundary to Tijuana, Baja California, of a portion of Colorado River waters allotted to Mexico in the "Treaty between the United States of America and Mexico for Utilization of Waters of the Colorado and Tijuana Rivers and of the Rio Grande", signed on February 3, 1944, under which the Government of Mexico will assure that payment is made by CESPT, in advance of each delivery, of any and all financial costs incurred in making the water deliveries at a cost to Mexico that is equivalent to that charged to United States customers in that area. The deliveries will be made in accordance with procedures adopted by the International Boundary and Water Commission.

2. That the International Boundary and Water Commission adopt the water delivery procedures recommended in the "Joint Report of the Principal Engineers to Facilitate Emergency Delivery of Colorado River Water for Use in Tijuana, Baja California," signed by Principal Engineer Debra J. Little of the U.S. Section and Principal Engineer Luis Antonio Rascón Mendoza of the Mexican Section on July 11, 2003, such report to form an integral part of this Minute.

3. That all activities undertaken pursuant to this Minute shall be subject to the availability of funds, resources, and corresponding personnel as well as to applicable laws and regulations in each country.

4. That this Minute shall enter into force upon notification of approval by the Government of the United States of America and the Government of the United Mexican States through the respective Sections of the Commission.

The meeting was adjourned.

El Paso, Texas and Ciudad Juarez, Chihuahua

Sirs:

Pursuant to your instructions, we respectfully submit this joint report in furtherance of the interest expressed by water authorities in San Diego, California and the City of Tijuana, Baja California (Tijuana) in effecting emergency deliveries, through the aqueduct system in southern California, of a portion of the waters of the Colorado River allotted to Mexico by Article 10(a) of the "United States – Mexico Treaty for Utilization of Waters of the Colorado and Tijuana Rivers and of the Rio Grande," signed February 3, 1944 (1944 Water Treaty). Low water reserves resulting from drought conditions over the Tijuana River watershed and continued growth of the Tijuana, B.C. metropolitan area have resulted in a projected shortage of water to supply the needs of the city in the near future. Unless these emergency water deliveries are made, the municipalities of Tijuana and Rosarito, B.C., which currently have a population of about 1,300,000 inhabitants, will suffer serious shortages of water. Mexican water authorities are developing plans to provide for future water supply, however, construction of needed infrastructure will be costly and will take several years to implement. Part of this planning includes participation in binational feasibility studies with the San Diego County Water Authority (SDCWA) authorized under Minute No. 301 of the International Boundary and Water Commission, United States and Mexico (IBWC), concerning a potential binational aqueduct to increase the water supply to the San Diego/Tijuana region.

We note that three California Agencies have previously cooperated in providing emergency delivery of Colorado River waters to Tijuana prior to the construction of Mexico's Colorado River Aqueduct in Baja California during the 1970's. The deliveries were made through the facilities of the Metropolitan Water District of Southern California (MWD), SDCWA, and Otay Water District (OWD) through an extension of the OWD water transmission system, constructed at a cost to Mexico for the delivery of water to Tijuana at the international boundary at Otay Mesa. These California Agencies have expressed a willingness to do so again, subject to the availability of capacity in their systems, and reimbursement of all costs for conveyance of the water deliveries and construction of improvements to the OWD connection system along with other aspects of environmental protection.

We observe the information of the California Agencies in the sense that the cost for the deliveries would be equivalent to the costs for similar deliveries to United States users in the area. An advance payment shall be required, which the California Agencies will determine quarterly, equivalent to the cost for three months of emergency deliveries. Due to the fluctuation and uncertainty regarding energy costs in the State of California, actual energy costs may exceed the estimated costs for making the emergency deliveries, which would require the establishment of a reserve fund in an amount ranging from $25,000 to $500,000, United States currency, as determined by the California Agencies each quarter after reviewing the water delivery requests and energy costs.

We also observe that the improvements to the metering and delivery facilities of the OWD system were constructed by the SDCWA during October and November 2001 at a cost to the Tijuana State Public Services Commission (CESPT) estimated at $372,428 United States currency. The financing and construction were supervised by the IBWC. The construction of the improvements to the system consisted of the installation of pipelines, backflow prevention valves to safeguard United States water supplies, and metering equipment to provide accurate measurement of waters delivered to Mexico. The improvements will be owned and operated by OWD for the purposes of effecting water deliveries to Tijuana. Repairs to the said improvements which may be required solely for the purpose of making emergency water delivery to Tijuana will be paid by the government of Mexico.

New equipment installed by OWD to comply with air quality standards has capacity for both domestic requirements and deliveries to Tijuana. The incremental equipment costs associated with deliveries to Tijuana in the estimated amount of $938,000 United States currency will be recovered through quarterly payments made by Mexico for water deliveries at the rate of approximately $43 United States currency per acre-foot ($0.04 United States currency per cubic meter), costs which are already included in the unit cost for water delivered on site. In the event that water deliveries are terminated by Mexico prior to recovery of this investment by OWD, costs that have not been covered at that time would have to be paid by Mexico through the CESPT.

Considering the responsibilities of the IBWC in the application of the 1944 Water Treaty, particularly the provision that the IBWC maintain a record of waters belonging to each country, we note the information of the United States Section that it is feasible to divert, on an emergency basis, a part of the Mexican treaty waters through the facilities at Parker Dam on the Colorado River, located 169 miles (272 kilometers) upstream of the Northerly International Boundary and deliver the waters, less conveyance losses charged to Mexico's treaty waters, to the international boundary at Otay Mesa. The measuring device requested by the California Agencies has been installed at the Otay Mesa connecting facilities and will support the IBWC's water accounting. We observe that the impact, both in volume and quality, of the resultant reduction in treaty waters delivered to Mexico at the Northerly International Boundary would be insignificant.

We reviewed the requirements of the IBWC and of the California Agencies for making the water deliveries, as well as the needs of CESPT to request and receive the waters. We observed that to ensure that these requirements are met, the United States has concluded arrangements with the California Agencies under laws applicable in the United States and that Mexico has concluded arrangements with the State of Baja California under applicable laws in Mexico. The United States Section will coordinate through SDCWA the actions of the California Agencies and the Mexican Section will coordinate through CESPT the actions of Baja California. Based on these arrangements, we propose the following procedure for making the emergency deliveries:

A. Scheduling Emergency Water Deliveries

1. The Mexican Section, for a 5-year period, beginning in the year in which deliveries are initiated, will present to the United States Section an annual schedule of emergency water deliveries developed by the CESPT for emergency deliveries of water required monthly. The request corresponding to the initial year of water deliveries will be made at least 45 days prior to the delivery start date. For subsequent years, the requests will be made by September 15 of each preceding year. Such water amounts will be subject to the availability of delivery capacity of the California Agencies and should, in any event, not exceed the capacity of the inter-connection facility of approximately 1,200 acre-feet (1.5 million cubic meters)/month.

2. The United States Section will consult with the SDCWA and will respond within 30 days after receipt of the request for delivery concerning the availability of capacity, and limitations if any, for the delivery of the scheduled volumes of water for Tijuana, B.C. for deliveries requested during the initial period. Also, under the referenced agreement, the United States Section will ascertain from the SDCWA whether and to what extent a limitation of deliveries is foreseen during subsequent annual periods.

3. The United States Section, upon receipt of the advance payment in conformance with Part B of this Joint Report, will assure that the deliveries are made within the delivery capacity and limitations mentioned in the previous paragraph unless service interruptions or other emergencies beyond the United States Section's control cause temporary suspension of deliveries. The deliveries to Tijuana at the international boundary will consist of the requested volumes. The volume charged to Mexico's treaty deliveries will consist of the delivered volume plus the conveyance losses in accordance with the attached Table 1, "Charges to Mexico for Emergency Deliveries to Tijuana of a Portion of Mexico's 1944 Colorado River Treaty Water." For this purpose, the local work group (IBWC, SDCWA, MWD, OWD, Comisión Nacional del Agua (CNA), Comisión Estatal del Agua (CEA) and CESPT) will take readings at the meter installed for this purpose at Otay Mesa at the international boundary on the last day of each month that deliveries are made to Mexico.

4. The Mexican Section will assure receipt of these emergency deliveries in a continuous manner consistent with the requested and agreed-to amounts, without causing an interruption in water deliveries at the international boundary.

5. During any year in which water deliveries are made, the Mexican Section may request unanticipated additional or reduced volumes of waters allotted to Mexico under the 1944 Water Treaty, needed by the CESPT for subsequent periods. The U.S. Section, upon consultation with the SDCWA, will advise the Mexican Section as soon as possible, if capacity is available and if there are any limitations in making the additional deliveries. The CESPT, through the Mexican Section, will provide funds to cover the cost for the additional water deliveries within 15 days after this notification or will schedule compensating reductions in volume for a subsequent period of the same quarter. Except in extraordinary circumstances, the Mexican Section will not submit a request for unanticipated additions or reductions in emergency deliveries for any period for which an additional or reduced volume has been requested.

6. In the event that the California Agencies are not able to make the water deliveries because of capacity limitations, service interruptions, or other emergencies, the United States Section will immediately notify the Mexican Section before any suspension of deliveries is done. In case the water supply is suspended for reasons other than those mentioned above, the United States Section will reimburse funds equivalent to the cost of the suspended deliveries which CESPT may have paid in advance.

B. Funding Emergency Water Deliveries

1. The Mexican Section will assure the payment by the CESPT for the emergency water deliveries to Tijuana in accordance with the following arrangement:

   a. The cost for emergency water deliveries to Tijuana will be based on the volume of water measured at the Otay Mesa metering facility at the international boundary, plus system conveyance losses through the various California conveyance systems from the diversion point near Parker Dam to Otay Mesa at the international boundary, and will be equivalent to costs for similar deliveries to United States users in the said area. For the water deliveries made in the first year of effect of the present agreement, the cost is estimated in accordance with the schedule of charges in attached Table 1. Actual costs will be based on the delivery schedule. Delivery costs for subsequent years will be determined by October 15 each year except for estimated charges associated with the cost of electrical energy, which will be reported quarterly. The United States Section, upon consultation with SDCWA, will advise the Mexican Section 45 days prior to the beginning of each quarterly period whether funds shall be deposited in the electrical energy reserve fund.

   b. Before the beginning of each quarterly delivery period, payments will be made to the United States Section equal to three months of water deliveries, a minimum of 15 days prior to the beginning of the corresponding quarter. Withdrawals will be made monthly as described in Part B.2.

   c. Additionally, before the beginning of each quarter of deliveries, payments will be made to the United States Section, ranging from $25,000 to $500,000, United States currency, as determined by the SDCWA based upon the volume of water requested and future energy costs, only as necessary, based on high fluctuations in energy costs in the State of California.

d. In the event that the proportional investment costs for the new pump equipment acquired by OWD for domestic purposes and this agreement are not fully recovered through the unit cost charged by OWD per cubic meter on site, the Mexican Section will make the necessary arrangements to recover payment from the CESPT and provide it to the United States Section for its liquidation.

e. In the event unanticipated additional deliveries are requested, the Mexican Section will provide funds from CESPT to cover the costs for these water deliveries within 15 days after notification of acceptance by the United States Section.

f. Nonpayment of the advance quarterly payment for the service will be cause for suspension of the water deliveries.

2. The United States Section will administer the funds received from the Mexican Section in the following manner:

a. The United States Section will provide the funds to the SDCWA for deposit into an interest bearing bank account in which the interest income generated will be reinvested in the same account. The interest earned on the account will be based on the average monthly interest rate as reported on the SDCWA's Monthly Treasurer's Report for the SDCWA Operating Fund and will be calculated at the end of each month. The SDCWA will provide to the IBWC through the United States Section a monthly report including a detailed breakout of the costs for each monthly delivery, the total funds withdrawn from Mexico's account, the interest income generated in the account, and the balance remaining in the account. IBWC may request any clarifications to the monthly report from SDCWA within a maximum of 60 days. If no clarifications are requested by IBWC within 60 days, it shall be concluded that IBWC is in agreement with the information contained in the monthly report.

b. Similarly, the United States Section will provide a monthly report detailing the funds set aside for the energy reserve fund, advising of the actual energy costs associated with the monthly water deliveries, and the available funds and an estimate of the costs required for the succeeding quarter.

c. Upon termination of this agreement on emergency deliveries, the United States Section will provide to the Mexican Section a final balance sheet prepared by the SDCWA covering actual costs for the delivered waters. If there are remaining funds plus interest, these will be reimbursed to Mexico through the IBWC. If the Mexican funds are not sufficient to cover the final costs, Mexico will provide additional funds within 15 days of notice from the United States Section.

C. Coordination

The IBWC will form a local work group which will include at least one representative from each agency in the United States and Mexico involved in this matter. Those agencies are defined to include IBWC (United States and Mexican Sections), SDCWA, MWD, OWD, CNA and CEA and CESPT. The work group will meet at least once a month to receive reports on the operation and the above procedures and the handling of funds received from Mexico and to exchange information, as well as for jointly addressing any unforeseen situation which may arise regarding this matter.

D. Water Deliveries Monitoring

The IBWC will account for the Colorado River waters delivered under this emergency delivery arrangement, including system conveyance losses, and charge them against Mexico's allotment of Colorado River waters provided for in Article 10(a) of the 1944 Water Treaty following the provisions in Article 15B of the said Treaty for quantities delivered at mutually agreed points on the land boundary. During the period of emergency deliveries to Tijuana the salinity differential between Imperial Dam and the Northerly International Boundary, described in Resolution 1a of Minute 242, will be calculated as if the water delivered for use in Tijuana were delivered from Imperial Dam at the Northerly International Boundary.

E. Water Supply Planning for Tijuana, Baja California

With each annual request for emergency deliveries, Mexico, through the CESPT-CEA, will provide an update of programs and projects being implemented to secure an adequate water supply for the Tijuana, B.C. area.

Recommendations

Based on the above, we respectfully recommend:

That the procedures described in this report for providing emergency delivery of a portion of Mexico's Colorado River water for use in the Tijuana, B.C. area be approved.

The Embassy of the United States of America presents its compliments to the Ministry of Foreign Affairs and Cooperation of the Democratic Republic of Sao Tome and Principe, and refers to recent discussions between representatives of the Government of the United States of America and the Government of the Democratic Republic of Sao Tome and Principe regarding the surrender of persons to the International Criminal Court.

Reaffirming the importance of bringing to justice those who commit genocide, crimes against humanity and war crimes,

Recalling that the Rome Statute of the International Criminal Court done at Rome on July 17, 1998 by the United Nations Diplomatic Conference of Plenipotentiaries on the Establishment of an International Criminal Court is intended to complement and not supplant national criminal jurisdiction,

Considering that the Government of the United States of America and the Government of the Democratic Republic of Sao Tome and Principe have each expressed their intention to investigate and to prosecute where appropriate acts within the jurisdiction of the International Criminal Court alleged to have been committed by their officials, employees, military personnel or other nationals,

Bearing in mind Article 98 of the Rome Statute,

The Embassy proposes the following agreement:

1. For purposes of this agreement, "persons" are current or former Government officials, employees (including contractors), or military personnel or nationals of one Party.

2. Persons of one Party present in the territory of the other shall not, absent the express consent of the first Party,

   (a) be surrendered or transferred by any means to the International Criminal Court for any purpose, or

(b) be surrendered or transferred by any means to any other entity or third country, or expelled to a third country, for the purpose of surrender to or transfer to the International Criminal Court.

3. When the Government of the United States of America extradites, surrenders, or otherwise transfers a person of Sao Tome and Principe to a third country, the United States will not agree to the surrender or transfer of that person to the International Criminal Court by the third country, absent the express consent of the Government of the Democratic Republic of Sao Tome and Principe.

4. When the Government of the Democratic Republic of Sao Tome and Principe extradites, surrenders, or otherwise transfers a person of the United States of America to a third country, the Government of the Democratic Republic of Sao Tome and Principe will not agree to the surrender or transfer of that person to the International Criminal Court by a third country, absent the express consent of the Government of the United States of America.

5. This Agreement shall remain in force until one year after the date on which one Party notifies the other of its intent to terminate this Agreement. The provisions of this Agreement shall continue to apply with respect to any act occurring, or any allegation arising, before the effective date of termination.

If the proposal set forth herein is acceptable to the Government of the Democratic Republic of Sao Tome and Principe, this note and the Ministry's affirmative note in reply shall constitute an agreement between the two Governments which shall enter into force on the date of the Ministry's note.

The Embassy of the United States of America avails itself of this opportunity to renew to the Ministry of Foreign Affairs and Cooperation of the Democratic Republic of Sao Tome and Principe the assurances of its highest consideration.

Rights to such intellectual property shall be allocated as provided in this Annex.

I. SCOPE

B. For purposes of this Memorandum, "intellectual property" shall have the meaning found in Article 2 of the Convention Establishing the World Intellectual Property Organization, done at Stockholm, July 14, 1967.

C. This Annex addresses the allocation of rights, interests, and royalties between the Parties. Each Party shall ensure that the other Party can obtain the rights to intellectual property allocated in accordance with the Annex, by obtaining those rights from its own participants through contracts or other legal means, if necessary. This Annex does not otherwise alter or prejudice the allocation between a Party and its nationals, which shall be determined by that Party's laws and practices.

D. Disputes concerning intellectual property arising under this Memorandum should be resolved through discussions between the concerned participating institutions or, if necessary, the Parties or their designees. Upon mutual agreement of the Parties, a dispute shall be submitted to an arbitral tribunal for binding arbitration in accordance with the applicable rules of international law. B. Rights to all forms of intellectual property, other than those rights described in Paragraph II.A above, shall be allocated as follows:

1. Visiting researchers, for example, scientists visiting primarily in furtherance of their education, shall receive intellectual property rights under the policies of the host institution. In addition, each visiting researcher named as an inventor shall be entitled to share in a portion of any royalties earned by the host institution from the licensing of such intellectual property.

2. (a) For intellectual property created during joint research, for example, when the Parties, participating institutions, or participating personnel have agreed in advance on the scope of work, each Party shall be entitled to obtain all rights and interests in its own country. Rights and interests in third countries will be determined in Project Annexes. If research is not designated as "joint research" in the relevant Project Annex, rights to intellectual property arising from the research will be allocated in accordance with paragraph II.B.(1) above. In addition, each person named as an inventor shall be entitled to share in a portion of any royalties earned by either institution from the licensing of the property.

(b) Not withstanding Paragraph II.B.2(a) above, if a type of intellectual property is available under the laws of one Party but not the other Party, the Party whose laws provide for this type of protection shall be entitled to all rights and interests worldwide. Persons named as inventors or authors of the property shall nonetheless be entitled to royalties as provided in Paragraph II.B.2(a).

III. BUSINESS-CONFIDENTIAL INFORMATION

In the event that information identified in a timely fashion as business-confidential is furnished or created under this Memorandum, each Party and its participants shall protect such information in accordance with applicable laws, regulations, and administrative practices. Information may be identified as "business-confidential" if a person having the information may derive an economic benefit from it or may obtain a competitive advantage over those who do not have it, the information is not generally known or publicly available from other sources, and the owner has not previously made the information available without imposing in a timely manner an obligation to keep it confidential.

5.3. The Host Party shall not charge for the use of facilities or equipment necessary for the performance of tasks assigned to Naval Exchange Personnel.

5.4. The Parent Party shall pay the costs of formal and informal training and professional military education (PME).

5.5. The Host Party shall not provide any supplies or services related to those costs that, by virtue of paragraph 5.1 above, are the obligation of the Parent Party. Accordingly, it shall be necessary for the Parent Party to make arrangements to defray such costs directly through its personnel, rather than by reimbursement to the Host Party.

5.6. The obligations of each Party under this Agreement shall be subject to the authorization and availability of funds.

ARTICLE VI

SECURITY

6.1. During the selection process, each Party shall inform the other of the level of security clearance required, if any, to permit Naval Exchange Personnel to have access to classified information and work areas. There shall be no access to Classified Information pursuant to this Agreement.

6.2. Each Party shall cause security assurances to be filed, through the Mexican Embassy in Washington, DC, in the case of the United States of Mexico personnel, and through the U.S. Embassy in Mexico, in the case of the United States personnel, stating the security clearances for all Naval Exchange Personnel selected. The security assurances shall be prepared and forwarded through prescribed channels in compliance with established Host Party procedures.

6.3. The Host Organization and the Parent Organization shall ensure that assigned Naval Exchange Personnel are fully cognizant of applicable laws and regulations concerning the protection of proprietary information (such as patents, copyrights, know-how, and trade secrets), classified information and controlled unclassified information to which access might be gained under this Exchange Program, both during and after termination of an assignment; and shall be required to sign the certification at Annex A.

6.4. Naval Exchange Personnel shall at all times be required to comply with the security laws, regulations and procedures of the government of the Host Party. Any violation of security procedures by Naval Exchange Personnel during their assignments shall be reported to the Parent Party for appropriate action. 6.5. There is no General Security of Military Information Agreement in force between the parties. Classified information will not be exchanged between the parties pursuant to this Agreement.

ARTICLE VII

TECHNICAL AND ADMINISTRATIVE MATTERS

7.1. To the extent authorized by the laws and regulations of the government of the Host Party, the Host Organization shall arrange for the provision of administrative support as is deemed necessary for Naval Exchange Personnel to perform assigned tasks efficiently. The Host Organization shall familiarize Naval Exchange Personnel with any unique procedures necessary for the proper performance of their assigned tasks.

7.2. Consistent with the laws and regulations of the government of the Host Party, Naval Exchange Personnel assigned under this Agreement shall be subject to the same restrictions, conditions, and privileges as Host Party personnel of comparable rank in their areas of assignment. Further, to the extent authorized by the laws and regulations of the government of the Host Party, Naval Exchange Personnel and their authorized dependents shall be accorded on a reciprocal basis:

7.2.1. Exemption from any tax by the government of the Host Party upon income received from the government of the Parent Party. The Convention between the Government of the United States of America and the United States of Mexico for the Avoidance of Double Taxation and the Prevention of Fiscal Evasion with Respect to Taxes on Income, with Related Protocol, signed 18 September 1992 and Additional Protocol that Modifies the Convention, signed 8 September 1994, shall apply to this Agreement. This Agreement does not affect Parent Party Tax Laws regarding income of Parent Party Personnel.

7.2.2. Exemption from any customs and import duties or similar charges levied on items entering the country of the Host Party for their official or personal use, including their baggage, household effects, and private motor vehicles. The foregoing shall not in any way limit privileges set forth elsewhere in this Agreement, or other privileges granted by the laws and regulations of the government of the Host Party.

7.3. Naval Exchange Personnel and their dependents shall be informed by the Host Organization about applicable laws, orders, regulations and customs and they shall be required to comply with them. Naval Exchange Personnel and their dependents also shall be briefed by Host Organization personnel regarding their specific entitlements, privileges, and obligations upon their arrival in the country of the Host Organization.

7.4. Naval Exchange Personnel may observe the holiday schedule of either the Parent Party or the Host Party as mutually agreed.

7.5. Naval Exchange Personnel shall be assigned work under the guidance and supervision of a host supervisor. The host supervisor shall establish performance standards and observe the performance of Naval Exchange Personnel to provide a basis for counseling and performance evaluations. Naval Exchange Personnel shall have performance evaluations rendered by their Host Organization's supervisor. Such reports shall be forwarded by the Host Organization to the Parent Organization in accordance with Parent Organization requirements.

7.6. Reports which Naval Exchange Personnel may be required to make by the Parent Party, or which they wish to make concerning their exchange duties, shall be submitted as follows:

7.6.1. U.S. Naval Exchange Personnel will forward their reports in accordance with DoD Directive 5230.20 and OPNAVINST 5700.7G.

7.6.2. Mexican Naval Exchange Personnel will forward their reports through their Host Organization and the Mexican Naval Attaché in Washington, D.C.

7.7. Naval Exchange Personnel committing an offense under the laws of the government of either the Parent Party or the Host Party may be withdrawn from this Exchange Program with a view toward further administrative or disciplinary action by the Parent Party. Disciplinary action, however, shall not be taken by the Host Party against Naval Exchange Personnel and Naval Exchange Personnel shall not exercise disciplinary powers over personnel of the Host Party. The Parties shall cooperate when legally possible in carrying out administrative or disciplinary action by the Parent Party against its Naval Exchange Personnel.

7.8. Any medical and dental care that may be provided to Naval Exchange Personnel and their dependents at the Host Party medical facilities, shall be subject to the requirements of the laws and regulations of the government of the Host Party, including reimbursement when required by such laws and regulations.

7.9. In no case shall Naval Exchange Personnel be assigned to positions that would require exercise of command or be assigned to other positions that would require them to exercise responsibilities that are reserved by law or regulation to an officer or employee of the U.S. Government.

7.10. Naval Exchange Personnel shall not be placed on duty or in positions in areas of political sensitivity where their presence would jeopardize the interests of the Parent Party, or where, in the normal course of their duty, they may become involved in activities which may embarrass the Parent Party.

7.11. The Host Party shall not deploy Naval Exchange Personnel in non-direct hostility situations, such as UN peacekeeping or multi-national operations, without Parent Party approval. Additionally, Naval Exchange Personnel shall not be deployed to a third country as a member of an exercise contingent, or to participate in an exercise without Parent Party approval.

7.12. The Host Party shall not place Naval Exchange Personnel in duty assignments in which direct hostilities with forces of third states are likely. Should a unit in which Naval Exchange Personnel are assigned become involved in hostilities unexpectedly, Naval Exchange Personnel assigned to the unit shall not be involved in the hostilities without authorization from the Parent Party. Naval Exchange Personnel approved by both the Parent Party and the Host Party for involvement in hostilities shall be given clear guidance on the Host Party's interpretation of laws of war, to include the rules of engagement.

7.13. Purchasing and patronage privileges at military commissaries, exchanges, theaters and clubs shall be extended to Naval Exchange Personnel and their dependents on the same basis as equivalent personnel of the Host Party. This provision shall not, however, limit privileges set forth elsewhere in this Agreement or other privileges granted by the Host Party, at its discretion, with the consent of the Parent Party.

7.14. Naval Exchange Personnel shall be granted leave and passes/liberty according to their entitlements under the regulations of the Parent Organization, subject to the approval of the appropriate authorities of the Host Organization.

7.15. Naval Exchange Personnel shall be required to comply with the dress regulations of the Parent Organization. The order of dress for any occasion shall be that which most nearly conforms to the order for the particular unit of the Host Organization with which they are serving. Customs of the Host Organization shall be observed with respect to wearing of civilian clothes.

7.16. Consistent with the laws and regulations of the government of the Host Party, and upon conditions of reciprocity, the Host Organization shall provide, if available, housing and messing facilities for Naval Exchange Personnel and their dependents on the same basis and priority as for its own personnel. Naval Exchange Personnel shall pay messing and housing charges to the same extent as personnel of the Host Organization. At locations where facilities are not provided by the Host Organization for its own personnel, the Parent Organization shall make suitable arrangements for Naval Exchange Personnel.

7.17. U.S. Navy Exchange Personnel on exchange with the Secretaría de Marina-Armada de México of the United States of México will be under the administrative control of the U.S. Navy Section, U.S. Military Group, Mexico.

7.19. U.S. Naval Exchange Personnel shall have status equivalent to that accorded members of the administrative and technical staff of the United States Embassy, México City, México. Mexican Naval Exchange Personnel shall have status according to their visas.

ARTICLE VIII

CLAIMS

8.1. Claims arising from the operation of this Agreement shall be governed by any bilateral agreement between the Parties concerning the status of their Forces in the country of the Host Party. Claims to which the provisions of any such bilateral agreements do not apply shall be dealt with as follows:

8.1.1. The Parties waive all their claims, other than contractual claims, against each other, and against the military members and civilian employees of each other's Department or Ministry of Defense, for damage, loss or destruction of property owned or used by its respective Department or Ministry of Defense, if such damage, loss or destruction:

8.4. Naval Exchange Personnel and those dependents accompanying them, must obtain motor vehicle liability insurance coverage in accordance with applicable laws and regulations of the government of the Host Party, or its political subdivision, where they are located. In case of claims involving the use of private motor vehicles, the first recourse shall be against such insurance.

PREAMBLE

The United States Joint Forces Command (USJFCOM) and the Finnish Ministry of Defense (MOD) (each referred to herein individually as a "Party" and together as the "Parties"), desiring to establish formal liaisons between the Parties, hereby agree to the following terms and conditions regarding the assignment of individuals at government facilities to serve as Foreign Liaison Officers between them.

ARTICLE I
DEFINITIONS

In addition to any terms defined in other provisions of this Agreement, the following terms shall have the following meanings when used herein:

1.1 "Classified Information" shall mean official information of a Party that requires protection in the interests of national security of such Party and is so designated by the application of security classification markings.

1.2 "Contact Officer" shall mean a U.S. Department of Defense (DoD) official designated in writing to oversee and control all contacts, requests for information, consultations, access, and other activities of foreign liaison officers who are assigned to, or are visiting, a DoD component or subordinate organization.

1.3 "Controlled Unclassified Information" shall mean unclassified information of a Party to which access or distribution limitations have been applied in accordance with national laws, policies, and regulations of such Party. It includes United States information that is exempt from public disclosure or subject to export controls.

1.4 "Host Government" shall mean the national government of the Host Party.

1.5 "Host Party" shall mean the Party to which the Foreign Liaison Officer acts as a liaison pursuant to an assignment by a Parent Party under Article III.

1.6 "International Visits Program (IVP)" shall mean the program established to process visits by, and assignments of, foreign representatives to United States Department of Defense Components and Department of Defense contractor facilities. It is designed to ensure that Classified and Controlled Unclassified Information to be disclosed to foreign nationals has been properly authorized for disclosure to their governments; that the requesting foreign government provides a security assurance on such foreign nationals and their sponsoring organization or firm, when Classified Information is involved in the visit or assignment, and that administrative arrangements (e.g., date, time and place) for the visit or assignment are provided.

1.7 "Foreign Liaison Officer" shall mean a military member or civilian employee of a Parent Party who, upon approval or certification of the Host Party or Government, is authorized by the Parent Party to act as its official representative in connection with programs, projects, or agreements of interest to the Parties' Governments.

1.8 "Parent Government" shall mean the national government of the Parent Party.

1.9 "Parent Party" shall mean the Party that assigns a Foreign Liaison Officer pursuant to Article III.

ARTICLE II
SCOPE

2.1 During the term of this Agreement, subject to the agreement of the Parties, each Party may assign military members or civilian employees of its armed forces to serve as a Foreign Liaison Officer(s) to the other Party in accordance with the terms of this Agreement.

2.2 The establishment of each Foreign Liaison Officer position under this Agreement shall be based upon the demonstrated need for, and the mutual benefit of, this position to the Parties. Once established, each Foreign Liaison Officer position shall be subject to periodic review by either Party to ensure that the position continues to be required by, and is of mutual benefit to, the Parties. The Parties agree that a Foreign Liaison Officer position no longer required by, or of mutual benefit to, either Party shall be subject to elimination.

2.3 Commencement of such a tour of duty by a Foreign Liaison Officer shall be subject to any requirements that may be imposed by the Host Party or its government regarding formal certification or approval of Foreign Liaison Officers. Foreign Liaison Officers to be assigned by their Parent Party to locations in the United States shall be requested pursuant to the International Visits Program (IVP), as defined in Paragraph 1.6 of this Agreement.

2.4 Unless otherwise agreed, the normal tour of duty for a Foreign Liaison Officer shall be two (2) years.

2.5 As a general rule, an individual may serve as a Foreign Liaison Officer to only one major military command of the Host Party at any point in time.

ARTICLE III
DUTIES AND ACTIVITIES

3.1 The Foreign Liaison Officer shall represent the Parent Party to the Host Party. The Foreign Liaison Officer shall not perform duties reserved by the laws or regulations of the Host Government to officers or employees of the Host Government, nor shall the Liaison Officer provide any labor or services to the Host Government or any of its agencies, including the Host Party.

3.2 The Foreign Liaison Officer shall be required to comply with all applicable Host Government policies, procedures, laws and regulations. The Host Party shall assign a Contact Officer to provide guidance to the Liaison Officer concerning policies, procedures, laws and regulations of the Host Party, and to arrange for activities consistent with such requirements and the purposes of this Agreement.

3.3 The Foreign Liaison Officer may request access to Host Party facilities by submitting a request to the Contact Officer. Access to Host Party facilities may be granted if such access promotes the purposes of this Agreement, is consistent with the terms of any applicable certification or approval issued by the Host Government, and is permitted under the applicable policies, procedures, laws and regulations of the Host Government. Approval of such requests shall be at the discretion of the Host Party. Any request for access that exceeds the terms of an applicable certification or approval shall be submitted through the International Visits Program (IVP).

3.4 The Foreign Liaison Officer shall not be granted access to technical data or other information of the Host Party, whether or not classified, except as authorized by the Host Party, and only to the extent necessary to fulfill the Foreign Liaison Officer's functions hereunder.

3.5 All information to which the Foreign Liaison Officer is granted access while serving as a liaison to the Host Party shall be treated as information provided to the Parent Government, in confidence, and shall not be further released or disclosed by the Foreign Liaison Officer to any other person, firm, organization, or government without the prior written authorization of the Host Government. Disclosure of information to the Foreign Liaison Officer shall not be deemed to be a license or authorization to use such information for any purpose other than the purposes described in Article II.

3.6 The Foreign Liaison Officer shall not be permitted to participate in exercises, deployments, or civil-military actions, unless expressly authorized to do so by both the Host and Parent Parties.

3.7 The Parent Party shall not place or keep a Foreign Liaison Officer in duty assignments in which direct hostilities with forces of third states are likely to occur or have commenced, unless approved by the Parent Party and Host Party, in writing.

3.8 The Foreign Liaison Officer shall be required to comply with the dress regulations of the Parent Party but, if requested by the Host Party, shall also wear such identification necessary to identify the Liaison Officer's nationality, rank and status as a Liaison Officer. The order of dress for any occasion shall be that which most closely conforms to the order of dress for the particular organization of the Host Party where the Foreign Liaison Officer is located. The Foreign Liaison Officer shall be required to comply with the customs of the Host Party with respect to the wearing of civilian clothing.

3.9 Prior to the commencement of a Foreign Liaison Officer's tour, the Parent Party shall notify the Host Party of the specific Parent Party organization which will exercise operational control over the Foreign Liaison Officer and, if different, the Parent Party organization that will provide administrative support to the Foreign Liaison Officer and the Foreign Liaison Officer's dependents.

3.10 At the end of a Foreign Liaison Officer's tour, or as otherwise agreed by the Parties, the Parent Party may, subject to the provisions of Paragraph 3.3, replace the Foreign Liaison Officer with another individual who meets the requirements of this Agreement.

ARTICLE IV
FINANCIAL ARRANGEMENTS

4.1 The Parent Party shall bear all costs and expenses of the Foreign Liaison Officer, including, but not limited to:

4.1.1 All pay and allowances of the Foreign Liaison Officer;

4.1.2 All travel by the Foreign Liaison Officer and the Foreign Liaison Officer's dependents, including, but not limited to, travel to and from the country of the Host Party;

4.1.3 All costs and expenses associated with the assignment or placement of the Foreign Liaison Officer and the Foreign Liaison Officer's dependents within the Host Party's country, including travel, office space, clerical support, quarters, rations, medical and dental services, unless specifically stated otherwise in an applicable international agreement;

4.1.4 Compensation for loss of, or damage to, the personal property of the Foreign Liaison Officer, or the personal property of the Foreign Liaison Officer's dependents;

4.1.5 The movement of the household effects of the Foreign Liaison Officer and the Foreign Liaison Officer's dependents;

4.1.6 Preparation and shipment of remains and funeral expenses associated with the death of the Foreign Liaison Officer or his dependent(s);

4.1.8 All expenses in connection with the return of a Foreign Liaison Officer whose assignment has ended or been terminated, along with his or her dependents.

4.2 The Host Party may provide such office facilities, equipment, supplies and services as may be necessary for the Foreign Liaison Officer to fulfill the purposes of this Agreement, subject to reimbursement by the Parent Party for the cost of the Foreign Liaison Officer's use of such facilities at rates determined by the Host Party. Where the United States is the Host Party, reimbursement for such facilities, equipment, supplies, and services shall be made through Foreign Military Sales (FMS).

ARTICLE V
SECURITY

5.1 The Host Party shall establish the maximum substantive scope and classification levels within which the disclosure of any Classified Information or Controlled Unclassified Information to the Foreign Liaison Officer will be permitted. The Host Party shall inform the Parent Party of the level of security clearance required to permit the Foreign Liaison Officer access to such information. The Foreign Liaison Officer's access to such information and facilities shall be consistent with, and limited by the terms of his/her assignment, the provisions of this Article and any other agreement between the Parties or their governments concerning access to such information and facilities. Further, access shall at all times be limited to the minimum required to accomplish the purposes of this Agreement, and, at its discretion, the Host Party may prohibit the Foreign Liaison Officer's right of access to any Host Party facility or require that such access be supervised by Host Party personnel.

5.2 Each Party shall cause security assurances to be filed, through the Finnish Embassy in Washington, D.C., in the case of Finnish personnel, and through the U.S. Embassy in Helsinki in the case of United States personnel, stating the security clearances for the Liaison Officer being assigned by such Party. The security assurances shall be prepared and forwarded through prescribed channels in compliance with established Host Party procedures. For the United States, the prescribed channels shall be the International Visits Program (IVP), as defined in paragraph 1.6 of this Agreement.

5.3 The Parent Party shall ensure that each assigned Foreign Liaison Officer is fully cognizant of, and complies with, applicable laws and regulations concerning the protection of proprietary information (such as patents, copyrights, know-how, and trade secrets), classified information and controlled unclassified information disclosed to the Foreign Liaison Officer. This obligation shall apply both during and after termination of an assignment as a Foreign Liaison Officer. Prior to taking up duties as a Foreign Liaison Officer, the Foreign Liaison Officer of Finland shall be required to sign the certification at Annex A. Only individuals who execute the certification shall be permitted to serve as Foreign Liaison Officers with the U. S. Joint Forces Command.

5.4 The Parent Party shall ensure that the Foreign Liaison Officer, at all times, complies with the security laws, regulations and procedures of the Host Government. Any violation of security procedures by a Foreign Liaison Officer during his or her assignment shall be reported to the Parent Party for appropriate action. Upon request by the Host Party, the Parent Party shall remove any Foreign Liaison Officer who violates security laws, regulations, or procedures during his or her assignment.

5.5 All Classified Information made available to the Foreign Liaison Officer shall be considered to be Classified Information furnished to the Parent Party, and shall be subject to all provisions and safeguards provided for under the General Security of Military Information Agreement (GSOMIA) in force between the United States of America and Finland.

5.6 The Foreign Liaison Officer shall not take custody of Classified Information or Controlled Unclassified Information in tangible form (for example, documents or electronic files), except as expressly permitted by the terms of the Host Party certification of the Foreign Liaison Officer (and requested in writing by the Parent Government) for the following situations:

5.6.1 Couriers. The Foreign Liaison Officer may take custody of Classified Information to perform courier functions, when authorized by the Host Party certification for the Foreign Liaison Officer. The Classified Information shall be packaged and receipted for in compliance with Host Party requirements.

5.6.2 On-Site Storage. The Foreign Liaison Officer may be furnished a secure container for the temporary storage of Classified Information, consistent with the terms of the certification, provided the security responsibility and control of the container and its contents remains with the Host Party.

ARTICLE VI
TECHNICAL AND ADMINISTRATIVE MATTERS

6.1 The Host Party's certification or approval of an individual as a Foreign Liaison Officer shall not bestow diplomatic or other special privileges on that individual.

6.2 To the extent authorized by the laws and regulations of the Host Government, and in accordance with Article IV of this Agreement, the Host Party may provide such administrative support as is necessary for the Foreign Liaison Officer to fulfill the purposes of this Agreement, subject to reimbursement by the Parent Party.

6.3 Exemption from taxes, customs or import duties, or similar charges for the Foreign Liaison Officer or the Foreign Liaison Officer's dependents shall be governed by applicable laws and regulations or international agreement between the Host Government and the Parent Government.

6.4 If office space is provided to the Foreign Liaison Officer by the Host Party, the Host Party shall determine the normal working hours for the Foreign Liaison Officer.

6.5 The Parent Party shall ensure that the Host Party is informed as far in advance as possible of any absences of the Foreign Liaison Officer.

6.6 The Foreign Liaison Officer and his/her authorized family members shall be provided care in military medical and dental facilities to the extent permitted by applicable law, policy, and international agreement. Where a reciprocal agreement for health care exists between the Parties, the access entitlement of the Foreign Liaison Officer and his/her family members is specified. For those personnel covered by such an agreement, care is generally provided free of charge. All Foreign Liaison Officers and family members not covered by a reciprocal agreement may be offered health care, on a reimbursable basis, in military facilities. Where military facilities are not available, the Foreign Liaison Officer shall be responsible for all medical and dental costs incurred by himself/herself and his/her family. The Parent Party shall ensure that the Foreign Liaison Officer and his/her family members are physically fit prior to the Foreign Liaison Officer's tour of duty. The Parent Party shall be responsible for familiarizing itself with the medical and dental services available to the Foreign Liaison Officer and his/her family members, and the costs of, and the procedures for, use of such services.

6.7 The Foreign Liaison Officer and his/her dependents may be accorded the use of military commissaries, exchanges, theaters and similar morale and welfare activities, in accordance with the laws, regulations, and policies of the Host Party.

6.8 To the extent permitted by the laws and regulations of the Host Government, and subject to reimbursement by the Parent Party, the Host Party may provide, if available, housing and messing facilities for the Foreign Liaison Officer and the Foreign Liaison Officer's dependents on the same basis and priority as for its own personnel of comparable rank and assignment. At locations where housing and messing facilities are not provided by the Host Party, the Host Party shall use reasonable efforts to assist the Parent Party to locate such facilities for the Foreign Liaison Officer and the Foreign Liaison Officer's dependents.

6.9 The Parent Party shall ensure that the Foreign Liaison Officer and the Foreign Liaison Officer's dependents have all documentation required by the Host Government for entry into, and exit from, the country of the Host Government at the time of such entry or exit. Unless exempted under an applicable international agreement between the Parties, Foreign Liaison Officers and their authorized dependents entering the United States shall be required to comply with United States Customs Regulations.

6.10 The Parent Party shall ensure that the Foreign Liaison Officer and those family members accompanying the Foreign Liaison Officer in the country of the Host Party shall obtain motor vehicle liability insurance coverage for their private motor vehicles, in accordance with applicable laws, regulations and policies of the Host Government, or the political subdivisions of the country of the Host Party in which the Foreign Liaison Officer and his/her family members are located.

ARTICLE VII
DISCIPLINE AND REMOVAL

7.1 Except as provided in Section 7.2, neither the Host Party nor the armed forces of the Host Government may take disciplinary action against a Foreign Liaison Officer who commits an offense under the military laws or regulations of the Host Party, nor shall the Host Party exercise disciplinary powers over the Liaison Officer's dependents. The Parent Party, however, shall take such administrative or disciplinary action against the Liaison Officer as may be appropriate under the circumstances, to ensure compliance with this Agreement, and the Parties shall cooperate in the investigation of any offenses under the laws or regulations of either Party.

7.2 The certification or approval of a Foreign Liaison Officer may be withdrawn, modified or curtailed at any time by the Host Party for any reason, including, but not limited to, the violation of the regulations or laws of the Host Party or the Host Government. In addition, at the request of the Host Party, the Parent Government shall remove the Foreign Liaison Officer or a dependent of the Foreign Liaison Officer from the territory of the Host Government. The Host Party shall provide an explanation for its removal request, but a disagreement between the Parties concerning the sufficiency of the Host Party's reasons shall not be grounds to delay the removal of the Foreign Liaison Officer.

7.3 A Foreign Liaison Officer shall not exercise any supervisory or disciplinary authority over military or civilian personnel of the Host Party.

RECOMMENDATIONS FOR SECONDARY TREATMENT IN MEXICO OF THE SEWAGE EMANATING FROM THE TIJUANA RIVER AREA IN BAJA CALIFORNIA, MEXICO

The Commission met at the offices of the United States Section in El Paso, Texas on February 20, 2004 at 1:30 p.m., to address the construction in Mexico of a plant and related facilities for secondary treatment of sewage emanating from the Tijuana River area in Mexico that flows untreated into the United States or is partially treated at the South Bay International Wastewater Treatment Plant (SBIWTP) located in San Ysidro, California.

The Commissioners noted the stipulations in the Treaty between the United States of America and the United Mexican States for the "Utilization of Waters of the Colorado and Tijuana Rivers and of the Rio Grande," signed February 3, 1944, as they relate to the obligation of both Governments to provide preferential attention to the solution of border sanitation problems. They also noted the stipulations in Minute No. 283, entitled "Conceptual Plan for the International Solution to the Border Sanitation Problem in San Diego, California/Tijuana, Baja California," dated July 2, 1990, that provided for the United States and Mexico to design, construct, operate and maintain a treatment plant for up to 25 million gallons per day (mgd) <1100 liters per second (l/s)> of wastewater arriving from the City of Tijuana, Baja California to be treated to a level of secondary treatment in the United States. The Commissioners also noted that the Mexican Government covers the costs of operation and maintenance of the volumes mentioned above in its corresponding portion, in accordance with Minute No. 296, entitled "Distribution of Construction, Operation and Maintenance Costs for the International Wastewater Treatment Plant Constructed under the Agreements in Commission Minute No. 283 for the solution of the Border Sanitation Problem at San Diego, California/Tijuana, Baja California," dated April 16, 1997. Likewise, they noted that due to problems in the United States the level of treatment provided by the present international plant is only at a level of advanced primary treatment.

The United States Commissioner noted that the level of treatment provided at the SBIWTP currently fails to meet the secondary treatment level standard set forth in the State of California discharge permit. The concentration and mass emissions rates for total suspended solids and Carbonaceous Biochemical Oxygen Demand and Whole Effluent Toxicity have routinely exceeded the permit levels since the initiation of advanced primary treatment in 1997. In addition, the United States Commissioner noted the failure to meet discharge permit requirements had resulted in litigation in Federal District Court. The United States Commissioner further noted that a possible result of this lawsuit is that the United States Section would be required to cease discharges from the SBIWTP. The Mexican Commissioner noted that this would mean that the SBIWTP could not accept any flows from Mexico and this would not be acceptable to Mexico. Both Commissioners noted that this would have serious impacts on health and the environment in the border region.

The Commissioners noted passage by the United States Congress of Public Law 106-457, "Tijuana River Valley Estuary and Beach Cleanup" signed on November 7, 2000, which authorizes appropriation of up to $156 million dollars to comprehensively address the treatment of sewage emanating from the Tijuana River area in Mexico that flows untreated or partially treated into the United States causing significant adverse public health and environmental impacts. They also considered the proposal presented by the United States Section to the Mexican Section through correspondence in January 2002. The implementation of a secondary treatment facility in Mexico in a manner consistent with Public Law 106-457 would provide the secondary treatment which was originally to be provided at the SBIWTP in conformance with Minute No. 283.

The Commissioners noted the efforts of the Comisión Estatal de Servicios Publicos de Tijuana and of the United States Environmental Protection Agency (USEPA) in the development of the Master Plan for Water and Sanitation for the City of Tijuana, Baja California, published on March 7, 2003, which analyzes the present and future generation of wastewater in the City of Tijuana, the available treatment capacity at present, and the facilities required to cover the treatment needs through 2023. The Mexican Commissioner noted that the United States proposal for constructing the secondary treatment for the SBIWTP in Mexico would complement the provisions in the City of Tijuana Master Plan until 2023 that suggests the construction of a wastewater treatment plant with total treatment capacity of 33.5 mgd (1470 l/s). In addition the Master Plan considered secondary treatment consisting of 25 mgd (1100 l/s) of the SBIWTP advanced primary effluent, if secondary treatment of that effluent is not provided for at a facility in the United States. This increases the total needed capacity for the planning period to 2023 to 59 mgd (2570 l/s).

I. PROPOSED PROJECT

The Commissioners considered it possible to implement the concept of the referenced United States proposal in Mexico for a secondary treatment facility for sewage emanating from the City of Tijuana, Baja California, under a public-private participation arrangement. The United States Section would agree to fund, subject to availability of annual appropriations, up to $156 million for the engineering, construction, and for a period of 20 years for the operation and maintenance of a 59 mgd (2570 l/s) wastewater treatment plant in Mexico if the treatment of 25 mgd (1100 l/s) of advanced primary effluent of the SBIWTP is not provided in the United States. Any additional costs will be subject to subsequent Commission agreements. The Government of Mexico would continue to cover the corresponding costs for the first 25 mgd (1100 l/s) as stipulated in Minutes Nos. 283 and 296.

Specifically, the proposed project will consider at a minimum the following:

- To locate the required primary and/or secondary treatment facilities in Mexico and associated facilities directly related to the project in the United States and Mexico.
- To provide secondary treatment of the SBIWTP effluent in Mexico, if such treatment is not provided for at facilities located in the United States.
- To provide the treatment capacity, including all processes necessary to provide secondary treatment level, in Mexico, for flows of 59 mgd (2570 l/s) if the treatment of 25 mgd (1100 l/s) of advanced primary effluent of the SBIWTP is not provided in the United States.
- To obtain all the permits required by the Mexican authorities in order to facilitate the verification and oversight of compliance with laws related to the treatment structures that are constructed in Mexico.
- To comply with the water quality laws of the United States and of the State of California in order to allow the discharge in the United States of treated effluent that is not utilized in Mexico through the Southbay Ocean Outfall (SBOO), constructed in the United States within the framework of Minute No. 283.
- To provide the pumping, conveyance and secondary treatment in Mexico for a flow of 59 mgd (2570 l/s), as derived from the results of the City of Tijuana Master Plan.
- To have supervision and approval of each phase of the projects resulting from the United States proposal undertaken by the Commission with participation of the appropriate United States and Mexican technical advisors.
- Ownership and disposition of wastewater from Tijuana, Baja California, treated or not treated under this proposal, will remain under the jurisdiction of the Government of Mexico. Likewise, the Government of Mexico will maintain the jurisdiction for disposal of said wastewater in accordance with applicable Mexican laws.

II. CONTRACT SERVICES

Likewise, both Commissioners observed it acceptable to develop the United States proposal to engineer, construct, operate and maintain treatment works in Mexico in conformance with applicable Mexican legislation, under an operating lease contract between the Commission and the service provider of the Mexican facility. The United States Section would make payments to the service provider, subject to the availability of annual appropriations, under the contract, which would be administered by the Mexican Section in accordance with the 1944 Water Treaty. The payments to be made to the service provider would be offset by compensations or credits that reflect an agreed upon percentage of payments received by Mexico through the sale of water treated by the facility. Said compensations or credits would be mutually agreed upon by the two governments through the Commission. In no instance will the service provider be authorized to decide on the fate or use of the Tijuana, Baja California wastewater, treated or untreated. This decision will be made solely by the Government of Mexico. The service provider may propose mechanisms and specific actions to this respect, but, in any case, will require the authorization of the Government of Mexico.

The Government of the United States would provide, subject to the availability of annual appropriation up to a total of $156 million for the implementation of the project. Any costs above this amount will be subject to subsequent Minutes of the Commission.

The contract will at a minimum include the following items:

- Conveyance of the advanced primary effluent from the SBIWTP, located in the United States, to the Mexican facility for secondary treatment, if secondary treatment for the effluent is not provided at a facility located in the United States.
- Treatment to the secondary level at the facility in Mexico, in compliance with applicable water quality laws of the United States, the State of California, and Mexico.
- Return conveyance from the Mexican treatment facility to the United States of any treated effluent that cannot be reused. The effluent may be discharged through the SBOO into the Pacific Ocean in compliance with water quality laws of the United States and the State of California.
- Wastewater treatment capacity that provides secondary treatment for volumes in addition to the capacity of the SBIWTP, for a total capacity of 59 mgd (2570 l/s) if the treatment of 25 mgd (1100 l/s) of the advanced primary effluent of the SBIWTP is not provided in the United States.
- A contract term of 20 years. When the contract terminates, the facilities will be transferred, in good operating conditions, to the responsible Mexican authorities.
- Attainment of permits in order for the Commission to monitor, verify and assure compliance with United States, California, and Mexican water quality standards.
- Arrangements in order for the Commission to assure the proper disposal and use, at a site or sites in Mexico, of sludge produced at the SBIWTP and the Mexican facility.
- Payment by the United States Section, subject to annual availability of appropriations, for the contracted wastewater treatment services, including the necessary processes to attain treatment at a secondary level for a capacity of 59 mgd (2570 l/s), if the treatment of 25 mgd (1100 l/s) of advanced primary effluent is not provided in the United States. The payment will cover all agreed upon costs associated with the development, financing, construction, operation and maintenance of the Mexican facilities, on an annual basis.
- Provisions for non-compliance with the terms of the contract.
- The use of competitive procedures applicable in Mexico in the procurement of all property and/or services for the engineering, construction, and operation and maintenance of the Mexican facility.

- Oversight of a Binational Technical Committee composed of appropriate United States and Mexican technical advisors, presided over by the Commission, to provide support to the Commission in the supervision of the different phases of the proposed actions included in this and subsequent Minutes. The Technical Committee may include for the United States the State of California and USEPA and for Mexico Comisión Nacional del Agua (CNA) and Government of Baja California.
- Provisions for the Commission, with the support of the Binational Technical Committee, to review and approve the selection of all contractors to perform the engineering, construction, and operation and maintenance for the Mexican facility.
- Ensure the maintenance by the service provider of the Mexican facility of all records (including books, documents, papers, reports, and other materials) pertaining to the operation of the facility necessary to demonstrate compliance with the terms of the contract and those in this Minute.
- Access by the Commission for audit and examination of all records maintained in accordance with the previous item, to facilitate the monitoring and evaluation of the performance of the Mexican facility

The Commissioners noted that the implementation of this Minute would require supervision by the Commission with the support of the Binational Technical Committee that includes the monitoring, on a quarterly basis, of the progress and status on the implementation of any contract executed under this Minute, as well as an evaluation of the extent to which the terms of such contract have been met. They also considered the recommendations that the findings of such observations will be presented, through the respective Section, to domestic agencies requiring such reports, beginning no later than two years after the execution of such a contract and every year after until contract close-out.

III. PREVIOUS CONSULTATIONS

The Commissioners also noted the ongoing discussions convened by the two Sections since January 2001. Meetings of the Commission have taken place and letters have been exchanged within the Commission as well as at the diplomatic level, in which the Government of Mexico has shown interest in the United States proposal and expressed its willingness to further discuss this matter on the basis that the concept is compatible with the option recommended in the City of Tijuana Master Plan, presents opportunities for additional investment in Mexico, includes an arrangement for the disposal of the effluent by means of the SBOO, allows opportunity to realize the existing potential for reuse of the effluent, decreases the pressure on the supply sources by placing the treated effluent closer to the potential sites for potable and non-potable reuse, and involves cooperation between both countries for treatment and disposal of a volume of Tijuana wastewater greater than the present 25 mgd (1100 l/s).

From the various meetings and exchange of letters of the Commission, the following understandings were noted:

1. It would be feasible to incorporate the participation of a public-private service provider for the treatment of wastewater in accordance with applicable regulations in Mexico.
2. The Commission could participate in an operating lease contract for the engineering, construction, operation and maintenance in accordance with Mexican law and in accordance with additional terms to be established in a subsequent Commission Minute.
3. The operating lease contract would be administered consistent with provisions in the 1944 Water Treaty, applicable Mexican laws and in accordance with the terms and conditions established through subsequent Commission Minutes.
4. That the adopted project would be consistent with the solution identified in the Tijuana Master Plan; that it would address infrastructure capacities, land use, land acquisition, type of treatment and disposal of effluent; they would satisfy the requirements of CNA and the State of Baja California; that it would dedicate special attention to odor control; that it would address the selection of the service provider, in accordance with procedures in applicable Mexican laws; and it would define the fate of the facilities when the contract period ends.

IV. IMPLEMENTATION PLAN

The Commissioners noted the legislation set forth by the United States Congress in Public Law 106-457, the conclusions set forth by the Tijuana Master Plan and the discussions held by the Commission were sufficient basis to move ahead in relation to the secondary treatment of the effluent from the SBIWTP and the future flows of Tijuana. Therefore, the Commissioners considered it appropriate to implement the following actions:

1. Once the initial appropriated funds are available, the Commission would develop an operating lease arrangement contract, as defined under Section II of this Minute, "Contract Services," for the financing and development of the engineering, construction, operation and maintenance of the facilities in Mexico. This arrangement will need to have the approval of both governments, expressed in a subsequent Minute.
2. The final design of the facilities to be constructed in Mexico and the final arrangement for its implementation, as well as the terms under which the United States Section will make payments for the design, construction, operation and maintenance of said facilities, will be established in a subsequent Minute of the Commission. In case that agreement on an operating lease arrangement or design that is acceptable to both governments is not reached, the stipulations established in Commission Minutes Nos. 283 and 296 will apply.

3. At the termination of the contract, the facilities constructed in Mexico will be transferred in adequate operating condition to the responsible Mexican authorities. The terms for subsequent operation will be established in a Commission Minute, and if necessary, the terms for the discharge of the plant effluent.

Based on the above, the Commissioners present the following recommendations for the approval of the two governments:

1. The United States Section shall fund, subject to availability of annual appropriations, up to a total of $156 million for the engineering, construction, and for a period of 20 years the operation and maintenance of a 59 mgd (2570 l/s) secondary wastewater treatment plant in Mexico, if the treatment of 25 mgd (1100 l/s) of advanced primary effluent of the SBIWTP is not provided in the United States. Any additional costs shall be subject to subsequent Commission agreements. The Government of Mexico shall cover the corresponding costs for the first 25 mgd (1100 l/s) as stipulated in Commission Minutes Nos. 283 and 296. Treatment to the secondary treatment level will be in compliance with water quality laws of the United States, the State of California and Mexico.
2. The Commission shall adopt the implementation plan contained in Section IV of this Minute.
3. The Commission, with support from their respective technical advisors, shall review and approve the terms of reference for the selection of a service provider.
4. The Commission shall administer the project guided by the solution identified in the Tijuana Master Plan, to satisfy the requirements of the responsible Mexican authorities and to address infrastructure capacities, land use, land acquisition, type of treatment, odor control, sludge management, and disposal of effluent that cannot be reused in Mexico. The effluent may be discharged through the SBOO into the Pacific Ocean in compliance with water quality laws of the United States and the State of California.
5. The Commission shall supervise the project including quarterly monitoring of progress and status of performance on any contract executed to fulfill the objective of this Minute, and an evaluation of the degree to which the service provider of the facilities in Mexico has complied with the terms of the contract. The results of these observations shall be presented, through the corresponding Section of the Commission, to the authorities which require these reports in each country, beginning no later than two years after execution of the contract referred to in Section II of this Minute, and annually thereafter.

6. All activities undertaken pursuant to the provisions of this Minute shall be subject to the availability of appropriated funds, resources, and corresponding personnel, as well as to applicable laws and regulations in each country.
7. This Minute shall enter into force upon notification of approval by the Government of the United States of America and the Government of the United Mexican States through the respective Sections of the Commission, and shall terminate when the operating lease contract referenced in Paragraph No. 1 of Section IV of this Minute concludes.

The meeting was adjourned.

G. "Flight crew member" means a pilot, flight engineer or flight navigator assigned to duty in an aircraft during flight time.

H. "Flight simulator qualification evaluations" means the qualification process by which a flight simulator is assessed by comparison to the aircraft it simulates, in accordance with standards agreed between the Parties, or the finding that it complies with those standards.

I. "Maintenance" means the performance of inspection, overhaul, repair, preservation, and the replacement of parts, materials, appliances, or components of a product to ensure the continued airworthiness of that product, but excludes alterations or modifications.

J. "Monitoring" means the periodic surveillance by the civil aviation authority of a Party to determine continuing compliance with the appropriate standards.

ARTICLE III

A. The Parties' civil aviation authorities shall conduct technical assessments and work cooperatively to develop an understanding of each other's standards and systems in the following areas:

1. Airworthiness approvals of civil aeronautical products;

2. Environmental approval and environmental testing;

3. Approval and monitoring of maintenance facilities and maintenance personnel;

4. Approval and monitoring of flight operations and flight crew members;

B. When the civil aviation authorities of the Parties agree that the standards, rules, practices, procedures, and systems of both Parties in one of the technical specialties listed in paragraph (A) of this Article are sufficiently equivalent or compatible to permit acceptance of findings of compliance made by one Party for the other Party to the agreed-upon standards, the civil aviation authorities shall execute written Implementation Procedures describing the methods by which such reciprocal acceptance shall be made with respect to that technical specialty. Once the written Implementation Procedures are executed the Parties agree to be bound by the written Implementation Procedures, which shall be considered implementing agreements under this Agreement.

C. The written Implementation Procedures shall include at a minimum:

1. Definitions;

2. A description of the scope of the particular area of civil aviation to be addressed;

This Agreement may be amended by the written agreement of the Parties. Individual written Implementation Procedures may be terminated or amended by the civil aviation authorities which termination or amendment shall take effect upon the expiry of such period of written notice as may be agreed between them.

ARTICLE VI

The Agreement between the United States of America and the Republic of Singapore relating to the reciprocal acceptance of airworthiness certifications, effected by exchange of notes at Singapore on August 21, 1981, shall remain in force until terminated by an exchange of notes following completion by the Parties' civil aviation authorities of the technical assessments and written Implementation Procedures concerning airworthiness certification (and environmental approval), as described in Article III. ## PREAMBLE

The United States Navy and The Secretary of the Marina Mexico (SEMAR) (each referred to herein individually as a "Party" and together as the "Parties"), desiring to establish formal liaisons between the Parties, hereby agree to the following terms and conditions regarding the assignment of naval officers at government facilities to serve as Liaison Officers between them.

ARTICLE I
DEFINITIONS

In addition to any terms defined in other provisions of this Agreement, the following terms shall have the following meanings when used herein:

1.1 "Classified Information" shall mean official information of a Party that requires protection in the interests of national security of such Party and is so designated by the application of security classification markings.

1.2 "Contact Officer" shall mean a U.S. Department of Defense (DoD) official designated in writing to oversee and control all contacts, requests for information, consultations, access, and other activities of foreign liaison officers who are assigned to, or are visiting, a DoD component or subordinate organization.

1.3 "Controlled Unclassified Information" shall mean unclassified information of a Party to which access or distribution limitations have been applied in accordance with national laws, policies, and regulations of such Party. It includes United States information that is exempt from public disclosure or subject to export controls.

1.4 "Host Government" shall mean the national government of the Host Party.

1.5 "Host Party" shall mean the Party to which the Liaison Officer acts as a liaison pursuant to an assignment by a Parent Party under Article III.

1.6 "International Visits Program (IVP) shall mean the program established to process visits by, and assignments of, foreign representatives to United States Department of Defense Components and Department of Defense contractor facilities. It is designed to ensure that Classified and Controlled Unclassified Information to be disclosed to foreign nationals has been properly authorized for disclosure to their governments; that the requesting foreign government provides a security assurance on such foreign nationals and their sponsoring organization or firm, when Classified Information is involved in the visit or assignment, and that administrative arrangements (e.g., date, time and place) for the visit or assignment are provided.

1.7 "Liaison Officer" shall mean a naval officer of a Parent Party who, upon approval or certification of the Host Party or Government, is authorized by the Parent Party to act as its official representative in connection with programs, projects, or agreements of interest to the Parties' Governments.

1.8 "Parent Government" shall mean the national government of the Parent Party.

1.9 "Parent Party" shall mean the Party that assigns a Liaison Officer pursuant to Article III.

ARTICLE II
SCOPE

2.1 During the term of this Agreement, subject to the agreement of the Parties, each Party may assign military members of its armed forces to serve as a Liaison Officer(s) to the other Party in accordance with the terms of this Agreement.

2.2 The establishment of each Liaison Officer position under this Agreement shall be based upon the demonstrated need for, and the mutual benefit of, this position to the Parties. Once established, each Liaison Officer position shall be subject to periodic review by either Party to ensure that the position continues to be required by, and is of mutual benefit to, the Parties. The Parties agree that a Liaison Officer position no longer required by, or of mutual benefit to, either Party shall be subject to elimination.

2.3 Commencement of such a tour of duty by a Liaison Officer shall be subject to any requirements that may be imposed by the Host Party or its government regarding formal certification or approval of Liaison Officers. Liaison Officers to be assigned by their Parent Party to locations in the United States shall be requested pursuant to the International Visits Program (IVP), as defined in Paragraph 1.6 of this Agreement.

2.4 Unless otherwise agreed, the normal tour of duty for a Liaison Officer shall be two years.

2.5 As a general rule, a naval officer may serve as a Liaison officer to only one major military command of the Host Party at any point in time.

ARTICLE III
DUTIES AND ACTIVITIES

3.1 The Liaison Officer shall represent the Parent Party to the Host Party. The Liaison Officer shall not perform duties reserved by the laws or regulations of the Host Government to officers or employees of the Host Government, nor shall the Liaison Officer provide any labor or services to the Host Government or any of its agencies, including the Host Party.

3.2 The Liaison Officer shall be required to comply with all applicable Host Government policies, procedures, laws and regulations. The Host Party shall assign a Contact Officer to provide guidance to the Liaison Officer concerning policies, procedures, laws and regulations of the Host Party, and to arrange for activities consistent with such requirements and the purposes of this Agreement.

3.3 The Liaison Officer may request access to Host Party facilities by submitting a request to the Contact Officer. Access to Host Party facilities may be granted if such access promotes the purposes of this Agreement, is consistent with the terms of any applicable certification or approval issued by the Host Government, and is permitted under the applicable policies, procedures, laws and regulations of the Host Government. Approval of such requests shall be at the discretion of the Host Party. Any request for access that exceeds the terms of an applicable certification or approval shall be submitted through the International Visits Program (IVP). For the purposes of this agreement, the United States Navy's International Programs Office (IPO) will generate a detailed disclosure package that will govern Liaison Officer access to commands, facilities and classified materials. Mexican counterpart would realize the same procedure.

3.4 The Liaison Officer shall not be granted access to technical data or other information of the Host Party, whether or not classified, except as authorized by the Host Party, and only to the extent necessary to fulfill the Liaison Officer's functions hereunder.

3.5 All information to which the Liaison Officer is granted access while serving as a liaison to the Host Party shall be treated as information provided to the Parent Government, in confidence, and shall not be further released or disclosed by the Liaison Officer to any other person, firm, organization, or government without the prior written authorization of the Host Government. Disclosure of information to the Liaison Officer shall not be deemed to be a license or authorization to use such information for any purpose other than the purposes described in Article II.

3.6 The Liaison Officer shall not be permitted to participate in exercises, deployments, or civil-military actions, unless expressly authorized to do so by both the Host and Parent Parties.

3.7 The Parent Party shall not place or keep a Liaison Officer in duty assignments in which direct hostilities with forces of third states are likely to occur or have commenced, unless approved by the Parent Party and Host Party, in writing.

3.8 The Liaison Officer shall be required to comply with the dress regulations of the Parent Party but, if requested by the Host Party, shall also wear such identification necessary to identify the Liaison Officer's nationality, rank and status as a Liaison Officer. The order of dress for any occasion shall be that which most closely conforms to the order of dress for the United States Fleet Forces Command or the Mexican Navy counterpart.

3.9 Prior to the commencement of a Liaison Officer's tour, the Parent Party shall notify the Host Party of the specific Parent Party organization which will exercise operational control over the Liaison Officer and, if different, the Parent Party organization that will provide administrative support to the Liaison Officer and the Liaison Officer's dependents.

3.10 At the end of a Liaison Officer's tour, or as otherwise agreed by the Parties, the Parent Party may replace the Liaison Officer with another naval officer who meets the requirements of this Agreement.

ARTICLE IV
FINANCIAL ARRANGEMENTS

4.1 The Parent Party shall bear all costs and expenses of the Liaison Officer, including, but not limited to:

4.1.1 All pay and allowances of the Liaison Officer;

4.1.2 Travel by the Liaison Officer to and from the country of the Host Party, and all travel by the Liaison Officer's dependents;

4.1.3 All costs and expenses associated with the assignment or placement of the Liaison Officer and the Liaison Officer's dependents within the Host Party's country, including office space, clerical support, quarters, rations, medical and dental services, unless specifically stated otherwise in an applicable international agreement;

4.1.4 Compensation for loss of, or damage to, the personal property of the Liaison Officer, or the personal property of the Liaison Officer's dependents;

4.1.5 The movement of the household effects of the Liaison officer and the Liaison Officer's dependents;

4.1.6 Preparation and shipment of remains and funeral expenses associated with the death of the Liaison Officer or his dependent(s);

4.1.8 All expenses in connection with the return of a Liaison Officer whose assignment has ended or been terminated, along with his or her dependents.

4.2 The Host Party may provide such office facilities, equipment, supplies and services as may be necessary for the Liaison Officer to fulfill the purposes of this Agreement.

ARTICLE V
SECURITY

5.1 The Host Party shall establish the maximum substantive scope and classification levels within which the disclosure of any Classified Information or Controlled Unclassified Information to the Liaison Officer will be permitted. The Host Party shall inform the Parent Party of the level of security clearance required to permit the Liaison Officer access to such information. The Liaison Officer's access to such information and facilities shall be consistent with, and limited by the terms of his/her assignment, the provisions of this Article and any other agreement between the Parties or their governments concerning access to such information and facilities. Further, access shall at all times be limited to the minimum required to accomplish the purposes of this Agreement, and, at its discretion, the Host Party may prohibit the Liaison Officer's right of access to any Host Party facility or require that such access be supervised by Host Party personnel.

5.2 Each Party shall cause security assurances to be filed, through the Mexican Embassy in Washington, D.C., in the case of the Mexican personnel, and through the U.S. Embassy in Mexico City, Mexico in the case of United States personnel, stating the security clearances for the Liaison Officer being assigned by such Party. The security assurances shall be prepared and forwarded through prescribed channels in compliance with established Host Party procedures. For the United States, the prescribed channels shall be the International Visits Program (IVP), as defined in paragraph 1.6 of this Agreement.

5.3 The Parent Party shall ensure that each assigned Liaison officer is fully cognizant of, and complies with, applicable laws and regulations concerning the protection of proprietary information (such as patents, copyrights, know-how, and trade secrets), classified information and controlled unclassified information disclosed to the Liaison Officer. This obligation shall apply both during and after termination of an assignment as a Liaison Officer. Prior to taking up duties as a Liaison Officer, the Liaison Officer of Mexico shall be required to sign the certification at Annex A. Only naval officers who execute the certification shall be permitted to serve as Liaison Officers with the United States Fleet Forces Command.

5.4 The Parent Party shall ensure that the Liaison Officer, at all times, complies with the security laws, regulations and procedures of the Host Government. Any violation of security procedures by a Liaison Officer during his or her assignment shall be reported to the Parent Party for appropriate action. Upon request by the Host Party, the Parent Party shall remove any Liaison Officer who violates security laws, regulations, or procedures during his or her assignment.

5.5 There is currently no General Security of Military Information Agreement (GSOMIA) in force between Mexico and the U.S. Therefore, all Classified Information made available to the Liaison Officer shall be considered to be Classified Information furnished to the Parent Party, and shall be subject to all provisions and safeguards provided for under the Delegation of Disclosure Letter generated by the Navy's International Program's Office (IPO).

5.6 The Liaison Officer shall not take custody of Classified Information or Controlled Unclassified Information in tangible form (for example, documents or electronic files), except as expressly permitted by the terms of the Host Party certification of the Liaison Officer (and requested in writing by the Parent Government) for the following situations:

5.6.1 Couriers. The Liaison Officer may take custody of Classified Information to perform courier functions, when authorized by the Host Party certification for the Liaison Officer. The Classified Information shall be packaged and receipted for in compliance with Host Party requirements.

5.6.2 On-Site Storage. The Liaison Officer may be furnished a secure container for the temporary storage of Classified Information, consistent with the terms of the certification, provided the security responsibility and control of the container and its contents remains with the Host Party.

ARTICLE VI
TECHNICAL AND ADMINISTRATIVE MATTERS

6.1 The Host Party's certification or approval of a naval officer as a Liaison Officer shall not bestow diplomatic or other special privileges on that naval officer.

6.2 To the extent authorized by the laws and regulations of the Host Government, and in accordance with Article IV of this Agreement, the Host Party may provide such administrative support as is necessary for the Liaison Officer to fulfill the purposes of this Agreement, subject to reimbursement by the Parent Party.

6.3 Exemption from taxes, customs or import duties, or similar charges for the Liaison Officer or the Liaison Officer's dependents shall be governed by applicable laws and regulations or international agreement between the Host Government and the Parent Government.

6.4 If office space is provided to the Liaison Officer by the Host Party, the Host Party shall determine the normal working hours for the Liaison Officer.

6.5 The Parent Party shall ensure that the Host Party is informed as far in advance as possible of any absences of the Liaison Officer.

6.6 The Liaison Officer and his/her authorized family members shall be provided care in military medical and dental facilities to the extent permitted by applicable law, policy, and international agreement. Where a reciprocal agreement for health care exists between the Parties, the access entitlement of the Liaison Officer and his/her family members is specified. For those personnel covered by such an agreement, care is generally provided free of charge. All Liaison Officers and family members not covered by a reciprocal agreement may be offered health care, on a reimbursable basis, in military facilities. Where military facilities are not available, the Liaison Officer shall be responsible for all medical and dental costs incurred by himself/herself and his/her family. The Parent Party shall ensure that the Liaison Officer and his/her family members are physically fit prior to the Liaison Officer's tour of duty. The Parent Party shall be responsible for familiarizing itself with the medical and dental services available to the Liaison Officer and his/her family members, and the costs of, and the procedures for use of such services.

6.7 The Liaison Officer and his/her dependents may be accorded the use of military commissaries, exchanges, theaters and similar morale and welfare activities, in accordance with the laws, regulations, and policies of the Host Party.

6.8 To the extent permitted by the laws and regulations of the Host Government, and subject to reimbursement by the Parent Party, the Host Party may provide, if available, housing and messing facilities for the Liaison Officer and the Liaison Officer's dependents on the same basis and priority as for its own personnel of comparable rank and assignment. At locations where housing and messing facilities are not provided by the Host Party, the Host Party shall use reasonable efforts to assist the Parent Party to locate such facilities for the Liaison Officer and the Liaison Officer's dependents.

6.9 The Parent Party shall ensure that the Liaison Officer and the Liaison Officer's dependents have all documentation required by the Host Government for entry into, and exit from, the country of the Host Government at the time of such entry or exit. Unless exempted under an applicable international agreement between the Parties, Liaison Officers and their authorized dependents entering the United States shall be required to comply with United States Customs Regulations.

6.10 The Parent Party shall ensure that the Liaison Officer and those family members accompanying the Liaison Officer in the country of the Host Party shall obtain motor vehicle liability insurance coverage for their private motor vehicles, in accordance with applicable laws, regulations and policies of the Host Government, or the political subdivisions of the country of the Host Party in which the Liaison Officer and his/her family members are located.

ARTICLE VII
DISCIPLINE AND REMOVAL

7.1 Except as provided in Section 7.2, neither the Host Party nor the armed forces of the Host Government may take disciplinary action against a Liaison Officer who commits an offense under the military laws or regulations of the Host Party, nor shall the Host Party exercise disciplinary powers over the Liaison Officer's dependents. The Parent Party, however, shall take such administrative or disciplinary action against the Liaison Officer as may be appropriate under the circumstances, to ensure compliance with this Agreement, and the Parties shall cooperate in the investigation of any offenses under the laws or regulations of either Party.

7.2 The certification or approval of a Liaison Officer may be withdrawn, modified or curtailed at any time by the Host Party for any reason, including, but not limited to, the violation of the regulations or laws of the Host Party or the Host Government. In addition, at the request of the Host Party, the Parent Government shall remove the Liaison officer or a dependent of the Liaison officer from the territory of the Host Government. The Host Party shall provide an explanation for its removal request, but a disagreement between the Parties concerning the sufficiency of the Host Party's reasons shall not be grounds to delay the removal of the Liaison Officer.

7.3 A Liaison Officer shall not exercise any supervisory or disciplinary authority over military or civilian personnel of the Host Party.

ARTICLE VIII
SETTLEMENT OF CONTROVERSIES

Controversies arising under or relating to this Agreement shall be resolved only though consultations between the Parties and shall not be referred to an individual, national or international tribunal, or to any other forum for settlement.

ARTICLE IX
ENTRY INTO FORCE, AMENDMENT, DURATION AND TERMINATION

9.1 All obligations of the Parties under this Agreement shall be subject to national laws and the availability of appropriated funds for such purposes.

9.2 The Parent Party shall ensure that the Liaison Officer complies with all obligations and restrictions applicable to the Liaison Officer under this Agreement.

9.3 This Agreement may be amended by the mutual written agreement of the Parties.

9.4 This Agreement may be terminated at any time by written agreement of both Parties. In the event both Parties agree to terminate this Agreement, the Parties shall consult prior to the date of termination.

9.5 Either Party may terminate this Agreement upon one hundred and eighty (180) days' written notification to the other Party.

9.6 In the event of conflict between the terms of this Agreement and the terms of an applicable Letter of offer and Acceptance (LOA), the terms of the LOA shall control. Any Letters of Offer and Acceptance (LOAs) associated with or related to this Agreement shall be terminated in accordance with their terms.

9.7 The respective rights and responsibilities of the Parties under Article V (Security) shall continue, notwithstanding the termination or expiration of this Agreement.

9.8 No later than the effective date of expiration or termination of this Agreement, each Party shall remove its Liaison Officer(s) and such Liaison Officer's(s') dependents from the territory of the other Party and pay any money owed to the other Party under this Agreement. Any costs or expenses for which a Party is responsible pursuant to Article IV of this Agreement, but which were not billed in sufficient time to permit payment prior to termination or expiration of this Agreement, shall be paid promptly after such billing.

9.9 This Agreement shall supercede any and all prior agreements regarding Liaison officers entered into by the Parties or their organizations, units, or agencies.

9.10 This Agreement shall enter into force upon signature by both Parties. This Agreement shall remain in force for ten years, and may be extended by written agreement of the Parties.

9.11 This Agreement consists of nine (9) Articles and an Annex.

IN WITNESS WHEREOF, the undersigned, being duly authorized, have signed this Agreement.

1.4 Por "Gobierno anfitrión" se entiende el gobierno nacional de la Parte anfitriona.

1.5 Por "Parte anfitriona" se entiende la Parte ante la cual el Oficial de Enlace actúa como enlace con arreglo a una designación de la Parte matriz conforme al artículo III.

1.6 Por "Programa Internacional de Visitas" (International Visits Program, IVP) se entiende el programa establecido para tramitar las visitas y designaciones de representantes del exterior a las dependencias del Departamento de Defensa de los Estados Unidos y a las instalaciones de los contratistas del mismo Departamento. Tiene como fin velar por que se haya autorizado debidamente la divulgación a sus Gobiernos de la Información Clasificada y la Controlada no Clasificada que se revele a los nacionales del exterior; que el Gobierno extranjero que la solicite dé una garantía de seguridad con respecto a dichos nacionales del exterior y a la institución o empresa que los patrocine, en el caso de que la visita o designación tenga que ver con Información Clasificada; y que se tramiten las medidas administrativas (por ejemplo, la fecha, la hora y el lugar) necesarias para la visita o designación.

1.7 Por "Oficial de Enlace" se entiende un oficial naval de la Parte matriz que, una vez aprobado o certificado por la Parte o el Gobierno anfitrión, esté autorizado por la Parte matriz a actuar como su representante oficial en lo relativo a los programas, proyectos o acuerdos de interés para los Gobiernos de las Partes.

1.8 Por "Gobierno matriz" se entiende el gobierno nacional de la Parte matriz.

1.9 Por "Parte matriz" se entiende la Parte que designa a un Oficial de Enlace con arreglo al artículo III.

Artículo II
Alcance

2.1 Durante la vigencia del presente Acuerdo y con arreglo a lo que las Partes convengan, cada Parte podrá designar a militares de sus Fuerzas Armadas para que sirvan en calidad de Oficiales de Enlace ante la otra Parte, conforme a las condiciones del presente Acuerdo.

2.2 El establecimiento de cada puesto de Oficial de Enlace conforme al presente Acuerdo dependerá de la demostración de su necesidad y del beneficio mutuo que aporte a las Partes. Una vez establecido, cada puesto de Oficial de Enlace estará sometido a revisión periódica de una u otra Parte, para asegurarse de que sigue siendo necesario y de beneficio mutuo para las Partes. Las Partes convienen en que podrá suprimirse todo puesto de Oficial de Enlace que ya no sea necesario ni de beneficio mutuo para las Partes.

2.3 El comienzo de la comisión de servicio de un Oficial de Enlace estará sometido a todos los requisitos que imponga la Parte anfitriona o su Gobierno relativo a la certificación o aprobación oficial de los Oficiales de Enlace. Los servicios de los Oficiales de Enlace designados por la Parte matriz para actuar en ubicaciones de los Estados Unidos se solicitarán con arreglo al Programa Internacional de Visitas, según se define en el numeral 6, párrafo 1 del presente Acuerdo.

2.4 Salvo convenio en contrario, la comisión de servicio normal de un Oficial de Enlace será de dos años.

2.5 En cualquier momento y como regla general, un oficial naval podrá servir como Oficial de Enlace solamente ante un mando militar principal de la Parte anfitriona.

Artículo III
Funciones y actividades

3.1 El Oficial de Enlace representará a la Parte matriz ante la Parte anfitriona. El Oficial de Enlace no desempeñará funciones que el Gobierno anfitrión, por ley o reglamento, reserve a sus propios oficiales o empleados, ni hará trabajos ni prestará servicios para el Gobierno anfitrión ni para ninguna de sus dependencias, la Parte anfitriona inclusive.

3.2 Se exigirá que el Oficial de Enlace cumpla con todas las normas, los procedimientos, las leyes y los reglamentos pertinentes del Gobierno anfitrión. La Parte anfitriona designará a un Oficial de Contacto para que guíe al Oficial de Enlace en lo que respecta a las normas, los procedimientos, las leyes y los reglamentos de la Parte anfitriona, y para que tome las medidas necesarias para que las actividades que disponga sean compatibles con esos requisitos y con los fines del presente Acuerdo.

3.3 El Oficial de Enlace solicitará el acceso a las instalaciones de la Parte anfitriona por intermedio del Oficial de Contacto. Se concederá ese acceso si el mismo promueve los fines del presente Acuerdo, es compatible con las condiciones de cualquier certificación o aprobación pertinente expedida por el Gobierno anfitrión, y está autorizado conforme a las normas, los procedimientos, las leyes y los reglamentos pertinentes del Gobierno anfitrión. Estas solicitudes se aprobarán a criterio de la Parte anfitriona. Toda solicitud de acceso que rebase las condiciones de cualquier certificación o aprobación pertinente se presentará por intermedio del Programa Internacional de Visitas. A fines del presente Acuerdo, la Oficina de Programas Internacionales (International Programs Office, IPO) de la Marina de los Estados Unidos de América preparará unos documentos pormenorizados sobre la Divulgación de Información, los cuales regirán el acceso del Oficial de Enlace a los mandos, las instalaciones y el material clasificado. En su caso, la oficina homóloga mexicana llevará a cabo el mismo procedimiento.

3.4 El Oficial de Enlace no tendrá acceso a los datos técnicas o a otra información de la Parte anfitriona, estén clasificados o no, salvo por autorización de la Parte anfitriona y solamente en la medida en que se necesite para el cumplimiento de las funciones del Oficial de Enlace conforme al presente Acuerdo.

3.5 La información a la cual se conceda acceso al Oficial de Enlace mientras sirva como tal ante la Parte anfitriona se considerará información comunicada en confianza al Gobierno matriz; el Oficial de Enlace no la divulgará o revelará a cualquier otra persona, empresa, institución o gobierno sin la previa autorización por escrito del Gobierno anfitrión. La divulgación de información al Oficial de Enlace no se considerará como licencia o autorización para emplearla con fines que no sean los indicados en el artículo II.

3.6 No se permitirá la participación del Oficial de Enlace en ejercicios, despliegues o acciones de índole civil y militar, a menos que sea autorizado a ese efecto expresamente por la Parte anfitriona y por la matriz.

3.7 La Parte matriz no colocará ni retendrá a un Oficial de Enlace en servicios en los que sea probable que ocurran, o ya hayan comenzado, hostilidades con las fuerzas de terceros estados, a menos que lo aprueben por escrito la Parte matriz y la Parte anfitriona.

3.8 El Oficial de Enlace quedará obligado a cumplir con el reglamento sobre uniformes de la Parte matriz pero, previa solicitud de la Parte anfitriona, también portará las indicaciones necesarias para que se reconozcan su nacionalidad y rango, así como su condición de Oficial de Enlace. El nivel de servicio del uniforme será el que se ajuste más al nivel de servicio del Comando de las Fuerzas de la Flota de los Estados Unidos (United States Fleet Forces Command) o su homólogo mexicano, en la ocasión que sea.

3.9 Antes de que comience la comisión de servicio del Oficial de Enlace, la Parte matriz notificará a la Parte anfitriona la institución específica de la Parte matriz que ejercerá el control operativo del Oficial de Enlace y si ésta fuera distinta, la que le prestará servicios de secretaría, así como a sus personas a cargo.

3.10 Al finalizar la comisión de servicio de un Oficial de Enlace, o como de otra forma convengan las Partes, la Parte matriz podrá sustituir al Oficial de Enlace por otro oficial naval que cumpla con las condiciones del presente Acuerdo.

Artículo IV
Disposiciones financieras

4.1 La Parte matriz sufragará todos los costos y gastos del Oficial de Enlace, entre ellos:

4.1.1. Los salarios y las prestaciones.

4.1.2. Los viajes al país de la Parte anfitriona y de regreso, así como todos los viajes de las personas a cargo del Oficial de Enlace.

4.1.3 Los costos y gastos relativos a destinar o a situar al Oficial de Enlace y a sus personas a cargo en el país de la Parte anfitriona, lo que incluye lugar para oficinas, servicios de secretaría, alojamiento, víveres y servicios médicos y odontológicos, a menos que se especifique lo contrario en un acuerdo internacional pertinente.

4.1.4 La indemnización por la pérdida de los efectos personales del Oficial de Enlace o de sus personas a cargo, o los daños sufridos por dichos efectos.

4.1.5 El traslado de los efectos domésticos del Oficial de Enlace y de sus personas a cargo.

4.1.6 Los gastos por preparación y envío de los restos mortales y por sepelio, en caso de la defunción del Oficial de Enlace o alguna de sus personas a cargo.

4.1.7 La capacitación, estructurada o no, del Oficial de Enlace, aparte de las sesiones de orientación sobre los requisitos de la Parte anfitriona que le proporcione el Oficial de Contacto.

4.1.8 Los gastos relacionados con el regreso del Oficial de Enlace, por haber concluido su comisión de servicio o por haber sido retirado de la misma, junto con sus personas a cargo.

4.2 La Parte anfitriona podrá proveer al Oficial de Enlace las oficinas, el equipo, los suministros y los servicios que éste pueda necesitar para cumplir con los fines del presente Acuerdo.

Artículo V
Seguridad

5.1 La Parte anfitriona establecerá el alcance y los niveles de clasificación máximos efectivos de toda Información Clasificada o de la Información Controlada no Clasificada cuya divulgación al Oficial de Enlace se permita. La Parte anfitriona comunicará a la Parte matriz del nivel de la habilitación de seguridad que necesitará el Oficial de Enlace para tener acceso a esa información. El acceso del Oficial de Enlace a esa información e instalaciones será consecuente con los términos de su designación, las disposiciones del presente artículo y cualquier otro acuerdo entre las Partes o sus Gobiernos relativo al acceso a esa información e instalaciones, y estará limitado por los mismos. Además, en todo momento dicho acceso se limitará al mínimo necesario para lograr los fines del presente Acuerdo; a su criterio, la Parte anfitriona podrá prohibir el acceso del Oficial de Enlace a cualquiera de sus instalaciones o exigir que ese acceso lo supervise el personal de dicha Parte.

5.2 Cada Parte presentará compromisos de seguridad, por medio de la Embajada de México en Washington, D.C. para el personal mexicano, y por medio de la Embajada de los Estados Unidos en Ciudad de México para el personal estadounidense, en los que se especificarán las habilitaciones de seguridad del Oficial de Enlace designado por esa Parte. Los compromisos de seguridad se prepararán conforme a los procedimientos establecidos por la Parte anfitriona y se remitirán por la vía estipulada en los mismos. En el caso de los Estados Unidos, la vía estipulada será la del Programa Internacional de Visitas, según se define en el numeral 6, párrafo 1 del presente Acuerdo.

5.3 La Parte matriz se asegurará de que cada Oficial de Enlace designado conozca plenamente y cumpla las leyes y los reglamentos pertinentes relativos a la protección de la información patrimonial (por ejemplo, patentes, derechos de autor, conocimientos prácticos y secretos de fabricación), la información clasificada y la información controlada no clasificada que se le divulgue. Esta obligación se cumplirá tanto mientras dure su comisión de servicio en calidad de Oficial de Enlace como posteriormente. Antes de comenzar el desempeño de sus funciones, cada Oficial de Enlace de México suscribirá la certificación que figura en el Anexo A. Sólo los oficiales navales que formalicen esa certificación estarán autorizados a cumplir las funciones de Oficial de Enlace en el Comando de las Fuerzas de la Flota de los Estados Unidos.

5.4 La Parte matriz se asegurará de que el Oficial de Enlace cumpla en todo momento con las leyes, los reglamentos y los procedimientos de seguridad del Gobierno anfitrión. Cualquier contravención de los procedimientos de seguridad que cometa un Oficial de Enlace durante su comisión de servicio se comunicará a la Parte matriz para la toma de las medidas pertinentes. Previa solicitud de la Parte anfitriona, la Parte matriz retirará al Oficial de Enlace que contravenga las leyes, los reglamentos o los procedimientos de seguridad en el curso de su comisión de servicio.

5.5 En la actualidad no hay un Acuerdo vigente entre México y los Estados Unidos relativo a la Seguridad General de la Información Militar. Por lo tanto, toda la Información Clasificada que se dé al Oficial de Enlace se considerará como Información Clasificada provista a la Parte matriz, y como tal estará sujeta a las disposiciones y salvaguardas estipuladas en la carta sobre Delegación de Información (Delegation of Disclosure) redactada por la Oficina de Programas Internacionales (International Programs Office, IPO*)* de la Marina de los Estados Unidos.

5.6 El Oficial de Enlace no se encargará de la custodia en forma tangible de Información Clasificada o de Información Controlada no Clasificada (por ejemplo, de documentos o de archivos electrónicos), salvo cuando se le permita expresamente según las condiciones de la certificación de Oficial de Enlace otorgada por la Parte anfitriona y lo haya solicitado por escrito el Gobierno matriz, en las situaciones siguientes:

5.6.1 Correo. El Oficial de Enlace podrá encargarse de la custodia de Información Clasificada cuando desempeñe las funciones de correo y esté autorizado para ello por la certificación de Oficial de Enlace otorgada por la Parte anfitriona. La Información Clasificada se empaquetará y se acusará recibo de la misma según lo exija la Parte anfitriona.

5.6.2 Archivo in situ. Al Oficial de Enlace se le podrá proporciona un recipiente seguro para el archivo provisional de la Información Clasificada, de manera consecuente con las condiciones de la certificación, siempre y cuando la Parte anfitriona siga teniendo la responsabilidad por la seguridad del recipiente y de su contenido y el control de los mismos.

Artículo VI
Asuntos técnicos y administrativos

6.1 La certificación o aprobación que la Parte anfitriona conceda a un oficial naval para que actúe como Oficial de Enlace no le otorgará privilegios diplomáticos ni de otra índole especial.

6.2 En la medida en que lo autorice el ordenamiento interno del Gobierno anfitrión y conforme al artículo IV del presente Acuerdo, la Parte anfitriona podrá proporcionar los servicios administrativos que necesite el Oficial de Enlace para el desempeño de los fines del presente Acuerdo, sujeto al reembolso por la Parte matriz.

6.3 La exención de impuestos, derechos de aduanas, derechos de importación o gravámenes parecidos que se conceda al Oficial de Enlace o a sus personas a cargo se regirá por el ordenamiento interno pertinente o por un acuerdo internacional entre el Gobierno anfitrión y el Gobierno matriz.

6.4 Cuando la Parte anfitriona proporcione una oficina al Oficial de Enlace, dicha Parte fijará el horario de servicio normal del Oficial.

6.5 La Parte matriz velará por que la Parte anfitriona reciba la información sobre cualquier ausencia del Oficial de Enlace con la mayor antelación posible.

6.6 Al Oficial de Enlace y a sus personas a cargo autorizadas se les prestará asistencia en las instalaciones militares médicas y odontológicas, en la medida en que lo permitan las leyes, las normas y los acuerdos internacionales pertinentes. Cuando esté vigente entre las Partes un acuerdo recíproco de asistencia médica, el derecho de acceso del Oficial de Enlace y de sus familiares se especifica en el mismo. Al personal que abarquen dichos acuerdos, la asistencia suele prestarse gratuitamente. A los Oficiales de Enlace y sus familiares que no estén incluidos en un acuerdo recíproco podrá prestárseles asistencia médica reembolsable en las instalaciones militares. Cuando esas instalaciones no estén al alcance, el Oficial de Enlace sufragará todos los gastos médicos y odontológicos propios y de su familia. La Parte matriz se asegurará de que el Oficial de Enlace y sus familiares estén en buena salud antes de que comience la comisión de servicio del Oficial. La Parte matriz tendrá la responsabilidad de enterarse de los servicios médicos y odontológicos de que pueda disponer el Oficial de Enlace y sus familiares, así como de los costos de esos servicios y de los procedimientos por cumplir para utilizarlos.

6.7 Al Oficial de Enlace y a sus personas a cargo podrá concedérseles el uso de los economatos, tiendas y teatros militares, y participar en actividades estimulantes y halagüeñas, conforme a las leyes, los reglamentos y las normas de la Parte anfitriona.

6.8 En la medida en que lo permita el ordenamiento interno del Gobierno anfitrión, y sujeto al reembolso de la Parte matriz, la Parte anfitriona podrá proporcionar, cuando esté disponible, alojamiento y servicios de comedor al Oficial de Enlace y a sus personas a cargo, en las mismas condiciones y con igual prioridad que a su propio personal de rango y cometidos equiparables. En lugares donde la Parte anfitriona no proporcione alojamiento ni servicios de comedor, la misma tomará medidas razonables para ayudar a la Parte matriz a encontrarlos.

6.9 La Parte matriz se asegurará de que el Oficial de Enlace y sus personas a cargo porten toda la documentación que exija el Gobierno anfitrión para entrar y salir del país del Gobierno anfitrión, en el momento de la entrada y salida. A menos que hayan quedado exentos en virtud de algún acuerdo internacional entre las Partes, los Oficiales de Enlace y sus personas a cargo autorizadas que entren en los Estados Unidos tendrán la obligación de cumplir con el Reglamento Aduanero de los Estados Unidos.

6.10 La Parte matriz se asegurará de que el Oficial de Enlaces y los familiares que lo acompañen en el país de la Parte anfitriona contraten seguro de responsabilidad civil por sus vehículos automotores particulares, conforme a las leyes, los reglamentos y las normas del Gobierno anfitrión o de cualquier circunscripción política del mismo donde se encuentren el Oficial de Enlace y sus familiares.

Artículo VII
Disciplina y retirada

7.1 Salvo disposición en contrario del párrafo 2 de este artículo, ni la Parte anfitriona ni las fuerzas armadas del Gobierno anfitrión tomarán medidas disciplinarias contra un Oficial de Enlace que cometa alguna contravención según las leyes o los reglamentos militares de la Parte anfitriona, y la Parte anfitriona no ejercerá autoridad disciplinaria sobre las personas a cargo del Oficial de Enlace. La Parte matriz, sin embargo, tomará las medidas administrativas o disciplinarias contra el Oficial de Enlace que resulten adecuadas en las circunstancias para asegurar el cumplimiento del presente Acuerdo, y las Partes cooperarán en la investigación de cualquier contravención cometida según las leyes o los reglamentos de cualquiera de las Partes.

7.2 La Parte anfitriona podrá retirar, modificar o restringir la certificación o aprobación del Oficial de Enlace en cualquier momento y por cualquier razón, entre otras, por la contravención de los reglamentos o las leyes de la Parte anfitriona o del Gobierno anfitrión. Además, a solicitud de la Parte anfitriona, el Gobierno matriz retirará al Oficial de Enlace o a alguna de las personas a cargo de éste del territorio del Gobierno anfitrión. El Gobierno anfitrión justificará su solicitud de retirada pero el desacuerdo entre las Partes acerca de la suficiencia de la justificación que aduzca la Parte anfitriona no será motivo para demorar la retirada del Oficial de Enlace.

7.3 Los Oficiales de Enlace no ejercerán ninguna autoridad de supervisión ni disciplina sobre el personal militar o civil de la Parte anfitriona.

Artículo VIII
Arreglo de controversias

Las controversias que surjan del presente Acuerdo o se relacionen con el mismo se resolverán únicamente por medio de consultas entre las Partes, y no se recurrirá para arreglarlas a ninguna persona ni tribunal nacional o internacional ni a ningún otro foro.

Artículo IX
Entrada en vigor, enmienda, duración y rescisión

9.1 Las obligaciones de las Partes conforme al presente Acuerdo quedarán supeditadas a su ordenamiento jurídico y a la disponibilidad de fondos consignados para esos fines.

9.2 La Parte matriz se asegurará de que el Oficial de Enlace cumpla con todas las obligaciones y restricciones pertinentes conforme al presente Acuerdo.

9.3 El presente Acuerdo podrá enmendarse de mutuo acuerdo por escrito entre las Partes.

9.4 El presente Acuerdo podrá rescindirse en cualquier momento de mutuo acuerdo por escrito entre las dos Partes. Cuando las dos Partes convengan en rescindir el presente Acuerdo, se consultarán antes de la fecha de rescisión.

9.5 Cada Parte podrá rescindir el presente Acuerdo por medio de notificación por escrito a la otra Parte con 180 días de antelación.

9.6 En caso de incompatibilidad entre los términos del presente Acuerdo y los de una Carta pertinente de Oferta y Aceptación, prevalecerán estos últimos. Cualquier Carta de Oferta y Aceptación vinculada o relacionada con el presente Acuerdo será rescindida conforme a sus términos.

9.7 Los respectivos derechos y responsabilidades de las Partes conforme al artículo V (Seguridad) continuarán en vigor, aun cuando el presente Acuerdo expire o se rescinda.

9.8 No más tarde de la fecha en que surta efecto la expiración o rescisión del presente Acuerdo, cada Parte retirará a sus Oficiales de Enlace y las personas a cargo de éstos del territorio de la otra Parte y pagará a la otra Parte cualquier cantidad que le adeude conforme al presente Acuerdo. Los costos o gastos de los que sea responsable una de las Partes conforme al artículo IV del presente Acuerdo pero que no se hubieran facturado a tiempo para pagarse antes de la expiración o rescisión del Acuerdo, se pagarán sin demora después de la facturación.

9.9 El presente Acuerdo sustituirá a todo acuerdo anterior entre las Partes o en entre sus instituciones, servicios u organismos relativo a los Oficiales de Enlace.

9.10 El presente Acuerdo entrará en vigor al ser firmado por las dos Partes, permanecerá en vigor durante diez años, y podrá prorrogarse mediante acuerdo por escrito entre las Partes.

9.11 El presente Acuerdo consta de nueve artículos y un anexo.

LEASE TO THE GOVERNMENT OF THE UNITED STATES OF AMERICA BY THE GOVERNMENT OF ANTIGUA & BARBUDA

WHEREAS, in the Agreement between the Government of Antigua and the Government of the United States of America, dated December 14, 1977, regarding defence areas in Antigua (hereinafter referred to as "the Defence Areas Agreement"), the Government of Antigua and Barbuda undertook in Articles II and IV thereof to make available to the Government of the United States of America defence areas, rights of access, rights of way and easements for the purposes of that Agreement; and

WHEREAS, Article IV of the Defence Areas Agreement further provided that said defence areas, rights of access, rights of way and easements would be provided free of rent and all other charges except as expressly stated in leases concluded by appropriate United States military authorities and the Government of Antigua and Barbuda; and

WHEREAS, the Government of Antigua and Barbuda and the Government of the United States of America by an Agreement dated August 23, 2004, amended the Defence Areas Agreement by extending it through 31st December, 2008 (the Defence Areas Agreement together with the Agreement dated August 23, 2004, are collectively referred to in this Lease as "The Agreement as amended");

NOW THEREFORE, this lease is made by and between the Governments of Antigua and Barbuda acting by and through the Governor-General (hereinafter called "the Lessor"), and the Government of the United States of America acting by and through the Department of the Air Force (hereinafter called "the Lessee).

(1) Leased Property: The Lessor leases to the Lessee the defence areas, rights of access, rights of way, and easements shown in the map attached to the Agreement between the two Governments dated August 23, 2004. The United States Government has determined that it no longer requires the entire defence area reflected in the previous lease. As a result, the parcels covered by this lease, identified in the attached map, reflect a total reduction of 95.22 acres in the defense area over the previous lease. This description constitutes notice to the Government of Antigua and Barbuda as required by Article IV (3) of the 1977 Agreement Between the Government of the United States of America and the Government of Antigua and Barbuda Regarding United States Defence Areas and Facilities in Antigua and Barbuda.

(2) Term: The term of this lease shall begin on January 1, 2004, and continue through December 31, 2008.

(3) Use: Lesee's use of the property shall be for the purposes of the Agreement, as amended.

(4) Consideration: Beginning January 1, 2005 the Lessee shall pay to the Lessor an amount not to exceed one million two hundred and fifty thousand dollars (U.S. $1,250,000), payable in four equal installments of three hundred and twelve thousand, five hundred dollars (U.S. $312,500) on January 1, April 1, July 1, and October 1. Cheques shall be made payable to the Government of Antigua and Barbuda. For 2004, the first payment was made on or about 1 January 2004. The balance for 2004, nine hundred and thirty-seven thousand, five hundred dollars (U.S. $937,500), shall be paid upon signature by both Parties of the present lease.

(5) Operations and Maintenance Costs: Beginning 1 January 2005, the Lessee shall pay to the Lessor an amount not to exceed ninety-three thousand, nine hundred dollars (U.S. $93,900) annually as its contribution to the maintenance and operating costs of V. C. His Excellency,

Dr. Timothy Harris,

DIPLOMATIC NOTE

Criminal Court is intended to complement and not supplant national criminal jurisdiction,

Considering that while the Federation of Saint Kitts and Nevis is not a party to the Rome Statute, the Federation still holds the principles and aims of the International Criminal Court in the highest regard,

Considering that the Government of the United States of America remains committed to its legal obligations arising from the 1907 Hague Conventions, the 1949 Geneva Conventions, the 1948 Genocide Convention, and the 1984 Torture Convention,

Considering that the Government of the United States of America has expressed its determination to investigate and prosecute where appropriate acts within the jurisdiction of the International Criminal Court alleged to have been committed by its officials, employees, military personnel and nationals,

Bearing in mind Article 98 of the Rome Statute,

I have the honour to propose the following agreement:

1. For purposes of this Agreement, "persons" are current or former Government officials or military personnel of one Party, nationals of one Party, or such persons who are so deeply connected to the internal affairs of one Party that the surrender of such persons might present a clear risk to the national security of that Party.

2. Persons of one Party present in the territory of the other Party shall, not without the express consent of the first Party,

(a) be surrendered or transferred by any means to the International

Criminal Court for any purpose, or

(b) be surrendered or transferred by any means to any other entity or third country, or expelled to a third country, for the purpose of surrender to or transfer to the International Criminal Court.

3. When the Government of Saint Kitts and Nevis extradites, surrenders, or otherwise transfers a person of the United States of America to a third country, the Government of Saint Kitts and Nevis will not agree to the surrender or transfer of that person to the International Criminal Court by the third country, without the express consent of the Government of the United States of America.

4. When the Government of the United States of America extradites, surrenders, or otherwise transfers a person of the Federation of Saint Kitts and Nevis to a third country, the Government of the United States of America will not agree to the surrender or transfer of that person to the International Criminal Court by the third country, without the express consent of the Government of Saint Kitts and Nevis.

5. Either Party may request consultation regarding the investigation or prosecution of cases of special interest.

6. This Agreement will remain in force until one year after the date on which one Party notifies the other of its intent to terminate this Agreement. The provisions of this Agreement shall continue to apply with respect to any act occurring, or any allegation arising, before the effective date of termination.

If the proposal set forth herein is acceptable to the Government of the United States of America, this note and Your Excellency's affirmative Note in reply shall constitute an agreement between our two Governments which shall enter into force on the date of Your Note."

I have the honor to inform Your Excellency that the proposed text in Your Note is acceptable to the Government of the United States of America, assuring Your Excellence that Your Note and this Note shall constitute an agreement between our two Governments which shall enter into force on this date.

Current Program Context:

HIV/AIDS has a qualitatively different impact than a traditional health problem such as malaria. It rips across social structures, targeting young people, particularly girls. By cutting deeply into all sectors of society, AIDS undermines vital economic growth, reducing GDP in the region by perhaps a third over the next twenty years. Moreover, by putting huge additional demands on already weak public services it is setting a potential conflict over inadequate resources. As noted in our Five Year Strategy, the USG team will capitalize on the strongly expressed concern of the President of Kenya and help his government put in place a strong and compassionate response to HIV and AIDS across all sectors and at every level of society.\n\nFor the past 20 years, USG agencies have made concerted efforts to raise awareness and understanding of the social and economic impact of the HIV epidemic on human development in Kenya. USG agencies in Kenya work closely with the Ministry of Health and other government bodies to complement and strengthen national programs. We have helped to strengthen political and popular support for a national response to the HIV/AIDS epidemic. USG funds were used to support the Ministry of Health develop various policy documents and guidelines in areas such as home-based care and preventing mother-to-child HIV transmission. We have assisted the Ministry of Education develop its own AIDS policy, linked to the national policy. We have supported cost sharing by people using public sector health facilities, to a point where these funds currently form the mainstay of most hospitals' operations and maintenance budget. The USG has provided support to ensure the collection of timely data and their utilization. For example, we assisted with the publication of several editions of the AIDS in Kenya booklet that has serves as an advocacy tool for policy makers. USG agencies have sponsored Kenyan participants in courses, study tours, and meetings to increase their understanding and enhance their involvement in HIV/AIDS work.\n\nOur Five Year Strategy states that donor harmonization is a key component in the struggle to control HIV/AIDS. In the area of policy analysis and systems strengthening we work closely with other donors. Several donors jointly support the National AIDS Control Council (NACC), assisting it in developing its strategy, participating and funding its Joint AIDS Program Reviews, and assisting in developing the capacity of its staff and its associated organizations. For example, we have worked with the World Bank (whose Multi-country AIDS Program provides funding support to NACC) on HIV/AIDS policy development and with the UK's Department for International Development on Kenya's National Health Strategic Plan. \n

Activity Narrative:

The activity by American Federation of Teachers – Educational Foundation (AFT-EF) and Kenya National Union of Teachers (KNUT) will result in 1) comprehensive policies and strategies in the education sector on HIV/AIDS developed and disseminated, 2) stigma and discrimination reduced. The activity will strengthen inter-organizational linkages with the Ministry of Education Science and Technology (MoEST), Teachers Service Commission (TSC), National AIDS Control Council (NACC), UNICEF, USAID and NGOs to coordinate the teachers AIDS programs. In addition AFT-EF will inform and provide access to the MoEST HIV/AIDS policy to 476 schools and provide policy education to 6,200 teachers.

On a national level, AFT-EF and KNUT will link with the Network of Teachers Living Positively to address stigma and discrimination against HIV-positive persons. The program promotes and supports teacher-driven HIV/AIDS school interventions, including anti-stigma and orphan programs. They will form a network of services with the Center for British Teachers (CfBT) to create a strong, sensitive and well-informed force of educators in 5 districts (see CfBT entry). Both organizations, in collaboration with TSC and MOEST, will address the issue of teacher-student relationships and gender dominance. The elected KNUT national president, secretary general and treasurer serve on the program management team, and KNUT's district secretaries participate in district-level program implementation. MOEST, TSC and NACC are also represented on the national advisory/coordinating committee. An additional 5 KNUT district offices will launch campaigns to disseminate and educate 22,000 members on the HIV/AIDS policy for the education sector recently developed with the Mobile Task Team (see MTT entry). Five districts will have trained KNUT executive leaders, HIV/AIDS coordinators, master trainers, peer educators, sensitized head teachers, and District Education Officers to implement school-workplace peer-education, counseling and referral programs.

The 1.3 million-member American Federation of Teachers – Educational Foundation (AFT-EF) has a long and distinguished history working with teacher organizations in Africa, including the Kenya National Union of Teachers (KNUT) with whom it has worked since 1995. The AFT has two decades of experience managing workplace HIV/AIDS prevention programs for teachers in American schools and has been a consultant to CDC in developing a US business and labor workplace education project. Since 2001 it has collaborated with teacher organizations in South Africa, Zimbabwe, Kenya and Swaziland in developing school-work place HIV/AIDS peer-education programs. KNUT is a Kenyan partner and a highly respected labor organization which has earned a distinguished reputation as a professional activist organization among its members, the Government of Kenya and within the international labor community. With a presence and representation in every public school and tertiary institution in Kenya, offices in every district and representation on major national commissions, it has a network unparalleled in its ability to reach and mobilize teachers at school level and to give voice to their concerns in negotiations with government and within education policy forums.

Activity Narrative:

This activity will result in improved quality assurance in laboratory services, through development of a proficiency testing program, validation of results and support supervision in collaboration between the Kenya Medical Research Institute (KEMRI) and the National Public Health Laboratory Services (NPHLS). KEMRI serves as a national reference laboratory and has been the site of testing and introduction of many new laboratory technologies in Kenya. Some of these functions will be transferred to the National Public Health Laboratory Services with the technical support and guidance of CDC/KEMRI lab staff. This includes the evaluation of rapid test kits, the introduction of dried blood spots for HIV testing (used in the KDHS and now in sentinel surveillance), and now new technologies for monitoring patients on ART. Future directions will include the testing of stored samples for estimating rates of recent infection (BED assays for HIV incidence), and measuring viral resistance.

KEMRI will also provide training and technical assistance to the National Public Health Lab Services staff and partner laboratories at provincial and district level in the management of HIV/AIDS related lab services. It will support ART sites with LIFA (Lab Information For Action) at the point of service. This will result in improved laboratory infrastructure and human resource capacity and improved quality of diagnostic laboratory services.

As the primary Government of Kenya biomedical research institute, KEMRI is the home of CDC offices and laboratories and has been a center of excellence for over 25 years, assessing laboratory technologies and conducting research in collaboration with HHS/CDC, JICA and other partners. KEMRI has a highly trained laboratory team who work closely with CDC professional staff in operating the laboratories. The KEMRI cooperative agreement will support these technical staff to maintain their national leadership in lab services and training, will support the operation of the CDC/KEMRI lab, including travel and training costs and procurement of reagents, test kits and equipment.

Activity Narrative:

This activity by USAID's new partner the Commission for Human Rights and Justice (CHRJ) will result in 1) stigma and discrimination around HIV/AIDS reduced and 2) Legislation in place to protect the rights of HIV/AIDS infected and affected persons/families. The activity will reduce stigmatization and discrimination against people living with HIV/AIDS via the development of comprehensive national policy and laws through mobilizing networks of NGOs and stakeholders in all the 8 provinces in the country to advocate for development of policies and laws to protect people living with HIV/AIDS from discrimination in both government and private sectors and reach 9,000 people with pamphlets on stigma issues.

The Commission for Human Rights and Justice will attain its objectives by: - Using the established Networks of NGOs/Stakeholders at provincial level to draft such policies and laws for presentation to the relevant Govt. departments (including the National Assembly) for consideration and adoption thereof. Towards this end a comprehensive draft National policy/guideline aimed at preventing discrimination against people living with HIV/AIDS will be developed; Ensuring that proposed policies guidelines and/or laws contain provisions on sanctions so that people who are discriminating in any way or in any context against someone living with HIV/AIDS, would do so, knowing that there will be repercussions; Working closely with key government departments such as the National Assembly; the Ministries of Labor, Justice and Constitutional Affairs, Education, Science and Technology; the office of the Attorney General; the Judiciary and the police department and various civil society groups such as the National Council of Churches of Kenya, representatives from the Supreme Council of Kenyan Muslims (SUPKEM), and People Living with HIV/AIDS (PLWHAs), Trade Unions, Workers' Unions, and the National AIDS Control Council on the establishment of anti-discrimination policies and laws as well as a Register to record discrimination. Such Register will provide avenues where people who have been discriminated against, or who have first hand knowledge of such can report these matters. The said Register will be made available in all Government departments as well as in private sector organizations. Towards this end a comprehensive draft National Register to record discrimination will be developed; Producing 9,000 advocacy and lobby pamphlets; Producing over 3000 copies of the developed comprehensive national policy/guidelines and laws to facilitate lobbying and/or enactment; and, Producing over 3000 copies of a National register to record discrimination in both public and private sectors to facilitate lobbying for adoption.

The CHRJ has three years experience in advocacy for legal and human rights of all Kenyans including those living with HIV/AIDS. In particular, the organization has been involved in legal/human rights awareness as well as HIV/AIDS awareness among communities practicing female genital mutilation (FGM) in Kenya working to minimize this gender-based assault on female sexuality.

Mechanism/Prime Partner: / University of Kwazulu-Natal, HEARD Mobile Task Team

Planned Funds:

Activity Narrative:

This activity by the Mobile Task Team on the impact of HIV/AIDS on education (MTT) will result in comprehensive policies and strategies developed and disseminated in the public sector. This activity will mitigate the consequences of HIV/AIDS and strengthen systems via developing sector specific HIV/AIDS policies and prioritized implementation plans with at least two other ministries of the Government of Kenya.

MTT proposes to replicate the process undertaken by Ministry of Education, Science and Technology (MoEST) with at least two ministries from the Public Service for example Health or Social Services and any other key ministries, perhaps including Planning and Finance, to develop sector specific HIV/AIDS policies and prioritized implementation plans, within the context of the Kenyan government's HIV/AIDS priorities. These sectoral policies may then be aggregated to inform a review and update of the Kenyan National HIV/AIDS Policy Framework. The success of the MoEST policy development process and current roll-out of decentralized implementation planning confirms this can be achieved and provides a national and provincial model for replication. Specifically, in the twelve-months commencing April 2005, the MTT proposes to facilitate the development of sectoral policy at the national level in the Public Service, the Ministry of Health (MoH) and the Ministry of Social Services (MoSS). This process will involve preliminary and planning meetings (three in total; one for each of the sectors), three major policy development workshops (one for each of the three sectors) to produce governing principles and a draft sectoral policy in each case, and concluding, consolidation and future planning meetings (three in total; one for each of the sectors). Thus, by the end of the 2005 period, the process will generate 3 complementary draft sectoral policies, including governing principles and planning guidelines for further consultation, endorsement and ratification. In the following twelve-month period (2006), these draft policies will be subjected to stake-holder consultation and comment, final draft, Kenyan government ratification and publication, prior to the inclusive development of national and decentralized implementation plans and monitoring frameworks. Within this second period (2006) planning should also commence on the development of any other sector policies and plans still outstanding, and the holding of a national multi-sectoral workshop to integrate this cluster of sectoral policies into a revised Kenyan National HIV/AIDS Policy.

The Mobile Task Team of the University of Kwazulu-Natal works and trains in 19 African countries, including Kenya, in the development of HIV/AIDS strategic planning, policy development, implementation planning, Monitoring and Evaluation, Information Systems and training. The most recent example of the Team's work is the facilitation of the Kenyan MoEST HIV/AIDS education sector policy and implementation planning process.

Activity Narrative: This activity by the National Council for Population and Development (NCPD) will result in comprehensive policies and strategies on HIV/AIDS developed and disseminated in the public sector. The activity will develop policies and implementation plans addressing the integration of HIV/AIDS and Reproductive Health into other health and non-health interventions by working in 8 districts and training approximately 240 individuals.

NCPD intends to attain its objectives by: Developing a plan of action that integrates the objectives of the existing youth policy and HIV/AIDS programs into youth activities and services; Organizing and conducting 10 Workshops per district for various stakeholders depending on their needs, age and background. Organizing and facilitating 8 District Workshops to sensitize district leaders on various policies and lobby them to be at the lead in spreading messages on behavior change; Working in collaboration with National AIDS Control Council (NACC), Non-governmental organizations (NGOs), private sector, Faith Based Organizations (FBOs) and other government ministries who are members of District Population and Family Planning Committees to implement components of existing District Strategic Plans; Linking the NCPD officer, at the District level, with AIDS constituency committees within the district; and, highlighting existing policies, policy gaps and guidelines gaps. Conducting an assessment on perception of people on various policies and messages as well as their impact on behavior change.

The National Council of Population and Development has extensive experience working on multi-sectoral issues both at district and national levels. It has experience in impact assessment and tracking the implementation of programs through the Kenya Service Provision Assessment (KSPA) of 1999, Kenya Demographic and Health Survey (KDHS) of 1993 and 1998. The organization has also provided leadership to stakeholders involved in further analysis of KSPA and KDHS which was used to inform policy and promote the use of information among policy makers and managers. NCPD collaborates with some of USAID's sub-contracts for example POLICY and MACRO/ORC currently working on the 2004 KSPA. The organization has also worked with UNFPA assisting in the implementation and coordination of their 1st to 5th country programs including the current 6th country program.

POLICY works to help build a supportive policy environment for family planning and reproductive health programs by encouraging policies and plans that promote and sustain access to quality HIV/AIDS, Family Planning (FP) and Reproductive Health (RH) information and services. Since 1995 POLICY/Kenya has taken the lead in promoting development and dissemination of HIV/AIDS policies and guidelines and worked towards the "breaking of silence" around HIV/AIDS in Kenya leading to the formation, in November 1999, of the National AIDS Control Council (NACC).

POLICY has also assisted in the establishment of a National Network for Empowerment of People Living with HIV/AIDS (NEPHAK) and also in building the capacity of AIDS Control Units (ACUs) located in the different ministries of the government of Kenya.

Activity Narrative:

USAID's POLICY project implemented by the Futures Group International will continue its activities resulting in 1) legislation in place to protect the rights of HIV/AIDS infected and affected persons and 2) improved capacity to implement and monitor HIV/AIDS programs by networks, and local non-governmental and community based organizations. The activity will provide advocacy for Orphans and Vulnerable Children (OVC) and enact legislation to protect their rights, strengthen the capacity of four network organizations to undertake the Monitoring and Evaluation necessary to both operate their expanded programs effectively and to report to the USG on Key indicators. In addition POLICY will describe the extent and composition of stigma and discrimination and indicators to measure the impact of programs designed to address it.

POLICY will achieve its objectives by:
- Developing an OVC Policy and plan. Provide technical assistance to the Orphans and Vulnerable Children (OVC) task Force to finalize the OVC policy, to enact OVC legislation and, support policy dialogue around the passage of the legislation in parliament. POLICY will also spearhead the development of a costed implementation plan to address the critical OVC policy needs focusing on inheritance and succession, bereavement, child-headed households, access to education and, protective services. Produce, review or update information to inform planning, policies and programs and for use in OVC advocacy, policy analysis, and program development and, generate advocacy materials to be used in the campaigns against HIV/AIDS stigma and discrimination targeting OVCs. The sharing of technical information and dissemination of best practices will also be undertaken to assist communities in coping with increasing numbers of OVC and Most Vulnerable Children;
-Strengthening the institutional capacity of organizations working on OVC. Build the institutional capacities of GOK and at least five other NGOs, Faith Based Organisations (FBOs) and selected Community Based Organizations (CBOs) to formulate strategies that enhance orphans' access to the basic needs of children as stipulated in the human rights charter. Training in OVC policy development, advocacy and, management and, fundraising initiatives will also be undertaken. The work with NGOs, FBOs and CBOs in the first year will result in support for 500 OVC;
-Community views of HIV: POLICY will work to transform community views of HIV by facilitating community forums/hearings in at least 12 communities to raise awareness about HIV and the adverse effects of OVC stigma and discrimination and, strengthen the networking of organizations working on OVC issues at the community level to undertake anti-stigma campaigns leading to improved services for 1200 OVC;
-Strengthening networks: Work with 4 networks to strengthen their ability to collect and use strategic information to improve their services and to report to the USG on the performance of USG-funded activities. We propose to work with the Network of People Living with HIV/AIDS in Kenya (NEPHAK), the National Council of Muslims in Kenya (NCMK), the Kenya Network of Religious Leaders Affected by HIV/AIDS (KENERELA) and Seventh Day Adventist Church (SDA). These organizations represent key partners for the President's Emergency Plan in implementing its vision of strong networks for a sustained response. We propose to undertake the following activities with each organization: User satisfaction survey: Assist partner organizations to carry out user satisfaction surveys among their member populations to ascertain how well the expanded surveys are meeting their needs and what problems, if any, there are; Develop M&E systems: Assist partner organizations to develop simple M&E systems that will allow them to record their activities and those of their member organizations and to develop and implement indicators that will assist them to measure their effectiveness. These indicators will also feed into the national M&E framework and support the President's Emergency Plan reporting; Assist partner organizations to understand the information available to them (surveillance; number of people infected by age, sex and location; national AIDS strategies; Global Fund activities; President's Emergency Plan vision and strategy), re-package and disseminate that information to their members, and use that information to support policy dialogue, advocacy and program planning; Stigma and discrimination: Assist partner organizations to understand, adapt and apply POLICY stigma and discrimination indicators already developed in both South Africa and Mexico, collect information on these indicators, and use this information to develop plans to address the most salient problems.

The POLICY II project is a worldwide five-year contract whose purpose is to help build a supportive policy environment for family planning and reproductive health programs by encouraging policies and plans that promote and sustain access to quality family planning and related health information and services. POLICY Kenya is part of this global cost plus award fee contract and is funded by USAID in Kenya. POLICY works to help build a supportive policy environment for family planning and reproductive health programs by encouraging policies and plans that promote and sustain access to quality HIV/AIDS, Family Planning (FP) and Reproductive Health (RH) information and services. The POLICY project has extensive experience working on stigma and discrimination and CGO/FBO strengthening. POLICY staff are members of the USAID working group on Stigma and Discrimination and have recently completed two studies in South Africa and Mexico to define the components of stigma and discrimination and develop indicators to measure them. In CBO/FBO and network strengthening POLICY has worked for many years in Kenya and elsewhere to enhance capabilities in advocacy, planning, research and community outreach.

Mechanism/Prime Partner: / Community Housing Foundation

Planned Funds:

Activity Narrative:

The Community Housing Foundation (CHF) will support at least two local organizations to enable them to conduct activities relating to advocacy and development of appropriate policies. One of these groups, the Movement of Men against AIDS in Kenya (MMAAK) is a Kenyan NGO operating in the country for the last 4 years. The organization seeks to include men in all levels of HIV/AIDS activities. The organization will support 300 HIV-positive men in 5 extensions of MMAAK trained in advocacy, policy issues, and stigma reduction. The organization will ensure participation of HIV-positive men in prevention, and will sensitize 500 men in religious institutions on the importance of involvement of men in HIV/AIDS mitigation interventions.

Another group to be supported by CHF is the Kenya Episcopal Conference - Catholic Secretariat (KEC-CS), which is responsible for coordinating and facilitating the programs of the Catholic Church at a national level through its various commissions. The KEC-CS is proposed to receive funding for AB/Y activities in the over 5000 primary schools operated by the Catholic Church in Kenya. The funds requested in this area will assist the KEC-CS to develop a clear policy on how to effectively respond to the epidemic, maximize services, lobby the government and advocate for the rights of the infected and affected especially the poor. The organization will also develop clear policies on how to deal with its own workforce when affected or infected with HIV/AIDS including HIV prevention education in church sponsored schools and among youth. KEC-CS proposes to hold consultations throughout the church's hierarchical structure and technical experts, to prepare a comprehensive policy document on the role, duties and responsibilities of the Catholic Church in Kenya and its agents in regard to HIV/AIDS. Based on this, KEC-CS will then conduct sensitization workshops for over 30 bishops, 600 priests, and 1,500 religious brothers and sisters on issues relating to stigma, advocacy, and the application of these policies.

CHF was awarded a cooperative agreement with CDC in late FY04. CHF has over 50 years of experience in building the capacity of local and indigenous organizations in numerous countries, and in providing sub-grants to local organizations. Under the terms of the cooperative agreement, CHF will first build the capacity of a number of local FBOs and CBOs specified in our FY04 COP, and then take on new partners. Under this COP, we propose to have CHF support the Kenya Episcopal Conference and the MMAAK as both of these groups submitted good proposals when the USG Kenya team recently solicited "concept papers" from local groups. Both the KEC and MMAAK will also be doing activities in other sectors under this COP: KEC with AB/Y activities in Catholic schools, and MMAAK with involving HIV-positive men as AIDS educators. CHF will also foster networking among these and other sub-grantees so they can share lessons learned about local implementation of their activities. CHF intends to assist these local groups in grant-writing skills so that in the future, they can apply for PEPFAR and other funds directly. If appropriate, CHF may also assist other sub-grantees with activities related to the reduction of stigma and discrimination and/or development of appropriate policies regarding HIV. These activities will contribute to the result of comprehensive policies in networks and religious bodies developed and disseminated.

The activities will strengthen journalists and talk-show hosts on accurate reporting and presentation on HIV/AIDS policy issues resulting in 1.5 to 3 million Kenyans reached with accurate information.

Internews expects to meet its objectives by training up to 20 experienced radio journalists previously trained on technical aspects of HIV/AIDS coverage for in-depth coverage of policy considerations, especially with regard to scaling up of treatment.

USAID's "Local Voices" project implemented by Internews Network began in September 2002. It has the overall goal to create a more supportive social environment for preventing and mitigating the impacts of HIV/AIDS, through an enlightened and committed local broadcast community in Kenya. Internews has extensive experience working with the media in Kenya including organizing training on feature HIV/AIDS radio reporting; maintaining a Media Resource Center; organizing workshops to discuss various topics for example the recently held workshop (in collaboration with USAID and the US Embassy) for radio station owners, station managers, editors and senior producer that provided a discussion forum for decision makers to talk about the burning issues around HIV/AIDS coverage including the touchy issue of sponsorship of HIV/AIDS programs on their radio station.

USAID's IMPACT project implemented by Family Health International (FHI) will continue working with its sub-partner Kenya AIDS NGO Consortium (KANCO) and result in 1) Stigma and discrimination around HIV/AIDS reduced and 2) Improved capacity to implement and monitor HIV/AIDS programs by local non-governmental and community based organizations. The activities will aim to minimize stigma and discrimination through: providing information, education and communication (IEC) on HIV/AIDS, prevention, care, treatment and support via five resource centers; and building capacity in 50 Non-Governmental Organizations (NGOs) and Community Based Organizations (CBOs) by training 100 individuals from these organizations.

KANCO will continue its resource centers in Kakamega, Nakuru and Mombasa, and start up 2 additional centers to serve as technical resources for Non-governmental Organizations (NGOs), Community Based Organizations (CBOs), Faith Based Organizations (FBOs), government ministries, People Living with HIV/AIDS (PLWHA), and the general population. KANCO will continue capacity development and technical assistance to 10 NGO/CBOs per province (Western, Rift Valley, Mombasa, Nairobi, and Eastern) and upgrade their expertise so that those that have not received substantial HIV/AIDS funding in the past are able to accept funds and use them effectively.

Family Health International is a US based PVO implementing HIV/AIDS programs in Kenya. FHI provides technical assistance and funding to local organizations to implement HIV/AIDS programs at different levels. FHI and its partners consistently plan strategies and design activities in full collaboration with relevant government of Kenya entities, with significant participation from NGOs, CBOs, PLWA organizations, and FBOs in the areas of coverage. FHI will build the capacity of a new sub-partner the Supreme Council of Kenya Muslims (SUPKEM) in order to strengthen the Muslim response to HIV/AIDS by: developing an operational policy fully owned by the entire community that will unify, strengthen and coordinate Muslim community response; strengthening the acceptance of the policy by sourcing from the Qur'an, sunna and harmonizing with the national policy; and, developing approaches, communication strategies and educational materials that will address the specific Muslim concerns. The program will train 400 participants on the policy. Dissemination of the policy will be through the development of posters, radio program (Iqra), brochures, fliers, and 1000 copies of the policy will be distributed nationwide. January 31, 2005

Excellency:

I have the honor to refer to Your Excellency's note of January 31, 2005, which reads as follows:

"Excellency:

I have the honour to refer to recent discussions between representatives of the Government of Saint Kitts and Nevis and the Government of United States of America regarding the surrender of persons to the International Criminal Court.

Reaffirming the importance of bringing to justice those who commit genocide, crimes against humanity and war crimes,

Recalling that the Rome Statute of the International Criminal Court done at Rome on July 17, 1998 by the United Nations Diplomatic Conference of Plenipotentiaries on the Establishment of an International

His Excellency,

Dr. Timothy Harris,

Foreign Minister of Saint Kitts and Nevis.

DIPLOMATIC NOTE

Criminal Court is intended to complement and not supplant national criminal jurisdiction,

Considering that while the Federation of Saint Kitts and Nevis is not a party to the Rome Statute, the Federation still holds the principles and aims of the International Criminal Court in the highest regard,

Considering that the Government of the United States of America remains committed to its legal obligations arising from the 1907 Hague Conventions, the 1949 Geneva Conventions, the 1948 Genocide Convention, and the 1984 Torture Convention,

Considering that the Government of the United States of America has expressed its determination to investigate and prosecute where appropriate acts within the jurisdiction of the International Criminal Court alleged to have been committed by its officials, employees, military personnel and nationals,

Confirming that nothing in this exchange of notes provides impunity with regard to genocide, crimes against humanity and war crimes,

Bearing in mind Article 98 of the Rome Statute,

I have the honour to propose the following agreement:

1. For purposes of this Agreement, "persons" are current or former Government officials or military personnel of one Party, nationals of one Party, or such persons who are so deeply connected to the internal affairs of one Party that the surrender of such persons might present a clear risk to the national security of that Party.

2. Persons of one Party present in the territory of the other Party shall, not without the express consent of the first Party,

(a) be surrendered or transferred by any means to the International

Criminal Court for any purpose, or

(b) be surrendered or transferred by any means to any other entity or third country, or expelled to a third country, for the purpose of surrender to or transfer to the International Criminal Court.

3. When the Government of Saint Kitts and Nevis extradites, surrenders, or otherwise transfers a person of the United States of America to a third country, the Government of Saint Kitts and Nevis will not agree to the surrender or transfer of that person to the International Criminal Court by the third country, without the express consent of the Government of the United States of America.

4. When the Government of the United States of America extradites, surrenders, or otherwise transfers a person of the Federation of Saint Kitts and Nevis to a third country, the Government of the United States of America will not agree to the surrender or transfer of that person to the International Criminal Court by the third country, without the express consent of the Government of Saint Kitts and Nevis.

5. Either Party may request consultation regarding the investigation or prosecution of cases of special interest.

6. This Agreement will remain in force until one year after the date on which one Party notifies the other of its intent to terminate this Agreement. The provisions of this Agreement shall continue to apply with respect to any act occurring, or any allegation arising, before the effective date of termination.

If the proposal set forth herein is acceptable to the Government of the United States of America, this note and Your Excellency's affirmative Note in reply shall constitute an agreement between our two Governments which shall enter into force on the date of Your Note."

I have the honor to inform Your Excellency that the proposed text in Your Note is acceptable to the Government of the United States of America, assuring Your Excellence that Your Note and this Note shall constitute an agreement between our two Governments which shall enter into force on this date.

For the Secretary of State:

Reaffirming the importance of bringing to justice those who commit genocide, crimes against humanity and war crimes,

Recalling that the Rome Statute of the International Criminal Court done at Rome on July 17, 1998 by the United Nations Diplomatic Conference of Plenipotentiaries on the Establishment of an International Criminal Court is intended to complement and not supplant national criminal jurisdiction,

Considering that while the Federation of Saint Kitts and Nevis is not a party to the Rome Statute, the Federation still holds the principles and aims of the International Criminal Court in the highest regard,

Considering that the Government of the United States of America remains committed to its legal obligations arising from the 1907 Hague

Her Excellency,

Condoleezza Rice,

Secretary of State.

Conventions, the 1949 Geneva Conventions, the 1948 Genocide Convention, and the 1984 Torture Convention,

Considering that the Government of the United States of America has expressed its determination to investigate and prosecute where appropriate acts within the jurisdiction of the International Criminal Court alleged to have been committed by its officials, employees, military personnel and nationals,

Confirming that nothing in this exchange of notes provides impunity with regard to genocide, crimes against humanity and war crimes,

Bearing in mind Article 98 of the Rome Statute,

I have the honour to propose the following agreement:

1. For purposes of this Agreement, "persons" are current or former Government officials or military personnel of one Party, nationals of one Party, or such persons who are so deeply connected to the internal affairs of one Party that the surrender of such persons might present a clear risk to the national security of that Party.

2. Persons of one Party present in the territory of the other Party shall, not without the express consent of the first Party,

(a) be surrendered or transferred by any means to the International Criminal Court for any purpose, or

(b) be surrendered or transferred by any means to any other entity or third country, or expelled to a third country, for the purpose of surrender to or transfer to the International Criminal Court.

3. When the Government of Saint Kitts and Nevis extradites, surrenders, or otherwise transfers a person of the United States of America to a third country, the Government of Saint Kitts and Nevis will not agree to the surrender or transfer of that person to the International Criminal Court by the third country, without the express consent of the Government of the United States of America.

4. When the Government of the United States of America extradites, surrenders, or otherwise transfers a person of the Federation of Saint Kitts and Nevis to a third country, the Government of the United States of America will not agree to the surrender or transfer of that person to the International Criminal Court by the third country, without the express consent of the Government of Saint Kitts and Nevis.

5. Either Party may request consultation regarding the investigation or prosecution of cases of special interest.

6. This Agreement will remain in force until one year after the date on which one Party notifies the other of its intent to terminate this Agreement. The provisions of this Agreement shall continue to apply with respect to any act occurring, or any allegation arising, before the effective date of termination.

If the proposal set forth herein is acceptable to the Government of the United States of America, this note and Your Excellency's affirmative Note in reply shall constitute an agreement between our two Governments which shall enter into force on the date of Your Note.

The Embassy of the United States of America presents its compliments to the Ministry of Foreign Relations of the Republic of Panama and has the honor to refer to recent discussions between representatives of the two Governments regarding the status of United States personnel, as defined in the Embassy's Note No. 834, dated July 3, 2001, and the Ministry's Note DM No. 0301/2001, dated July 10, 2001, who may be temporarily present in Panama in connection with a visit by eighteen officials from U.S. Navy South (NavSouth), who will be in uniform and who will carry their regulatory weapons, as authorized. The officials will stay in Panama from February 27 through March 31, 2005. The purpose of the visit is to conduct joint combined training exercises with the Panamanian Public Force. The Panamanian counterparts are the National Maritime Service (SMN), the National Air Service (SAN) and Panama's National Police (PNP).

As a result of these discussions, the Embassy proposes that such personnel shall be accorded a status equivalent to that accorded to the administrative and technical staff of the Embassy of the United States of America under the Vienna Convention of Diplomatic Relations of April 18, 1961 (Vienna Convention). The understanding contained in the Embassy's Note. 835 dated July 3, 2001 and the Ministry's reply in Note No. D.M. 0300/2001 dated July 10, 2001, shall apply.

United States personnel shall be permitted to enter and exit Panama with United States identification and with collective movement or individual travel orders, in accordance with an agreement on non-immigrant visas between the United States and Panama, which has been in force since June 1, 1956, as amended, except that the Government of Panama will waive the requirement for tourist cards and related fees. Panamanian authorities shall accept as valid driving licenses or permits issued by the appropriate U.S. authorities to U.S. personnel for operation of vehicles; and such personnel shall be authorized to wear U.S. Government attire (uniforms) and to carry authorized equipment when required for their mission while performing official duties.

The Embassy of the United States further proposes that the Government of Panama accord duty-free importation and exportation, as well as exemption from inspection and taxation of products, services, property, materials, equipment, vehicles, vessels, and aircraft introduced and/or imported into, acquired in or exported from Panama by or on behalf of the U.S. Government or its personnel, in connection with their mission in Panama; except that United States personnel shall not be exempt from Panamanian taxes on items purchased in Panama for their personal use.

The two Governments shall cooperate in taking the necessary steps to ensure the security of United States personnel and property in Panama.

Vehicles, vessels, and aircraft owned or operated by or for United States Armed Forces shall not be subject to payment of landing or port fees, pilotage charges, navigation, overflight or parking charges or light or harbor dues while in Panama, except for the charges related to the normal transit of the Panama Canal, previously agreed to;

however, United States Armed Forces shall pay reasonable charges for services requested and received.

It shall be the responsibility of United States personnel to respect the laws of Panama and to abstain from any activity inconsistent with the spirit of their mission. Authorities of the Government of the United States shall take the necessary steps to that end.

Appropriate Panamanian and U.S. military or civilian police authorities shall cooperate in the investigation of any crime believed to have been committed by or against United States personnel.

The Government of Panama shall accept full responsibility for, and shall hold the United States Government harmless from, any and all claims arising from the use of projects constructed, or in the process of being constructed in whole or in part, by United States personnel in connection with their mission in Panama.

Finally, both governments shall waive any and all claims (other than contractual claims) against each other for personal injury to or death of their military or civilian personnel, or for damage, loss, or destruction of the other's property arising out of activities covered by this agreement. The United States shall pay, in accordance with United States law, fair and reasonable compensation in settlement of meritorious claims by third parties arising out of acts or omissions of United States personnel, or which are otherwise incident to agreed activities by United States personnel in connection with their mission in Panama.

Additional arrangements as may be necessary may be entered into by the appropriate authorities of the two Governments.

The Embassy of the United States of America proposes that this note and the Ministry's reply thereto shall constitute an agreement between the two Governments on this subject and that its provisions shall be in effect as of the date of the Ministry's reply.

AMPLIFIED PROGRAM DESCRIPTION

I. Introduction

This annex describes the activities to be undertaken and the results to be achieved with the funds obligated under this Agreement. Nothing in this Annex 1 shall be construed as amending any of the definitions or terms of the Agreement.

II. USAID's Health and Population Program

In FY 2005 and beyond, USAID will improve the quality of health care in Pakistan by focusing on three objectives identified in collaboration with the Government of Pakistan: improve the quality and use of maternal, newborn and child health services; improve management of primary health care; and increase the use of proven interventions to prevent major infectious diseases. Among the major infectious diseases are: water and blood-borne hepatitis, diarrheal and enteric diseases, polio, tuberculosis, and, in certain areas, leishmaniasis. HIV/AIDS is a growing problem, and Pakistan is now considered to have a concentrated epidemic. USAID supports GOP health programs and coordinates closely with other donors and partners. Under this Agreement, USAID will provide training, technical assistance, small grants and some limited upgrading of infrastructure to achieve mutual GOP and USAID objectives in health.

USAID funds will:

- Develop new and improved maternal, newborn, and child health care throughout the country by improving services and upgrading equipment at selected health facilities;
- Continue efforts to eradicate polio through vaccination programs;
- Improve surveillance and control of diseases of major public health importance (e.g., hepatitis, TB, HIV);
- Promote greater awareness of HIV/AIDS and encourage healthier behaviors among the most at-risk groups;
- Improve water and sanitation system, including health and hygiene education to better assure safe drinking water , storage and end-use. Schools and health centers will be given priority in USAID focus districts.
- Provide training and technical assistance to reproductive health service providers to improve the availability and quality of care in underserved areas, in accordance with Mexico City Policy; and
- Help health officials and local governments improve the planning, implementation, and monitoring of health programs.

The program will support ten out of twelve objectives outlined in the GOP's reform strategies for the health and population sectors outlined in its Ten Year Perspective Development Plan 2001-11. The program will promote the health of women and children through interventions that can be sustained over the long-term by improving the utilization and quality of health services. The objective of this assistance is to help the GOP develop and deliver accessible and quality health and reproductive health interventions.

Strategic Objective: Improved health services for vulnerable populations. This objective will be achieved through the following three intermediate results:

1. Improved quality and use of maternal, newborn, and child health services in target districts.

2. Improved primary health care in target districts.

3. Increased use of proven interventions to prevent major infectious diseases.

1. Improved quality and use of maternal, newborn, and child health services in target districts: The USAID will promote social marketing of family planning and other family health services and products. Under the social marketing program, thousands of pharmacists, physicians, nurse/mid-wives, and other health care providers will be trained in up-to-date procedures and safety precautions, and communication experts will prepare and disseminate information via radio and television. Technical training and assistance, facility renovation, and service upgrades will improve mother and child birth outcomes and increase child survival. The Maternal and Newborn Health Initiative (MNHI) will focus on hospital and community activities in four districts, and pave the way for extending the program to other districts in FY 2006 and beyond.

2. Improved primary health care in target districts: The USAID will provide technical assistance to improve the fiscal and administrative management of the seven vertical programs at the provincial and district levels. Technical assistance and training will improve the capacity of district health teams to manage health programs. This initiative directly supports devolution and other national objectives to improve health sector performance. With these funds, USAID plans to also commission a national Demographic and Health Survey for Pakistan.

3. Increased use of proven interventions to prevent major infectious diseases: The concentrated outbreak of HIV/AIDS revealed in a groundbreaking study released in late FY 2004, highlights the importance of an immediate strategic response. USAID funds are programmed for HIV/AIDS prevention among high-risk groups and for care and treatment of persons living with AIDS. This component will also suggest polio eradication, national immunization days, and continued surveillance. Support will continue to be provided to fight TB through the extension of DOTS (Directly Observed Treatment Strategy) to the remaining districts of the country. A new program to increase surveillance and response for infectious diseases (e.g., hepatitis, tuberculosis) is planned for startup in FY 2005, as is a new water and sanitation activity to provide safe drinking water through community-run systems in thousands of villages throughout the country.

III. Funding

Illustrative Financial Plan: The illustrative financial plan for the Agreement is set forth in the following table:

Representatives of the Parties may make changes to the Illustrative Financial Plan without formal amendment to the Agreement, if such changes do not cause USAID's contribution to exceed the amount specified in Section 3.1 of the Agreement, or the Grantee's contribution to be less than the amount specified in Section 3.2 of the Agreement.

IV. Illustrative Indicators

Specific targets for indicators will be set in respective sub-agreements and may be incorporated into this Agreement without formal amendment but with written notice to both parties.

- Illustrative indicators of program success for all three intermediate results include:
- Increase in number of service delivery centers for reproductive health services in peri-urban and rural areas;
- Improved quality of reproductive health services;
- Increased availability of modern contraceptive methods to eligible couples in peri-urban and rural areas;
- Increased and effective utilization of skilled workers for delivering emergency obstetric, post-partum care and neonatal health services;
- Development of health education and IEC material appropriate for the target population regarding HIV/AIDS and STDs;
- Availability of specific technical assistance for capacity building for at least two vertical health programs at the provincial and district level; and
- Improved fiscal management and administrative capacity at the district and provincial levels.

For all indicators, the Parties agree to use definitions adopted for purposes of reporting under the Pakistan Integrated Household Survey and Demographic Health Survey.

V. Activities/Activity Selection

USAID will select bulk of activities after a competitive grant or contract selection process conducted by USAID with participation from relevant government institutions and other entities. Criteria for selection of grant or contract proposals generally include the proposing organization's technical approach and program description, management structure (including the choice of key personnel), institutional capacity, past performance in like circumstances, and degree of Grantee reliance on Pakistani institutions and expertise for implementation. Proposals will also take into account ongoing activities of other donors in the health sector to avoid duplication.

VI. Monitoring and Evaluation

The Parties will monitor and evaluate progress towards the Strategic Objective at three levels:

National Level – Program: Annual joint monitoring mission of GOP and USAID teams and Annual Review of joint mission results and other relevant assessments.

Provincial Level – Joint monitoring missions of respective provincial government project implementation units on a quarterly basis.

Local level – Community or beneficiary based monitoring and evaluation on a regular basis to be agreed with local stakeholders.

In addition, this program will include two formal evaluations, financed by funds under this Agreement. A formal, formative-type evaluation will be carried out after two years of implementation to gauge the overall quality and progress of the work conducted to date, and make recommendations for improvement. This evaluation will be carried out by a highly qualified, external and objective organization. The second evaluation, more summative in nature, will be carried out at the beginning of the program's final six months.

USAID's implementation agreements, whether contracts, grants or cooperative agreements, also contain provisions for regular monitoring and evaluation of activities conducted there under. USAID's Regional Inspector General in Manila and the Auditor General of Pakistan may also undertake performance audits of activities under this Agreement from time to time. The Parties also undertake, as much as possible, to publicize the undertakings in this Agreement on public websites in Pakistan so that the citizens of Pakistan can monitor progress towards results hereunder.

VII. Other Implementation Issues

The prevailing security situation in Pakistan may pose unique challenges for implementing activities under this Agreement. The Parties recognize that implementation may be delayed from time-to-time in response to unexpected events and will make every effort to reduce such delays if and when they occur. To minimize such disruptions, the Parties agree to seek implementation partners that can move as freely as possible throughout Pakistan, even during periods when expatriate personnel may be forced to leave the country unexpectedly.

PROTOCOL
BETWEEN THE DEPARTMENT OF STATE
OF THE UNITED STATES OF AMERICA
AND THE SECRETARÍA DE COMUNICACIONES Y TRANSPORTES OF THE UNITED MEXICAN STATES
CONCERNING THE ALLOTMENT AND USE
OF THE 406.1-420 MHz BAND
FOR FIXED AND MOBILE SERVICES
ALONG THE COMMON BORDER

This Protocol is being concluded pursuant to the Agreement Between the Government of the United States of America and the Government of the United Mexican States Concerning the Allocation and Use of Frequency Bands by Terrestrial Non-Broadcasting Radiocommunication Services Along the Common Border signed in Williamsburg, Virginia June 16, 1994, (herein referred to as the "Agreement").

ARTICLE I. Purposes

The purposes of this Protocol are:

1. To establish and adopt a plan for the equitable allotment and use of frequency sub-bands in the 406.1-420 MHz band within the Sharing Zone defined in this Protocol;

2. To establish technical criteria to regulate the use of the frequency sub-bands referred to in paragraph 1 of this Article;

3. To establish conditions of use so that each Administration may use the frequency sub-bands allotted to the other country for fixed and mobile services, provided this causes no harmful interference; and

4. To provide special interference protection for certain critical receiver stations specifically identified in Appendix I.

ARTICLE II. Definitions

1. For the purpose of this Protocol and as provided for in Article IV of the Agreement, the term Administration or Administrations will refer with equal effect to the National Telecommunications and Information Administration of the Department of Commerce of the United States of America (hereinafter United States) and to the Secretaría de Comunicaciones y Transportes of the United Mexican States (hereinafter Mexico).

2. The Sharing Zone is defined to include the border areas within the United States and Mexico and their respective territorial waters as set forth in Appendix II.

3. Special interference protection is defined as that protection from harmful interference afforded only to those critical receiver stations specifically identified in Appendix I.

ARTICLE III. Conditions of Use

1. In the Sharing Zone, the radio frequency sub-bands in the 406.1-420 MHz band shall be allotted for the primary use of each Administration in accordance with Appendix III. Each Administration shall ensure that all stations subject to its jurisdiction in the 406.1-420 MHz band are operated in such a way that the transmission bandwidth on radio channels shall not exceed the primary frequency allotments in Appendix III.

2. Each Administration shall ensure that fixed and mobile stations assigned to primary frequency allotments within the Sharing Zone shall be operated in accordance with the effective radiated power (ERP) and antenna height limitations specified in the following table (Table I):

Table I

| Average of the Antenna Height Above Average Terrain on Standard Radials in the Direction of the Common Border[1] | Maximum ERP in Any Direction Toward the Common Border | |

b. Land mobile stations, ship stations and land portable stations that are located in the areas set forth in subparagraphs 4.b and 4.c of Article III of this Protocol; and

c. Portable stations operated in aircraft located in the Sharing Zone defined in paragraph 2 of Article II.

3. Existing stations that are able to assume secondary status as provided in paragraph 1 of this Article shall conform to the provisions of subparagraphs 4.d, 4.e and 4.f of Article III of this Protocol.

ARTICLE V. Special Interference Protection for Critical Receiver Stations

1. The critical receiver stations within the 406.1-420 MHz band specifically identified in Appendix I shall be afforded special interference protection from harmful interference notwithstanding the provisions of Article III and Article IV.

2. Any station within the Sharing Zone that causes harmful interference to a critical receiver station or stations specifically identified in Appendix I shall take all remedial measures necessary to eliminate the harmful interference to the protected station or stations and their referenced parameters.

ARTICLE VI. Relation to Other Agreements

This Protocol forms an integral part of the Agreement and shall be referred to as the Protocol for the 406.1 - 420 MHz band in the Index of Annex I of the Agreement.

ARTICLE VII. Appendices

Appendices I, II and III are an integral part of this Protocol.

Areas Within Which the Frequencies Are to Be Protected

U.S.-MEXICO SHARING ZONE

The Sharing Zone is defined as the areas covered by a distance of 145 kilometers (90.1 miles) from the U.S.-Mexico common border into the national territory of each country and includes areas of the Pacific Ocean and the Gulf of Mexico.

These areas are enclosed by the boundaries shown on the map to the right and are further defined in Table II.

Table II

The following geographic coordinates define the U.S.-Mexico Sharing Zone in the national territory of each country. Point 1 is located in the Pacific Ocean due west from the U.S.-Mexico common border and is the starting point in defining the Sharing Zone. The boundary of the Sharing Zone is then defined by plotting each geographic point in advancing numerical order in a clockwise direction. Each distance path between consecutive points is traversed by great circle arc.

CONCERNING THE ALLOTMENT AND USE OF THE 380-399.9 MHz BAND
FOR FIXED AND MOBILE TERRESTRIAL NON-BROADCASTING SERVICES
ALONG THE COMMON BORDER

This Protocol is being concluded on an interim basis pursuant to the Agreement Between the Government of the United States of America and the Government of the United Mexican States Concerning the Allocation and Use of Frequency Bands by Terrestrial Non-Broadcasting Radiocommunication Services Along the Common Border signed in Williamsburg, Virginia June 16, 1994, (herein referred to as the "Agreement").

ARTICLE I. Purposes

1. The purposes of this Protocol are:

a. To establish and adopt a plan for the equitable allotment on an interim basis of the frequency sub-bands in the 380-399.9 MHz band within the Sharing Zone defined in this Protocol; and

b. To allow for new assignments in frequency sub-bands allotted as primary for each Administration in the 380-399.9 MHz band within the Sharing Zone defined in this Protocol on an interim basis until a more complete protocol governing both new assignments and existing stations can be negotiated and concluded.

2. This Protocol does not apply to existing stations for fixed and mobile services in the 380-399.9 MHz band within the Sharing Zone defined in this Protocol.

ARTICLE II. Definitions

1. For the purpose of this Protocol and as provided for in Article IV of the Agreement, the term Administration or Administrations will refer with equal effect to the National Telecommunications and Information Administration of the Department of Commerce United States of America (hereinafter United States) and to the Secretaría de Comunicaciones y Transportes of the United Mexican States (hereinafter Mexico).

2. The Sharing Zone is defined to include the border areas within the United States and Mexico and their respective territorial waters as set forth in Appendix I.

ARTICLE III. Restriction on Use of Mobile Satellite Service

Neither Administration shall introduce the mobile satellite service into the sub-bands allotted for the primary use of the other Party within the Sharing Zone defined herein.

ARTICLE IV. Conditions of Use

1. Within the Sharing Zone, the radio frequency sub-bands in the 380-399.9 MHz band shall be allotted for the primary use of each Administration in accordance with Appendix II. Each Administration shall ensure that new assignments made on or after the date that this Protocol enters into force are operated in such a way that the transmission bandwidth shall not exceed the primary frequency allotments in Appendix II.

2. Each Administration shall ensure that fixed and mobile stations assigned to primary frequency allotments within the Sharing Zone shall be operated on an interim basis in accordance with the effective radiated power (ERP) and antenna height limitations specified in the following table (Table I):

CONCERNING COOPERATION IN TRADE IN TEXTILE AND APPAREL GOODS

WHEREAS the Governments of the Hong Kong Special Administrative Region and the United States (the "Parties") acknowledge and respect one another's laws, regulations, and procedures affecting trade in textile and apparel goods;

WHEREAS the Parties share the objective of eliminating violations of their respective laws, regulations, and procedures affecting trade in textile and apparel goods, and in particular of eliminating violations that disrupt legitimate trade in textile and apparel goods;

WHEREAS the Parties are committed to cooperating with respect to the textile-specific safeguard actions taken by a Party;[1] and

WHEREAS the Parties recognize that such cooperation furthers their mutual aim of facilitating legitimate trade in textile and apparel goods between them by allowing the Parties to focus their enforcement efforts.

NOW, THEREFORE, the Parties decide as follows:

1. As set out in greater detail in paragraphs below, the Parties will cooperate for the purposes of:

(a) enforcing their respective laws, regulations, and procedures affecting trade in textile and apparel goods; and

(b) ensuring the accuracy of claims that textile and apparel goods originated in the jurisdiction of a Party in accordance with its laws, regulations, and procedures.

2. As soon as practicable after receiving a request from the importing Party, and based on information that the importing Party provides, the exporting Party will conduct a verification visit to a factory in its jurisdiction to determine whether a claim or declaration that textile and apparel goods produced by the factory originated in and were exported from the jurisdiction of the exporting Party was made in accordance with the laws of the exporting Party. The information to be provided by the importing Party will include any origin certification documentation issued by competent authorities of the exporting Party or other documents indicating that the goods originated in and were exported from the jurisdiction of the exporting Party. The exporting Party will notify the importing Party of the results of the verification visit as soon as practicable after completing the visit.

3. As soon as practicable after receiving a request from the importing Party, and based on information that the importing Party provides, the exporting Party will conduct an examination of specific shipments of textile and apparel goods from its jurisdiction to determine whether a claim or declaration that the goods originated in and were exported from the jurisdiction of the exporting Party was made in accordance with the laws of the exporting Party. The information to be provided by the importing Party will include any origin certification documentation issued by competent authorities of the exporting Party or other documents indicating that the goods originated in and were exported from the jurisdiction of the exporting Party. The exporting Party will notify the importing Party of the results of the examination as soon as practicable after completing the examination.

4. On request, a Party will provide information to the other Party regarding the results of actions that it takes under paragraphs 2 and 3.

5. Each Party will preserve the confidentiality of all non-public information it receives pursuant to this Memorandum of Understanding ("MOU") in accordance with its laws.

6. A Party may conduct Joint Factory Observation Visits ("JVs") with the other Party to textile and apparel factories in the jurisdiction of the other Party. The procedures by which the Parties will conduct JVs under this MOU are contained in the Annex ("Guidelines for Cooperation in Joint Factory Observation Visits") attached hereto.

7. The Parties are committed to giving due facilitation for customs clearance of bona fide and compliant textile and apparel goods, and to this end each Party will seek to facilitate the entry of such legitimate textile and apparel goods and will ensure that such legitimate trade is not unduly impeded, having regard to the provisions of this MOU and the control and origin certification programs of the exporting Party.

8. Where permitted by its laws, each Party will consider on a case-by-case basis requests by the other Party for information reflected in documents, such as bills of lading, contracts, or invoices, that supports a claim of origin for textile and apparel goods.

9. The Parties will consult annually, unless they agree otherwise, to discuss cooperation matters under this MOU.

10. This MOU will become effective on signature by both Parties, and will remain in effect until December 31, 2008. A Party may terminate this MOU before its expiry by giving the other Party thirty days' written notice.

Signed in duplicate in the English language on this 1st day of August, 2005.

ANNEX

GUIDELINES FOR COOPERATION IN JOINT FACTORY OBSERVATION VISITS

A. A Joint Factory Observation Visit ("JV") to a factory in the jurisdiction of a Party, as discussed in paragraph 6 of the Memorandum of Understanding ("MOU"), may be performed when such factory is suspected to be involved in falsely claiming that textile and apparel goods originated in and were exported from the jurisdiction of a Party, where such goods are in the same categories as goods subject to measures applied by the other Party under paragraph 242 of the Report of the Working Party on the Accession of China to the World Trade Organization. Such a suspicion may arise where a factory:

1. falsely identifies the country of origin of a good;

2. describes a good subject to such measures as if it were not subject to such measures;

3. submits counterfeit documents; or

4. otherwise makes a false statement or provides inaccurate documentation regarding a transaction.

B. The Parties recognize that JVs are highly selective in nature and risk-driven, and that neither Party will conduct unnecessary and overly burdensome JVs.

C. There may be legitimate business realities that cause trade in textile and apparel goods to increase or factories to expand their operations by manufacturing various categories of goods. The Parties will make every effort to consider such business realities before requesting JVs.

D. Shipments to be reviewed in the course of a JV should cover textile and apparel goods that are in the same categories as goods subject to the measures referred to in paragraph A of these Guidelines that are in force or that expired not more than three months before the commencement of the JV.

E. A Party that wishes to conduct a JV (the "requesting Party") will provide a written request at least 15 days in advance of the intended visit to the responsible officials of the competent authorities of the other Party. The Party receiving the request (the "requested Party") will consider the request in light of the information provided therein and will, no later than seven days after it receives the request, inform the requesting Party whether it accepts or refuses the request.

F. If the requested Party accepts a request, the Parties will:

1. schedule a mutually acceptable time to conduct the JV;

2. jointly select the factories to be visited;

DMS

3. discuss the logistics of the visit prior to the commencement of the JV; and

4. discuss the results of the JV and further action to be taken, as appropriate, following the JV.

G. A JV will only be made to factories registered under the laws of the requested Party.

H. The responsible officials of the requested Party will provide the factory that is the subject of a request a notice of the request 48 hours in advance of the intended commencement of the JV, and will seek permission from a responsible person of such factory to conduct the JV. A factory will have the right to refuse a request for a JV.

I. If a factory gives permission to conduct a JV, the JV will be conducted jointly by the Parties. However, only representatives of the requested Party may review books and records of the factory to determine whether the factory is operating in accordance with its laws regarding claims of origin of the requested Party.

J. The Parties will prepare, for statistical purposes, a report of the agreed results of each JV.

K. The Parties will preserve the confidentiality of the results of, and information obtained from, a JV.

No. 1105

The Embassy of the United States of America presents its compliments to the Ministry of Foreign Relations of the Republic of Panama and has the honor to refer to recent discussions between representatives of the two Governments regarding the status of United States personnel, as defined in the Embassy's Note No. 834, dated July 3, 2001, and the Ministry's Note DM No. 0301/2001, dated July 10, 2001, who may be temporarily present in Panama in connection with a visit by eighty-nine officials from the U.S. Southern Command, who will be in uniform and who will carry their regulatory weapons, as authorized. The officials will stay in Panama from August 10 through September 6, 2005. The purpose of the visit is to conduct training with the Institutional Protection Service (SPI). The Panamanian counterpart is the Institutional Protection Service.

As a result of these discussions, the Embassy proposes that such personnel shall be accorded a status equivalent to that accorded to the administrative and technical staff of the Embassy of the United States of America under the Vienna Convention of Diplomatic Relations of April 18, 1961 (Vienna Convention). The understanding contained in the Embassy's Note. 835 dated July 3, 2001 and the Ministry's reply in Note No. D.M. 0300/2001 dated July 10, 2001, shall apply.

United States personnel shall be permitted to enter and exit Panama with United States identification and with collective movement or individual travel orders, in accordance with an agreement on non-immigrant visas between the United States and Panama, which has been in force since June 1, 1956, as amended, except that the Government of Panama will waive the requirement for tourist cards and related fees. Panamanian authorities shall accept as valid driving licenses or permits issued by the appropriate U.S. authorities to U.S. personnel for operation of vehicles; and such personnel shall be authorized to wear U.S. Government attire (uniforms) and to carry authorized equipment when required for their mission while performing official duties.

The Embassy of the United States further proposes that the Government of Panama accord duty-free importation and exportation, as well as exemption from inspection and taxation of products, services, property, materials, equipment, vehicles, vessels, and aircraft introduced and/or imported into, acquired in or exported from Panama by or on behalf of the U.S. Government or its personnel, in connection with their mission in Panama; except that United States personnel shall not be exempt from Panamanian taxes on items purchased in Panama for their personal use.

The two Governments shall cooperate in taking the necessary steps to ensure the security of United States personnel and property in Panama.

Vehicles, vessels, and aircraft owned or operated by or for United States Armed Forces shall not be subject to payment of landing or port fees, pilotage charges, navigation, overflight or parking charges or light or harbor dues while in Panama, except for the charges related to the normal transit of the Panama Canal, previously agreed to;

however, United States Armed Forces shall pay reasonable charges for services requested and received.

It shall be the responsibility of United States personnel to respect the laws of Panama and to abstain from any activity inconsistent with the spirit of their mission. Authorities of the Government of the United States shall take the necessary steps to that end.

Appropriate Panamanian and U.S. military or civilian police authorities shall cooperate in the investigation of any crime believed to have been committed by or against United States personnel.

The Government of Panama shall accept full responsibility for, and shall hold the United States Government harmless from, any and all claims arising from the use of projects constructed, or in the process of being constructed in whole or in part, by United States personnel in connection with their mission in Panama.

Finally, both governments shall waive any and all claims (other than contractual claims) against each other for personal injury to or death of their military or civilian personnel, or for damage, loss, or destruction of the other's property arising out of activities covered by this agreement. The United States shall pay, in accordance with United States law, fair and reasonable compensation in settlement of meritorious claims by third parties arising out of acts or omissions of United States personnel, or which are otherwise incident to agreed activities by United States personnel in connection with their mission in Panama.

Additional arrangements as may be necessary may be entered into by the appropriate authorities of the two Governments.

The Embassy of the United States of America proposes that this note and the Ministry's reply thereto shall constitute an agreement between the two Governments on this subject and that its provisions shall be in effect as of the date of the Ministry's reply.

AGREEMENT BETWEEN THE OFFICE OF THE UNITED STATES TRADE REPRESENTATIVE AND THE SECRETARÍA DE ECONOMÍA OF THE UNITED MEXICAN STATES ON TRADE IN TEQUILA

The Office of the United States Trade Representative ("USTR") and the Secretaría de Economía of the United Mexican States ("SE") (hereinafter referred to as the Parties):

REAFFIRMING the rights, obligations, and undertakings of the United States and Mexico under the North American Free Trade Agreement ("NAFTA"), the Marrakesh Agreement Establishing the World Trade Organization and its annexes (including the Agreement on Technical Barriers to Trade and the General Agreement on Tariffs and Trade 1994), and other multilateral, regional, and bilateral agreements and arrangements to which both governments are parties;

SHARING a common concern for preserving the integrity of tequila marketed in the territories of the United States and Mexico;

DESIRING to ensure that the laws and regulations of the United States and Mexico operate effectively to preserve the status of tequila as a distinctive product of Mexico;

DESIRING to minimize barriers to exports of tequila from Mexico to the United States, and to avoid unnecessary barriers to the marketing of tequila and tequila-containing products; and

NOTING that representatives of the Mexican tequila production industry and the United States distilled spirits industry in collaboration with representatives of the Canadian distilled spirits industry (collectively "industry representatives") have concluded a set of joint recommendations for ensuring the integrity of tequila (attached as Annex 1),

HAVE AGREED AS FOLLOWS:

Article 1: Definitions

For purposes of this Agreement:

1. enterprise has the meaning given to that term in Article 201 of the NAFTA;

2. industry circular means with respect to the United States, a publication of the Alcohol and Tobacco Tax and Trade Bureau of the United States Department of Treasury ("TTB"), announcing policies or rulings of that agency;

3. measure has the meaning given to that term in Article 201 of the NAFTA;

4. Official Mexican Standard for Tequila means Mexican Standard "NOM-006-SCFI-1994 Bebidas Alcohólicas. Tequila. Especificaciones," including any amendments, and its successors;

5. person has the meaning given to that term in Article 201 of the NAFTA;

6. tequila is a distinctive product of Mexico, manufactured in Mexico in compliance with the laws of Mexico regulating the manufacture of tequila; and

7. territory has the meaning given to that term in Article 201 of the NAFTA.

Article 2: Obligations of USTR

1. USTR shall ensure that an industry circular concerning tequila will be issued within 12 months after this Agreement enters into force. From time to time thereafter, this industry circular may be revised, or additional industry circulars may be issued.

2. The industry circular concerning tequila will include information that:

   (a) notifies businesses that import, bottle, or distribute tequila in the United States of United States laws and regulations concerning these activities;

   (b) restates the basic elements of the 1975 industry circular (number 75-13), issued by the Bureau of Alcohol, Tobacco and Firearms regarding the Standard of Identity for Tequila; and

   (c) provides specific examples of unauthorized activities in connection with the importation of tequila.

3. USTR shall ensure that the bottling of, and bulk storage operations for, tequila is prohibited in the United States unless conducted by a distiller, warehouseman, or processor, as those terms are defined in United States law, on the bonded premises of a distilled spirits plant, as that term is defined in United States law, by a person qualified to carry out these operations under Title 27, Chapter I, Part 19, Subpart G of the Code of Federal Regulations, as may be amended.

4. To address the threat of fraudulent labeling of a product that claims to be tequila or claims to contain tequila, USTR shall ensure that no label for such a product shall contain any brand name which, standing alone, or in association with other printed or graphic matter, creates any impression or inference as to the age, origin, identity, or other characteristics of the product, unless TTB finds that such brand name (when appropriately qualified if required) conveys no erroneous impressions as to the age, origin, identity, or other characteristics of the product.

Article 3: Obligations of SE

1. SE shall ensure that the Official Mexican Standard for Tequila is reviewed as provided for in Mexico's domestic legislation. SE shall notify USTR of any revisions to that standard, and other relevant regulations and standards referenced in it.

2. SE shall ensure that no measure of Mexico:

   (a) prohibits or restricts the exportation or sale for export of tequila destined for bottling in the territory of the United States, whether in the form of a requirement that tequila be bottled in Mexico, or in any other form (including government-mandated provisions in private contractual agreements);

   (b) regulates, or seeks to regulate, the labeling or marketing of tequila outside the territory of Mexico; or

   (c) regulates, or seeks to regulate, the labeling, formulation, or marketing of products containing tequila outside the territory of Mexico.

Article 4: Tequila Bottlers Registry

1. SE may require, through the Official Mexican Standard for Tequila, that all bottlers of tequila in the territories of the United States and Mexico be registered on a "Tequila Bottlers Registry."

2. SE shall grant a Certificate of Approval and enroll a bottler in the "Tequila Bottlers Registry" if the bottler obtains a Distilled Spirits Plant Permit and fulfills the administrative requirements established in the Mexican Federal Law on Administrative Procedures and the Official Mexican Standard for Tequila. Any such requirements shall be equally applicable to all bottlers.

3. If TTB revokes or terminates a Distilled Spirits Plant permit from a bottler registered on the Tequila Bottlers Registry, USTR shall ensure that SE is notified of that action. Notwithstanding Article 6.5, SE may then remove that bottler from the Tequila Bottlers Registry.

4. SE shall not require inspections of bottling facilities located in the territory of the United States in order for those facilities to be enrolled, maintained, or reinstated on the Tequila Bottlers Registry.

5. SE shall not take any corrective or punitive action against bottlers in the territory of the United States with regard to any activities that occur there based on a presumption of non-compliance with the Official Mexican Standard for Tequila. Such action includes reducing or denying exportation of tequila to bottlers. If SE believes that corrective or punitive action against such a bottler is warranted, it may submit inquiries or complaints to USTR pursuant to Article 6.

6. With respect to enterprises located in the territory of the United States, SE shall interpret and apply the provisions of the Official Mexican Standard for Tequila in a manner that is consistent with the provisions of this Agreement and the Industry Initiatives in Annex 1, Section I.

Article 5: Working Group on Tequila

1. The Parties hereby establish a Working Group on Tequila, comprising representatives of both Parties. The Parties may invite representatives of other relevant agencies to participate.

2. The Working Group's functions will include:

   (a) monitoring the implementation and administration of this Agreement;

   (b) exchanging available statistics at the country-level on trade in tequila; and

   (c) making available on request by one Party, in accordance with the laws and regulations by which the other Party must abide, information concerning the importation and exportation of tequila.

3. SE may submit inquiries or complaints to the Working Group regarding specific incidents or patterns of alleged non-compliance with any of the following:

   (a) Article 2.4;

   (b) 27 U.S.C. § 205(f), with regard to the advertising of tequila and products containing tequila; or

   (c) United States laws governing the bottling of tequila.

4. USTR shall ensure that such inquiries or complaints, and the resolution thereof, are addressed in accordance with applicable United States laws and regulations. If TTB determines that a bottler is in violation of applicable United States laws or regulations, USTR shall ensure that the bottler is brought into compliance with those laws or regulations.

5. The Working Group shall meet on request of either Party and, unless the Parties otherwise agree, at least once each year.

6. The Working Group may, as it considers appropriate, consult with representatives of non-governmental bodies, including the industry representatives that participated in the development of the joint recommendations contained in Annex 1 of this Agreement.

Article 6: Enforcement

1. SE shall presume, and hence treat, a bottler of tequila located in the territory of the United States that is subject to supervision by the authority of TTB as having met all of the requirements of the Official Mexican Standard for Tequila concerning on-site inspection by the "Compliance Assessment Agency" or any similar entity.

2. SE may submit inquiries or complaints to USTR regarding specific incidents or patterns of alleged non-compliance related to the application of NAFTA Article 313 and Annex 313.3 with respect to tequila. USTR shall ensure that such inquiries or complaints, and the resolution thereof, are recorded and tracked.

3. On receipt of a submission described in paragraph 2, USTR shall ensure that the incident or pattern is reviewed or investigated, and that action is taken, where appropriate, such as the destruction of the product, relabeling of the product, assessment of fines, or any other action that TTB has authority to take. TTB may seek additional information from SE. SE shall respond to requests for additional information in a timely manner. TTB may suspend further action if it is unable to proceed without further information from SE.

4. USTR shall ensure that SE is provided with any publicly available information that it requests on the status of a submission. This information may be of a preliminary nature if the review or investigation has not been completed. When TTB completes its review or investigation, USTR shall ensure that, if it so requests, SE is provided with any publicly available information on the final disposition. USTR shall ensure that SE has an opportunity to seek clarification on the findings and disposition after the resolution has become final, subject to Article 8.

5. SE may remove the bottler concerned from the Tequila Bottler's Registry only if, following the completion of the process established in this article, TTB revokes or terminates the bottler's Distilled Spirits Plant Permit.

6. At each meeting of the Working Group, USTR shall ensure that SE is provided with any publicly available information that it has requested on the disposition of its submissions. This information shall include the date each submission was received and the date the investigation was concluded or, if the investigation has not concluded, its current status. The information shall also be compiled and submitted to the deputy trade ministers of the United States and Mexico for review.

Article 7: Consultations

1. Either Party may submit a written request for consultations to the other Party regarding any matter relating to this Agreement. The Parties shall consult within 30 days of the date of delivery of the request.

2. The Parties shall make every attempt to arrive at a mutually satisfactory resolution of the matter through consultations.

Article 8: Confidentiality

Nothing in this Agreement requires either Party to furnish or allow access to information the disclosure of which would impede law enforcement or would be contrary to laws protecting personal privacy, trade secrets, confidential information, or the financial affairs and accounts of individual customers of financial institutions.

Article 9: Limitation of Scope

This Agreement does not require the United States to amend its laws and regulations that require tequila to be bottled at alcohol levels greater than that allowed by the Official Mexican Standard for Tequila.

Article 10: Entry Into Force and Termination

1. This Agreement shall enter into force on signature.

2. This Agreement may be amended as the Parties so agree.

3. Either Party may terminate this Agreement with effect one year after it submits a written notice of termination to the other Party. Before submitting written notice, a Party considering termination of the Agreement shall enter into consultations with the other Party during which it shall present its reasons for considering termination and the other Party may seek to address any concerns that the first Party has raised.

4. This Agreement shall be in effect for five years from the date on which the Agreement enters into force, and shall renew automatically every five years thereafter, unless either Party provides written notice to the other that it objects to the extension of the Agreement no later than the first day of the fifth year in any such five-year period.

CONSOLIDATED JOINT RECOMMENDATIONS

CANADIAN, MEXICAN, U.S. INDUSTRIES

June 2, 2004

These joint recommendations were developed at the request of the governments of Canada, Mexico and the United States by representatives of the Canadian distilled spirits industry (represented by the Association of Canadian Distillers), the Mexican tequila production industry (represented by the Mexican National Chamber of the Tequila Industry), and the United States distilled spirits industry (represented by the Distilled Spirits Council of the United States, The Presidents' Forum trade association, and the Tequila Bulk Importers Alliance).

These recommendations are the result of the meetings held in Canada, Mexico and the United States during the period October 2003 through June 2004 and are aimed at ensuring the integrity of the tequila sold in the North American market through the adoption of mechanisms for tracking bulk tequila and its associated bottling through the supply chain. The industries recognize that the labeling and marketing of tequila and the formulation, labeling, and marketing of products containing tequila are governed by the laws of the country of import and sale, emphasizing that these local laws represent the sole basis for regulating the use of tequila when used as an ingredient in distilled spirits specialty products. Part I describes initiatives that the Canadian, Mexican and U.S. industries agree to undertake. Part II sets forth the three industries' joint recommendations to their respective governments.

I. Industry Initiatives

A. Certificate of Export and Related Documents: The industries agree that certain improvements should be made to the Certificado de Exportacion de Tequila (Certificate of Export or CET) issued by the Consejo Regulador del Tequila or other Compliance Assessment Agency (CRT) and other documents related to the importation of Tequila, as follows:

1. The industries agree to provide the CRT with a joint proposal to update the CET to address documentation concerns and obtain additional information regarding the underlying transaction to enhance the ability for record-keeping safeguards to prevent fraud.

2. Each CET should include multiple identifiable originals and copies, which would be provided to suppliers, Mexican Customs, U.S. or Canadian Customs, importers and the CRT.

3. The importer of record should be listed on the CET, as well as on invoices and all importation documents.

4. Each importer of record should supply a list of all "doing-business-as" (dba) names and should update that list as modifications are made.

5. For bulk shipments to Canada, the CRT should identify the recipient with its Federal Excise License (FEL) number and require the FEL number as a precondition for issuance of a CET. For bulk shipments to the United States, the CRT should identify the recipient with its Distilled Spirits Plant (DSP) number and require the DSP number as a precondition for issuance of a CET.

B. Bulk Tequila Report: Each Canadian and U.S. bulk tequila importer agrees to provide a report documenting the use of bulk Tequila.

1. The report will be provided quarterly, but the industries agree to review periodically the frequency of the report.

2. Each importer will file with the CRT quarterly reports containing data related to the bottling of tequila and products containing tequila. Each report must state the following:

- Amount of bulk Tequila on hand at beginning of period
- Amount of bulk Tequila received
- Amount bottled as straight Tequila, by brand
- Aggregate amount bottled as specialty products, including a list of brands bottled
- Losses/scrap
- Amount of bulk Tequila on hand at end of period
- Supplier name

3. In circumstances where there may be discrepancies, the CRT may request additional information from the importer for clarification. Should the additional information not resolve the discrepancy, the CRT must first request the local responsible agency to review the data and report its findings on a timely basis. The CRT will provide the report to all interested parties. If the local responsible agency confirms a material discrepancy, the CRT may refuse the issuance of further CETs until such time as the CRT is satisfied that the discrepancy has been resolved.

C. Co-responsibility Agreements: The industries agree that improvements should be made to the co-responsibility agreement program with the goal of eliminating outliers.

1. Bulk tequila shipments for direct use must be covered by co-responsibility agreements.

2. The federal excise license number should be required in order for Canadian parties to enter into a co-responsibility agreement and the DSP number should be required in order for U.S. parties to enter into a co-responsibility agreement.

3. The industries understand that once the revised mandatory standard is published, there will be a need to update the current authorized template for the co-responsibility agreements. The industries acknowledge that commercial conditions should be taken into account when updating the template, and that the template shall incorporate the applicable provisions of the revised mandatory standard. To this end, the industries agree to establish a joint working Task Force to develop recommendations for the revised template.

4. Subject to due process requirements, the industries accept that the breach of a co-responsibility agreement may result in cancellation of approval by the Mexican Institute for Industrial Property (IMPI) and CRT denial to issue additional CETs to the parties involved.

5. With respect to third party bottling arrangements, authorization for such arrangements should be given if the third party assumes the same obligations under the co-responsibility agreement and the contractor guarantees the third party's compliance with the terms of the co-responsibility agreement, including certification and/or verification processes.

D. Tracking Measures

The industries agree to implement the following measures to enable tracking of tequila products:

1. All bottles of tequila or products containing tequila bottled in the United States will bear the DSP registry number or similar distinct identifier to enable tracking of individual packages. The CRT's certification number for the U.S. bottler will be the aforementioned bottler's DSP registry number or similar distinct identifier.

2. All bottles of tequila or products containing tequila bottled in Canada will bear the FEL number or distinct identifier to enable tracking of individual packages. The CRT's certification number for the Canadian bottler will be the aforementioned bottler's FEL number or similar distinct identifier.

E. Other Industry Initiatives: The industries agree to take the following additional steps:

1. The Canadian and U.S. industries encourage the Mexican industry to initiate "showcase" litigation to prosecute offenders and to discourage potential offenders.

2. The industries request the United States Alcohol and Tobacco Tax and Trade Bureau ("TTB") to issue a new Circular to update and enhance the 1975 Circular 75-13 (9/8/75).

3. The industries recognize the right of any interested party to initiate appropriate administrative or legal actions in the jurisdiction where the product is sold where circumstances present a demonstrable risk to the Appellation of Origin of Tequila.

II. Recommendations to Governments

The industries jointly make the following recommendations to the governments of Canada, Mexico and the United States ("the Governments"):

A. Certificate of Export and Related Documents: The industries recommend that:

1. The Governments develop procedures to enable cross-checking the documentation in Mexico, Canada and the United States.

2. Upon final approval of an improved/revised CET, U.S. and Canadian Customs immediately start requiring a CET for all imports of Tequila.

3. U.S. and Canadian Customs should refuse admission of bulk tequila without a CET.

4. U.S., Canadian and Mexican Customs should issue a new Customs Bulletin or an appropriate equivalent document announcing the new requirements.

B. TTB Industry Circular: In accordance with the industries' recommendation in section I.E.2, the new TTB circular should include the following:

1. Specify permissible and impermissible activities relating to Tequila;

2. Note the Mexican Government requirement for co-responsibility agreements;

3. List the penalties for non-compliance;

4. Acknowledge that the Mexican Government imposes specific requirements and limitations upon the purchasers of bulk tequila.

C. Development of Complaint and Enforcement Procedures: The industries recommend that the Governments establish, through an exchange of letters or Memorandum of Understanding (MOU), a formal mechanism or formal procedures for reviewing substantiated complaints regarding product integrity. The industries agree that such a mechanism should include the following elements: 1) notification; 2) documentation; and 3) identification of specific regulatory contacts in the U.S., Mexican and Canadian Governments.

D. Information Exchanges:

1. The industries encourage the governments to exchange information to facilitate reconciliation of import/export data.

2. The industries urge the governments to utilize the Bioterrorism Act regulations to facilitate additional tracking of Tequila.

E. Bottling Plant Certification and Verification Procedures

1. The industries recognize that it is necessary to verify the suitability of facilities for the safe and effective storage, processing, and bottling of tequila and that adequate quality control systems are in place to assure that tequila will be bottled without risk of contamination or adulteration.

2. Mexico, through its designated representative, will devise an appropriate certification mechanism to implement the elements identified in paragraph 1.

3. If the importer's Government has an existing qualification and registration process for licensing distilled spirits bottlers and certifying their facilities, that process should be accepted by the CRT to satisfy certification requirements.

4. If a consensus develops between the Governments of Mexico and of the importer that the qualification and registration process referenced in paragraph 3 above is inadequate, then CRT may initiate unilateral certification of the importer's bottling facilities.

F. Additional Recommendations

1. The industries acknowledge that there are different criteria in the three countries for recognizing trademarks and brand names. To further the goal of ensuring that all tequila can be tracked to the bottler and the producer, the industries urge the governments to provide a mechanism for registering brand names as trademarks or define if the brand names may satisfy the requirements for the registration and approval of the co-responsibility agreements.

2. We encourage the Governments to review their policies and procedures regarding the granting of intellectual property rights or recognition of common law rights with respect to the word "Tequila" to ensure that consumers are not misled as to the nature of a product.

G. Implementation of Recommendations

The industries encourage the Governments to:

1. Formalize in an MOU or through other appropriate means their commitments to implement these industry recommendations;

2. Ensure that all documents or measures that may be enacted, executed, or adopted, particularly the revised mandatory standard, the co-responsibility agreements, and the MOU (or other appropriate instrument), are consistent with these industry recommendations; and

3. Consider current commercial arrangements that may require either the grandfathering thereof or the granting of commercially reasonable phase-in periods to adjust those commercial arrangements to the provisions of the revised mandatory standard.

(*) Reflects consensus of the participants in the working group. Other papers reflect the views of their authors.

Environment

This subcommittee undertook the discussions related to the environmental issues of which it prioritized the immediate high-risk elements for protection of human health as urgent measures to consider immediately. Members of the subcommittee agreed on the following priorities:

1. Conduct initial surveys on health and economy to assess broadly the scale of damage and immediate remedy.

2. Asking the U.S. Army Corps of Engineers to provide topographical and aerial photography maps which depict battlefield areas where there is a high likelihood of contamination in terms of WMD hit areas, as well as areas where conventional weaponery was utilized. In addition, any maps which may assist with the initial plans to address oil spills and fires.

3. Determine quarantine sites and procedure for disposal of damaged equipment (military and civilian kinds), weapon spent cartridges and scrap metal. Establish temporary pits for disposal of sewage, liquids, and domestic trash.

4. Commence an extensive public education campaign to:

    1. Publicize risks associated with temporary shallow backyard wells/pits and and the potential for the presence of contaminated shallow ground water. Explain the correct and simplest ways of sanitizing drinking water - such as boiling the water for 2-3 minutes and/or using chlorine and iodine tablets. Undertake an educational campaign to explain to the public how to deal with solid waste and trash.
    2. Use the current UN ration distribution system or possibly airdrops to distribute water disinfection tablets, trash bags, gauze masks, and perhaps handheld transistor radios.
    3. Educate the population to avoid handling scrap military equipment and potentially unexploded ammunition (UXO), and even spent weapon shells.
    4. Inform the public to avoid using the rivers as dumping grounds and to set up temporary local sites for rubbish collection.
    5. Inform the public of the end of hostilities and when water and air are safe from contaminants.

5. Conduct quick surveys of contamination levels at current landfills, industrial locations, mines (mainly sulphur and phosphate mines), waste water treatment plants.

6. Identify and coordinate with Iraqi experts in the environmental field who are employed in government, universities and related governmental offices.

7. Set up crash courses for the Iraqi engineers and technicians to learn testing techniques of environmental contamination. These courses could evolve, in the long term, into more specialized technical and scientific courses and scholarships in the field of environmental science for the Iraqi graduates.

8. Supply mobile testing laboratories to measure water, air, and soil qualities, and contamination levels. Then to train Iraqis to use and work in these labs.

9. Declassify all data related to environmental field contemplated by the Iraqi authority and make such data available to the public and universities.

Medium-long term measures:

The subcommittee agreed to recommend the followings:

10. Utilize the Iraqi army (the career army personnel not the conscript) in working on the clean-up and protection of the environment and to use heavy vehicles and equipment which are already in their stock. Their works may be in the form of :

   A. Trucking solid waste.
   B. Cleaning up riverbanks and in dredging rivers.
   C. Clearing blocked roads.
   D. Sealing off contaminated areas.
   E. Extinguishing fires.
   F. Recovery of damaged vehicles.
   G. Creating green areas and national parks.
   H. De-mining of battlefield.

11. Establish a stand-alone Ministry of Environment which will handle all works in the field such as:

   A. Legislation
   B. Monitoring of contamination levels in industrial locations, landfill sites and waste disposal pits.
   C. Planning for future environmental projects.
   D. Setting standards for water, air, and soil qualities.
   E. Remediation and reclamation of contaminated lands.
   F. National weather forecast.

12. Assess the need of any future sites for solid and waste disposal and water treatment plants.

13. Rehabilitate the current water treatment plants and waste treatment plants, and conduct feasibility studies for building new ones.

Background

Iraq has long been an agricultural country. At present, agriculture employs over 25% of the country's labor force, more than any other sector except services, but provides only about 6% of GDP because of low productivity and the importance of oil.

Wheat and barley are the major crops in Iraq. The two cereals occupy over 60% of the 5.2 million ha of arable land and provide much of the nourishment of the population. However, productivity has been declining (Figure 1) and now averages only about 0.8 to 1.0 metric tons/ha, which is among the lowest in the world. Consequently, the country must import over two-thirds of the wheat and other cereals needed to feed the population. Much of the nutritional needs have been provided by the oil-for-food program, which supports an estimated 60% of the population. Even with these imports, the daily calorie supply averages only about 2000 per capita, which is among the lowest in developing countries.

Constraints to Production of Wheat and Barley

Iraq has considerable potential to increase cereal production. The present low productivity is due to several factors: lack of improved seeds, fertilizers, and pesticides; drought; deficient irrigation facilities; insufficient and old equipment; obsolete technology; and inadequate personnel.

Half of Iraq's farmland is in the northeastern plains and mountain valleys, where rainfall is usually sufficient to sustain agriculture. Most of the remainder is in the valleys of the Euphrates and Tigris rivers, which receive little rainfall and irrigation is essential. The two rivers are fed by snowpack and rainfall in northwestern Iran and eastern Turkey, and their late and variable discharge peaks for cereals necessitate dams for storing water. The high silt content of the water, high salt in the silt and the soil, and poor drainage cause soil salinity and sterilization.

Seeds of modern, adapted cultivars are needed to increase productivity. The yield potential of present cultivars is not a limitation at only 0.8 to 1.0 tons/ha, but improved cultivars can resist the diseases and insects that often devastate wheat and barley. Fortunately, appropriate cultivars of wheat are available from the International Center for Improvement of Wheat and Maize (CIMMYT) in Mexico, and cultivars of barley are available from the International Crops Research Institute for Dryland Areas (ICARDA) in Syria. Both institutes are also working to develop salt-resistant cultivars, which will contribute to alleviating the problem of soil salinity.

Use of fertilizers on wheat and barley in Iraq is extremely low and a major cause of poor productivity. The country produces some nitrogen fertilizers and has considerable phosphorus deposits, which probably can be developed to meet its long-term needs. However, some importation of nitrogen and phosphorus fertilizers will likely be needed to achieve immediate increases in cereal production.

Weeds, diseases, and insects are also primary causes of low productivity of wheat and barley in Iraq. Weeds compete directly with the cereals for space, nutrients, and water and greatly accentuate the effects of drought. Controlling weeds can have an immediate and significant impact on yields. Similarly, diseases and insects frequently destroy the crop, and their control would have immediate benefits. Excellent herbicides, fungicides, and insecticides are available for both wheat and barley.

Much of the equipment for cereal production is of eastern European or local manufacture. Most of it is old and prone to breaking, and lack of spare parts makes in inoperable at critical times such as harvest. Lack of modern equipment like drills and sprayers prevents adoption of conservation tillage, pesticides, and other technology.

Most Iraqi cereal scientists were trained before the 1980s and have had little contact with other countries. These scientists should be up-dated, and more scientists should be trained, particularly to improve rain-fed agriculture in northern Iraq. Extension programs, mostly in name only, are conducted by the Ministry of Agriculture and several universities. However, there is little contact with farmers, who often view extension personnel as government spies. Industry personnel involved in marketing, transporting, storing, and processing grain also operate under systems that are inefficient and wasteful. Internships with U.S. industries and degree training at U.S. universities should be provided to modernize the industry.

Recommended Programs to Accelerate Cereal Agriculture in Iraq

The following programs to promote cereal production in Iraq contain immediate and long-term approaches. The immediate approaches are intended to provide rapid, visible benefits to farmers, and the long-term approaches are intended to give a stable foundation to future agricultural development in the country.

Immediate Approaches

1. Develop and distribute "production packages" of critical inputs to farmers.

   These packages might include seeds of improved varieties, fertilizers, pesticides, and possibly a small sprayer for applying the chemicals. They would be intended for farmer-lead demonstration plots to quickly convince them of the benefits of modern technology. The program would be initiated in northern Iraq, hopefully by September 2003 for the 2004 crop, and refined and expanded nation-wide the following year.

2. Train the trainers and selected senior scientists.

   This program would identify local agricultural graduates to work with the production package program described above and train them utilizing Iraqi and U.S. scientists. Senior Iraqi scientists, who have had little contact with other countries, would be provided study tours of cereal production programs in the U.S. Personnel at the University of Arbil and University of Sulaimaniya in northern Iraq and the Ministries of Agriculture and Irrigation would be involved initially, and those at the University of Mosul and University of Baghdad would be involved later.

3. Employ local trained agricultural graduates as extension agents for the production package program.

   Extension agents trained in the application of the production packages would work directly with farmers to train them in its use. The extension agents would be expected to instruct the farmers, visit their fields regularly, and diagnose and remedy any problems.

4. Survey the long-term needs for sustainable cereal agriculture in Iraq

   A top-to-bottom survey of the cereal industry is needed to identify the country's long-term needs. Several teams consisting of U.S. government, industry, and university experts and their Iraqi counterparts would be engaged to study and make appropriate recommendations on cereal science, production, processing, and marketing problems and solutions.

Long-term Approaches

Specific long-term needs will be identified by the surveys outlined above. The following are some approaches that should be considered given the present status of the wheat and barley industries in Iraq.

1. Provide training and promote interactions with other countries' national cereal programs for Iraqi government, university, and industry personnel.

   Few Iraqi grain industry personnel have modern training or continuing contacts with persons in other countries. A program of internships of government and industry personnel with U.S. government agencies and industries, visiting scholarships for senior scientists, and degree programs for young persons is needed. Continued contact might be encouraged by sponsoring attendance at industrial and professional meetings, subscriptions to journals, and establishment of sister relationships between Iraqi and U.S. agencies, companies, and universities.

2. Sponsor production trials to determine the optimum cereal varieties, fertilizers, and pesticides for different regions and to test modern technology.

   Farmers' yield can be raised substantially with modern varieties, fertilizers to correct soil nutrient deficiencies, and pesticides to control weeds, diseases, and insects. These practices have direct effects on yields and also increase the efficiency of soil moisture, a serious problem in Iraq. Additional grains in soil moisture use efficiency can come from modern technology such as conservation tillage, which increases storage of water in the soil.

3. Strengthen and modernize the Iraqi cereal extension program.

   Extension provides a direct link to farmers to education and introduction of current information and technology. The present extension personnel should be up-dated and redirected and probably expanded. Enhanced support services to extension personnel in the form of transportation, soil testing laboratories, and pest diagnosis laboratories are needed. On-going cooperation of extension personnel with production researchers and industry should be promoted.

4. Modernize the Iraqi seed production and distribution system.

   Most of the crop seeds used in Iraqi agriculture are produced locally. The introduction and distribution of high-yielding varieties is slow. A modern system can quickly identify the best varieties, increase the supply, and distribute them to farmers. Modernization of the present system can lead to a new, private seed industry as well as provide improved seeds to farmers.

5. Rehabilitate and expand Iraqi irrigation facilities.

   Dams on the Euphrates and Tigris Rivers and their tributaries provide most of the water for irrigation in Iraq. Much of the canal system needs to be rehabilitated to decrease water losses. Additional efficiencies can come from proper irrigation scheduling. Silting of reservoirs and canals is a serious problem, as is increasing salinity of the soil. The last problem can be remedied by promoting drainage of the soil. Availability of water in the major rivers, which are all downstream from Syria and Turkey, may be a serious, future problem.

IT IS THEREFORE ORDERED:

FIRST, that the Respondents shall pay in fines and in remedial compliance measures a civil penalty of $7,000,000 (seven million dollars) comprised of the amounts and payable, as stipulated below, in complete settlement of the civil violations as set forth in the Department's Draft Charging Letter.

(A) A penalty of $3,250,000 (three million two hundred fifty thousand dollars) is hereby assessed on the Respondents of which $500,000 (five hundred thousand dollars) of shall be paid by Goodrich and $500,000 (five hundred thousand dollars) shall be paid by L-3 within ten (10) days of the signing of the Order. The balance shall be paid in three installments on the first, second and third anniversary of the date of the signing of the Order of which Goodrich shall pay in each installment the amount of $250,000 (two hundred fifty thousand dollars) until a complete sum of $750,000 (seven hundred fifty thousand dollars) is paid and L-3 shall pay in each installment the amount of $500,000 (five hundred thousand dollars) until a complete sum of $1,500,000 (one million five hundred thousand dollars) is paid. Such payments are to be made by cashier's or certified check payable to the Department of State.

The Respondents will individually provide to the Department on the anniversary of the date of the signing of the Order a written accounting for the expenditures associated with this penalty assessed for remedial compliance measures, as specified in Consent Agreement (including the respective Annexes of Compliance Measures).

The Department recognizes that the Respondents agree that the effect of any statutory limitation to the collection of the civil penalty imposed by the Consent Agreement and this Order shall be tolled until the last payment is made and all terms of the Consent Agreement are satisfied.

SECOND, any failure by either Respondent to apply funds appropriately for the required purposes cited in paragraph (B) above for remedial compliance measures or to provide a satisfactory accounting shall result in that Respondent being required to pay immediately to the Department the amount specified in that paragraph, less credit for amounts the Department deems to have been properly applied and accounted for as expenditures in compliance with the Consent Agreement. Respondents are prohibited from applying or claiming any of the amounts expended as penalties, including those for remedial compliance measures, as reimbursable or recoverable costs in any contract with any agency of the U.S. Government (including any subcontract with respect to such a contract or as a Federal tax deduction). In the event a Respondent violates this prohibition, the Department will deem it a "failure to apply funds appropriately for the required purposes." As enumerated in paragraph (B) above, the accounting shall be accompanied by individual statements from each Respondent that the expenditures meet the requirements of paragraph (B) and also certify that these expenditures have not been billed to or recovered from the U.S. Government as reimbursable cost allocated to any U.S. Government contract for reimbursement.

Re: Investigation of Goodrich Corporation and L-3 Communications Corporation, regarding the submission of a request for a Commodity Jurisdiction determination that omitted material facts relating to BEI's QRS-11, Quartz Rate Sensors and the unauthorized export of those defense articles.

Dear Mr. Linnert and Mr. Cambria:

(1) The Department of State ("Department") charges Goodrich Corporation ("Goodrich") and L-3 Communications Corporation[1] ("L-3"), including L-3's subsidiary, L-3 Communications Avionics, Inc. ("L-3

[1] With respect to violations arising prior to its acquisition of Goodrich Avionics Systems, Inc., L-3 is named as a Respondent as successor to Goodrich for the purpose of assessing civil liability and other compliance remedies. On March 28, 2003, L-3 acquired Goodrich Avionics Systems Inc., which became a subsidiary of L-3 and is currently known as L-3 Communications Avionics Systems, Inc.

Avionics"), formerly a subsidiary of Goodrich known as Goodrich Avionics Systems, Inc. ("Goodrich Avionics"), (hereinafter referred to as "Respondents") with violations of the Arms Export Control Act ("Act") and the International Traffic in Arms Regulations ("ITAR" or "Regulations") in connection with the submission to the Directorate of Defense Trade Controls ("DDTC")[2] of a request for a Commodity Jurisdiction (CJ) determination for a product containing defense articles (QRS-11, Quartz Rate Sensors), the unauthorized export of those articles to foreign countries and other matters as set forth herein concerning the Respondents' business activities. A total of 26 violations are alleged at this time. The essential facts constituting the alleged provisions are described herein. The Department reserves the right to amend the charging letter (See §128.3(a)), including through a revision to incorporate additional charges stemming from the same misconduct of the Respondents in these matters. Please be advised that this is a draft-charging letter to impose debarment or civil penalties pursuant to 22 C.F.R. § 128.3.

PART I – RELEVANT FACTS

Jurisdictional Requirements:

(2) Goodrich is a corporation organized under the laws of the State of New York and L-3 is a corporation organized under the laws of the State of Delaware.

(3) Respondents are and were during the period covered by the offenses set forth herein engaged in the manufacture and export of defense articles and defense services and so registered with the DDTC in accordance with Section 38 of the Act and § 122.1 of the Regulations.

(4) Respondents are U.S. persons within the meaning of § 120.15 of the ITAR and, as such, are subject to the jurisdiction of the United States, in particular with regard to the Act and Regulations.

(5) Commodity Jurisdiction ("CJ") submissions and determinations are used in the regulation or control of a defense article, defense service or technical data for which a license or approval is required by this subchapter.

[2] The Office of Defense Trade Controls was "realigned and renamed" the Directorate of Defense Trade Controls in early 2003.

Such documents are considered an "export or temporary import document" under Section 127.2 (a) & (b)(13) of the Regulations.

(6) The QRS-11 is a defense article and is controlled under Category XII (d) of the ITAR. The QRS-11 is further defined as significant military equipment ("SME"), requiring a DSP-83 (Non Transfer and Use Certificate) for retransfers and re-exports.

(7) Effective January 7, 2004, quartz rate sensors, such as the QRS-11, are controlled by the Department of Commerce Export Regulations when the sensors are integrated into and included as an integral part of a commercial standby instrument system for use on civil aircraft.

PART II – BACKGROUND:

Background on the QRS-11:

(8) On July 30, 1993, the Department issued a Commodity Jurisdiction determination to BEI Technologies Inc. ("BEI"), the manufacturer of the QRS-11 quartz rate sensor, ruling that the QRS-11 is a defense article controlled under the ITAR. The Department's letter noted that certain features of the QRS-11, such as the capability to operate under severe environmental conditions, make it inherently military. BEI is engaged in the manufacture and export of defense articles and is registered with DDTC under Part 122 of the Regulations.

(9) BEI sought to transfer jurisdictional control of the QRS-11 to the Department of Commerce through a Commodity Jurisdiction request in 1994. By letter dated June 26, 1995, the Department reiterated that the QRS-11 was designated as a defense article under Category XII(f) of the ITAR (the ITAR has since been changed so that control is now under Category XII(d)). The Department's justification for retaining jurisdictional control noted that the QRS-11 has significant military utility and was used in the Maverick missile.

(10) In 1998, BEI again petitioned the Department to transfer jurisdictional control of the QRS-11 to the Department of Commerce. The Department maintained its jurisdictional control of the item in a letter dated July 14, 1998, noting that the QRS-11 is designated as a defense article under Category XII(d) of the ITAR.

Goodrich Avionics' Knowledge that QRS-11 is Controlled on the United States Munitions List ("USML"):

(11) In early 1992, Goodrich Avionics initiated development of the Electronic Standby Instrument System GH-3000 ("ESIS" or "GH-3000"), which contains three QRS-11s. The ESIS met Federal Aviation Administration commercial aviation specifications for use in general aviation/corporate aircraft.

(12) In March 1994, Goodrich Avionics requested from BEI product information on the QRS-11. BEI responded by fax dated March 9 noting that BEI had recently completed a contract of 12,000 Quartz Rate Sensors for a military application.

(13) On March 18, 1994, BEI sent a fax to Goodrich Avionics providing product, pricing and delivery information which included the statement, "ALL EXPORT order lead times will begin after the receipt of the Customer Approved export papers (DSP-83) if applicable." BEI's invoice dated August 21, 1995 issued to Goodrich Avionics for the purchase of QRS-11s did not reference the export control status of the QRS-11.

(14) By June 1996, the Vice President for Engineering at Goodrich Avionics was aware of export control issues relating to the QRS-11. He wrote a letter dated June 20, 1996 to BEI, providing information to be used by BEI in their efforts to have the QRS-11 removed from the USML.

(15) The Vice President for Engineering wrote another letter to BEI on May 2, 1997 requesting that BEI keep him advised of any further developments that may occur with the Department of State. The letter referenced the GH-3000 and advised that Goodrich Avionics was "in the process of our first aircraft approvals since the first production units have been delivered to customers."

(16) On or about August 6, 1998, in response to an inquiry from Goodrich Avionics, BEI informed Goodrich Avionics that the QRS-11 remained under the licensing jurisdiction of Department of State and that BEI was seeking reconsideration of the determination that the QRS-11 is a defense article.

(17) Goodrich Avionics became concerned about exports they were making without State Department authorization and on or about August, 6, 1998, a senior Goodrich Avionics contracts administrator issued an e-mail to their Sales/Marketing Department advising that he should be contacted "PRIOR to sending any ESIS GH-3000 out of the country. We need to make sure the proper export license is in place before we export any GH-3000 units."

(18) On August 6, 1998, a senior Goodrich Avionics engineering official responded to the e-mail advising that the "QRS-11 is used in all ESIS units and to his knowledge no unit has been shipped out of the country on a sales order, and as such all units belong to us that have been outside the US."[3] Handwritten notes were recorded on this e-mail to contact BEI and obtain in writing the State Department status of the QRS-11. Handwritten notes on this e-mail mention Switzerland, France, and England.

(19) On August 12, 1998, a Senior Customer Service Administrator for BEI confirmed telephonically and by fax to Goodrich Avionics' Purchasing Manager and principal procurement contact with BEI that the QRS-11 is controlled on the USML under Category XII (d) and was subject to the Department of State licensing jurisdiction.

(20) After receiving the August 12, 1998 fax from BEI, Goodrich Avionics' Senior Contracts Manager drafted a voluntary disclosure on Goodrich Avionics letterhead for the signature of the Director, Sales and Marketing. The draft voluntary disclosure, dated August 20, 1998, advised that the ESIS has been exported to customers for display and flight-testing in Switzerland, France and England, as well as being hand-carried on Carnets (an apparent reference to additional temporary exports) to various countries for display purposes for the past two years. This disclosure was not signed or submitted to DDTC.

[3] A State Department License would be required for the export of the GH-3000 unit if exported by Respondent with or without a sales order (i.e. temporary exports for demonstrations in foreign countries would require license authorization).

(21) On December 3, 2003 and January 30, 2004, L-3 made submissions to DTCC asserting that on or about August 20, 1998, during a teleconference, Goodrich Avionics had received verbal advice from BEI that the variant of the QRS-11 units used by Respondent in the ESIS was predominantly commercial in nature and based on the non-military nature of the product in which the QRS-11 was incorporated (i.e., ESIS), no DDTC license would be necessary. Consequently, according to L-3 no further action was taken by Goodrich Avionics concerning the draft voluntary disclosure referenced in Paragraph 20 above.

(22) Respondents could not provide any contemporaneous emails to support the assertion that BEI verbally advised Goodrich Avionics that a State Department license was not required. L-3 did provide emails dated March 2000 (two years later) that made reference to this phone conversation. However, BEI has no record of any employee giving such verbal advice and noted BEI's August 12, 1998 written advice to the contrary. Respondents did not explain their apparent decision to rely on an undocumented phone conversation rather than formal correspondence from the manufacturer on this issue.

(23) From August 1998 to March 2000, Goodrich Avionics incorporated the QRS-11 into the ESIS and exported it in several instances without applying for or obtaining a license from DDTC.

(24) In January 2000, after receiving an order to sell an ESIS GH-3000 unit for installation on a Romanian MiG-29, Goodrich Avionics' Senior Contracts Manager contacted BEI to confirm the export control status of the GH-3000 containing the QRS-11. On February 23, 2000, BEI faxed a copy of BEI's August 12, 1998 fax described in paragraph 19 above and stated that the export status had not changed since 1998 and that the QRS-11 being supplied to Goodrich Avionics remained subject to Department of State licensing requirements.

(25) On March 6, 2000, Goodrich Avionics halted exports of the GH-3000 and advised its employees that if any ESIS GH-3000 units are exported that it may be in violation of export laws.

(26) An undated internal e-mail from Goodrich Avionics' Senior Contracts Manager stated that "BEI has confirmed that all QRS-11 Sensors, regardless of whether or not they are used predominately for commercial applications, are on the Munitions List.[4] This would mean that if we can't get a commodity jurisdiction from the Dept. of State, which determines the GH-3000 to be a commercial unit, we will need to have a validated license each time we export it, as well as having to submit a voluntary self-disclosure for previously exporting it without a license. Obviously, we don't want that to happen."

(27) Another undated internal e-mail from Goodrich Avionics' Senior Contracts Manager stated "we need to submit a self-disclosure to the State Department to tell them that we have violated the regulations by exporting the ESIS GH-3000. Even though there may be a future determination that the sensor and/or our unit is commercial and does not require a license, we exported the units while the sensor was on the Munitions list, thereby, violating the regulations."

(28) Notwithstanding the notice from BEI in 1998 and 2000 and internal recognition of the export violations that had taken place, Goodrich Avionics did not file a voluntary disclosure.

PART III - OMISSION OF MATERIAL FACTS IN COMMODITY JURISDICTION

(29) On March 8, 2000, Goodrich Avionics contacted the Goodrich staff attorney assigned to support Goodrich Avionics for guidance in connection with the QRS-11 being a defense article. His guidance was to contact Christopher Wall, Esq. (Partner) and Thomas deButts, Esq. (Senior Associate) of the law firm of Winthrop, Stimson, Putman & Roberts (now Pillsbury, Winthrop, Shaw and Pittman LLP) ("PWSP") and to rely on the advice to be given by PWSP.

(30) On March 8, 2000, Goodrich Avionics telephonically contacted Wall and/or deButts of the law firm of PWSP for representation and legal advice with regard to the QRS-11 being controlled on the USML and incorporated into the ESIS. Both telephonically and in writing, Goodrich Avionics' Senior Contracts Manager provided the relevant background of the matter to PWSP, including the fact that the ESIS incorporated the QRS-

[4] The same e-mail states that these export requirements are "contrary to what we have previously been told" by BEI. See above paragraph #21.

11, that the QRS-11 was on the USML and that the ESIS containing the QRS-11 had been exported without licenses issued by DDTC. During the call Wall and/or deButts discussed submitting a CJ request to the Department and advised that if the ESIS was ultimately determined to be subject to the jurisdiction of the Department of Commerce, any prior exports of ESIS units would not have required an export license. Wall and/or deButts further advised Goodrich Avionics that there was no present requirement to make any disclosure to the State Department and Goodrich Avionics should wait for the CJ determination to be filed on the ESIS, before notifying its domestic customers that the ESIS was subject to such jurisdiction.

(31) On March 9, 2000, another Senior Contracts Administrator sent an e-mail to Wall and deButts with a copy to Goodrich's counsel summarizing the situation, noting that one of its products contained components categorized as defense items under the ITAR. The e-mail further stated that two "mistakes" were made. "First, that we designed a product without knowledge that the components may be licensable under the ITAR (a significant disadvantage in marketing a commercial item). Secondly, in August 1998, after being advised that the QRS-11 Sensor from BEI was listed on the Munitions List, we relied on a verbal statement from a person at BEI that the variety of QRS-11 that we were buying, and based on our application, did not need an export license. We learned within the past week that we were given bad advice and that this may not be the case (See paragraph #21). A shipment hold has been put in place for all exports of affected products."

(32) Over the next two weeks, Goodrich Avionics furnished PWSP with information concerning the design, function and other supplementary information concerning the ESIS GH-3000 for the purpose of having PWSP draft a CJ request for the ESIS GH-3000. The information provided included the fact that the ESIS incorporates three QRS-11 sensors that are categorized as defense articles on the USML.

(33) On July 19, 2004, PWSP acknowledged that Goodrich Avionics contacted them with regard to a matter involving the possible export of items on the USML without a license. Goodrich Avionics advised Wall and deButts that a component part (QRS-11) soldered into one of its products, the ESIS GH-3000, was controlled for export by the Department of State under the ITAR. Based on this information Wall and/or deButts advised Goodrich that the determination as to whether the ESIS GH-3000 was subject to the ITAR would be made according to the criteria set forth in ITAR § 120.3 and § 120.4.

(34) On March 27, 2000, deButts e-mailed to Goodrich Avionics PWSP's draft of the CJ request. As drafted by Wall and/or deButts, the draft CJ indicated that the ESIS GH-3000 was designed and used for commercial purposes, but did not identify the three QRS-11 units as individual component parts incorporated into the ESIS. Furthermore, the draft CJ did not disclose the export regulatory classification of the QRS-11, that the QRS-11 was on the USML or that the QRS-11 had been formally determined to be so by DDTC. Although, the draft CJ disclosed the technical characteristics of the ESIS GH-3000, it did not disclose technical characteristics of the QRS-11. These were material facts to the CJ review. Moreover, the presence of the QRS-11s in the ESIS was the only reason Goodrich Avionics was seeking the CJ decision.

(35) By not including this information in the CJ, Goodrich Avionics enhanced its prospects of obtaining a determination that the ESIS would neither be controlled on the USML nor require a State Department license for export.

(36) On March 27, 2000, the draft CJ prepared by PWSP was reviewed and adopted by Goodrich Avionics (with only minor changes to reflect that Goodrich Avionics rather than PWSP was submitting the request), the cover page was put on its Goodrich Avionics letterhead and Goodrich Avionics' Contracts' Manager signed the CJ request. Then Goodrich Avionics forwarded the signed CJ request to PWSP, which filed it with DDTC on or about March 27, 2000.

(37) On July 10, 2000, relying on the incomplete information provided by Goodrich Avionics, the Department issued a CJ determination that the ESIS Model GH-3000 is not subject to the licensing jurisdiction of the Department of State.

(38) L-3 has stated that it "would have provided additional information in the CJ regarding the inclusion of the QRS-11 Sensors in the GH-3000 and their USML status" had it been affiliated with Goodrich during the period in question. However, throughout the Department's investigation into the matters discussed herein, L-3 maintained that the "responsible Goodrich employees disclosed all relevant" information to PWSP, relied on PWSP's preparation of the CJ request and thus had "no reason to believe that it was necessary to specifically identify the QRS-11 sensor (or any other component of the GH-3000) by name or to provide any further information and contend that the CJ submission complied in all respects with applicable law, rules, and regulations."

(39) Goodrich acknowledges that the commodity jurisdiction submission should have specifically identified the QRS-11 and noted its control under the USML.

PART IV – UNAUTHORIZED EXPORTS AFTER NOTIFICATION TO GOODRICH AVIONICS THAT THE QRS-11 WAS A DEFENSE ARTICLE

(40) Between the period from August 1998 to February 23, 2000, Goodrich Avionics exported ESISs without authorization from the Department.

(41) For the period from March 2000 to July 2000, Goodrich Avionics submitted four licenses for the export of ESIS, containing the QRS-11 units, while waiting for the CJ determination for the ESIS. DSP 5s 793797, 793799 and 794229 were approved and DSP 5 790734 was approved with provisos.

(42) After receipt of DDTC's CJ determination, Goodrich Avionics resumed exporting the QRS-11s incorporated in the ESISs without obtaining licenses from DDTC. L-3 Avionics continued to make such exports after March 28, 2003 until August 2003 when DDTC notified L-3 to cease exports of the QRS-11 contained in the ESIS unless there was license approval from DDTC.

(43) Between the period from August 1998 to August 2003, Respondents exported or caused to be exported without DDTC authorization QRS-11s to 25 different foreign countries. Respondents exported over 500 QRS-11s contained in about 200 ESISs for demonstrations and sales to foreign end users in, including but not limited to Saudi Arabia, Canada, France, Switzerland, Germany, Czechoslovakia, Indonesia, Italy, Netherlands, Denmark, United Kingdom, and Israel. It is possible that an unknown number of these ESISs contained in commercial aircraft were also re-transferred to or flown to and from proscribed countries identified under §126.1 of the ITAR.

(44) Respondents also caused to be exported an unknown number of ESISs by domestic U.S. purchasers without State Department authorization by failing to inform said purchasers that the ESIS incorporated a defense article, namely, the QRS-11, for which a license would be required. For example, without knowing that the ESIS contained a defense article controlled on the USML, the following unauthorized exports of the QRS-11 incorporated in the ESISs were made by domestic customers, Cessna and Boeing:

- Cessna: During the period between 2002 and 2003, Cessna exported without obtaining license approval from DDTC, at least 35 ESISs containing QRS-11s and used in commercial aircraft. Exports of ESISs were made by Cessna to the following foreign countries, including but not limited to: Brazil, Turkey, Portugal, Bahrain, Canada, Guatemala, Mexico, Australia, Switzerland, Austria, Ireland, and South Africa.

- Boeing: From August 2000 to February 2004, Boeing exported without obtaining license approval from DDTC, at least 23 ESISs containing QRS-11s and used in commercial aircraft. Exports of ESISs were made by Boeing to the following foreign countries, including but not limited to: Saudi Arabia, United Kingdom, South Korea, Switzerland, Germany, Ireland, Netherlands, United Arab Emirates, Guinea, and Australia.

(45) During the time frame of the alleged violations, Respondents' export compliance personnel were familiar with the requirements of the ITAR and the regulatory process for seeking a Commodity Jurisdiction decision to determine if an item is a defense article on the USML.

(46) In July 2003, following a voluntary disclosure made by another manufacturer of standby flight instruments; the Department conducted an extensive investigation and review of the QRS-11. During this review, the activities discussed in this draft charging letter were identified and L-3 was directed to disclose all relevant facts, circumstances and documentation.

Goodrich was contacted in June 2005 and requested to participate in the investigation and review.

(47) On February 9, 2004, the U.S. Government published in the Federal Register the agreed upon procedures for transferring jurisdiction, from the State Department to the Commerce Department, of the QRS-11 when integrated into a commercial standby instrument system for use on civil aircraft.

PART V- LICENSING & REPORTING REQUIREMENTS

(48) § 123.1 of the Regulations provides that any person who intends to export or import temporarily a defense article must obtain the approval of the DDTC prior to the export or temporary import, unless the export or temporary import qualifies for an exemption under the provisions of the Regulations.

any defense article or technical data or the furnishing of any defense service for which a license or approval is required.
